PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur A. Horner.—Sir Walter Raleigh, presented by Mr. Cyril Maude's company, including the highly-accomplished Miss Winifred Emery and Mr. Lynn Harding, opened its tour here on Monday. The production is staged on a lavish scale, but slight effort being required to imagine oneself in the Elizabethan period. The varying moods of the imperious Queen were depicted with artistic ability by Miss Emery, and the gallant patriot Ralegh has seldom had a better counterfeit than Mr. Harding. The Spanish Ambassador, Mendoza, was realistically presented by Mr. Percy Rhodes; a winsome Bessie Throgmorton was seen in Miss Nell Carter, and Ann Charnock and Jim Longbowe were humorously presented by Miss Laura Holtston and Mr. Powis Pinder; the Innkeeper and Puritan Minister were capably impersonated by Messrs. J. Frederick and W. H. Garbois. The duel between Ralegh and John Savage (W. E. Holloway) was very thrilling, and the secret meetings of the Babbington Conspiracy were conducted with an effective air of realism.

PRINCE'S.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Agate.—A good company presents Her Road to Ruin. Mr. Charles Dickens is a clever exponent of the curate Frank Temple, and is well aided by Miss Doris Gilham as Jess Willoughby; Mr. Knox Orde makes an impressive villain as Philip Hardy; Miss Margaret McClellan gives a clever impersonation of Mary Dawson; and Mr. Henry Powell provokes laughter as Dicky Gerald.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Captain E. H. Warren-Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt. — The Boissets provoke a continuous peal of laughter in their comical pantomime The Bricklayers; Mr. Hymack possesses the art of changing his gloves and ties with lightning rapidity; Paul Cavalli performs marvellous feats of strength; capital humour is provided by William Penn as "the jockey"; Webb and Branston are talented operatic duettists; Tom Joy is a quaint comedian; and Trixie de Lal, the little Dutch girl, and Diss and Desmond, duettists, are deserving of praise.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—One of the most laughable farces that has been seen here is Fred Perkins, M.P., with Tom Nelson as the irrepressible M.P., his proceedings in the House convulsing the audience; Señor Blanco and company, in the playlet Music the Conqueror, afforded opportunity to the violinist of the party; A Matrimonial Agency is the cause of merriment in the hands of Hayman and Franklin; the Four Ascots win loud applause for their wooden-shoe dancing; the acrobatic skill of the Six Ceylons is appreciated; Ruth Davenport's cultured voice is admired; the Three Romas are fine athletes: Harry Bedford, comedian, Flo Cecil, singer and dancer, and an amusing film, Called to the Bar, minister to the pleasure of crowded houses.

KING'S. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. I. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Claude Marner.—The pièce de résistance attracting crowded houses at every performance is Mr. Seymour Hicks's new musical play, The Model and the Maid, a report of which will be found on another page. A refined vocal and musical act is provided by Dennis Creedon and Jennie Broughton; the Four Kasraes in their comedy acrobatic scena Buffet-de-Falls evoke laughter; clever fun-makers are Karr and Kooney; the Bartholomew Girls are a bright turn; Jessie Templeton sings with expression; the Hassans attract attention with their wire act; the Bros. Laurence dance and sing; and G. W. Foster is an amusing comedian.

SOUTH PARADE PIER.—Manager, Mr. A. Lalande.—M. Zacharewitch (violin) and Mme. Marie Fromm (piano) delight a cultured audience with their artistic and expressive playing at Sunday's matinée. Mr. E. Norris and company are presenting John Glayde's Honour this week.

CLARENCE PIER.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. Cuddy.—Mr. Stewart Alexander and his "So-and-so's" (Misses Maud White, Pathé Biddulph, Madge White, Alma, Messrs. Harry Twiningborough, Harry Leslie) are the attractions in the Pavilion.

PRESTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, the Executors of the late Mr. W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Alban Newton.—Fanny and the Servant Problem, as interpreted by Mr. Horace Lingard's company, is here this week. Mr. Lingard plays cleverly as Martin Bennett; Miss Beatrice Moreau is admirably suited as Fanny; Mr. Rayson Cousens is good as Lord Bantock; Mr. Edward Ray gives an excellent character sketch of Dr. Freemantle; Mr. Wilfred Compton is good as George Newte; Miss Hilda Lane and Miss Fanny Lane as Jane and Honoria Bennett respectively are excellent, as is also Mr. W. B. Bevil as Ernest Bennett. Mention must be made of the clever presentation as the twin Maiden Aunts, the Misses Wetherell, by Miss Marie Saville and Miss Denise Dironic; while Miss Mary Wilson gives a spirited portrayal of Our Empire. A Nautical Breeze is the curtain-raiser, and during the week Is Marriage a Failure and Divorçons will be staged.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Laurence Brough and company top the bill this week with the amusing sketch No. 9; the Woodwards give a clever and novel balancing ladder act; Miss Victoria Dagmar gives a clever display on the horizontal bar; Monahan and Sheehan, American instrumentalists and vocalists, give a clever turn; Alice Edwards is a clever male impersonator; Albert Le Fre is a versatile and popular comedian; Milner and Storey in their interludes Tickets and The Breach of Promise cause hearty laughter. Through the Darkness on the Bio concludes.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page; General-Manageress, Mrs. M. M. Clarkson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles B. Clarkson.—Variety is again in evidence here this week, with a strong bill, topped by that clever comedy, music, and juggling trio, Seeley, West, and Rhodesia. Elsie Jezzard is a clever comedienne and dancer; Harry Cooke is a comedian with funny patter; the Sisters Robertson (Elsie and Gaye) in song and harmony give an acceptable item; Mostol is an instrumentalist of talent; Effie Deans has some capital chorus songs; the Sprees, in a comedy, A Day at Twickenham Ferry, cause amusement; Irere Velma's speciality dancing scene is novel and good; Clark and Glenny have a funny sketch in The Haunted House; and some excellent films are also shown.

RADCLIFFE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner, Mr. Geo. T. Gante; Manager, Mr. James Boothman.—Harwood's Juveniles, a number of well-trained children, acceptably entertain by singing and dancing; Les Rallis's clever absurdity, with his man monkey, causes much laughter; Wal Owen does some clever fooling; Marlo is a wonderful juggler; Jimmy Hoffman is a comedian who makes many laughs; and Jelda is clever on musical instruments.

RAMSGATE.—ROYAL PALACE THEATRE.—Under the sole direction of Mr. Chas. Evans; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry Bowman.—Married to the Wrong Man, played by Mr. Frederick Melville's company, is the attraction here this week. Mr. Henry Lonsdale as Jack Gladwin is excellent; Capt. Deering finds a fitting representative in Mr. George Arthur; Miss Mary Pemberton makes a pathetic heroine; and Mr. Leonard Thackeray as Jasper Skinner submits an admirable impersonation. Mr. Hyland O'Shea and Mr. Pemberton also deserve mention. On Tuesday the Follies gave a flying matinée.

ROYAL VICTORIA PAVILION THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. T. R. Price; Entertainment Manager, Mr. C. Price.—A Country Girl was here for the first three evenings of the week. Mr. Coningsby Brierly as Barry scored a big success; Miss Dorothy Craske made a delightful Country Girl; and Mr. St. John Hammond did admirably as the Rajah of Bhong. The other parts were handled with skill. On Thursday a three-nights' engagement of The Girl on the Boat company was commenced, with Mr. Chas. McNaughton as the comic deck steward.

MARINA THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. J. Attack.—The picture shows here are attracting large audiences. The films cover a wide range of subjects. Fields and Lewis, in their admirable comedy act, have been warmly applauded.

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. A. Evans.—Messrs. Mathew H. Glenville and Fred Osmond's No. 1 London company is here this week with For Wife and Kingdom. Mr. Reginald T. Fox gives an excellent rendering of Capt. Max Lubeck; Mr. Albert Guyon plays powerfully as the secret agent, Baron Maurice Breslau; Mr. Frank Sutherland is effective as General Von Nestolde; Mr. Fred Osmond scores as Karl Ludhayr; Miss Hettie Zillwood gives a splendid impersonation of the Grand Duchess Marie; Miss Margaret R. Frame is excellent as Camille Von Nestolde; and the other parts are in capable hands.

THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Curline Baldry.—A most startling and mysterious exhibition is presented by Mr. P. T. Selbit in Dr. Wilmar's spirit paintings; the Flying Hanlons perform clever feats on the horizontal bars; Welda and Wynne do some smart juggling; the Sisters Adair Trio are adept dancers and comediennes; Eddie Comet is a droll patter comedian; Rosie Lloyd is a smart and attractive comedienne; the Crisps introduce their dancing scena, "The Little Deputy," successfully; and an amusing film is shown on the Bioscope.

VAUDEVILLE ELECTRIC THEATRE.—Some capital films are being shown here this week, including some good "snaps" of local street scenes and the Working Men's Regatta.

WEST'S PICTURE PALACE.—Among the scenes exhibited here are The Bellringer's Daughter, A Modern George Washington, Marie's Swan Song, An Indian Girl's Romance, and some good comic films.

THE READING ZOO.—A capital exhibition of wild beasts, &c., is being shown under this designation.

RHYL.—NEW PAVILIONS AND GARDENS.—Lessees, Messrs. Baring Bros.; Manager, Mr. J. Mellard.—An excellent entertainment is given here by the Nomads, a comedy costume party; the various solos and concerted items are well rendered, and never fail to please; Herr Stanislaus Wurm's White Viennese Band draws large audiences to both afternoon and evening concerts. On Thursday evening Mischa Elman, the celebrated young violinist, gave a concert, and was heartily welcomed.

TOWN HALL.—Messrs. Charles Roadnight and Edward Robbin's company were here for the first half of the week with Havana. The principal parts were well played by Mr. William Pringle, Miss Josephine Sullivan, Mr. Alfred Lenville, and Miss Ada Davidson. The remaining members of the company are good, and the piece is well mounted and splendidly dressed.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler, Sutton, and Allendale.—Mona Vivian, the Rhyl favourite, is paying a return visit, and receives a warm welcome; Bert Byrne, another old favourite, is also heartily greeted; Clifford Grey, comedian; Maud Hughes, soprano; Douglas Campbell, comedian and dancer; Jock Hughes, the popular basso; Archie Glen; and Miss Driver at the piano complete an excellent company.

PIER AMPHITHEATRE.—The Brownies, musical comedy entertainers, are the attraction here. The company is a strong one, and includes Misses Maidie Field, Beatrice Willey, and Dorothy Webb, Messrs. Charles Heslop, Alec Clunes, Harvey Brinton, and Vivian Stafford.

RYDE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, The Cinematograph Industrial Corporation, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Fred Sutcliffe.—The programme of pictures here this week is excellent. Amongst the films shown are The Man, The Gas Inspector, A Woman's Strategy, Foolshead at the Ball, Saved from the Tide, &c. The variety portion of the programme is contributed to by Elvyn and Chip, comedians and pedestal dancers.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—A Woman Worth Winning is a good attraction. The hero, Fergus Lovinsky is well presented by Mr. A. B. Mackay; Mr. H. Daneville makes a typical villain of General Borinski; Roma Pauloff is charmingly portrayed by Miss Lillie Lewis; Miss Ida Mackay as Katerini, Mr. C. W. Black as Bertie Scribbles, and Mr. L. Newman as Peter Popples keep the comedy well to the front. For Thursday and Friday The Beginning and the End was announced.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. R. H. Lee.—An excellent programme is headed by Frances Letty, assisted by James Sutton and Little Tommy Shanley, in a beautiful song-scena. The Grandee's Pavilion; Leonie Brewer, the Irish colleen, fairly captures the house; the Romps, Bellew and Stocks, a clever combination of young ladies with good voices and smart manœuvres, get much applause; the Fitzroys are smart society gymnasts; Burnetti gives clever quick-change impersonations of Van Biene, Chirgwin, and Dutch Daly with their favourite instruments. Other appreciated turns are Loyall Leeder, comedian; Three Krakes, in The Electric-car Conductor; Reg. Beauchamp, eccentric comedian; Nora Stockelle, comedienne; and Charles Grantley, comic.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. J. Boyle.—Mr. J. A. Campbell's company, in The Hand that Rocks the Cradle, gives a very creditable performance. Mr. Guy Hastings is an excellent Derek Mason. A charming heroine is Audrey Melrose, as presented by Miss Gertrude F. Godart; Mr. T. Lionel Ellis gives a fine character study of the coastguard, John Melrose; Mr. Gerald Jordan cleverly represents the villainous Philip Marchant; Mr. Finn Doyle makes the most of his opportunities as the comic handy-man; Miss Janice Deane, Miss Babs Stuart, and Mr. Douglas Tremayne also do well. The staging is extremely good.

OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Shepherd.—His New Appointment and The Enchanted Dragoon are a couple of comical pictures among a varied list.

CENTRAL HALL (Blackfriars Road).—Proprietors, Messrs. Matt Raymond Company.—Raymond pictures prove attractive. Mr. Will Oakley's songs lend pleasing variety.

NEW CENTRAL HALL (Pendleton).—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thos. Whiteley.—Excellent films are shown to good houses.

SCARBOROUGH.—LONDESBOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Waddington; Manager, Mr. J. T. Carpenter.—The Dollar Princess is presented here by Mr. George Edwardes's company. Mr. Fred Leslie admirably fills the rôle of Harry Conder; Mr. Alec Worcester acts and sings well as Freddy Fairfax; Miss Kathleen Courtney, in the title-rôle, leaves nothing to be desired; Miss Madeline Seymour and Miss Daisy Elliston excellently fill the rôles of Olga and Daisy respectively; and Mr. George Millner is exceedingly funny as Bulger. The other characters are all ably represented, the chorus is good, and the scenery and dresses are magnificent.

SPA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Cliff Bridge Co.; Manager, Mr. H. T. Chambers.—Mr. Edward Compton and company opened here on Monday in Davy Garrick. In the title-rôle Mr. Compton did excellently; Mr. Henry Crocker was very good as Alderman Gresham; Miss Rita Sponti made an attractive Violet; Mr. Frank Royde was very effective as the Hon Tom Tallyhaut; Miss Marie Hassell and Miss Agnes Williams were well suited to the parts of Mrs. Rumbelow and Selina Sowerberry respectively; and the amusing characters of Simkins, Sowerberry, and Rumbelow were in the capable hands of Mr. C. Margreand, Mr. J. W. Austin, and Mr. Charles Stone. The plays for the rest of the week are The Rivals, The Road to Ruin, She Stoops to Conquer, and The School for Scandal.

NEW FLORAL HALL.—Proprietors, Scarborough Corporation; Lessee, Mr. Chas. Cardow.—In addition to Cardow's Comedy Company, the attractions for the early part of the week included Miss Florence Bostock, soprano vocalist, and H.M. Band of the Coldstream Guards. Excellent programmes were rendered in first-class style twice each day.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Garside; Manager, Mr. F. P. Morgan.—Messrs. W. H. Hallett and Walter Howard's company is here in Her Love against the World. Miss Ellen Snow fills the rôle of the Princess, Mr. Roy Fortesque is Prince of Ravensburg, Mr. Fred Emery the Earl of Strathmere, Mr. W. H. Hallett Prince Othmar, and Miss Rosie St. John Lionel.

THE NEW HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock.—Miss Hetty King occupies premier position here and enjoys a good reception; Walter Bird's company appears successfully in the sketch Her Husband; Leolin gives a good exhibition of novelty juggling; the Jackson Family are clever musicians; and other good turns are provided by the Carlo Maie Trio in comedy wire act, the Westbrooks, dancers, and Martin Henderson, the blind musician.

THE AQUARIUM.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. W. Kitchingman; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Bench.—The variety programme here includes Wallace Selkirk's Juvenile spectacle, The Boy Scouts; Nellie Neal, comedienne and dancer; Barney Murphy, comedian; Les Zeloras, acrobats; Charles Hatch, character comedian; the Three Warringtons, Herculean equilibrists; Tom Moore, comedian; and Florence Yaymen, coon vocalist and caricaturist. Other attractions are the Palace Pierrots, who provide capital entertainments three times daily, the Skating Rink, and the Troupe of Swimmers.

SEACOMBE.—KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Kiernan.—Miss Lena Ashwell's company is here this week with Diana of Dobson's. The title-rôle is vigorously played by Miss Eva Leonard Boyne, and Mrs. Cantelupe is a clever piece of character-acting by Miss Hilda Francks. Mr. Thomas Pauncefort gives a well-studied impersonation of the parvenu Sir Jabez; Captain Bretherton is well played by Mr. Brisco Owen; and the other characters are in capable hands. Out West is the curtain-raiser.

SHEERNESS.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—Harry Lynn and company in Dead to the World are here this week; the Maxims, jugglers and equilibrists, are smart; the performance of Will Avis is mystifying; Glen and Earle, in their vocal and dancing act, are much admired; and other pleasing numbers are contributed by Jennie Lynn, comedienne; Miss Martini, gymnast; and Jess, comedian.

BANDSTAND ENCLOSURE.—Manager, Mr. T. Bingham-Sedgewick.—Rob. S. Williams' Al Fresco Entertainers continue to provide an appreciated entertainment. Mr. Ernest Penfold, the operatic tenor, gives a cultured rendering of selections from familiar operas.

SHEFFIELD.—LYCEUM THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Mr. George Edwardes's company began a return visit on Monday in this delightful and beautifully mounted musical play The Dollar Princess. All the popular artists who figured in the cast were heartily welcomed by a crowded audience. Miss Nora Barry in the title-rôle and Mr. Lewis Bradfield again distinguished themselves, and Mr. Leonard Mackay's sympathetic singing as the manly young aristocrat was loudly applauded. The clever young German artist, Miss Emmy Wehlen, was a great success in the part of Olga, and Miss Mabel Russell, Mr. W. H. Rawlins, and the other performers acted with the requisite vivacity. There was the usual well-dressed and intelligent chorus, and Mr. Ernest Irving was an admirable conductor.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—The new sporting and sensational drama A Criminal's Bride, written by Edward Marris, is being played to appreciative audiences.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—Secrets of the Harem, originally produced at the City Theatre, Sheffield, on Dec. 26, 1896, is again interesting good houses. The company includes Miss A. Churchill, Mr. John Ricter, and Mr. Dan. F. Roe.

EMPIRE PALACE.—The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—Very interesting demonstrations have been given of the wireless controlled airship by the inventor, Mr. Raymond Phillips. The variety company includes the following clever performers: Mr. Dan Crawley, a laughter-provoking comedian; Jack and Evelyn, a diverting couple in a lively skit; the Little Japs and Ando, equilibrists, &c; Phil Rees' Stable Lads; Miss Sybil St. Elmo, a good vocalist; Orpheus, instrumentalist; Miss Amy Marsden, comedienne; and the old and ever-welcome local favourite, Mr. F. V. St. Clair, author and vocalist, with new and catchy songs.

THE HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Poole.—A programme of artistic merit was submitted here on Monday. Miss Elsie Southgate's finely-rendered solos on the violin were deservedly applauded; Miss Marie Santoi and her company, in the pretty and refined musical trifle A Night in Japan, were again received with applause, and the other performers were Mr. J. W. Gallagher, eccentric comedian; Robins and Collier, comedians; Max Sterling, the Hahn Orchestra, with "The Hungarian Rhapsodie"; Barrs and Bentley, two smart artists; Southgate and Collins, clever musical artists; Mr. Frank Hartley, juggling expert; the Three Dixon Girls, vocalists, dancers, and banjoists; Mr. Harry Levaine, a droll comic singer; Mr. Harry Lamore, burlesque juggler, &c.; and Mr. Max Sterling, a clever illusionist; and the Bioscope with artistic films.

THE PICTURE PALACE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Arnold Shaw.—A splendid bioscopic action play, founded on Shakespeare's King Lear, is the pièce de résistance this week. A pathetic film drama is The Factory Girl. The programme is all that is artistic and up-to-date in the moving-picture world.

The Grand, the Imperial, the Hillsborough Palace, the Central, and the Surrey still rely on animated pictures, and the results appear satisfactory to managers nad patrons.

SHREWSBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Director, Mr. W. Yates Gregory; General-Manager, Mr. Thomas Baugh.—The entertaining and clever Sarnthaler Troupe of Tyrolean Alpine singers and dancers in national costume, occupy the boards here this week, giving a varied and pleasing show. Mr. Arthur Milton is a capital vocal comedian, reciter, and raconteur; Miss Gracie Bard is a tuneful and bright comedienne; Bert Anderson is a skilful conjurer; the Whitworth Trio of trick cyclists perform some truly marvellous feats with precision, skill, and daring; Friscury's top-hat manipulation was very smart; Tom Garland, an accomplished mimic and voice-thrower, appeared with success; Geo. Shirley, a lively and amusing comedian and light-footed dancer, was applauded; and Mr. Milton Roy's finale, The Puzzled Coroner, with Mr. E. Millins acting with conspicuous success as Dionysius Dogberry, the coroner, successfully closed a capital bill.

SMETHWICK.—ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Barnard; Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson.—Nick Carter, a detective drama of considerable merit, was well received here. Mr. Forbes Knowles displays real ability in the rôle of the energetic detective; Mr. Raymond Thomas makes a heartless Captain Nero; Dave Crowley is capably portrayed by Mr. William Burgess; and Mr. Reg. Turner is good as Bill Colson. The humorous element is kept well to the front by Mr. Harry C. Momber as Horatio Timmins, Mr. Will Ellythorne as George Slade, Miss Nellie Fern as Matilda Timmins, and Miss Nancy Lawrence as Bessie Timmins. Miss Helena Walbran's interpretation of Madeline Carter reaches a high standard of merit; and Miss Nellie Shirley as Stephanie, a decoy, admirably sustains her part. Others who performed creditably were Mr. Joe Rockley, Mr. Richard Nugent, Mr. J. Turnbull, Miss Nellie Waddington, and little Hilda Vokes. The staging is appropriate.

SOUTHAMPTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Weston.—The Fighting Chance, a stirring drama, teeming with tensely dramatic situations, is proving a great attraction. Mr. Austin Milroy gives a fine exposition of Stephen Blanchard, and Mr. Sydney Vautier (Jim Blanchard), Miss Marie Duncan (Ethel Hardy), and Mr. Arthur Elwyn (Captain Rivers) are praiseworthy. The scenery and effects are admirable.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fred Mouillot and W. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Yardley.—Kate Carney, with All the Fun of the Fair, is the top-line attraction, and the fun waxes fast and furious during the presentation of the sketch. Jack Smiles is as popular as ever, and Tom Stuart scores with his life-like imitations of celebrities. Talberto and Douglas, Edith Haley, the Sistora Towers, and the Soho Trio all successfully appear.

PIER PAVILION.—Acting-Manager, Mr. H. C. Sait.—The Gems are shining brightly, and their entertainment is unanimously voted one of the best of the season. The artists comprise Miss Nessie Walker, soprano; Miss Olive Mortimer, contralto; Mr. Ernest Attwell, baritone; Mr. David W. Norton, solo pianist; Mr. Wallace Kennedy, tenor and director of the company; and Mr. Victor Kahn, a versatile comedian and siffleur.

THE PHILHARMONIC HALL AND EMPIRE THEATRE.—Both these picture palaces are attracting good houses, the films, serious and comic, being exceedingly clear.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. Julian Graham.—The Arcadians, presented here by arrangement with Mr. Robert Courtneidge, for this week, forms a popular attraction. The company is a powerful one, and the performance is applauded. Mr. Charles A. Stephenson is a capable exponent of Simplicitas, whose mannerisms throughout win great favour. Mr. Alfred Beers impersonates the jockey Peter with cleverness and drollery; Mr. Arthur Macdonald as Jael Meadows is well suited, his acting and singing are appreciated; Miss Sybil Taverede is delightful as Sunbra, and her fine voice is heard to advantage; Miss Mollie McIntyre sings well, and makes a pleasing Eileen Cavanagh; Miss Gertrude Aylward as Mrs. Smith is both humorous and popular; Messrs. Cyril Love as Bobby and Wallace G. Court as Sir George Paddock alike give creditable portrayals; and Miss Violet Roberts impersonates Crysea with success.

THE HIPPODROME.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Lewis De Burg.—The programme here this week includes the name of Billy Tucker, a clever ball puncher; Miss Irene May, a vocalist of high order; Hampton and Bauman; Darktown Entertainers; Herbert Sleath's company, in a pretty little play, Her Ladyship's Guest; the Six Cowboy Girls, fine dancers; the Harmony Four, clever vocalists; Sammy Shields, Scotch comedian; and Elise Wulf and Waldoff, acrobats of no mean order.

LUNA PARK AND PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. W. Hilton; Manager, Mr. T. W. Wright.—A particularly pleasing and novel turn here is that given by Elroy, the armless wonder, who sketches, paints, renders a cornet solo, shoots, extinguishes a candle, and takes refreshments in an easy manner. Mr. D. W. Watson is a talented player of cornet and posthorn, and gains hearty appreciation. Tamamoto, a smart Japanese rope performer, is applauded, as is also the aerial trapeze act by Madeline Roselle; Lloyd and Barwick, comedy artists; The Woellhafs, in an up-to-date vaudeville act; Miss Fay Liberty, comedienne; and Mr. Charles Bates, vocalist and comedian, offer their respective turns with success. Dancing and Astley and Lorenzo's Circus are other indoor attractions which obtain good patronage.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. E. Angless.—Another good series of pictures is this week shown by the London Cinematograph Company, and supply a delightful entertainment. Dandy Dick and his exceptionally well-trained dogs give a pleasing and enjoyable performance, and the songs by Miss Doris Perry are popular. On Friday, the evening of the 12th inst., the well-known lessee presented a lengthy programme on the occasion of his annual benefit, which was contributed to by Mr. Finlay Dunn's "Dandies," the smart entertainers (by permission of Mr. Ballard Brown); Mr. Howard V. Cropton, Miss Olive Smith, Miss Jessie Hope, Miss Doris Perry, and Dandy Dick's clever performing dogs.

SOUTHPORT.—OPERA HOUSE AND WINTER GARDENS.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Percy Hutchison; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Clarkson.—Mr. W. W. Kelly's company is on a return visit here in A Royal Divorce, capitally enacted and staged. Miss Edith Cole is an admirable and distinctly successful Josephine; Mr. Keith Fraser depicted the characteristics of Napoleon with realistic effect which left nothing to be desired; Miss Dorothy Garth is a charming and vivacious representative of Stephanie de Beauharnais; the rôle of Marie Louise had a commendable exponent in Miss Winnie Tempest; the wily Talleyrand was extremely well played by Mr. J. H. Roberts; Mr. Charles Hartopp makes an excellent Marquis de Beaumont; Mr. Ernest Plumpton lent good assistance as General Augereau; the little King of Rome was very ably sustained by Miss Dorothy Hudson; Mr. George Hudson is a humorous and clever impersonator of Grimaud; Mr. Alfred Grenville represented Marshal Murat acceptably; Mother Lomas was well played by Miss Helen Meadows; and the remaining characters were ably depicted.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. John Coulson.—The Stepmother is being played by Miss Nannie Goldman's No. 1 company to good houses. Bob Bristow is well accounted for by Mr. William Holles; Miss Lucy Roberts is good as Amy Bristow. Villainy is capably represented by Mr. Henry C. Ward as Abraham Wiggins and Miss Patricia Bostock as Anna Vickers, a part which is forcefully delineated; Miss Nannie Goldman as Danny enlists the sympathies of the audience by her fine portrayal; Mr. H. P. Owen contributes some clever characterisation as Luke Trizell, a tramp. The comedy parts are well played by Mr. Teddy Miles as Timothy Yapp and Miss Edith Bruce as Johanna. Miss Elsie Walton Hemming is good as Clara. Minor parts are ably depicted, and the play is well staged.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Bridgen.—The chief attraction here is Auguste Van Biene and company, in a sketch entitled Karl's Luck, during which Mr. Van Biene introduces some good 'cello solos, and has a warm reception. A couple of clever jokers are the Two Arnatos. Some good acrobatic comedy is contributed by Burley and Burley; Bert Weston, comedian, is very funny. Other good items are Will Poluski, jun., in song and dance; Hilda Jacobson, musical comedienne; Little Keeno, boy comedian and dancer; and the Bioscope.

GRAND ELECTRIC THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Wm. Clark.—Craig, Rose, and Craig, dental athletes, contribute a sensational gymnastic act, which is much appreciated. A good reception was also awarded the Miles Trio in their eccentric juggling act, their Indian club juggling being especially good. The remaining part of the entertainment is composed of animated pictures of pathos, comedy, travel, and drama.

SPENNYMOOR.—CAMBRIDGE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. David Collins.—Mr. Bulmer and company present The Girl Who Went Astray to large houses. Mr. Richard Ferris makes a capital Captain Frank Julian, and Mr. Austin Mortimer admirably sustains the character of Rupert Murdock. Mr. Evan Poland as Adolphus Boomer is very entertaining, and Mr. Reg. Oldroyd makes a capital James Yellowsocks. Miss Doris Brookes, a skilled actress, gives a fascinating rendering of Madge Harvey and Zara L'Estrange; and Miss Ada Oakley supplies a careful study of Violet Harvey. Miss Mary Dalby as Molly Smart is popular; and the secondary parts are in able hands.

ARCADIA.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Gowland; Resident-Manager, Mr. R. Fenny.—Good pictures are on view here. The variety turn of Verto and Venita, in a musical mélange, is appreciated.

PICTURE PALACE.—Lessee, Mr. Arthur Sleep; Manager, Mr. Geo. Battle.—Heading a strong programme here is Little Dixie, a juvenile impersonator, who scores; in a musical speciality Sharon is very good; George Battle supplies some fine songs; and among the pictures is the Durham Miners' Gala, taken last Saturday.

STAFFORD.—WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Adeler, Sutton, and Allandale.—A capital programme is this week presented by Sydney James's Royal Strolling Players. Steve Buckingham and Victor Walland work hard and meet with great applause; Gilbert Fernis is an amusing comedian; Maidie Harrison captivates with her dancing; Clara Pierso is a fine contralto; and Lena Lawton is an appreciated comedienne.

ST. HELENS.—THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, St. Helens Theatre, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Harry E. Johnson.—The King and the Unknown Woman is being presented here this week by Mr. E. Hill Mitchelson's company. Prince Loris is admirably undertaken by Mr. James Stillwell; Violet Carlyle plays powerfully as Zora; the Prince Monski of Mr. Walter T. Clifford is a careful study; and Mr. W. R. Winning is an excellent General Platz. Miss Adeline Raby does well as Countess Melvitch, and Miss Ella Sennett is quite a captivating Else. Mr. Willie Hicks (Corporal Stack) and Miss Anena Walton (Schnapps) extract much fun from their impersonations, and Mr. Cyril Harrison is admirable as Captain Gara. Little Prudence Auston is capital as Cascar.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Wilmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Leo Weisker.—Sandy McNab and company receive a capital reception on their return visit, and The Egyptian Mummy is funnier than ever; Fred Elton is applauded for his songs at the piano; Dot Hardy makes a hit with her funny songs; and Elton and Elma's work on the bars is both amusing and clever. Moon and Morris entertain with patter and dance, and Will Rhodes, comedian, gives a good turn. Coverdale and Huxley's Bijou Juveniles give a pleasing scena, which is appreciated.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—A capital attraction for the Wakes holidays is What a Man Made Her, which has thoroughly interested large audiences. Mr. Frederick W. Freeman makes a dignified Dr. Mark Haven; Mr. W. J. Butley acts effectively in the rôle of the villainous Rupert Wogan Danescombe; very humorous is Mr. Max Copland as Lewis Gunnerstein; and Mr. Charles K. Francis gives a creditable portrayal of Sir Ernest Cavendish. Miss Renée Glendower acts charmingly as Janet McAllister; Miss Dorothy Dewhurst is delightful as Deborah; and Miss Beatrice Shirley acts with skill and ability as Lady Thora Danescombe.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.—Crowded audiences have patronised the excellent entertainment here. Venturini has mystified everyone with his clever illusions; the Three Hodginis contribute a smart aerial gymnastic performance; Harry Friskey is an amusing comedy juggler; Sid Bedford and Co. in a farcical comedy, The Second Mrs. Chester, provoke abundant laughter; Millie Howell is a pleasing character vocalist; Vardon, Perry, and Wilber, musicians, vocalists, and dancers, are highly entertaining; and Curwen and Belle, burlesque artists, and Drury and Lane, speciality dancers, are very successful.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—CASTLE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Imeson.—Mr. Lyn Harding and Mr. Sidney Cooper present their best company in the highly-amusing play Tantalising Tommy. Miss Nellie Lonnen, in the title-rôle, is a pleasing success; Mr. Hastings Lynn makes a capital James Cottenham. Other artists of repute who appear in the cast are Mr. Ambrose Flower, Mr. Roy Byford, and Miss Eva Brickwell. The performance is preceded each evening by Miss Eileen Terence, in songs and stories.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton.—Harry Weldon is capital in his character songs, "Stiffy the goalkeeper," and "Dick Turpin," and delights large audiences. Another excellent turn is provided by Francini, Olloms, and Page, jugglers, acrobats, and comedy tumblers; Mr. Richard Flanagan and company play a sketch, entitled Compensation; Daisy and Dot are clever duettists and dancers; Mr. Charles Wakeman's Five Singing Gipsies are excellent; Miss Maud Desmond is a dainty comedienne; and Bob Selvidge and Poppy Holland give a musical absurdity.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—Harry Nelson, the popular Tyneside comedian, is warmly received here; Will Douglas' Troupe of Five Jolly Bakers make a hit; Dolly Golden is a dainty speciality dancer; Walker's Geldarts give a novel act in a joiners' shop; Vesta Dawson is a clever male impersonator; Mlle. de Rose is a good baritone vocalist and pianist; and Patsy Haley and Ped Cowley are champion boxers.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—THE HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will A. Jackson.—Mr. Stanley Carlton's company present Night and Morning. The parts of hero and heroine are capitally filled by Mr. Carlton and Miss Rubie Maude, and an outstanding feature of the production is the fine acting of Miss Marion Holly in the low comedy part of Selina, the drudge. The old showman is played in a bright and breezy manner by Mr. W. H. Vernon.

STOURBRIDGE.—ALHAMBRA THEATRE, PICTURE PALACE, AND VARIETY HALL.—General-Manager, Mr. Douglas C. Phelps.—Will Owen receives nightly recalls for his smart song and patter; Baby Parkinson is a transformation dancer of ability; Jacks and Chaol, comedy acrobats, convulse the audiences; Miss Lillian Lowe possesses a sweet voice and has some good songs; the Two Walonells give a clever show on the triple bars; and the pictures are good.

SUNDERLAND.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Hy. Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dunn.—Mrs. Morton Powell's company is here this week in A Girl's Temptation. Miss Lalla Stanhope does excellent work as Kate Stirling, as also does Miss Blanche Lee as Annie Brown; Mr. Frank V. Fenn gives a good account of himself as Guy Warren, and Mr. Fred J. Mace is capital as Jim Judd; Messrs. Chas. Herbert (Basil Warren), Gerald Nolan (Geoffrey Stirling), and Tom Handley (Hon. Chas. Clam) all do good work; Mr. Clifton Earle as Mark Klaw proves himself a capable exponent of villainy; and Miss Winnie Donovan is equally good as Lady Heathfield. The comedy is in the capable hands of Miss Amy Corallie and Mr. Albert E. Mann.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Hy. Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lauder.—This week the Danbys are here with a funny knockabout act and some capital songs; Little Ella is popular with her impersonations of music hall artists. The pictures are excellent.

PALACE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Archer Hamilton.—A capital programme is given here this week. The Havana Troupe of grotesque acrobats are clever; Irene and Morton give a capital speciality dancing act; and the Three Delaries do some sensational work in their scena, The Demon's Grotto. The pictures are excellent.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—The Five Mowatts are astounding audiences here this week with their lightning juggling turn; The Zigurner quartette contribute a refined musical item, comprising good vocal work, also 'cello, violin, and piano; the De Wynne Bros. do some admirable acrobatic work; Woodhouse and Wells, comedians, and Fred Poplar contribute popular turns; Kitty Wager is a pleasing comedienne; the Three Sisters Killiner are nimble acrobatic dancers; and Peggy Pryde, the favourite comedienne, is always sure of a hearty welcome.

SWINDON.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wiltshire Entertainments Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Manners.—Mr. Frederick Melville's drama, The Bad Girl of the Family, is attracting large houses this week. Mr. R. Marius St. John admirably plays Lieut. Richard Marsh; Mr. Sydney Lynn is successful as Harry Gordon; Lord Erskine is ably depicted by Mr. Percy Baverstock; Mr. Geo. H. Asquin causes much amusement as Sammy Snozzle; Mr. Barnet Lando impersonates Barney Gordon to perfection; Mr. Walter Walmsley makes a satisfactory Jerry Holmes; Gladys Erskine finds a charming exponent in Miss Alice Esther Belmore; Miss Gladys Newcombe is seen to advantage as Mrs. Moore; Miss Edith Evans is effective as Honour Moore; Sally Smithers is well taken by Miss Nellie James; and Miss Florrie Kelsey gives a finished portrayal of the title-rôle Bess Moore.

COUNTY ELECTRIC PAVILION.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur E. Melborne.—An interesting collection of pictures is exhibited here. The films After Many Years and The President's Special are of exceptional dramatic power, and others worthy of mention are The Boss of Bar X Ranch, His Little Son, The Watchman's Daughter, Never Again, and Brother, Sister, and Cowpuncher. Madame Florrie Conolly is warmly applauded for her illustrated songs.

TODMORDEN.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Richard D

round excellent bill this week, being closely run in popular favour by Herbert Shelley, whose polished style and refreshing songs and humour delights everyone; Merrie Maie Dillon is an alto-gether charming turn; Harry Vardon gives an original and talented ventriloquial performance; and Joe Belmont's unique Bird Act is capital. Mabel Woods displays the remarkable range of her voice in two good songs; the Sisters Saxony work hard and thoroughly well, their display being of the brightest; Hammon and Wyatt ("the Australian Sandow girls") sing well, act intelligently, and provide another good number in this bright programme.

WEST BROMWICH. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. R. Nightingale.—Mr. Montague Beaudyn's company is presenting The Shadow of the Cross. Miss Irene Munroe is a charming and captivating Erminilda; Mr. Beaudyn as Edgar Blest presents a striking study; and Miss Muriel Inglis as Merebode, Miss Phylis Rae as Calade, and Miss Cora Patey as Edelgitha are also admirable.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. R. Colin; Resident-Manager, Mr. R. Colin, sen.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ted Leamar.—Messrs. Harry Aynsleigh and Percy Thaw's company is this week presenting a thrilling drama, entitled The King of Diamonds. Miss Camille Treherne has a striking part as Olive Vandell, to which she does full justice; and Mr. Aynsleigh as Sir Philip Garth provides a fine study.

WEST HARTLEPOOL. — GRAND THEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. W. Seaward.—Mother is presented here by Mr. Harry Foxwell's company. Miss Sheila Walsh, the authoress of the play, does justice to the rôle of Nellie Fairweather, a character which calls for the exercise of much dramatic intensity; Mr. J. O. Stewart proves himself a thorough artist in the rôle of Duncan Fairweather; and Mr. Alexander J. Haviland strikingly portrays the character of Frank Rodney; Mr. Cecil H. Raymond makes a great hit as Tommy Noblets, and Miss Phillis Vaughan is charmingly vivacious as Polly Crumpet. Too much can scarcely be said in praise of Miss Emile Entwistle as Little May; Miss Amy Wood makes the most of the part of Martha. Scenic effects are especially good.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. F. Thompson.—W. C. Fields is a clever comedy juggler; Mabel Mavis, in her manipulation of the glassophone, delights all; Russell Wollett retains his popularity as "the lady in black"; a clever and amusing musical mélange is introduced by Wilson and Waring; the dolefulness of the inimitable Walter King is the cause of much hilarity; poses representing many nationalities are artistically done by Mlle. Eldee; Sadie Simpson, comedienne and dancer, is graceful and neat.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — KNIGHTSTONE PAVILION AND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Mr. Norman V. Norman's company is here once again in a round of plays they have made so popular in this town. On Monday The Marriage of Kitty was staged. Mr. Norman V. Norman's Sir Reginald Belsize is a highly finished piece of acting; Miss Beatrice Wilson, handsome as ever, is delightful as Kitty; Mr. F. Lock-Whittaker is artistic as John Travers; and Mr. Norman Leslie is very successful as Norbury. Miss Agnes Thornton is entitled to much praise as Mme. de Semiano, and Miss Betty Stannard (Rosalie) and Mr. W. R. F. Dillon Hampton are both entitled to eulogy.

GRAND PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—Rich. Taylor, the whistling ventriloquist, is making a big hit this week; O'Malley and Brown evoke much laughter with their sketch You're Still a Friend of Mine; the Five Musical Tritons are clever artists; Henriette and Selina give a very fine show; Hearne and Palmer excel as acrobats; Howard and Wallace appear in a duologue, Taming a Wife; and Miss Dulcie King-Lloyd, comedienne, is well received. Herr Victor Vorzanger's Blue Viennese Band commenced a three weeks' engagement on Sunday

WEST STANLEY. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Theatre Royal Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Mark H. Linden.—Mrs. F. Wybert Clive and company are here with The Outcast of the Family. Mr. Wybert Clive in the rôle of Sir Henry Thorne is entirely satisfactory; Mr. Jack McCaig as Harry Thorne and Mr. Bert Oates as Richard Martin are very good; Mr. Edward W. Cudd renders efficient aid as Abraham Wasper; Mr. Tom Roydan as Stephen Barry is clever; Miss Maud Leslie Cudd is an excellent Grace Redburn; as Nancy Bray Miss Freda Beckett is attractive; and Miss Elsie Shelton is well placed as Ruth.

VICTORIA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes; Lessee, Mr. John Cottrell.—Mr. J. H. Milburn heads the bill here, and is received with enthusiasm; Maud Lorette, mimic and impersonator, goes well; Stelfano is mystifying in her magic; and some excellent pictures are shown.

WEYMOUTH.—PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. R. Wallis.—Havana, performed by Mr. Alexander Leghton's principal company, met with a hearty welcome here. Mr. Reg. Edwards was very successful as Reginald Brown, and Mr. John R. Vat as Nix convulsed the house. Mr. Savill White was capital as Jackson Villiers, and Miss Hebe Bliss was charming as Consuelo, her singing being much admired. Miss Winnie Brown was rapturously encored as Amita, her dancing being especially good. Mr. J. Bryan Ridout as the Hon. Frank Charteris, Mr. Cyril K. Percival as Don Adolpho, Mr. Lawrence Lisle as Diego, and Miss Edith Barwell as Isabelita were all admirable.

WHITBY.—SPA THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Payne Seddon.—The Little Damozel was staged before crowded houses on Monday and two following nights. On Thursday Mr. Edward Terry, who is an old favourite here, made his appearance in Liberty Hall, the various parts of which were sustained by an efficient company. Mr. Terry holds the record for the largest attendance at this theatre, and on the occasion of his last visit many persons were unable to gain admission.

WHITEHAVEN.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Falconer Jackes.—Messrs. Paumier and Howard's company is here in The Prince and the Beggar Maid. Mr. L. Booker is a powerful Hildred; the brothers Michael and Olaf have excellent representatives in Mr. Victor Rae and Mr. Henry Hallatt; Mr. Herbert Burton makes a manly Captain Hector; and Mr. Stafford Dickens is droll as Carl. Mr. W. S. Hardy makes the most of his opportunities as Colonel Wellenberg; Mr. Frank Brunnell is good as the dumb servant; Miss Violette May is a pleasing Camiola; and Miss Mona Hall is natural in the girlish character of Viola. Miss Viola Holland as the Princess submits an interesting performance; and the scenery and general mounting are much appreciated.

WHITLEY BAY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—The Whitley Pleasure Gardens, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Auguste A. Penleve.—With the summer season in full swing, excellent business is the rule of this popular resort. In the commodious Theatre Royal an exhilarating programme is submitted by the Schafer Four, with a good musical répertoire. Thompson Wood's Tiny Slavs pay a welcome return visit; Ethel Bourne is a pleasing contralto vocalist; the Gilberts are expert wire performers; Carr and Rose are a couple of amusing comedians; Florence Leonard is an acceptable ballad singer; and Maisie Dene excels as an exponent of terpsichorean art. In addition, the members of the stock company are still in favour, and there is an excellent show of animated pictures. The various side shows and attractions are all being well patronised.

COLISEUM. — General-Manager, Mr. William Smolt; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Patterson.—The principal pictures on view are the interesting series On the Border States, and welcome interludes are supplied in the way of variety by Little Eileen, a dainty juvenile comedienne, and Tiny Ashton, the boy vocalist and impersonator.

PAVILION ELECTRIC THEATRE.—Lessee and Manger, Mr. R. L. Grice.—In addition to some up-to-date films, there are shown some dramatic stories of Indian life and Longfellow's realistic poem "Hiawatha." The variety element is supplied by Nosilla, billed as England's paper-tearer, and Master Vivian, the silver-toned boy tenor.

EMPIRE.—Resident Manager, Mr. T. J. Greyson.—Living pictures form the chief attraction here, but pleasant diversion is provided by Royal Tago, a clever Japanese entertainer, and J. P. Carroll, tambourinist.

TORREADOR'S ENCLOSURE, PROMENADE. — General-Manager, Mr. Charles Elderton.—This popular enclosure continues to draw crowds of visitors, and the members of the manager's company are always sure of warm marks of approval.

LINK'S BAND, PAVILION.—Manager and Lessee, Mr. William Catlin.—Catlin's Pierrots are too well known to need comment at great length, as many favourites of the "halls" have graduated or "dwelt" for a summer's season at this favourite "open" resort. In fine weather great crowds throng the "chair" enclosure and on the rising ground facing the stand.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Company.—Through the Divorce Court is being presented here by Messrs. Henry Chattell and Jack Denton's company. Lady Penarth is powerfully delineated by Miss Hettie Chattell; Miss Marcella Hudson scores well as Dinah; Miss Constance Dagmar makes a charming Sybil; Mr. Jack Denton is conspicuous as the Hon. Algy; while the part of Lord Robert Penarth is in the capable hands of Mr. Riddell Robinson.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Company.—Dickie Clare presents his musical absurdity, Lucky 'Liza, here this week. Mr. Dickie Clare as Silas Slim, the judge, and the French waiter, gives a capital exposition; Mr. Leonard Maitland as Paul Pettitoe causes endless laughter; Miss Madge Brownie finds favour with the whole house as Eliza Bird; Miss Rosie Coyne as Vergina Blotherwick and Miss Evelyn Wood as Sodie Potts receive much applause for their singing; the Jesmond Trio also dance themselves into favour.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Vivian Evans.—Mlle. Venetta holds premier position in the bill, and appears not only in a protean act but also as a conjurer, classical dancer and poseuse; the popularity of Park's Eton Boys and Girton Girls is as pronounced as ever; the woes of Leonard Teel cause immense amusement; the daring act of the Almas, equilibrists and tumblers, elicits much applause; Maisie Dene is a charming comedienne and dancer; Dolly and Rosie, duettists and dancers, are particularly good; and Bonetti Corri provides an entertaining comedy juggling act.

ELECTRIC THEATRE.—District-Manager, Mr. Arthur Hickman; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. S. De Vine.—A strong dramatic picture, The Abyss, is the chief item in the programme; Pathé Frères' Gazette is as up-to-date as ever; I Do Like to be Beside the Seaside is the singing picture; and The Cat

YNYSHIR.—WORKMEN'S HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. Pooles, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. W. Bynorth.—The pictures here are entertaining. A Child's Message From Heaven is a pretty subject, and A Tramp's Story and An Elopement are splendid dramatic pictures. Petro and Leon and the Le Bruns give a good variety turn.

YORK.—ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington and Sons; General-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—The first visit to this city of Lights Out, presented by Mr. J. W. Lindsay-Ellis's company, had been anticipated with much pleasure by local playgoers, and, notwithstanding the sultry weather, a large house welcomed the play on Monday night. Miss Pauline Emerie as Klara Volkhardt displays much ability and charm in an exacting rôle; Mr. Frank Cariello as Lieutenant von Lauffen is deserving of high commendation; Mr. Robt. Noble impersonates Sergeant Volkhardt with much skill and power; as Corporal Quiess Mr. Arthur T. Barugh quite captures the approbation of the house; Mr. Herbert Lugg acts with dignity as Lieutenant von Howan; Mr. G. W. Barnes is amusing as Private Michael; and as Major Paschke Mr. Francis J. Bithell acts powerfully. The curtain-raiser is Good for Nothing, in which Miss Jessie Jay is seen to great advantage.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—The clever Norman and Leonard Trio are making a big hit; the wonderful tumbling of Archie Royer is applauded; the Brothers De Hais are club jugglers of more than ordinary merit; and Tom Lloyd sings himself into immediate favour; Ambrose Thorne is also a popular item; and the Sisters Terry return again to the scene of their many successes; the coloured blind comedian, C. W. Walker, assisted by Miss Ida May, presents a popular turn; and the sketch, Who Did It? played by Milo T. Ellwanger is remarkably neat.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Bowman; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. E. Bradley.—The following films are shown this week: The Vicinity of Laos States, The Range Riders, and A Helping Hand, whilst the Animatophone is a distinct acquisition.

VICTORIA HALL.—Lessee and Director Mr. Sidney Bacon; Resident-Manager, Mr. Bert Rutter.—The speciality introduced by Davis and Welsh has

ROYAL, BIRKENHEAD, PICNIC

The annual picnic of the numerous staff, numbering nearly sixty, of the Theatre Royal, Birkenhead, took place on Saturday last, when Chester was visited. At the Hop Pole Hotel an early dinner was served. After dinner the party made their way to the Groves, where electric launches were in waiting to convey them for fourteen miles up the river to a spot where a programme of sports, with handsome prizes, presented by generous friends, was carried out. There were threading-the-needle race and flat race for the ladies, a tug-of-war, flat race, a boot-scramble race, and a cigarette race for the gentlemen, as well as mixed events, all being under the able direction of Mr. Herbert M. King, the acting-manager of the Royal, in association with Mr. Reginald Grant, formerly acting-manager of the Royal, and now acting in that capacity at Kelly's Theatre, Liverpool. Mr. A. W. Kelly officiated as referee. Upon the completion of the programme the prizes were presented to the successful competitors by Miss Isabelle Morris, the hon. secretary and treasurer of the picnic committee.

On the return of the party, and after tea at the Hop Pole, Mr. Reginald Grant proposed the health of their president (Mr. Kelly), to whom, with Mrs. Kelly, they were all very grateful for the warm interest which they had shown in the day's outing. They all sincerely regretted Mrs. Kelly's absence. He gave them "Long life, health, and happiness to Mr. and Mrs. Kelly."

The toast was very warmly seconded by Mr. Peter Griffiths, and was drunk with enthusiasm and to the singing of "For they are jolly good fellows."

Mr. Kelly, in reply, thanked them from the bottom of his heart for their remarkable display of enthusiasm, which he knew to be sincere; and not least was he grateful to them for their tribute to his charming wife, who was greatly disappointed not to be able to be with them at their annual reunion. She had asked him to apologise for her enforced absence. He had always felt that those annual picnics were a great advantage in many ways. They all returned to their work with renewed energy and vigour, and in a spirit of harmony and good-fellowship which was essential to the success of any undertaking. It was always a pleasure for him to come amongst them, for he believed that it was well that employer and employed should be associated in such festivities as they had enjoyed that day; and he should like to say that he did not think there was any man in England connected with theatres who was blessed with a better staff than he had. He felt that most sincerely with regard to every single employee, from his manager (Mr. King) down to the call-boy. In conclusion, Mr. Kelly expressed his indebtedness to his colleagues on the Town Council (Mr. T. T. Baines and Mr. W. Mark Furnival), whose genial presence and useful services in connection with the sports had undoubtedly enhanced the pleasure of their outing.

Mr. Reginald Grant next proposed the health of the manager (Mr. H. M. King), which was given with musical honours.

Mr. King, in returning thanks, bore warm testimony to the personal qualities of Mr. Kelly as a "guv'nor." During his experience of theatrical life, which began at the early age of ten years, he had never met a principal who commanded and gained greater respect than did Mr. Kelly.

The party broke up in the best of spirits, and thoroughly agreed that it had been one of the best picnics in the history of the Royal.

MISS MILLIE HYLTON.

The above illustration represents that versatile actress Miss Millie Hylton in her scena The Dawn of a To-morrow, in which a pure-souled girl of an East End slum outlines with eloquent emphasis the historiette of a valetudinarian who finds in the gospel of unshaken hope and invincible cheeriness an antidote to grim despair and suicidal thoughts. The impersonation has enabled Miss Hylton, always one of our brightest and best burlesque boys, to show that Thalia does not claim her sole allegiance. She can be in pathetic mood, and powerfully bring home by declamation and song the lesson contained in Mrs. Frances Hodgson-Burnett's popular play, recently seen at the Garrick and Duke of York's Theatres.

In deference, however, to the wishes of the authoress, the scena has been withdrawn. Songs written on play-titles are by no means new. We can well remember "A Woman of No Importance," the title of Oscar Wilde's play, as sung by Miss Lily Napier. Then the inimitable Jenny Hill gave us, still earlier in the last century, that fine descriptive song "Masks and Faces" (the title of Tom Taylor's comedy) and, coming to our own day, we have yet to discover that Sir Herbert Tree objects to Mr. Leo Dryden singing "False Gods," or that Mr. Lewis Waller or Mr. Herbert Sleath takes exception to the same descriptive vocalist's choice of the title of "A White Man" for a successful number. Neither do we anticipate any trouble from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle when Mr. Dryden produces his latest play-title song, "The Speckled Band."

NEW THEATRE, CAMBRIDGE.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

The annual meeting of the New Theatre (Cambridge) Co., Ltd., was held at that house on Friday, the 12th inst. Mr. G. Swannell presided, in the absence of Mr. J. W. Clark (chairman of the Directors), and others present were Mr. W. B. Redfern (managing-director), Messrs. A. G. Swannell, J. F. Jackson, D. J. Scott, W. H. Legge, H. Slater, and H. Hall (secretaries).

At the commencement of the meeting, Mr. Redfern referred in sympathetic terms to the illness which had prevented the Chairman of Directors from being present. Later Mr. Redfern suggested that the meeting should send an expression of sympathy to Mr. Clark, and this was agreed to.

The profit and loss account showed the amount on the credit side to be £12,700 6s. 5½d., this sum including: by receipts, £12,205 7s. 1½d., and rents £368 10s. The expenses left a net profit on this amount of £672 16s. 3d.

Mr. Redfern proposed the re-election of Mr. G. Swannell as a director, saying that he and Mr. Clark had given him great assistance in conducting the business of the theatre.

Mr. Scott seconded, and the motion was carried.

The Chairman then proposed that the report and accounts be received.

Mr. Tyler, in seconding, said he thought the shareholders had every reason to feel gratified that in these hard times they were in such a satisfactory position. Considering the various circumstances, he thought they might congratulate themselves and the managers of the Theatre on the result of the year's working.

The motion was carried.

Mr. Tyler proposed a vote of thanks to the directors for their services during the year, and proposed also that the sum of £30 be voted to them. They knew that all the directors did their best for the interests of the company.

Mr. Scott seconded, and the proposition was carried.

Mr. A. G. Swannell then proposed a vote of thanks to the managing-director, Mr. Redfern, for his services during the past year. He was sure the bookings during the year had been excellent, and the results were most satisfactory when they considered that the theatre had to be closed during the week when the Moody-Manners Company was to have visited it. Mr. Redfern was to be congratulated on the splendid productions he had been able to secure for the town.

Mr. Jackson seconded.

Mr. Redfern, replying, said that, considering elections and one cause and another, he thought they had done very well, and might congratulate themselves on the year's work. During the week when the Moody-Manners Company was to have come, they lost seven evening performances and three matinées. That was a serious matter, for it would have been the busiest week of the season, and had the theatre been open they would certainly have been able to show a much larger balance on their account. Still, they had had a very fair season, and the bookings during the season proved, he thought, that they had done the right thing. He had obtained very excellent bookings for the ensuing season, so that they ought again to do very well. The management of a theatre like that entailed a good deal of anxiety, with a public which often had no mercy if one made mistakes, and very little praise if one made successes. Still, they had got a very good paying dividend all round. Among other duties he had often had to go to London to see new pieces, and had had opportunities of seeing the bookings of some of the "touring" theatres in London and the class of pieces provided for patrons. The managers there had only to provide one piece for each week, whereas he had nearly always to provide two, which added greatly to the difficulties of his position. He was certain that the pieces brought to Cambridge were, as a rule, superior to those seen at these London theatres. Yet he was afraid their patrons did not always appreciate that fact. Just the same companies were coming here for three nights a week and a matinée as were going to these London theatres for six nights. He was certain that they had, as a rule, number one companies at Cambridge, in spite of what certain outside Press notices said in criticising them. As a matter of fact, they had the same pieces in Cambridge as were put on in the larger centres. Of course, it would be possible to run the theatre on cheaper lines, but that would not appeal to their educated audiences, and therefore he thought it would be a mistake. They ran the theatre in as economical a manner as possible, but they must run a theatre like that on tolerably liberal lines. He hoped that patrons during the ensuing season would appreciate that, and would give them the support they had endeavoured to deserve. In concluding, Mr. Redfern expressed his thanks to Mr. Slater, Mr. Hall, Mr. Briggs, and the whole of the theatre staff for the assistance they had given him during the year.

Mr. C. F. Charlton was re-elected auditor for the ensuing year, and the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman, proposed by Mr. Redfern.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE P. HAWTREY.

Mr. George P. Hawtrey, the well-known pageant master, died suddenly on Wednesday, the 17th inst., at his residence, 96, Clarence Gate-mansions, from heart failure. Mr. Hawtrey, who was a brother of Mr. Charles Hawtrey, the actor, was pageant master at Chester this year, at Cardiff last year, and at Cheltenham in 1908. He was the son of the Rev. John William Hawtrey, master of Alden House School at Slough, and was educated at Eton and Pembroke College, Oxford. After leaving the University he devoted himself to literature and the stage. The Pickpocket, produced on April 24, 1886, at the old Globe Theatre in Newcastle-street, Strand, was adapted by him from Von Moser's comedy Mit Vernugen. In this piece the deceased gentleman's brother, Charles, scored one of his early successes in the part of Osmond Hewett. Others in the cast included W. J. Hill, W. S. Penley, E. J. Henley, Miss Cissy Grahame, Mrs. Leigh Murray, and Miss Vane Featherston.

In conjunction with the late Edward Solomon, he wrote a musical version of The Area Belle, which was produced at the Comedy on May 9, 1889, at a matinée, when Dan Leno made one of his rare appearances at the theatres in the part of Pitcher, Mr. Rutland Barrington being the Tosser, and Mr. George Hawtrey the Walker Chalks.

Among the comedies in which the deceased gentleman appeared were The New Wing, at the Strand in 1892, in which he played General Singleside; Niobe, Strand, 1892, in which he was responsible for the part of Hamilton Tompkins; The Late Lamented, at the Strand, 1891, in which he played Mr. Fawcett; and The Prisoner of Zenda, at the St. James's, in 1896. In this adaptation of Anthony Hope's story he was the Franz Teppich.

Mr. G. P. Hawtrey was twice married, his first wife being Miss Eda Strahan. He leaves a widow, who was Miss Gertrude Jessie Rolls Harcourt, and three children, one son and two daughters. The funeral will take place at Broxbourne on Monday.

THE Leeds musical festival will this year take place on Oct. 12 and three following days in the Leeds Town Hall. Three new works are included in the programme:—"A Sea Symphony," for soli, orchestra, and chorus, by Mr. Vaughan Williams; a new symphony, by Mr. Rachmaninoff; and "Songs of the Fleet," by Sir C. V. Stanford. The conductor will be Sir C. V. Stanford, and Dr. H. Walford Davies will be at the piano. Among the soloists will be Mme. Clara Butt, Mme. Ada Crossley, and Mr. Kennerley Rumford.

who Changed into a Woman and King of the Beggars complete.

WORKINGTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fred Kitto.—Mrs. E. H. Knight's company are here this week with The Lighthouse Robbery. The piece is excellently staged, and all the parts adequately filled. Baby Freda as Little Nelly won many admirers, and Miss Hilda Baynton as Rose Prescott played her part in a charming manner.

CARNEGIE HALL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; General-Manager, Mr. Fred W. Kitto.—The pictures this week are excellent. Chant and Chant and the Delmores are all very successful.

WORTHING. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. Adolf Seebold; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Malcolm Spurgin.—The Geisha was presented here the first half of the week by the excellent company directed by Mr. Mouillot. The famous musical comedy was exceptionally well dressed and staged, and was enthusiastically received. Miss Aimee Grey was most pleasing as O Mimosa San, and the part of Molly Seamour was filled with much credit by Miss Adela Crispen. O Juliette Diamante found a capable exponent in Miss Renee Reel, and as Lady Constance Wynn Miss Edith Jeffries was satisfactory. The rôle of Wun Hi was in the capable hands of Mr. Edward Carlton, who was simply irresistible. Mr. Colin Coop was a delightful Marquis Imari, and Mr. Edmund Sherras in the rôle of Reginald Fairfax was all that could be desired. The chorus was a most efficient one, and the musical director was Mr. Ernest Hartman. A Greek Slave was announced for the remainder of the week.

KURSAAL GARDENS.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Adolf Seebold.—Large audiences continue to testify to the popularity of the Comedy Comets, who are in possession here with many new numbers.

ST. JAMES' HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. Scott and Mansfield.—The vaudeville party, the Queries, continue to find favour. On Wednesday evening Mr. Fisher Jones took a benefit, when a mammoth programme was presented.

WREXHAM. — EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. J. Scott.—The singing and pattering of that clever and versatile comedian Tom Hulme is greeted with much laughter; Elsie Kedwards is a dainty singer and dancer; and Will Lento is responsible for some excellent songs. The pictures are very attractive.

been well received, whilst the more popular pictures are One of the Best, On Panther Creek, and the Wild Man from Borneo.

MR. ALLAN WILKIE'S company has been most successful at the Blackburn Theatre Royal with The Cardinal, Twelfth Night, and The Sleigh Bells. Mr. Louis N. Parker's drama was performed on Monday, and Mr. Wilkie gave an admirable performance in the title-part, and won unlimited applause; Mr. Sinclair Neill did remarkably well as the Justice of Rome; and the Strozzi of Mr. Henry Hargreaves was excellent. Valuable assistance was given by Messrs. Philip Gordon, John Paley, H. Meharry, Rex. Barrington, H. Mansfield, F. Mayes, H. Brough, and G. E. Dunston. Miss F. Hunter Watts played Filiberta cleverly; and good impersonations were given by the Misses Mary Lovett, H. Plowwright, A. Miller, and M. Dallas.

AT the New Prince's Theatre, Blackburn, Miss Ethel Van Praagh and Mr. J. Edward Whitty's company have been winning applause in Facing the World Alone.

AT the Alexandra Theatre, Washington, Miss Grace Manners and company have been presenting The Scarlet Clue, The Wages of Sin, East Lynne, and Lady Audley's Secret. Miss Warner as Ruth Hope was completely successful; in George Bland Mr. George Gordon showed his great skill and ability; Mr. Frank Esmond was capable Stephen Marlet; Harry Wentworth was in the capable hands of Mr. Roy Rhind; Mr. Frank Hertu was well received as Josiah Deane; Mr. Louis Nanton's parody on "Somewhere" was much to the liking of the natives; Mr. C. Williams was encored for his singing; Misses Florence M. Daly and Lizzie Palmer as Jemima and Juliana respectively caused much fun; Miss Lalla Price scored as Barbara Dale; Master Willie Taylor and Miss Rita Corri were extremely clever as the two children.

A COPY of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

AT the Rose Theatre, Berlin, the melodrama Ein Seltener Fall, the German version of "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," has been revived with a good deal of success. It was produced some four or five years ago, and ran for six months on and off. The acting is adequate, and the audience thoroughly enjoyed having its nerves screwed up to high pressure. "Oh's!" and "Ach's!" were plentifully breathed at the most thrilling moments, and applause followed applause at the end of the acts as soon as the spectators had got their breath again.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 8,
"HOODMAN BLIND."

Mr. Robert Arthur could hardly have selected a more suitable drama for the close of his summer stock season at the Kennington Theatre than that masterpiece from the pen of Mr. Henry Arthur Jones entitled Hoodman Blind. It is a long time since this powerful play has been seen on the suburban stage in London, and Mr. H. B. Brandreth, who has been responsible for the whole of the productions at the Kennington during the fifteen weeks of the dramatic revivals, is to be congratulated upon the admirable way in which the play was presented. Hoodman Blind is a work which appeals to all those engaged in its performance to put forth their best efforts, and that this was done by the Kennington company goes without saying.

Miss Jessie Winter in the dual parts of Nance Yeulett and Jess, her sister, the waif, made a bigger hit than in any previous effort. The opportunity was one which enabled her to show to advantage the great dramatic ability which she possesses, and she enacted both rôles with real vim and vigour. Mr. Walter Gay was excellent as Jack Yeulett, sketching the character with much force and power; Mark Lezzard was ably presented by Mr. G. P. Polson; and Mr. Landen was finely portrayed by Mr. Tom Mowbray. Mr. G. W. Cockburn gave a graphic sketch of Tom Latiker; Miss Nellie Burdette enacted Liz with a good deal of vivacity, and was distinctly amusing as Mrs. Chawner; Mr. Alfred Terris did good work as Ben Chibbles, and faithfully reproduced the North Country mannerisms and dialect; Mr. Tom Carlin was admirable as Jim Dadge; and Mr. Charles Danver was exceedingly good as Noah Quodling. Mr. Frank R. Crimp was at home in his favourite rôle of the detective, his representation of Inspector Jermin being careful and clever; Miss Dolly Elliston was excellent as Tomtit, giving a pathetic sketch of the crippled waif; Miss Elsie Videan cleverly portrayed Kit; Miss Maggie Hogan and Miss Mary Kilpack filled the rôles of village women with fidelity; and Miss Winifred Whyte was bright and happy as Polly Chibbles. Mr. Oswald Lingard gave a fine study of Kridge, and Mr. H. Baker showed dramatic ability as Mad Willy. The remaining characters were equally well sustained, particularly those of the footman (Mr. J. Miller), Nipper (Mr. E. Day), and Joe Swirrup (Mr. G. Elliston).

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, Aug. 15, the Farcical Comedy,
"THE NAKED TRUTH."

North London has the privilege and the pleasure of having the first visit to the suburbs of Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company in The Naked Truth, which has had such a triumphal career at Wyndham's Theatre. Its popularity was again demonstrated on Monday, when a full house followed the ingenious story of the "magnificent liar" being compelled to speak the "naked truth" in spite of himself whilst wearing a certain magic ring. Every member of the company is capable and hard-working. Mr. Stanley Logan gives an amusing and clever representation of the part of Bernard Dunell, the "magnificent liar"; as James Darrell, the uncle from India, Mr. Townsend Whitling adequately realises the part, and his performance is meritorious; Mr. W. Besley Beltran is admirably suited as Mr. Hayter, and makes the most of his opportunities; and Mr. Laurence Arthur presents a good assumption of Dr. Masters. Mr. Erskine Lang is very amusing as Teddy Lestrange; and Mr. James Heddon renders excellent support by his admirable impersonation of Prosser. Miss Kathleen Maude is a winsome and perfectly delightful Norah Creighton; and Mrs. Darrell is artistically treated by Miss Ormonde Wynne. Miss Violet Ley achieves a success as Mrs. Hayter; Miss Dora Fellowes gives an interesting portrayal of Mme. Rosalie Favre; and Miss Violet Temple (Mrs. Duckett), Miss Lillian M. Russell (Hammond), Mr. Horace Sinclair (Mr. Sawyer), and Mr. Cyril P. Rous (Mr. Freeman) all sustain their respective characters with becoming fitness. The stage-management is in the capable hands of Mr. Townsend Whitling. The amusing comedietta Feed the Brute precedes, and is well received.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, Aug. 15, the Farce, in Three Acts, entitled
"WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD."

After a long run of successful dramas, the change this week to lighter fare is proving very acceptable, and laughter has reigned supreme throughout each performance of the record-breaking farce When Knights Were Bold. Excellently acted by Mr. James Welch's company, under the direction of Mr. Arthur Whittaker, the play goes with a swing, and the witty dialogue and humorous situations keep the audience in almost uncontrollable mirth. Mr. H. Langdon Bruce as Sir Guy de Vere is the life and soul of the piece, and in an arduous and exacting rôle scores a veritable triumph. Acting throughout with admirable verve and sang froid, he extracts the utmost humour from the droll situations in which he is placed, and compels uproarious laughter. Mr. Charles F. Lloyd gives an excellent delineation of Isaac Isaacson, cleverly assuming the mannerisms of the character. Mr. Percy R. Goodyer is amusing as the Hon. Charles Widdicombe; and Mr. Colin Johnston contributes a delightful rendering of the part of the Rev. Peter Pottleberry. The arrogant Sir Brian Ballymote is well portrayed by Mr. Humphrey Warden; and Mr. Lawrence Stevenson as Wittle and Mr. John Cecil as Barker render valuable assistance. Miss Isla Glynne is an attractive Lady Rowena Eggington, and acts with stately grace; Miss Lena Flowerdew is a dignified Hon. Mrs. Waldegrave; Miss Elspeth Oliphant is a pert Alice Barker; and Miss Sadie Hope as Lady Millicent, Miss Lee Lewes as Lady Marjorie, and Miss Juliet Matheson as Kate Pottleberry invest their parts with girlish charm and naïveté. The play is preceded by an amusing comedietta, Milly's Mother, the characters being excellently sustained by Miss Sadie Hope, Miss Lena Flowerdew, Mr. Percy R. Goodyer, and Mr. John Cecil.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 15, the Musical Comedy, entitled
"FLORODORA."

The members of Mr. Charles Constant's company, who are appearing this week at the Dalston Theatre in the musical comedy Florodora, provide an attractive evening's amusement. The original story, which bears the name of the late Owen Hall, gives the comedians in the cast plenty of opportunity to arouse the audience to mirth; the lyrics by Boyd Jones and Paul Rubens quite take the fancy of listeners; and Leslie Stuart's music includes some delightful numbers. The greater proportion of fun is provided by Mr. Johnnie Schofield, who, as Anthony Tweedlepunch, phrenologist, keeps his hearers in roars of laughter with his jokes and eccentric antics. Mr. Courtier R. Dutton as Frank Abercoed, manager for the proprietor of the celebrated perfume, "Florodora," and also of the island of that name, acts with freshness and vigour, and he renders the somewhat trying song, "In the shade of the sheltering palm," with care and effect, the reward of his effort being a spontaneous encore. Mr. Johnnie Junior as Captain Arthur Donegal, 4th Royal Life Guards, seems to enjoy the part; he sings "I want to be a military man" as if he really meant it; and, subsequently, with Miss Florence Hersee (who plays Angela Gilfain), he joins in the Parisian dance, "La Dans des Apaches." Mr. Jack Parker as Leandro, overseer at the Florodora farms, is a prominent personage in the cast. The Lady Holyrood of Miss Kate Leicester is a decidedly pleasing performance. She assumes the style of a society lady quite naturally, and her song "Tact" prompts the audience to clamour for encore verses. Miss Ida Hendrie is a pleasing Xenia Dilton; Miss Lilian Mildred is Clarence Fitzclarence; and Mr. E. Foster does well as Tennyson Sims. Miss Louie Danby is Talleda, maid to Lady Holyrood; Miss Daisy Lake appears as Dolores; and Mr. S. Richardson makes an imposing-looking footman. Cyrus G. Gilfain has a vigorous representative in Mr. Stanley White, who also undertakes, and very ably, the important duties of stage-manager. The chorus and orchestra, under the direction of Mr. W. Neale, do good work.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 15, the Drama entitled
"THE BEGGAR GIRL'S WEDDING."

Mr. Walter Melville's full London company is paying a return visit here with that popular play The Beggar Girl's Wedding. Although so well known to the public here, the play seems to lose none of its freshness, and the action is followed throughout with the keenness and expectation almost of a first night. Mr. Norman B. Cannon makes an exceptionally good hero as Jack Cunningham; Mr. Charles Barclay does well as the mad Dr. Millbank; Mr. Fred Hodson shows himself to be a comedian of no mean order in the part of Dicky Storm, finding a capital helpmate in Miss Daisy Meynard, who simply revels in the part of Tina Torkington. Mr. Frank McClellan is the good fellow to the life as Norman Marsh; the villainies of Gilbert Lindsay find an able exponent in Mr. William T. Kelly; Mr. Wilford Bailey is the drunken Joe Webster; and Mr. Ellis D. Carlyle as his pal, the Dodger, fully realises the possibilities of the part. Mr. Herbert Goddard makes a good character of the level-headed lawyer Robert Grimshaw; Miss Ernestine Walter is the adventuress Maud Villiers, and is aptly described as a fascinating society lady; Miss Sybil Hare is an engaging Alice Cunningham. As the beggar girl Bessie Webster Miss Muriel Dean is winsome and interesting.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 15, the Drama, Written by Arthur Shirley, entitled
"THE GRIP OF IRON."

This well-known play, as great a favourite with South London playgoers as with provincial audiences, drew a large and enthusiastic house on Monday at this popular theatre, Mr. Fred Powell repeating his powerful and grim impersonation of Jagon, alias Simmonet. Mr. Powell's acting again made a deep impression on those present, and with the help of a good all-round company, a capital interpretation of Mr. Arthur Shirley's evergreen drama was given. Mr. Otto Minster did some clever acting as Paul Blanchard; Mr. W. Stack was a capital representative of Lorentz de Ribas; and Mr. Julian Bainbridge was admirable as Alphonso. Mr. W. P. Sheen is highly to be praised for his impersonation of Loustalot; Mr. H. Playfair was a good Dodot; Mr. J. Walters made the most of Captain Guerin; and Mr. Herbert Lee, the Governor of the Prison; and Mr. R. E. Bevens and Mr. Chas. Frowde did justice to their respective parts. That clever actress, Miss East-Robertson, found in Cora Simmonet a part that suits her admirably, and to which she did every justice. Miss Norah Layton was very good as Babette, as was also Miss Violet Eldon as Mlle. Delany. Miss Florrie Lyndon made an admirable Marie Guerin; and Miss Edith Weber portrayed Sophie Blanchard with skill. The Grip of Iron was nicely mounted. Charming entr'actes and incidental music were well played by the orchestra under the skilful bâton of Mr. W. T. Gliddon. Mr. Newman Maurice, after his many successful low-comedy impersonations during the remarkably successful stock season, has now resumed his duties as acting-manager for Mr. Fredk. Melville, and he admirably fills this responsible position.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Aug. 15, the One-Act Drama,
"AN EYE FOR AN EYE."

Miss Esther Phillips and her clever company gave an extremely painstaking and meritorious rendering of the well-written playlet An Eye for an Eye. The piece, being full of tragical emotion and dramatic intensity, naturally appealed strongly to West Londoners, for in Marylebone they dearly love to see the villain meet with his just deserts. As Margaret Marston Miss Esther Phillips played with just that convincing force and passion that the part demanded, and her acting was justly applauded; Miss Millie Phillips portrayed Helen Grantham with skilful effect; Mr. Wyn Weaver was urbane and debonair as the unscrupulous Henry Caston; and Mr. Charles Ross typically sustained the footman Simpson.

A great feature here weekly is the series of pictures, some of the best in London being always screened. In Mr. W. H. Nugent, Mr. F. R. Griffiths, the astute manager of the New-Bio Trading Co., Ltd., has certainly got the right man for the position as acting-manager. The band, under Mr. Ward Bailey's direction, renders several appropriate numbers perfectly.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Aug. 15, the Drama, by Emma Litchfield, entitled
"HIS INDIAN WIFE."

This week Messrs. Arthur Hinton and Travis Green have brought their talented company here with this new and romantic drama, produced a fortnight ago at the Elephant and Castle Theatre. In the title-part Miss Leila Zillwood gives a powerful rendering of the Indian girl, Wild Rose, the part suiting her admirably. The authoress herself creates the part of Lady Kingsley. Misses Nellie Richmond and Laura Wright extract a large amount of comedy from their rôles of Jeannette and Black Duck, being assisted by Mr. Tod Squires as Billy; Mr. Arthur Hinton pleases by his manly impersonation of Hubert Ainsworth; the villainous treachery of Wolfsfang, as depicted by Mr. Graham Winsford, evokes rounds of hisses; Mr. Travis Green, as the faithful Redskin Lone Star, was excellent, and well he deserved the applause accorded him; Mr. Gerald Byrne was good as the tribal chief, White Eagle. The remaining characters were in capable hands, and full justice was done to them by the artists to whom they were entrusted. Well mounted and staged, the play was a decided success.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Aug. 15, the Melodrama, in Four Acts, by Walter Melville, entitled
"A GIRL'S CROSS ROADS."

This, the second of Mr. Melville's plays that has been produced at the Kingston playhouse within the past fortnight, is, like its predecessor, attracting good houses this week, and a most favourable reception has been given to the play. An exceptionally strong company is taking part in it, chief amongst whom are Miss Nell Oliver, who plays the part of Barbara Wade, and Mr. Edward Valentine, who appears as Farmer Meadows. Both parts are presented with conspicuous ability, and the audiences are not slow to recognise it. Miss Doris Whyte makes a most creditable appearance as Constance Carnell; whilst the part of Nellie Meadows is ably filled by Miss A. Rothwell. The lighter side of the drama is in the hands of Mr. Willie Scott as Toby Turvey and Miss Amy Rudd as Tilly Vain, each of whom renders yeoman service. Mr. Karl F. Kerzo, Mr. F. Rivers, Mr. Leslie Nolan, and Mr. K. Milson also give good accounts of themselves in their respective parts.

The Follies appeared at a matinée performance at the Theatre Royal, Margate, on Monday afternoon, and presented a varied and interesting programme from their extensive répertoire before a crowded house.

MISS FLORENCE IMESON.

"THE GEISHA" AT OPERA HOUSE, CAPE TOWN.

MESSRS. GEORGE EDWARDES' AND F. B. WHEELER'S COMPANY.

If an audience of Cape Town theatregoers never before saw a triumphant success achieved by the genius of one lady they saw it last night at the Opera House when Miss Florence Imeson tripped on to the stage and gave life to the revival of Sidney Jones's famous work, The Geisha. . . . Miss Imeson came on for the Toy Duet. She had not sung half a dozen bars when the whole position changed as if by the touch of a fairy wand, with Miss Imeson as the fairy. She entered into the spirit of Molly Seamore as if her artistic reputation depended on it. Coy, roguish, winning, she sang and danced as she has not sung and danced before in Cape Town, and before she tripped off (nearly carrying a "wall" with her) she had established a chord of sympathy between the house and the stage—the rapport without which no performance can count on success. What was the magic of Miss Imeson? It was that indefinable thing we call the instinct of the artist. The lady put her heart and soul in the part of Molly Seamore; she left nothing to chance. Every note of every song, every step of every dance, every word, every gesture was the work of an artist to the tip of her dainty fingers. The revival of The Geisha was a triumph for Miss Imeson.

Miss Imeson's rendering of Molly has already been referred to, and it only remains to be added that "The Interfering Parrot" has never been more cleverly given in South Africa.—South African News, July 19, 1910.

THE LATE W. S. WALSHE.

We briefly recorded last week the death of Mr. William Sesnan Walshe, a talented actor and accomplished musician, who passed away at Harrogate on Aug. 5 at the age of fifty. An Australian by birth, Mr. Walshe was born at Coogee, New South Wales, and was for some years in the Civil Service. He won distinction in concert and oratorio work, gaining the gold medal for conducting in the Sydney Philharmonic Society. He entered the dramatic profession in 1885, his first engagement being as principal tenor with Miss Emily Melville, as the War Correspondent in Falka. Subsequently he toured Australia, New Zealand, India, China, and Japan as principal tenor with Messrs. Williams, Martin Simonsen, and his own opera companies.

Mr. Walshe came to England in 1895. His first engagement was with Mr. Henry Lowenfeld, as Basilique in the production of La Poupée at the Prince of Wales's Theatre in the spring of 1897. Two years later he went to South Africa as principal tenor with the Arthur Rousby Opera Company, and there met with great success. In recent years he has figured in The Toreador at the Gaiety, in The White Man at the Lyric, and with Miss Ellen Terry in Captain Brassbound's Conversion, the play by George Bernard Shaw, which that distinguished actress produced at the Court in 1906, and subsequently took on tour. The deceased actor, who had been ill since last November, sought relief at St. Mary's Nursing Home, Harrogate, but eventually succumbed to diabetic coma. He was buried at Kensal Green Cemetery on Aug. 10, deeply regretted and mourned by his wife and many friends.

Marshall P. Wilder, the American humorist, who some time ago was stated to be dying, has written to an American contemporary as follows:—"I had a very close call, but my nurse was so ugly I had to get well in self-defence." As a brand of American humour, this is Wilder than usual, and avoids any claim to good taste. It is something like a man saved from drowning objecting to the snub nose of his gallant rescuer.

Regal honours have been rendered to the King's Theatre this week by the visit in state of another monarch, who very properly made Hammersmith his headquarters on his first visit to London. A King's Romance was produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Salford, last Easter Monday, and recalls in a vivid degree a particularly atrocious crime which deprived a neighbouring kingdom of its head. The scenes and incidents are such as appeal powerfully to a popular audience, and the struggles between duty and love, and the triumph of the latter have won unlimited approval from patrons of the handsome house at Hammersmith. The plot was fully detailed on the original production of the play, but its leading episodes may be recalled.

A younger Prince of Venetia, a mythical European monarchy, has wedded a village maiden, named Vera, little thinking that he will be called upon to ascend the throne. Andreas, however, has reckoned without the Anarchists; and after a year spent in his village home, where he passes as an artist, visiting the city at intervals, his happiness is disturbed by the assassination of his father and the Crown Prince, leaving the young husband to undertake the responsibilities of kingship and his wife without a name. The man who perpetrated the dastardly deed was no other than Paul, Vera's brother, who, escaping from the crowd, seeks refuge with his sister. Andreas arrives to participate in the festivities consequent upon his boy's first birthday, and Paul is hidden in an adjoining room, having first enjoined his sister to declare that he had been in the house all night. Much against her will, Vera obeys the injunction; but when the new king throws open the door he finds not Paul, but Michel Vacurat, an avowed enemy of the King, and the organiser of the revolt.

Convinced of Vera's unfaithfulness the King goes to his duties at the Palace, and is shortly betrothed to a Princess of a neighbouring State. Paul has, meanwhile, been captured, together with Vacurat, who turns "King's evidence," and supplies proof of Paul's guilt. Vera obtains admission to the King to plead for her brother's life, but the latter succumbs to the effects of torture, not, however, before he has testified to his sister's innocence.

The Royal betrothal duly takes place, and the wedding ceremony is fixed for the morrow. Vera is about to depart for England, but receives a visit from Vacurat, who persuades her to remain. Vera pretends to consent to his proposals, and wins from him the details of a plot to assassinate the King while he is at prayer. Andreas comes to see his child, and Baron Cavonia, his faithful minister, enveloped in his cloak, goes to take his place in the chapel. There is an explosion, and the King is thought to be dead; but Vacurat finds out his mistake to his cost, for he is confronted by Andreas, who forces him to fight a duel, in which the villain is despatched. The revolution is successful, and Andreas, seeing the cause of the Monarchists is hopeless, decides to relinquish his kingdom and go to England with Vera.

The play was effectively interpreted by the author's company, though the action was taken in rather deliberate fashion, which resulted in a late ending on Monday. Mr. Edmonds himself acted his hero with unflagging spirits, entering heartily into every phase of the part, whether as the mercurial prince-lover, the doting father, the despairing husband, or the despondent King. He had a charming partner in Miss Haidee Gunn, a young actress whose ability we have frequently had occasion to praise. Her portrayal of Vera was marked by much charm and vivacity in the earlier scenes; while in the later episodes, when the hapless wife finds herself deserted and dishonoured, Miss Gunn exercised a poignant effect. She has, too, a particularly pleasing voice, her management of which indicated rare elocutionary skill. Another finished performance was that of Mr. John Dunbar, an experienced actor, who contrived to embody in the part of the villainous Vacurat all the malice and cunning possible. Mr. William H. Dewhurst was a highly effective Paul Navairre, suggesting the effects of the rack very realistically, and is also to be credited with the duties of stage-management. Mr. Arthur Estcourt was a soldierly and impressive Baron Cavonia; and the relentless Count Bavantia was thoroughly enacted by Mr. William Manning. A large share in the piece is taken by Lizette, Vera's maid, a part acted with sustained animation by Miss Ethel Vinroy, a refined and well-spoken actress. Mr. Ernest C. Edwards rendered valuable aid, both in the dramatic and humorous scenes as Major Bartroy, his gallantry towards Lizette, to whom he is eventually betrothed, being well assumed, and the sacrifices of dignity in his attitude towards the illiterate Mme. Pomeroy being drolly made. The last-mentioned lady was invested with comic characteristics by Miss Bella Power; and as Jean, a stuttering yokel, Mr. George Toft made every use of his opportunities; Mr. Arthur A. Valentine made a gruff and burly countryman of Fragot; and Mr. Leslie Lingham was a venerable Priest.

The picturesque nature of the scenes was admirably maintained, and the dresses were quite in keeping with the production, the King's uniforms being rich and elaborate; while the appurtenances of State were faithfully observed. The approbation of the audience was frequently displayed, the principals being recalled at each curtain.

ARTILLERY THEATRE, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Aug. 15, the Drama, entitled
"THE THIEF."

This week Messrs. Alban and Bernard Limpus's company is here in the above play. Miss Diana Cloud is simply charming as Marise Chelford, and in the second act rises to a high level in the scene with Richard Chelford, who is magnificently portrayed by Mr. Bernard Limpus, each mood being splendidly depicted. Miss Mary Forrester made the most of her part of Isabel Leyton, the second wife of Raymond Leyton, the latter character being capably rendered by Mr. F. Morland. The youthful Harry Leyton was played by Mr. Carl W. Lindsay, his scenes with Mrs. Chelford being never overdone. The detective, Protheroe, had an able exponent in Mr. W. Somerset, who not only played the part well, but looked it. Well placed also was Mr. Robert Ashby as the manservant. Excellently dressed and mounted and well acted, the drama was cordially received.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

"HIS REAL WIFE."

Drama, in Four Acts, by Charles A. Clarke, Played for the First Time in London at the Lyric, Hammersmith, on Monday, Aug. 15.

Herbert Barton ..... Mr. Clifford Rean
General Barton ..... Mr. Frank Lyndon
Randal Meredith ..... Mr. Herbert Vere
Martin Avondale ..... Mr. Albert Sember
Colombe ..... Mr. Charles Yorke
Alf. Snickers ..... Mr. Harwood Roberts
Simon Bletherley ..... Mr. T. Edward Ward
Mr. Hackett, K.C. ..... Mr. Jno. Waddington
Inspector Marston ..... Mr. Eric Yandall
Clerk of the Court ..... Mr. A. Austin
Usher of the Court ..... Mr. Eric Rogers
Mrs. Creele ..... Miss Grace Rosemond
Betty Tuttlebee ..... Miss Clarrie Yandall
Lady Sybil Welton ..... Miss Gabrielle Romero
Rose Avondale ..... Miss Ward

All the essentials necessary for drama beloved by a popular audience, are to be found in His Real Wife, produced at the Royal Court Theatre, Warrington, on Dec. 27 last—exciting situations and effective lines and curtains, plenty of "heart interest," and the necessary leavening of comic relief. Its reception on Monday at Mr. Wentworth Croke's people's playhouse at Hammersmith was most cordial, the attention of the audience being held throughout. Their sympathy very early in the play went out to the long-suffering heroine, Rose Avondale, who, loving not wisely but too well, leaves her devoted old father, a ruined yeoman farmer, and runs away with Herbert Barton, a young barrister, who promises to marry her. Herbert's intentions are sincere, but his selfish old father, General Barton, has decided that he shall wed Lady Sybil Welton, a wealthy beauty, and thus relieve the General of his pecuniary embarrassments. Lady Sybil, witnessing an interview between Herbert and Rose, determines that the young man shall marry her within a week, and tells his father so, and although Herbert has no affection for her, he is evidently too weak to oppose his father's wishes, and thus sacrifices his own happiness and that of the devoted Rose. When Martin Avondale learns that his daughter has left him, he curses both her and her lover; but further trouble is in store for him, for he is accused of stealing a quantity of plate from Barton Towers. The real thief is a foreigner named Colombe, an ex-convict, who has masqueraded as the Marquis de Trouville. The conclusion of the act sees old Avondale stricken with sudden blindness—a very effective and powerful scene.

In the first scene of the second act, A Villa at Twickenham, we see Rose eagerly awaiting the coming of Herbert, to whom she believes she is married. She is the proud mother of a bonny boy, and is anxious that Herbert shall see him. When Barton comes she learns that his father is dead, and she then imagines that there will be no further necessity to keep their marriage a secret. Herbert has not the courage to tell her the truth, especially as he hopes to soon divorce Lady Sybil, on the plea that she is not responsible for her actions, for he then means to marry Rose. While Herbert is absent from the house a motor accident occurs outside, and Lady Sybil is brought in. She refuses to see a doctor, and quickly recognises Rose. Later on, learning the relations which exist between her and her husband, there is a very powerful scene between the two women, in which the half-mad Lady Sybil attempts to murder Rose. When Herbert returns he also narrowly escapes being killed by his wife. Rose, on hearing that she is not married to Herbert, determines to leave the place, and go back with the child to her father, of whose terrible affliction she has been kept in ignorance. Straying into a lodging-house, she asks to be directed the way. The kindly landlady, Mrs. Creele, gives her a cup of tea; but the rascally Colombe drugs her, takes her baby away, and replaces it with a dead one. Later, when the poor, worn-out woman sinks down by a tree, he plunges the body of the babe into the stream, and, calling the police, Rose is charged with infanticide. A very effective curtain is here secured, when the despairing mother suddenly cries out, "That is not my child!" In the next scene we see Herbert, anxious to repair the past, befriending Rose's father; and later there is an affecting interview between the imprisoned woman and her father, who does not know her identity. In the Assize Court she is found guilty of child murder, the Judge who tries the case being the father of her babe. There is an impassioned appeal for mercy by Randal Meredith, a young counsel, and the Judge is about to assume the black cap, but falls in a fit ere he is able to complete the sentence of death. In the last act Colombe's accomplice, Alf. Snickers, turns King's evidence, and Rose is released. She is restored to her sightless father; and Herbert, whose wife has died, is eventually forgiven by his "real wife" on being able to produce her stolen child.

The success of the drama was largely due to its admirable all-round representation by Mr. T. Edward Ward's company, the arduous part of the suffering Rose Avondale being entrusted to Miss Ward, who is to be complimented on her convincing and pathetic portrayal throughout. Particularly harrowing was the scene in the Assize Court, where she recognises in the Judge the man who has betrayed her, and still remains loyal to him, and her performance throughout was a very intense and impressive one. Lady Sybil Welton, an unsympathetic part, had a convincing representation from Miss Gabrielle Romero, the actress skilfully depicting the "hell-fire cat's" mad passion in the scene where she realises that her husband is Rose's lover; and Miss Clarrie Yandall was an amusing and attractive Betty Tuttlebee. Simon Bletherley, who eventually marries the irrepressible Betty, was undertaken in a quietly droll fashion by Mr. T. Edward Ward, and the scenes between this happily-associated pair were hugely enjoyed on Monday. Mr. Harwood Roberts also created much merriment by his quaint depiction of Alf. Snickers, Colombe's "tool," that rascally alien being forcibly undertaken by Mr. Charles Yorke, who also imparted some grimly humorous touches to his clever delineation of the part. Martin Avondale, the stricken farmer, was powerfully and pathetically portrayed by Mr. Albert Sember, the many admirably-delivered and telling speeches of the part frequently calling forth loud applause; and another finely-played character was that of Randal Meredith by Mr. Herbert Vere, the actor's delivery of the young counsel's speech pleading for mercy being an admirable piece of elocution. Mr. Clifford Rean, in the rather unconvincing character of Herbert Barton submitted an easy and finished impersonation throughout, and in the later scenes of the play effectively realised the anguish of the man who had so cruelly wronged Rose, his acting in the difficult Assize Court scene also being admirable. Mr. Frank Lyndon submitted a capital study of the selfish General Barton, and the other parts were all capably undertaken. The play was dressed and mounted in excellent style.

Thursday, Aug. 11, being the 50th night of My Lady Bellamy under the management of Mr. Alex. Maclean, each member of the company, which was appearing at the Opera House, Wakefield, was the recipient of a useful souvenir of the occasion.

Presentation.—Mr. R. Hogg, assistant-manager at the Theatre Royal, Wolverhampton, was on Saturday last presented by the staff with a handsome gold ruby ring and scarf pin as a mark of their appreciation on his having completed eleven years' service.

FILM GOSSIP.

Mr. Griffiths and the Children.

MR. F. R. GRIFFITHS, of the New Bioscope Trading Company, Limited, who gave performances last week at his theatres in aid of the Fresh Air Fund, has written to the Daily Express enclosing a cheque for £40 10s., which will pay for a day in the country for 1,000 children, with the necessary attendants. Mr. Griffiths has also announced his intention of giving further performances in aid of the F.A.F., and has sent along the preserved film of the Funeral of King Edward, which is to be sold to benefit this most deserving object.

Film of the Outing.

MR. GRIFFITHS hopes to be able to take a film of the youngsters at play in the country and exhibit it at his theatres, and offers to give his patrons an opportunity of contributing to the fund by means of collecting boxes.

Death of Mr. Frank Gethro.

WIDESPREAD sorrow was caused in Watford by the tragically sudden death on Wednesday of last week of Frank Gethro, who has for several years been amongst the most prominent pianists in connection with picture shows in various parts of the country. On the Tuesday evening he asked to be excused from his duties at Messrs. Jeapes's picture show at the Watford Conservative Hall, complaining of slight throat and ear trouble. A doctor was summoned on Wednesday morning, unconsciousness quickly ensued, and death took place at six o'clock on Wednesday evening, as the result of acute meningitis. Deceased, who was a resident of Dartford, leaves a widow and five children. On Saturday the staffs of both the picture shows in the town and also at the Palace Theatre raised a sum of money which they forwarded to the widow. Deceased was a particularly adaptive and versatile accompanist, and was widely respected at Watford. The funeral took place at Watford on Saturday last.

The Kensington Picture Theatre is putting on an attractive picture programme this week. Giovanni Medici, a fine historical production; In the Border States, an American biograph story; Buffalo Hunting in Indo-China, and The Cowpuncher's Ward are prominent films, and the latest comics are greatly enjoyed. Muggsey's First Sweetheart (biograph film), which will be shown at the leading picture houses during the week, should cause roars of laughter. For picturesque scenery and wealth of exciting incidents the Wild West pictures are in the first rank. The Range Riders (Selig film) is a particularly fine specimen of this class.

Film Works to Employ over 200 Men.

MR. W. HOGBEN, the works manager of the new company in process of formation for carrying on the celluloid works at Port Talbot, recently completed arrangements in connection with this undertaking. Mr. Hogben has great faith in the future of the film industry, and the proposed new company, the British Non-Inflammable Film and Celluloid Company, will be the pioneers in this country as film manufacturers. It is estimated that when the works at Port Talbot are fully established employment will be provided for between 200 and 300 workmen. The new company will have a capital of £300,000, of which £170,000 will be allocated for working capital. Mr. Richard Cory, J.P., of Cardiff, has already agreed to join the Board, which has been further strengthened by the addition of the Hon. Sir John Cockburn, K.C.M.G., director of the English, Scottish, and Australian Bank.

Singing Pictures at Bournemouth.

AT the Empire Electric Theatre, Bournemouth, the cosy, well equipped, and well managed place of entertainment in the Bournemouth-square, the principal attraction in last week's programme was the reproduction of grand opera by means of animated pictures in conjunction with the gramophone. Faust was the opera chosen, and its production marks the latest achievement in the development of this scientific phase of entertaining. Such is the precision with which the films and the musical records are jointly secured that in reproduction the pictures and the music synchronise perfectly, and so realistic is the effect that one almost listens for the clink of Mephistopheles' sword or expect to hear the warriors "taking breath" in the "Soldiers' Chorus." The story is re-acted in a series of eight scenes, and the corresponding vocal numbers from Gounod's music are very clearly rendered. Particularly good was the record of the duel scene and the singing of the trio in the prison scene. The opera occupies about forty minutes.

Sensational Film Prohibited.

MR. BURGHER, Deputy-Commissioner of Police for New York, has prohibited the display of moving pictures depicting the shooting of Mayor Gaynor. No actual pictures, of course, were taken of the attack, but a set which has been widely advertised was cleverly faked, and the proprietors anticipated profitable results from their exhibition. Mr. Burgher's action is strongly commended in New York, for there are rather too many "sensational" picture shows in America, and many judges have denounced them for the deplorable effect they have on juvenile audiences.

Theatre de Luxe, Norwich.

THE pictures projected at the Norwich Theatre de Luxe this week are very interesting, and include The Power of the Press, The Tea Industry, The End of a Tyrant, Foolshead Receives, Oh, the Crocodile, and others, all meeting with warm approbation.

New Cinema Theatre at Bolton.

THE Bolton Electric Theatre was opened for the first time to the public on Saturday last. It is situated at the corner of Deansgate and Bridge-street, and occupies an excellent position in the town. The front to Deansgate is in pure white, and has a charming effect when lighted up at night. There is an atmosphere of luxury about the place, handsome carpets and draperies, tip-up chairs, and uniformed attendants showing that no expense has been spared by the management to ensure the comfort of their patrons. Seating accomodation is provided for nearly 600. The pictures are shown continuously from three o'clock until eleven. An entire change of programme is made twice a week. On Friday, the 12th, an invitation display was given, which was attended by the élite of Bolton and district, many excellent films being exhibited. The general-manager for the lessees, the London and Provincial Electric Theatres, Ltd., is Mr. W. Reynolds Benjamin.

Jersey Battle of Flowers.

THE magnificent official film of the Jersey Battle of Flowers, taken by Mr. Clements, the Opera House operator, has been included in the excellent series of pictures screened by Mr. Albany Ward during the latter half of the week at the Opera House, Jersey.

"Miss Bioscope" at a Hospital Carnival.

THE operator of the Southend Picture Palace, Mr. Victor Moody, hit upon a smart and original costume for an entry in the Hospital Carnival in aid of the Victoria Hospital, Southend, which was held on the 10th inst. He made a model of a bioscope lantern body, and entered the competition for a gentleman's original costume, calling the model "Miss Bioscope." The design was exceedingly smart and effective, and well deserved the prize with which Mr. Moody's efforts were rewarded.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS BEATRICE VON BRUNNER.

Mr. George Edwardes is continually recruiting the ranks of musical comedy with youth, beauty, and talent. The latest addition to The Dollar Princess at Daly's is Miss Beatrice von Brunner, one of those brilliantly pretty young ladies whom America has contributed to our stage in such abundance during the last few years. Miss Beatrice von Brunner has that beautiful colouring of complexion and of hair which comes from that admixture of German or Scandinavian blood with the Anglo-Saxon or Celt in the population of America. Masses of hair as fair and almost as yellow as the ripe corn in the field surround a face with soft large blue eyes and features that have the archness of the young girl still full of the joy of life.

Though still in the first bloom of girlhood—she is slightly over twenty—Miss Von Brunner has already had abundant experience, after years of struggle and of study. Daughter of a Presbyterian clergyman, and born in a small provincial town in Iowa, she first began her studies in her father's church, and soon showed such marked musical talents that she was sent to the local school of music, after a thorough grounding by her mother. Brought up in all the strictness of her parson father's home, she was long before she could turn her thoughts to the stage. But nature will out. Her musical talents were added to by a natural aptitude for dancing, an art also to which she has devoted years of study and practice. Fate found her when Mr. Dilingham, the well-known American manager, saw her. He realised her talent, and offered her an engagement. She naturally turned to musical comedy, but she has also appeared as a danseuse in the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, and the Boston Opera House in Boston. Then, after hesitation between the stage and social allurements—for she was reigning belle in Boston, to which city the family had moved—she followed her natural bent, and now is one of the members of the company of Mr. George Edwardes in The Dollar Princess.

She brings to her profession, apart from her great beauty, natural musical gifts, ambition, and great love of hard work. She is, indeed, so devoted to her profession that she thinks of little else, leads a somewhat recluse life, and spends most of her free time at one or another of the various arts that make up the trained artist. She laughs at the reports which constantly appear in the columns of American journals, and which describe her in advance as the fiancée of this or that well-known young American millionaire. But the desire for success and perfection in her own art occupies her whole thought.

THE many friends of Miss Bertha De Pas will be glad to learn that she has quite recovered from her recent serious operation and illness, and that she will commence her tour of the North of England on the 29th. Her first appearance will be at the Queen's Theatre, Leeds.

RINKING GOSSIP.

Crosshaven Skating Rink.

THE Crosshaven rink was again well patronised on Wednesday, the 10th, and besides the large number who disported themselves upon wheels, a good array of spectators were present. Indeed, the onlookers seemed to enjoy the proceedings quite as much as those who ventured on the "floor." Rinking has become very popular in Crosshaven, and the little ones, as well as their elders, are getting more in evidence each evening. It was a happy forethought that prompted the erection of the Pavilion, as a more healthy or pleasing pastime it would be difficult to provide. Excellent management, an unbeatable floor, a first-class string orchestra, daintily arranged tables, where refreshments are served, are the chief characteristics of Crosshaven Rink, and the excellent patronage accorded it speaks volumes for its popularity. Not many came in fancy costumes, and the prizes were awarded to Mr. and Mrs. Joyce and Master O'Brien.

An Elephant on Skates.

A NOVEL and diverting attraction has been added to the Palace Skating Rink, Blackpool, and its success was so immediate and marked that the management intend to present the feature every afternoon and evening. The novelty, which takes the form of "the only elephant on skates," is the suggestion of Mr. Lal Wright, one of the Palace instructors, and is practically the revival of a comedy feature popular on the Blackpool rink of twenty years ago. The "elephant," a capital piece of animal "property," is given life by two of the Palace skate boys, Woods and Westhead, and the manner in which the trainer, Lal Wright, puts it through the grand march, barn dance, Dutch roll, rocking step, waltz, figure 8, inside and outside edge, walking the barrel, performing on the tub, and various styles of two-steps, makes up a very clever and highly-amusing "turn." The "wonder" has been christened "Roosevelt"—no doubt after the eminent hunter of its kind.

Rink Hockey at Blackpool.

A SHORT time ago the Blackpool South Shore Ladies played Bury Trafalgar Ladies, at Accrington, for the championship. A friendly match between the teams took place at the Pleasure Beach Rink, Blackpool, on Wednesday, the 10th inst., and the game proved to be one of the best the ladies have yet had at South Shore. The homesters were rather the quicker team, but they were met by a strong defence, who frustrated several good attempts. Bury by no means left the home goal unattended, and on two occasions it looked as if the citadel must fall. The interval arrived with the score-sheet blank. Resuming, the homesters played rather better. Miss G. Siddall raced away, and within two minutes of the restart South Shore took the lead. This success made things lively. Ere many minutes had passed the same player put South Shore two ahead. Play became vigorous, and many attempts were made on both sides to score, but the defence held out till the close. Result:—South Shore, 2; Bury Trafalgar, 0.

Carnival at Cleethorpes Rink.

AT the Fancy Dress Carnival at the Cleethorpes Skating Rink on Thursday, the 11th inst., the prize for the most effective lady's costume was awarded to Miss Hilda Cook, who represented "Electra"—not the heroine of Strauss' new opera, but the allegorical presiding genius of the science of electricity. Her costume was of blue (possibly electric blue), and was studded with miniature electric lamps, which flashed up brilliantly whenever Miss Cook operated the controlling switch. The effect was especially pretty when the rink lights were lowered, and the skater, with her costume fully aglow, glided round the floor. The award was a decidedly popular one. A prize had been offered for the best lady's burlesque costume, but there were no competitors in this department. The prize was, therefore, awarded, as a sort of consolation prize, for the next best effective costume, and Miss Celia Lidgitt, as "Goldfish," was the winner. Mr. P. Spencer, who appeared as a particularly ferocious-looking "Indian Chief," in full war-paint, was the winner of the prize for the most effective gentleman's costume. The children's prize was won by Master Freddy Boston as "Bubbles." A clever exhibition of fancy and trick skating was given by a lady and gentleman of the Rink staff, a series of intricate movements being accomplished, whilst they also gracefully performed the "Merry Widow" waltz, this being one of the features of the evening.

THE COMING OF AGE OF ALBERT EDWARD BODIE.

Dr. and Mrs. Walford Bodie gave a banquet at their rooms at Darlington last Monday, the occasion being the coming-of-age of their eldest son, Albert Edward Bodie. Mr. Bodie has been training for the legal profession, and has served six years with Mr. J. J. George, solicitor and Town Clerk, Macduff. At the request of his father, Dr. Bodie, he has given up the law, and will follow in his father's footsteps. Mr. Bodie is an accomplished linguist, an excellent ventriloquist, illusionist, and conjurer, and a gifted actor, having played the leading parts in several pieces produced by the Macduff Amateur Dramatic Society, of which he was president. He is also an accomplished artist, and has painted most of the scenery for the various plays produced by the society. He is an enthusiastic Freemason, his father being a Royal Arch Mason. Mr. Bodie was initiated when only eighteen years old, and since then he has taken a deep interest in Masonry, and his mother lodge, No. 653 St. James, Macduff. He holds the position of Senior Warden, and would have been elected to the chair this year, but had to resign to join his father. He is the youngest office-bearer in Scotland. The last performance he gave was at the Town Hall, Huntly, in aid of the local band, when he occupied the stage for over an hour with his two turns, ventriloquism and conjuring. He commences his duties on Monday next as general manager for Dr. Bodie's tours and enterprises, and will also do a turn on the stage with the Doctor's No. 1 company.

The Doctor will commence a six months' tour of Scotland with his own company on Monday, under the management and control of his son, and is going to teach Mr. Bodie the whole of his business as an electrical expert, bloodless surgeon, and hypnotist.

Dr. Bodie has presented his son with the beautiful Highland home, the Manor House, Macduff, which was only built about seven years ago, and Mr. Bodie was also the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents, including also from his father a valuable gold watch, set with his monogram in diamonds. The watch, which weighs nearly 6oz., has 98 diamonds in the monogram, and was lately the property of the late Abington Baird, the millionaire. From his mother he received a handsome jewelled walking-stick, set with over 300 precious stones. It was originally the property of the late Marquis of Anglesey, and was bought from the collection at Anglesey Castle. His mother also presented him with a beautiful travelling bag and dressing case, the fittings being heavily mounted with solid silver. From Miss Edyth Garden came a solid silver casket, containing a set of safety razors and appliances; from Miss Bella Skene, a solid silver cigar case; from Mr. William Skene Henry, a set of razors in handsome case; Mrs. William Henry, a gold match-box; from his brother, Samuel Walford Bodie, a handsome single stone diamond ring; from Miss Loo Henry, a solid silver corkscrew; from Miss Kitty Henry, a set of gold evening dress buttons, set with small diamonds in centre; from Miss Nan Skene Henry, a beautiful gold appendage; from his grandmother, a beautiful diamond horseshoe scarf-pin; from the members of Dr. Bodie's company, a solid gold jewelled combination sovereign purse and match-box; and from Mr. and Mrs. Tom Norman Mills (the real John Bull), a handsome gold-mounted umbrella, and many other presents.

Dr. Bodie presided at the banquet, which was attended by the whole of the members of his company and several friends and relations. After a pleasant evening of dancing, song, and story, the company broke up in the small hours. Miss Loo Henry, the Doctor's musical conductress, ably presided at the piano.

To celebrate the occasion at Macduff, a grand supper and dance were given at the Manor House to Dr. Bodie's tenantry and several friends. Mr. Bodie now becomes heir to all Dr. and Mrs. Bodie's heritable properties, including his whole estate in the North, also the three principal hotels in Macduff, the Fife Arms Hotel, the Commercial Hotel, and the Bay View Hotel. Dr. Bodie has only two sons; he lost his only daughter last year. His youngest son, Sam, is studying medicine.

SHREWSBURY FLORAL FETE.

The Shrewsbury Floral and Musical Fête this year has been a success, especially the variety entertainment. On Wednesday and Thursday the famous Caicedo walked, ran, and leaped on the high wire in his customary daring and skilful manner, justifying his proud claim to be called "King of the Wire"; Mlle. Pollo, a remarkably skilful and graceful trapeze artist, merited high praise for her finished performance; De Lilo and Metz, in their pedestal-bending act, did an exceedingly smart and agile turn; the fixed low wire act of Les Arabellas was a very fine one; the Lafaille Troupe of acrobats proved a hard-working and clever band of artists; the Brothers O'Brien gave a good display on the three bars; the Olrac Comedy Troupe of acrobats supplied a meritorious and attractive exhibition; a turn of especial interest was that of the Tan Kwai Troupe of Chinese acrobats, typical Orientals, whose extraordinary feats were warmly applauded; the performance of the Aurora Troupe of cyclists was wonderful; the Two Butterflies contributed a most pleasing and talented aerial act; and the Denaro Brothers, juvenile acrobats, were quick, clever, and admirably trained. In the evening the combined bands of H.M. Coldstream Guards and H.M. Royal Artillery (Woolwich), numbering 112 performers (conductors—Dr. J. Mackenzie Rogan, M.V.O., Hon. R.A.M., Lieutenant Coldstream Guards, and Mr. E. C. Stretton, R.A.M.) gave a truly delightful military promenade concert, the programme being as under:—Suite, "Neapolitan Scenes"; "Entry of the Gods into Valhalla"; Suite No. 1 from the music to Peer Gynt; tone poem, "Finlandia"; "March Solennelle"; "Norwegischer Kunstler Carneval"; overture, Rienzi; and morceau, "The Nigger's Birthday." Mr. Thos. James's orchestral band (of Wolverhampton) played appropriate music for the stage and other performances; and Mr. E. R. Hollier was, as usual, happy and at home in his post as stage-manager. Messrs. Anger and Bauer were the agents for the performers; and Messrs. Adnitt and Naunton, the hon. secretaries to the fête, carried out their multitudinous duties with their usual thoroughness and success.

"RANDVOLL HOUSE" OUTING.

The head office staff, managers, and acting managers of the London Theatres of Varieties, Ltd., accompanied by their friends, left Paddington on Sunday last for Windsor, for their first annual outing. To the strains of a select orchestra they boarded the magnificent launch Britannia for a voyage of many miles of beautiful Thames scenery.

The company landed at Marlow, where they spent an hour ashore, returning at 5 o'clock. A most enjoyable lunch and tea were served on board. Arriving at Windsor at 8 o'clock, the party boarded the special train which was waiting to convey them back to home, sweet home.

The office staff were represented by Messrs. Gulliver, Brown, Humphreys, Barwood, and Stevenson; the halls by nearly all the managers and acting-managers. Among the friends of both were Messrs. Horley, Tom Pacey, Sam Richards, and many others. Mr. L. Maloney, of the Willesden Hippodrome, on the return journey obliged the company with a few well-selected songs.

At the conclusion of the trip a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Hayden for the able manner in which he had arranged and conducted a most enjoyable day's outing.

WALTER GIBBONS' MANAGERS' OUTING, SUNDAY, AUGUST. 14.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP

Sir Herbert Tree, in order to assist the critics in the performance of their duties, announces that the curtain will rise on the forthcoming production of Henry VIII., at His Majesty's, at seven o'clock, and it is hoped that the performance may be concluded by 9.45. With reference to the production Sir Herbert says: "There will be nothing in the shape of symbolism. Our endeavour is to present an exact picture of the period as it was; let no one attempt to read into the scenes a deeper or subtler significance than each obviously contains."

The cast of Henry VIII. runs to nearly three dozen, and each character will be depicted by an experienced artist, the full list revealing some well-known names. In addition to Sir Herbert Tree as Wolsey, Mr. Arthur Bourchier as Henry VIII., Miss Violet Vanbrugh as Queen Katharine, and Mr. Henry Ainley as Buckingham, there will be Mr. A. E. George as Norfolk, Mr. Gerald Laurence as Surrey, Mr. Edward Sass as Lord Chamberlain, Mr. Edmund Gurney as Porter, Mr. Edward O'Neill as Suffolk, Mr. Acton Bond as Surveyor, and Mrs. Charles Calvert as an Old Lady. The cast will also comprise Messrs. S. A. Cookson, Francis Chamier, Charles Fuller, William Burchill, Clarence Derwent, Walter R. Creighton, James Smythson, Henry C. Hewitt, Charles James, Reginald Owen, Henry Morrell, Cyril Sworder, Charles Howard, Claude Edmonds, Clifford Heatherley, Arthur Gaskill, W. B. Abingdon, Charles Baker, Frederick Weston, Ernest Freeman, and Ross Shore, Miss Laura Cowie and Miss Lila Barclay.

Sir Herbert, having noticed an attack which has been publicly made by a brother manager on the forthcoming revival of Henry VIII. at His Majesty's, will briefly deal with the matter in the pages of a pamphlet which will shortly be published. The "attack" referred to is presumably contained in Mr. Herbert Trench's article which appeared in the Saturday Review last week under the title of "Shakespeare and Modern Staging."

The following are the passages which may be taken as having reference to Sir Herbert's methods of mounting:—"Presently we shall have upon us an avalanche of Shakespearian upholstery. There will be the familiar glitter of stage-crowds, betinselled cavalcades, 'built-up' palaces and chapels, of coronations modelled upon fancy balls. The cloth of gold in these will cost fabulous sums, and the lace and velvet robes of the cardinals will later furnish forth valuable dining-room curtains for illustrious actor-managers. Pictures galore there will be, in blazes of electric light so fierce that facial play is extinguished and grease-paint unmistakable."

"All Shakespeare's plays lend themselves of course to treatment by symbolic scenery; his own peculiar virtue lying in a supreme poetry or felicity of expression, which carries (as it were) the scenery half-implicit in the language, plainly all true Shakespeare lovers will adopt that style of stage-management in which the poetry and the beauty of language is thrown into sharpest salience and relief. To that all other virtues of staging, however puissant and legitimate in themselves, must, in this case, be subordinated.

"The eye must not be sodden and satiated in vulgar profusions of loud glaring colours, trumpet-notes of satins, rich textures, and spangled stuffs, ballet dances, or farcical ceremonies—in which courtiers are ever prancing about in their best. The stage must not be, as it always is nowadays, a fierce blaze of evenly-shed unflickering and merciless electric light. Packed and innumerable crowds, such as those of the Dagon Temple at a Covent Garden opera, are totally unnecessary for Shakespearian performances.

"Crowds may be indicated by modest numbers, bright with intelligence and active in movement, as at the Théâtre Français; and a whole army can be suggested by a group of spears behind a wall. In a word, the Shakespearian stage should lend itself, by a studious sobriety and reserve in colours, to the higher delights of the ear and the intelligence. This symbolic scenery was as the poet himself wished it to be."

We should not have referred to these differences of opinion had not Sir Herbert announced his intention of answering Mr. Trench in print. Sir Herbert is quite capable of fighting his own battle, and the controversy is certain to be both interesting and piquant.

Mr. Laurence Irving's tour is proving so successful that he has decided to extend it beyond the ten weeks originally intended. The reception accorded to his play The Unwritten Law, at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, on Monday last was most enthusiastic, and Margaret Catchpole has also proved a great success wherever it has been played. Mr. Sydney Paxton is Mr. Laurence Irving's general-manager.

Mr. Martin Harvey's advocacy—always a strong and very real one—of the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre scheme is to find an outlet in a very arduous and interesting manner. He proposes, commencing next week, to begin a crusade, with the object of endeavouring to interest the provincial public in the need of such an institution. Mr. Harvey, who opens his provincial tour at the Opera House, Harrogate, on Monday, intends to give, practically in every city that he visits, a lecture for the purpose of explaining the details of the ideals of the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre scheme, and of inviting subscriptions towards the fund for the building and endowment thereof. The first lecture will be given at Harrogate on Thursday. The Mayor of the town will preside, and Mr. Harvey will have the support of a strong and influential body of representative ladies and gentlemen of the North, together with the aid of the local committee of the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre.

The manager of the Harrogate Opera House, Mr. Peacock, and his directors, have very kindly placed the theatre at Mr. Harvey's disposal for his lecture, and Mr. Robert Arthur has also promised to lend the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Mrs. Charles Sugden has secured a melodrama by Mrs. T. Morton Powell which the authoress considers is the strongest she has ever written. One situation, which is of a highly sensational character, came under Mrs. Powell's own observation when she was travelling in India. Mr. Powell has repeatedly refused offers for the drama, because she recognised the difficulty of finding an actress with the strength and pathos to play the leading part, and she was delighted at the opportunity of offering Mrs. Sugden the piece. The scenery, which is to be very elaborate, is almost completed. Mr. T. Morton Powell is booking the tour for Mrs. Sugden, which commences in October, and so anxious have been provincial managers to secure Mrs. Sugden in a "real live" melodrama that there are only a few vacant dates for the autumn of 1911.

His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to become the Patron of the Royal General Theatrical Fund.

The benefit matinée to Mrs. Carpenter at the Lyceum has been finally fixed for Tuesday, Sept. 27, in order to meet the convenience of some of the prominent artists who have promised to take part. Contributions to the programme will be made by many of the leading artists.

Viscount Althorp (the Hon. Robert Spencer), who, by the death of Earl Spencer, has succeeded to the peerage, has been Lord Chamberlain to Her Majesty since 1905, and has filled the office to the satisfaction of everyone, including the London theatrical managers.

Miss Decima Moore concludes her special engagement as "Lady Frederick" at Brighton this week. On Monday a large number of seats were taken by the Women's Social and Political Union to welcome Miss Moore, and the Union presented her with a large horseshoe of purple, white, and green flowers, the colours of the Union.

Mr. "Willie" Clarkson's lion, which represented the might and majesty of Britannia's Realm at the recent Naval and Military Tournament at Olympia, met with an ignominious fate on the Embankment on Tuesday last. It appears that a van belonging to Mr. J. Sullivan, a cartage contractor, of Covent Garden, was engaged in taking the lion from the premises of Mr. W. Clarkson, the well-known theatrical costumier, to a firm of tea merchants in Tooley-street. Besides the lion, the occupants were the driver (Alfred Goodwin) and two employees of Mr. Clarkson.

When going under Hungerford Bridge the horse apparently took fright at a train passing overhead and bolted, Goodwin being thrown off the box and sustaining bruises and cuts on the hip and the other two men falling out of the back of the cart. The horse, having a clear road, ran towards Waterloo Bridge, amidst considerable excitement, a policeman vainly trying to stop it. The tram employee on duty at the end of the tunnel saw the danger, and stopped a tram from coming out, otherwise there would have been a nasty accident.

As it was, the horse crossed the line and the vehicle collided violently with the refuge underneath Waterloo Bridge. The van was overturned, the front carriage, with a pair of wheels, being broken off, and the shafts and other parts damaged. The horse sustained little injury. The spectators were considerably startled to see the full-sized lion come tumbling out into the roadway, but when they found it was harmless a big crowd gathered. The lion was subsequently taken to its destination.

A son and heir was born to Mr. and Mrs. William Haviland on Tuesday. The advent of the little stranger accounts for the fact that Mrs. Haviland (Miss Edyth Latimer) is not announced to play in the West End at present, and is the reason of her having had to refuse two offers to appear in leading parts next month. As mother and child are both flourishing, however, Miss Latimer's early return to the stage is anticipated.

Mr. William Haviland goes on tour with Mr. Lewis Waller shortly, and will not be seen in London till after Christmas.

Messrs. Travis Green and Arthur Hinton have scored a big success with their new production His Indian Wife, which played to enormous business at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, and could easily have run for six weeks. Mr. Barnard has arranged for Messrs. Green and Hinton's next production to run for one month in the autumn of 1911 at the Elephant.

Mr. Dan Rolyat, who has been absent from the cast of The Arcadians, at the Shaftesbury, for several weeks, returns to play his part of Simplicitas this evening.

The Ipswich Lyceum Theatre, which is one of the best-appointed of the smaller theatres in the provinces, has been under the management since its opening in 1891 of the local directors, but is now, as we announced last week, leased for a period of seven years to Messrs. Murray King, Clark, and W. H. Savery. The new lessees have already given practical evidence of their intention to popularise the theatre by making a reduction all round in the prices of admission, which is sure to be appreciated by the public. The programme for the autumn is excellent.

Mr. Leonard Pagden has been engaged to play Tompson in the forthcoming tour of The Woman in the Case, commencing on Monday at the Shakespeare, Clapham.

Miss Gabrielle Ray returned to Daly's Theatre on Monday, after her Continental holiday, resuming her original part of Daisy in The Dollar Princess.

Mr. Lawson Lambert, who has been representing Messrs. Wentworth Croke, Milton Bode, and Edward Compton at the Garrick Theatre since the commencement of their tenancy, will again act as their business-manager when the theatre reopens on the 27th inst. with Hall Caine's new play, The Eternal Question.

Mr. Walter Melville, in a talk with the Daily Chronicle representative, warmly defended his plays and their purpose. "Our dramas," said he, "are not mere sensationalism. They are moral sermons, which to be effective, vital, and healthily stimulating, must be realistic. You cannot point to a single one, from The Worst Woman in London onward, in which vice is not represented as meeting with its just and terrible retribution. I have received letters from clergymen thanking us for the good effect of our dramas, and, I may add, of our posters, which tell the same tale.

"As to the action of the Nottingham Watch Committee in striking out the words 'Her Character,' it appears to me merely prurient. As the play and its title stand, I am proud to be connected with them. But, frankly, I should be ashamed to be responsible for anything so needlessly suggestive as The Girl Who Lost——. The truth is, that it is all part of the officiousness and tyranny of the provincial police."

The special performances of Italian Grand Opera to be given at the Kingsway Theatre will commence on Thursday, Sept. 1, with Rossini's Barbière di Seviglia. Following the custom adopted by his celebrated countryman Mr. A. Toscanini, Mr. de Macchi will not only conduct the opera without score, but will also stage it. Mr. de Macchi has conducted in such important theatres as the Costanzi of Rome, San Carlo of Naples, Comunele of Trieste, &c. The cast is as follows:—Rosina, Miss Isabella de Frate; Almaviva, Signor Franco de Gregorio; Figaro, Signor Gaetano Rebonato; Don Bartolo, Signor F. Talamanca; and Basilio, Signor Luigi Lucenti. The costumes and scenery, which are entirely new and historically accurate, have been specially made by the costumiers and scenic artists of La Scala, Milan.

Mr. Charles Manners' United Empire Grand Opera scheme is being warmly taken up, large numbers of shares having already been applied for. Mr. Manners proposes to give addresses on the subject of his scheme at various places in and out of the Metropolis, from which practical results may be expected.

Messrs. John Hyman and Co., the well-known theatrical costumiers, have dressed, amongst hundreds of famous plays, the celebrated The Speckled Band, have made the hunting suits for The Whip at Drury Lane, and have supplied the whole of the uniforms for the Japan-British Exhibition. They also did the dresses for that great success, The Bad Girl of the Family.

Mr. Murray King, during the early summer months, toured for a few weeks Our Flat, one of the funniest of farcial comedies. The resulting business was so wonderfully good, and the play went with such screams of laughter, that Murray King and Clark have now determined, by arrangement with Miss Daisy Atherton, to send their company on a long autumn tour. A new plant of pictorial printing will be used, and the dressing and mounting will have special care.

We have to record the death of Dr. Fred Courtenay, second son of the late Lindo Courtenay (formerly lessee of Wolverhampton, Chester, Oldham, and Liverpool theatres). Dr. Courteney for the last ten years resided in Eccles, and practised in the town. During the last twelve months he had had much illness, and for the benefit of his health made a trip to the Canary Isles. On the return voyage he had a heart seizure, and on reaching Liverpool was taken by ambulance from the vessel to the Southern Hospital, where his death took place from aortic aneurism. The interment took place in the family vault at Toxteth Park on Wednesday, Aug. 10.

Mr. Ernest Wright, who has served in various capacities with Messrs. Howard and Wyndham during the past twelve or thirteen years, and who was acting-manager at the Royalty, Glasgow, lately, has been appointed business-manager at the New Century Theatre, Motherwell.

"The Man from Mexico" will be preceded at the Strand Theatre on Sept. 10 by His Living Image, a little Dutch comedy written by Mr. Stanley Cooke, with music by Mr. Arthur Wood, which won approbation on its production at the Coronet in the November of 1908. The leading part of Gretchen will be played by Miss Amy Francis, who in private life is Mrs. Stanley Cooke.

During the absence of Miss Gertie Millar from the cast of Our Miss Gibbs at the Gaiety Theatre the part of Lady Betty has been charmingly played by Miss Enid Leslie, one of Mr. George Edwardes' "finds."

"The Little Damozel" still continues her triumphant tour of the seaside resorts. At Bridlington last week, despite glorious weather and a host of outdoor amusements, Mr. Monkton Hoffe's delightful play drew the best houses seen there this season. Return dates have been offered at every town visited.

In the "C" section of the L.C.C. bands, a xylophone made by Mr. H. Lisle, xylophone maker, of Camberwell, was introduced on Thursday evening last, and was greatly admired. This instrument appears to be in great demand just now, Mr. Lisle having recently supplied it to Liverpool Police Band, Grenadier Guards, Irish Guards, Royal Marine Artillery, 2nd Life Guards, and others.

The Carl Rosa Opera Company's tour will commence on Aug. 29 at the Kennington Theatre, followed by a week at the Marlborough, Holloway, and one at the Broadway, New Cross. Londoners will have the opportunity of hearing for the first time Goldmark's opera The Queen of Sheba, which has been so successful in the provinces, and Verdi's La Forza del Destino, which was performed in the sixties in Italian, but has never yet been heard in English. La Forza del Destino was produced in St. Petersburg in 1862. When it was performed in Milan in 1868, Verdi wrote a new trio finale.

Other novelties in contemplation are The Bartered Bride, by Smetana, and revivals of Der Freischutz, Romeo and Juliet, and The Magic Flute. In the company are Miss Doris Woodall, Mr. E. C. Hedmondt, Miss Ina Hill, and Miss Beatrice Miranda. Newcomers are Miss Annie van Dyck, a young Dutch lady, who sings equally well in five languages, Miss Phyllis Archibald, a young mezzo-soprano, and a young Lancashire soprano, Miss Hilda Morris. Mr. Walter Van Noorden's colleague in the conductor's chair is Mr. Eugene Goossens.

Miss Margherita Gordon, who has been lately playing Mrs. Mackay during the initial tour of My Lady Bellamy, will rejoin Mr. Auguste Van Biene to play her old part of the Hon. Mrs. Spinaker in The Broken Melody—her eighth re-engagement.

Mr. Wilfrid Compton and Miss Miriam Holt are playing this autumn under the management of Miss Beatrice Moreau and Mr. Horace Lingard. Mr. Compton will register his fiftieth performance as George Newte in Fanny and the Servant Problem at the Theatre Royal, Bradford, on Monday, and on Aug. 29, at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester, Miss Holt appears for the fiftieth time as Miss Wetherall in the same play under its American title, The New Lady Bantock.

We record with regret the death of Mrs. Arthur Dale, professionally known as Gertie Monti, actress and vocalist, who passed away on the 11th inst. at the age of forty-five. She leaves her husband and six little ones to mourn her loss. The deceased was buried at Brookwood Cemetery on Tuesday. Wreaths and expressions of sympathy were sent by Mrs. Arthur Stratton, Miss Daisy de Roy, the Sisters Richmond, Mr. Arthur Stratton, Mr. Carl Ostend, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Paulo, and others.

Mr. Frank Bertram has entered into an agreement with Mr. George N. Ballanger to send on tour in September the well-known American scout Young Buffalo in the Western drama King of the Wild West. This play has been most successful in the States, and Mr. Ballanger will bring over a full company—real Sioux Indians, Mexican ponies, a cowboy band, and a complete production. It was originally intended to open at a West End theatre, but none is available. So the company and production will arrive in Liverpool and will tour for a few weeks until the London arrangements are completed.

The Shakespeare Summer Celebration at Stratford-on-Avon was brought to a close on Saturday amid much enthusiasm, the festival having been a pronounced success. A repetition of the prize play, The Piper, was given in the afternoon, and The Merry Wives of Windsor filled the hall at night, crowded audiences assembling on both occasions. Some hundreds of school teachers have spent their holidays at Stratford in order to take part in the proceedings, and, besides witnessing a series of Shakespeare's plays, have gained instruction in folklore, singing, and old-fashioned dancing, which they will teach in their schools when the holidays are over. After the performances on Saturday night bouquets and wreaths and presents of various kinds were handed to all the members of Mr. Benson's company.

Mr. J. E. Vedrenne, at the Queen's Theatre, on Sept. 20 will present Mr. William J. Locke's new play, The Man from the Sea, in which Miss Cecilia Loftus was to have played the principal part. Miss Loftus, however, has been prevented from doing so by having to undergo an operation, and Miss Nina Boucicault has been engaged to fill the vacancy thus created. Mr. Robert Loraine, the actor-aviator, will play a celebrated traveller.

Mr. J. A. Campbell's charming theatre at Grantham will shortly emerge from the decorators' hands, the building having been for the second time renovated. The second and dress circles also have been entirely reseated. Under careful and popular administration the Grantham Theatre has won the confidence of touring managers, and is visited by the best companies.

The Women's Imperial Health Association of Great Britain, of which Muriel Viscountess Helmsley is the president, will send off the first caravan of the campaign to-day from the Botanic Gardens. This caravan is to be named the Aurora (signifying the dawn of a new era), and will be christened by Miss Lena Ashwell with a flask of pure water.

Mr. Morton Powell will produce at the Pavilion Theatre on Monday a new drama from the pen of Mrs. Morton Powell, entitled From Mill Girl to Millionairess. The scenery has been specially built at Mr. Morton Powell's scenic factory. A powerful cast has been engaged, and Mr. Powell feels confident the play will prove to be the most successful of the many dramas written by his wife.

The second week of the Promenade Concert season at the Queen's Hall starts on Monday with the usual Wagner concert, at which a number of familiar items will be given. Amongst the vocalists for the week are Miss Esta d'Argo, Mr. Gerald Zalsman, Miss Julia Caroli, Mr. Thorpe Bates, Miss Caroline Hatchard, Mr. Julien Henry, Miss Sarah Crook, Mr. James Hay, Miss Maud Santley, and Mr. Morgan Kingston. The list of selections is a most attractive one.

"Are You a Mason?" is again having a long tour of success. Its tour started last Christmas, and extends well into 1911. This speaks well for this evergreen farcical comedy, so well done under the auspices of General Productions, Ltd.

"A Royal Divorce" concludes a very successful visit at the Opera House, Southport, to-night. The feature of the week has been the remarkably enthusiastic receptions accorded to Miss Edith Cole. On Monday Mr. W. W. Kelly's famous play commences its fifty-eighth visit to Manchester, which city it has visited more frequently than any other.

Mr. W. W. Kelly's booking of Mr. H. P. Towers's company this week at Kelly's Theatre, Liverpool, playing The Best People, has induced large numbers of "the best people" of Liverpool to visit Mr. Kelly's handsome house in Paradise-street, where the clever play, capitally acted in a theatre which is the acme of comfort, and where the prices are of low dimensions, has been most successful.

Mr. Arthur C. Moody, the popular lessee and manager of the new Theatre Royal, Blyth, and Miners' Theatre, Ashington, who is an enthusiastic motorist, owning two large cars, has just got plans passed to build a large motor garage in one of the principal streets of Blyth capable of holding over thirty cars.

Mr. Russell Norrie begins his fourth tour next month with a répertoire of high-class modern pieces. The attractions on which he will chiefly depend are Mr. Walter Reynolds' play Mr. Smith, and a new romantic play, in four acts, entitled Her King of Men. The last-mentioned deals chiefly with the remarkable resemblance between two men, one a scamp the other a preux chevalier. Mr. Russell Norrie will, of course, play the dual rôle.

Miss Alexandra Carlisle has been selected to play the leading part in Messrs. Charles Frohman and Arthur Chudleigh's new play A Woman's Way, by Mr. Thompson Buchanan, at the Comedy Theatre next month.

Mr. George Dance's tour of The Whip was inaugurated at the Grand Theatre, Blackpool, on Monday, with the most gratifying results. Early in the day every available seat in the theatre had been secured, and long queues for the unreserved parts of the house awaited the opening of the doors. The evening's performance was a triumph for all concerned, the enormous difficulties that had to be contended with in presenting the Railway Collision and the Race for the Two Thousand Guineas being successfully surmounted. Mr. "Jimmy" Glover, who occupied the conductor's chair, was the recipient of an ovation.

A picture, valued both for its literary and artistic associations, has mysteriously disappeared from Anderton's Hotel, which has for some time past been the headquarters of the Urban Club. The missing treasure is an oil-painting by Mr. W. Maw Egley, measuring 50in. by 18in., which contains the portraits of no fewer than forty-nine members of the club, including the late Sir Henry Irving, Sir J. Crichton Browne, M.D., and Mr. W. Frith. The picture has been ruthlessly cut from its frame in the club room. A description of the missing picture has been circulated by Scotland Yard.

The autumn season may be said to start on Monday, when Miss May Robson makes her eagerly-awaited appearance at Terry's Theatre as Aunt Mary Watkins in The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary, in which she has scored wonderfully in America. The artists supporting Miss Robson will be:—Mr. Jack Storey, Mr. Paul Decker, Mr. Arthur Deering, Mr. John McMahon, Mr. C. C. Gwyne, Mr. Geo. F. Hall, Mr. Lester Wallace, Mr. Harry Jones, Mr. Faye Cusick, Miss Nana Saville, Miss Lillian Westner, Miss Lotta Blake, and Miss Rose Fantusz.

Mr Henry Doughty will tour in the spring with a répertoire including Geoffrey Stirling, The Dead Heart (which has not been seen since Sir Henry Irving's revival at the Lyceum), a new society drama, Broken Wings, by Chas. James and E. J. Malyon, and a new play by a well-known novelist.

Miss Lilian Fawn, who plays Valida in Florida, was called upon at a moment's notice on Tuesday last at the Broadway Theatre, New Cross, to take up the part of Angela, owing to the indisposition of Miss Hersee. She made a success, and was congratulated by the manager, Mr. Charles Constant.

At the New Theatre Royal, Blackburn, on Monday last, Mr. Allan Wilkie added further to his répertoire with the production of Louis N. Parker's famous romantic drama The Cardinal. This play had never been seen in Blackburn before, and it speaks well for Mr. Wilkie's masterly interpretation of the title-rôle and the general excellence of the production that, in spite of the hot weather, it had a most enthusiastic reception from a large audience on the opening night, and drew a still larger house on the second night of its performance at Blackburn. Mr. Wilkie has arranged to place the play permanently in his répertoire.

Messrs. Murray King and Clark will produce on Monday, at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, A Bedouin Beauty, a romantic light opera by Talbot Hughes, and composed by Frederick Rosse and Raymond King. A strong cast, headed by Mr. King, will present the opera, which will be mounted on a very lavish scale, and subsequently taken on tour.

Mr. Walter Gay finishes to-night his engagement as leading man with Mr. Robert Arthur's company at the Kennington Theatre. The season has been such a successful one that it has extended over fourteen weeks, during which full houses have testified to the popularity of the enterprise. Mr. Gay has played the lead in The Romany Rye, Lights of London, In the Ranks, Harbour Lights, English Rose, Hoodman Blind, The Silver King, and other popular specimens of Adelphi drama. He has not yet concluded his arrangements for the autumn.

"Merry Maisie" is the title of the latest musical comedy which is about to be toured by Messrs. Cyril James and Thomas, with a strong representative cast of well-known musical comedy artists. The book is by W. T. Ivory, and the light and original music by Eugene Coppo. It will be sent on tour early in September, and several first-class dates have been secured.

Mr. Charles Gibson resumed his tour of Alone in London at the Theatre Royal, Edinburgh, last week, when, in spite of the hot weather, crowds were turned away nightly. A local patron, seeing the enormous queues waiting for admission, exclaimed, "It's like pantomime." Business is even better this week at Aberdeen.

Miss Winifred Pearson is playing Meg the Mobswoman, a dramatic episode, by M. Leon M. Lion, as a curtain-raiser to Miss Tommy on Monday at the Theatre Royal, Lincoln. Miss Pearson is also playing Vivian Morrison, the adventuress, in Mr. Jerome K. Jerome's play, a part in which she had the good fortune to be personally complimented by the author.

As Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pearce (Miss Ella Erskine) were coming down Park-lane on Tuesday evening in a taxi the vehicle went over the kerb into a lamp-post. Mr. Pearce's face was cut, and Miss Erskine's nose suffered considerably—so much so, that immediate medical attendance was necessary. No serious results are anticipated, and the injured pair were able to play on Friday at Worcester in a pastoral play.

Prince Nicholas, of the Royal Family of Montenegro, has officially opened a theatre at Cettigne, the first in the principality. The play selected for the occasion was entitled The Empress of the Balkans, the author of which was discovered to be Prince Nicholas himself.

Mrs. Lewis Waller figured in an amusing case at Chichester County Court on the 10th inst., when Messrs. Screech and Co., tailors, of Bognor, made a claim for £7 16s. 6d., in respect of work done. Plaintiffs' counsel said Mrs. Waller lived at Flansham, near Bognor. Mr. Screech had done work for Mrs. Waller for many years, but when her last bill was sent in she raised objection to several items. The items in dispute resolved themselves into about four pieces of work. A violet skirt, it was objected, was one inch too large in the waist and the hang of it was upset; a mole skirt-band was too tight; a purple costume was stated to have one sleeve cut differently from the other; and a grey costume was described as hopeless, and quite unwearable. Plaintiffs' counsel contended that the things were made correctly to order.

At the request of the Judge, Mrs. Waller put on the grey costume, the Court adjourning for ten minutes while the lady was conducted to a private room. Upon the Court resuming Mrs. Waller appeared in the grey costume, and, giving evidence, said she had had considerable experience of dressmakers and ladies' tailors in London and elsewhere. The costume she was then wearing was to have been a copy of a blue one. Mr. Screech took her measurements, and the coat was left with him to copy. When she was fitted she told Mr. Screech it would have to be altered. The collar was very bad, the back did not fit, the sleeves were not put in properly, and the skirt was not like the copy. She therefore returned it. Mr. Screech was permitted to test the fitting of the costume before his Honour, and at first he said there was nothing the matter with it. The wrinkles in the back, he said, were due to the costume having been in the box. They could be taken out by re-fitting the collar. It did want that alteration. It was not more than an hour's work to put it right. "Mr. Screech says he can make it right in an hour. What do you say about that?" defendant was asked by her counsel. "I don't think a lifetime devoted to it would make much difference," replied Mrs. Waller, amid laughter.

A ladies' tailor, of Chichester, examined the grey costume while it was still being worn by Mrs. Waller, and said it was not far wrong, and could very easily be altered. It was too tight, but that was a trifling matter, as the buttons could soon be put back. It would not take a skilled man more than three hours to put it right. The skirt, he agreed, was not like the blue one, of which it was supposed to be a copy, but it was not a bad fit.

His Honour, in giving judgment, said the defendant had satisfied him that her reason for rejecting the grey costume was a good and sufficient one. He did not accept plaintiff's evidence that these defects were trifling ones, which could be altered in a very short time. It seemed to him, not only by the evidence of the witnesses, but from his own eyes, that the defects were very serious, and the costume certainly did not correspond in any substantial or essential way with the model given to plaintiff to copy. He thought under the circumstances defendant was entitled to reject the costume. He gave judgment for the plaintiff for £2 3s., and allowed him no costs for witnesses.

Mr. James Berry, we are sorry to hear, is lying seriously indisposed at a nursing home at 18, Holland-road, Hove, Brighton, and in consequence all his plans for the immediate future must be abandoned.

The Adelphi will be reopened by Mr. George Edwardes in October with The Quaker Girl, a new musical play by Messrs. Tanner and Monckton. Meanwhile the theatre will undergo extensive alterations and improvements. The vestibule is being carried back three times the distance to which it used to extend, and will be rebuilt in marble and oak. The staircases at present leading from the centre of the hall to the dress circle and upper circle are being removed. A separate entrance for the upper circle will be provided from the Strand, and for the dress circle, foyer, and boxes, a handsome staircase leading from the further end of the vestibule will take the place of the old and narrow ascent. A semi-circle of boxes will be built round the back of the dress circle, and the stalls will be provided with luxurious chairs upholstered in rose-pink. A new curtain, new velvet hangings, and private boxes enlarged, lined with silk, are among the alterations in progress.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

No More Roof Gardens

One of the features of this peculiar summer is the passing of the roof-garden from New York. Two years ago every theatre there was going to have a roof-garden. Some were built, more or less elaborately. One new theatre was constructed with a sliding roof, so as to become an open-air house at a day's notice, and this theatre was the first to close on account of the heat. The only theatre roof-garden open this year is on the New York Theatre, but that has been transformed into a place for all-the-year-round entertainments.

A Dramatist who Outlived Himself.

"None of the late Mr. Bronson Howard's plays keeps the stage now," says Mr. Stephen Fiske in Sports of the Times; "outside of a small circle he is forgotten; but he was the greatest American dramatist of his era and the first to win the hearts of the British public. He was equally facile in comedy and drama—in Saratoga and Young Mrs. Winthrop, in The Henrietta and Shenandoah. Originally a newspaper man on the Free Press of Detroit, his native city, he came to New York as a reporter on the Tribune, and during four years devoted all his leisure time to writing plays that managers would not take the trouble to read or to return. This is the heartbreaking story of almost every dramatist, and we are told that it is good for him—it develops genius. But before he was twenty-eight fame and fortune smiled upon him in his Saratoga, played in England by his brother-in-law, now Sir Charles Wyndham, at Brighton. Success followed success, averaging a new play every two years. But meanwhile the dramatists whom he had inspired had passed beyond him. His latest plays, superior in literary ability, lacked the dramatic touch. As a playwright he had outlived himself. But as a man he was more charming and delightful than ever, and he should have lived long to enjoy his pecuniary competency and his international reputation."

Garrick's Villa.

The same writer tells us that Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan is called upon by Town Topics to purchase Garrick's Villa, and present it to the Actors' Fund of New York. The argument is that, as Mr. Morgan cannot get the King John's Cup from King's Lynn for $250,000, and will not buy the crown of Great Britain on account of a doubt about the genuineness of the jewels, he must want to purchase something English. Why not the Garrick Villa? It is urged that the fittings and furnishings will appeal to his artistic taste, and this is very true. The canvased walls painted with Chinese subjects are unique.

"But should Mr. Morgan buy the villa, he ought not," says Mr. Fiske, "to present it to the Actors' Fund, which has no use for it, and could not afford to maintain it as a museum for relics of the Garrick era. The Actors' Association of England would be the proper beneficiary. "Still," says Mr. Fiske, "I hold to the original proposition that the villa be bought and endowed by international subscriptions and benefits, and that Mr. George Alexander, on behalf of the West End Managers' Association, appoint a committee to raise the necessary funds. If I were in London the matter could be settled in a few hours. But there is some hitch about the negotiations that I cannot unravel at this distance."

Mr. Frohman's New Plays.

An analysis of the forty new plays to be produced by Mr. Charles Frohman shows that 40 per cent. are by English authors, over 30 per cent. by French, and only 15 per cent. by American. Mr. Frohman says frankly, "The American authors are not producing the goods. Sixteen English plays, thirteen French, and only seven American—the native dramatist, for whom we have all laboured so hard, needs prodding and protecting again."

Garrick's Henry VIII.

"Sir Herbert Tree," says the Westminster Gazette, "is by this time fully alive to the criticism which, in advance, is certain to be passed upon his promised presentation of Henry VIII. next month at His Majesty's. He will assuredly be told that he has overdone the spectacle, and that, although Sir Henry Irving set him in this respect an ill example, he will have gone beyond what any other leading actor-manager has ever dreamed of. Yet, when there is held forth the expectation of a magnificent setting at His Majesty's of the scene of the coronation of Anne Boleyn in Westminster Abbey, Sir Herbert Tree may plead that, in the long ago, when Garrick—no inconsiderable person in our theatrical history—was the principal figure at Drury Lane, and this very play was given, spectacle was obviously a large part of the production. 'For the Entertainment of the Tripoline Embassador,' there was given in October, 1759, a performance of Henry VIII. at that house, with Moody as the King, Mrs. Pritchard as Queen Katherine, and Miss Young as 'Patience (with a proper Song)'; and there was promised 'an exact Representation of the Coronation, and the Ceremony of the Champion in Westminster Hall.' The bill was completed with 'a Pantomime Entertainment call'd "Harlequin Ranger," to conclude with a Dance of Millers'; and 'No Persons can be admitted behind the Scenes,' it was carefully added, though a similar announcement had then been accustomed to be made for many years."

Interest in the Stage.

After all, says the Penny Illustrated Paper, with the majority of English people as at present constituted, apart from an occasional fleeting interest in a murder case, the stage is the only thing that really matters, and the news that Mr. Arthur Bourchier has grown a real beard in which to appear as Henry VIII. will bring brightness to many an eye which remains unresponsive to matters of minor national concern.

A Novelty in Hats.

Miss Violet Halls, an American actress, who was well known in comic opera in the States and later in London, has, says the Penny Illustrated Paper, prepared a novel costume to wear when she resumes her engagement at the St. Petersburg music halls next season. She is having a hat made with a brim twelve feet in diameter. When the curtain goes up she stands with her head bent forward, so that the audience sees nothing but the flower-bedecked top of the hat, which acts as a screen, hiding her completely. Then she lifts her head, revealing herself in a "stunning" costume, with the enormous hat brim behind as a background. She expects to make the Russians sit up and stare at her even more than they have in the past, which is saying a good deal.

Censorship and Police.

"I think," said Mr. Laurence Irving recently to an interviewer, "there should be no censorship; it should be with plays as it is with books, for the police to take up. No three men could differ as to what is obscene, and I think there would be very few manifestly indecent plays. Anyone taking down one of Wycherley's plays knows he is reading a dirty play, and one which is not fit for production on the modern stage. But when one finds the ban extended to Tolstoy, Bernard Shaw, and Maeterlinck, three of the finest teachers of morality—not, perhaps, of conventional morality—I think it is time the system was changed." When asked if he thought police intervention would be the more dignified course, Mr. Irving retorted, "That is the way with books."

"THE ISLANDER" OFF TO NEW ZEALAND.

A CHAT WITH NEIL KENYON.

The inimitable Scotch comedian Mr. Neil Kenyon, who has only recently concluded a very successful engagement at the Apollo Theatre in The Islander as Mirza Mark Ali Khan, the pasha of the island "somewhere in the Persian Gulf," sailed yesterday by the R.M.S. Corinthic for New Zealand, the trip being undertaken on the advice of his medical man. He was offered the part he created, and played with such "pawky" humour, in the production of The Islander by Mr. J. C. Williamson in Australia, but, we understand, his English booking prevented his acceptance. He proposes to make an extended tour, and 1911 will be well advanced ere he again sets foot upon his native heath.

"I hope to be back in time to fulfil my bookings at the West End halls on March 6," he remarked in a chat with an Era representative. "I have had to refuse several good offers for pantomime, as the state of my health prevents me making any arrangements just at present." Other engagements of a lucrative nature cannot be settled for the same reason. Mr. Kenyon wishes to thank Messrs. Oswald Stoll, D. J. Clarke, F. Wilmott, G. Dottridge, the directors of the Syndicate halls, anad others for their kindness in postponing dates.

The stage first called Kenyon at the early age of eighteen, when he joined Messrs. Howard and Wyndham to play in The Lady of the Lake. After that production, for nine years he enacted every kind of part in every class of play and in all kinds of theatres, even booths and circuses. But—and this is an important point, in his mind—he always played under the best of producers in the particular branch of work he happened to be doing. In this way he gained an all-round experience of stage-craft and a thorough understanding of the theatrical business—hence his versatility and ability as a character actor and his conscientious attention to detail, whether playing in vaudeville or at the theatres.

His managers have included such splendid theatre craftsmen as Messrs. J. B. Howard, Rich

MR. NEIL KENYON.

Waldon, Louis Calvert, Robert Courtneidge, Arthur Collins, and William Mollison, the last-named of whom, by the way, is just now appearing at the Holborn Empire in that powerful playlet The Touch of a Child. As a very young beginner Kenyon also gained experience under the late William Terries and Wilson Barrett.

His first pantomime engagement was as Tammie Tourietap at the Princess's, Glasgow. With this part he introduced an innovation, giving to the audience, possibly for the first time, a portrait of the homely and simple Scot in Peter Wilkins. It is worthy of note that since Kenyon proved to a Glasgow audience how really amusing the quiet humour of the Glasgow suburban man in the street could be numerous books and character studies of the same type have become world-wide favourites.

This pantomime was, undoubtedly, the turning-point in his career, and since then he has added to his artistic successes in the following pantomimes: MacStinger, in Robinson Crusoe, at the Prince's, Manchester (the last pantomime, by the way, that that fine animal impersonator poor Charlie Lauri played in); Tim Toddlebonnie, in Mother Hubbard, at the Princess's, Glasgow; the Baron, in Cinderella, at Stoke Newington; the King, in Sleeping Beauty, at Prince's, Manchester; the Widow Twankey, in Aladdin, at the Royal, Newcastle; the Baroness, in The Babes in the Wood, at Drury Lane; and Mother Goose, at the Grand, Glasgow. It will be seen from the above record that even in pantomime Neil has shown a remarkable versatility in the art of character portrayal. Indeed, "Be versatile" would appear to be his watchword.

His experiences on the legitimate stage also are many and varied, and include, in rapid succession, Joshua Gillibrand, in The Arabian Nights; Young Marlow, in She Stoops to Conquer; Svengali, in Trilby; the Laird of Dumbiedykes, in Jeanie Deans; Wilfred Denver, in The Silver King, and Iago! What a range of parts!

"I should be very sorry to do it now," he smilingly remarks, referring to his record. "It must have been appalling." Of his music-hall career little need be said. From the London Pavilion, where he was given his first real chance by that fine judge of talent Mr. Frank Glenister, although a very young star, he has played in practically all the well-known halls, including the Moss and Stoll tours. He is booked for years ahead, with the exception of a few months left free for pantomime, or, as he quaintly says, "at the disposal of theatrical managers, should they be prepared to allow me to 'gag' in some play or other." In addition to his already well-known character sketches, such as the Pedlar, the Postie of Dunrobin (a clever study that stamped him as the first Scottish comedian of the day), the Poacher, the No'er-do-well, the Fishwife, &c., he has some new portraits in readiness, amongst them being the Bailie, the Knife-grinder, and the Trainer, and he has converted his well-known "Doch-au-Doris" chorus into a colonial scena of a Scotsman "down under."

At the moment of writing he has just received a telegram from Dr. Neil Munro, the well-known Scottish author, giving him the Australasian rights of MacPherson, the play which made such a success at the Repertory Theatre, Glasgow.

"One thing I particularly wish you to say," remarked Mr. Kenyon, in bidding us good-bye, "and that is how grateful I am to the Press. They have been awfully kind to me."

Mr. Kenyon's many friends in the profession and out will join us in the hope that his trip will be a most enjoyable one, and that he will return completely restored to health.

Mr. Laurence Irving's dramatisation of Dostoieffski's novel "Crime and Punishment," under the title of The Unwritten Law, is in the main a powerful piece of work, and provides him with a part which brings out his dramatic abilities to advantage. The rôle chosen for himself is the central one of Rodion Raskolnikoff, a student of the University of St. Petersburg, whose views on "Progress and Homicide" are destined to be put to a tragic illustration. It is necessary in the beginning to understand the character of the man by means of an argument upon these views, and the argument is entered upon by Kashkin, a student, and Zosimoff, a young doctor, who have sought him out in friendship; but the argument is, dramatically, too long and a shade too general in terms. His contention is, however, fairly clear—that a man may justifiably commit murder if the victim is a menace to the moral welfare of the race, and that murder is a logical and reasonable condition of progress. Now it happens that in an upper room of the house (to take one of Raskolnikoff's examples) lives a girl named Sonia Martinova and her two young sisters. Sonia's father has been lured to drink and untimely death by their landlord, Gromoff, who has designs upon Sonia, designs which are the condition of the latter's continued tenancy of the room at a time when no other alternative exists but starvation and the streets. Sonia's experiences of men have been, so far, shocking to her innocent and religious nature; but at a convenient moment she does not hesitate to come down to Rodion's room and confide her troubles to him, in the hope that he may be able to help her. Rodion, wasted, brooding, and feverish with too much study of his ideas, listens sympathetically, drawn to the girl as she is to him; and gradually his blood rises up against the bestial Gromoff, and he swears that the old rascal shall do her no harm that night. Gromoff comes upon the landing shortly after, and Raskolnikoff calls him in to discuss this matter of Sonia. Gromoff's attitude, however, only serves to inflame him the more, the landlord going up to his own room full of resentment and threats. Rodion's principles are working busily in his mind. A servant some time previously has left a long axe in the room. With this he arms himself, hiding the weapon under his overcoat, and steals his way quietly in the dusk to settle the matter in his own way. In the early morning Raskolnikoff lies nervous and exhausted on his couch by the window, fully dressed. A cut across the fingers of his left hand, and the condition of his overcoat, which it behoves him to conceal, are the only signs, beyond his state of mind, of what has taken place. The rest of the play deals with the detection of the murderer by Bezak, an examining magistrate. It has been imagined that two workmen, one of whom is in possession of an incriminating necklace, or bracelet (which Rodion had accidentally dropped upon the landing), are responsible for the crime. They are arrested and brought past Rodion's window. He sees them, and, overwrought, faints. The student's attempt to clear the workmen, who are in a pitiable state of grief and despair, takes the form of a statement that he saw them upon a scaffold from his window at the time the murder was committed. Bezak ridicules and disproves the statement. He has all ready for his design of reconstructing the crime for Raskolnikoff's imagination. Step by step, with a cool and fiendish suggestiveness, he drags his victim, body and mind, nearer and nearer to the unbearable moment when the confession must come out of him. Confession is what he wants and will have, and by slow degrees of excitement and nervousness, Raskolnikoff's repulsion is broken down. At a given moment the workmen are to be brought in, that the murderer may be confronted with two other of his victims. In they come; the confession is on Raskolnikoff's lips; but suddenly one of the workmen, unmarried, goes on his knees and frantically confesses that it is he, he alone, who did it, so that he may save his innocent companion, who has a wife and children to leave behind him. Bezak is staggered; the whole terrible rebuilding of the crime is shattered in a moment; and Raskolnikoff, suddenly recovering, goes out laughing hysterically. A fine scene, excellently done. The sequel is in Sonia's room. The passport cannot be used; she will not go with this man who has done murder and who would have an innocent man to take his chance of doom until some remedy could be found. Religion herein enters, and Rodion scoffs at the idea of a merciful God who can be found nowhere on earth. He would go alone, and take with him one of Sonia's young sisters, who is also something of a Pagan; but Sonia, with the other little child at her bosom, prays, adjuring the child to pray with her. Thus sentiment defeats the thinker at the end, for Raskolnikoff, standing bareheaded, tells the other child to join in the prayer, and at the end makes bold announcement that he will give himself up. This he does, and the curtain falls on Sonia's assurance that she will wait for him, and Bezak's comforting surmise that she will probably have to wait no longer than three years.

Mr. Irving's depiction of Raskolnikoff, clever always, though a little unconvincing to begin with, reached a high level in his excitable moments, and especially in the scene with Bezak, in Gromoff's sinister chamber, he produced a deep and memorable impression. As Sonia Miss Mabel Hackney played with a gentleness and charm that provided a striking and restful contrast to the turbulent and unhappy spirit of her lover. Mr. James Skea's delineation of Bezak, the criminal expert, was another quiet and admirable piece of work, well-studied and tremendously effective in the many crucial moments of the scene of inquiry in Gromoff's room. Prominent among the remainder of a long cast was Mr. Frank Esmond, who played Kashkin acceptably; Mr. W. Fane, who gave an effective rendering of Zosimoff; Mr. Edward Chester as the uncouth and brutal Gromoff; Miss Margaret Omar, in a lively rendering of Doonia, Raskolnikoff's sister; Miss Mabel Nelson as the pert little Katya; Mr. Cyril Cattley as the dishonourable district attorney, Keller; and Miss Alice Inman as Pulcheria, the inoffensive mother of Raskolnikoff. In the matter of staging the play has elaborate assistance, and there seems no reason why the success achieved in America should not be continued here.

TWENTY YEARS' TOURING.

A CHAT WITH MR. E. VIVIAN EDMONDS.

Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds, the well-known touring actor-manager, who is appearing this week at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, in a new romantic drama from his own pen, entitled A King's Romance, completes his twentieth year of touring management at Christmas—a fact which it is difficult to believe when one contemplates his youthful appearance and generally juvenile manner. The strenuous life evidently agrees with him, and twenty years' hard work and worry, travelling from town to town, playing the principal parts in his own companies, generally supervising the entire production, and writing plays in his "spare time," find him without a grey hair. He has had as many as three companies on tour at the same time, and frequently spends best part of the day in front of a type-writing machine.

Our "youngest-oldest" touring manager, as Mr. Edmonds believes himself to be, took to the profession very early in life, making his first appearance on the stage when he was only six years old, under the management of John Coleman. A long vacation followed, not in his instance owing to theatrical depression, but in order that he might complete his studies at the Mechanics' Institute, Manchester. He then played a small part with Miss Mary Anderson at the Lyceum; also appearing across the way at the Gaiety Theatre in 1884, in Very Little Hamlet. Engagements at the Princess's, Glasgow, and the Comedy Theatre, Manchester, followed, and in 1887 he was secured by Sir Augustus Harris for The Armada at Drury Lane. In 1888 he was with Mr. J. M. Chute in pantomime at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol; and this was followed by a long and happy tour in The Lights of London, with Mr. Henry C. Arnold, one of the kindest and best of managers; then to the Queen's Theatre, Manchester, with J. Pitt Hardacre, in the Princess's production, Siberia.

Mr. Edmonds went into partnership at Easter, 1890, with Mr. Arthur Carlton, and later on toured in conjunction with his wife (Miss Mary Austin) in Arthur Shirley's drama Passion's Power. G. R. Sims and Wilson Barrett's fine play, The Golden Ladder; Frank Harvey's great success, The Cotton

MR. E. VIVIAN EDMONDS.

Spinner; Woman and Wine, For He's a Jolly Good Fellow, and a number of other well-known and popular plays have been included in the répertoire of Mr. Edmonds and his accomplished wife.

In a brief talk with an Era representative, Mr. Edmonds, referring to his youthful appearance, remarked that it had more than once been a handicap, and occasionally embarrassing. "One very amusing incident happened not long since at Weston. I had been taking a stroll along the front with my eighteen-year-old daughter, who is at a boarding-school there. The incident was evidently reported, for on her return she was severely reproved by the Head for walking out with a 'boy'!" One can imagine "pa's" indignation. Mr. Edmonds admits to an excitable temperament, and on one occasion at a rehearsal of Woman and Wine, he was endeavouring to rouse up a crowd of revellers whose business didn't exactly meet with his approval. "Now then, garçon, garçon," yelled the manager, in his most agitated manner. "Beg pardon, sir, it can't be done," calmly replied the gentleman who looked after the illuminations; "we've only got electric light." Mr. Edmonds has written several plays, one of which, The Wedding Morn, he anticipates will soon be seen at a West-End theatre. The Ways of Men, He's a Jolly Good Fellow (in conjunction with Mr. Arthur Shirley), and the piece he is at present touring, A King's Romance, are also from his busy pen.

Mr. Edmonds is very gratified at his success, at Mr. Mulholland's fine Hammersmith playhouse, of The King's Romance, business being excellent. He has already let the Australian and American rights, and is writing the play in novel form, collaborating with Mr. F. Reynolds Squire, M.A., the book being accepted by publishers.

"I thoroughly believe in giving the public Glitter, Glamour, Bright Uniforms, and, above all, Romance—something right out of their everyday lives. The Starving Heroine in a garret with a candle in a bottle is a thing of the past. One of the most important aids to success is short waits. Oh those weary entr'actes! I saw a play last week with a twenty-five minutes' wait between the acts."

Having discovered the elixir of youth, we may express the hope that Mr. Edmonds will discreetly continue its use. If enthusiasm, experience, and real hard work secure success, the future for this enterprising young manager should be prosperous. When he can possibly snatch an hour or so for recreation, Mr. Edmonds enjoys a game of golf.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

Minutes of the council meeting held at 32, Regent-street on Tuesday, Aug. 16. Present: Mr. Clarence Derwent (in the chair), Mr. H. W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Messrs. Edward Morgan, C. F. Collings, Leonard Shepherd, Murri Moncrieff, Miss Joan Pereira, Miss Vita Spencer, Miss Beatrice Chester, and Mr. Robson Paige (acting secretary).

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Mr. Mote consented to draft a letter to be forwarded to the Actors' Society in New York re the Robert Hilton's season at the Strand. Letters were read from Mr. Cecil Raleigh, Mr. C. Hayden Coffin, and Mr. Richard A. Greene, promising to serve on the One-Licence Conference.

The finance committee's report was read by Miss Chester and adopted. The hon. solicitor's report was adopted. Mr. Ivor Bernard was nominated, and a nomination was rejected, owing to the short experience of the applicant.

It was decided that a notice be placed on the board that the socials be resumed at an early date, and that members be invited to send in their names to serve on that committee.

(from our own correspondent.)

Hall Caine's latest variant of his novel "The Deemster," now christened The Bishop's Son, was produced with decided success at the Grand Theatre, Douglas, on Monday evening, the performance being a triumph for all concerned. The play closely follows the lines of the novel, only departing from it when Hall Caine's maturer judgment suggested that motif and incident were capable of being knit closer together. The play is in four acts and eight scenes.

The opening deals with Dan Mylrea, the son of the Bishop, his love for his cousin Mona, his recklessness, which is only the protest of young blood against cold convention; his anger at being falsely accused by his uncle, the Deemster, and his cousin, Ewan Mylrea, of sinning with his sweetheart, daughter of one, sister to the other; the quarrel, the fight, the death of Ewan Mylrea. This act ends with a most powerful situation—the rough fishermen, Dan Mylrea's boon companions, wish to carry the corpse out to sea and bury it. But the man's soul leaps to life in the boy's heart, and he says, "No; you shall not! You shall take it home. When a man has done wrong, the thing he has got to do next is to stand up to it. That's what I am going to do whatever it may cost me."

Act II. shows how Dan faces the Deemster and his sweetheart; and, hardest of all, his father, the Bishop. There is splendid humanity in this act, for the Bishop is one of the most beautiful characters Hall Caine has ever contemplated. The struggle between the upright judge and the loving father is wrought out with true craftsmanship. And here Mr. Hall Caine materialises one of the quaint old-fashioned customs which still linger in the Arcadian land. It is that the Bishop in the Isle of Man formerly held (and perhaps still holds) certain rights of separate judicature, whereby he was entitled to take a felon who was a tenant of his barony out of the hands of the Civil Judge, and try and sentence the criminal himself. This the Bishop does. He saves his only son from the Deemster, but he sentences him to eternal banishment. Act III. shows how the plague comes to the island, and Dan in his exile, and how he is called to his task and his atonement. Act IV. expands Hall Caine's value as a dramatist. In it he reaches a higher plane of simple and direct pathos than he has previously touched, and the final curtain, when the man and the woman, after passing through Sorrow's Gates, go home—"Home at last by right of God's law and man's law"—tempts one to consider that Hall Caine has in him "the large stride of the elder race."

The reception accorded to the play was most enthusiastic. The audience were not only generous, but they were discriminating. Much interest was evidenced in the fact that Mr. Derwent Hall Caine, the author's second son, created Dan Mylrea, and his work made a very favourable impression. There is more than accomplishment in his performance. There is temperament, there is emotion, and complete understanding. Mr. W. F. Grant as Gilchrist Mylrea was a tower of strength, his fine elocution contributing valuably to an excellent all-round performance. Mr. Julian Cross, an actor of experience, was well suited as the Deemster; Mr. Matthew Boulton had few opportunities, but he endowed Ewan Mylrea with conviction; Mr. George Mudie, jun., made a clever little Phil May sketch of Davy Fayle; and Mr. E. W. Thomas, a comedian of ripe and unctuous humour, was really funny as Hommy-beg. Mr. Herbert Winton, Mr. A. W. Munro, and Mr. W. Nixon were adequately placed. Miss Agnes Knights made Kerry stand out; and Miss Verita Vivien's Mona Mylrea was pathetic. In fact, the members of Wentworth Croke, Milton Bode, and Edward Compton's combination all worked loyally. The play was well mounted and produced with intelligence.

Racy Reminiscences.

Mr. H. H. Vincent, who has retired, after thirty-six years in the profession as actor and business-manager, to Bath, has been telling a representative of the Bath Herald some amusing anecdotes. Many years ago, when training a ballet, he had with him a girl who could not be taught to hold herself erect. After repeated attempts to remedy the fault, he called her on one side and asked her what she would do if he doubled her salary. Altogether unexpected was the young lady's reply. He fully expected her to promise to do her best to improve, but instead of that he got this: 'I would drop down dead, sir.' Whether the young lady's fears were realised, Mr. Vincent did not say.

An Old Melodrama.

"Over forty years ago Mr. Vincent was a member of the dramatic company at the Amphitheatre in Leeds. They were playing The Flowers of the Forest, with H. M. Pitt as Hugh Laverock, himself as Alfred, and Miss Effie Macdonald as the Gipsy boy Lemuel. All playgoers are aware that Hugh and Alfred fight a duel at the end of the second act, during which Lemuel, the gipsy, shoots Hugh, and Alfred is accused, arrested, and tried for the murder.

A Misfire.

"Unfortunately, at the critical moment Lemuel found that the gun would not go off. The property man's customary double was tried, but that also missed fire. The property man's assistant came up with yet another gun, but still there was no success. There were triggers snapping all round the stage; the stage-manager was distracted; Pitt, Miss Macdonald, and the author of the story were in an agony of perspiration, wondering how on earth they could reach a climax and bring the curtain down. No report was there; and without the death of Hugh the whole plot would be destroyed, and Lemuel's great after scenes would count for nothing.

An Ingenious Explanation.

"It was a terrible time, and it was Harry Pitt who pulled them through. He threw up his arms, gasped, spluttered, and then he yelled in a voice of thunder: 'Treachery! treachery, Alfred! I have been shot by an air-gun.' The piece was saved, and the curtain descended amid tumultuous applause. There were few among the audience who realised that air-guns had not been invented in the time depicted before them."

A CELEBRATED SONG AND ITS WRITER.

Among the most frequent queries that we have to reply to in our "Answers to Correspondents" is "Who was the author of 'Tommy make room for your uncle'?" a song that was all over the town in the 'seventies. Mr. T. S. Lonsdale, the writer, himself gives an amusing account of its inception and of its subsequent popularity.

"I remember," writes Mr. Lonsdale, "thirty-three years ago my mother said to me—I was then quite a boy, though the proud author of a song, entitled "Not Before the Boy," which the late J. L. Toole complimented me on—'Tommy, your uncle is coming here to-night. You will have to make room for him.' I thought then what a capital idea for a song, and I sat down and wrote it off at once. A tune seemed to jingle in my head, so I rushed off to a friend who put tunes down from the voice, and, when the melody was completed, I submitted it in succession to the 'Great Vance,' Leybourne, Clarke, Stead, and many others, at that time popular stars of the day; but the answer invariably was, 'Declined with thanks,' the fact being that they were all 'Hunt' mad. G. W. Hunt was the man who supplied nearly all the songs then, and it was difficult indeed for an outside author to 'get in' with the stars.

"At last, in despair, I gave it to an amateur to sing, and it proved immensely successful on the first night. The accompanist happened to be E. Solomon, the composer of 'Billee Taylor,' and he informed his friend, W. B. Fair, of the possibilities of this catchy song. Fair wrote and asked me what I would take for it, and we agreed upon £2 and half publishing rights. Fair first sang 'Tommy, make room for your uncle' at the Surrey Gardens as a single turn. He afterwards introduced it in the burlesque Man Friday. Fair sang the three verses, and the audiences joined in the chorus with gusto. The world then went 'Tommy, make room for your uncle' mad."

As time progressed all the singers who had originally refused "Tommy," &c., wanted songs from the now popular song-writer, and he quickly supplied George Leybourne with "Oh, the Fairies," and "The man in the moon is looking, love," the former selling in thousands. Vance accepted "How do you like London?" which also became a popular catchword, and the rage; T. W. Barrett had the successful "We are a merry family"; Arthur Lloyd, "How did you leave the pigs, Sammy?"; and Macdermott, Jenny Hill, Dan Leno, Kate Vaughan, Herbert Campbell, Nellie Power, Frank Coyne, Connie Gilchrist—who afterwards became Countess of Orkney—Vesta Tilley, Chrigwin, and others have been pleased to render songs by the author of "Tommy," &c.

Henri Clarke created enormous success with "Just as you are for ninepence," which is still a catchword, and used by many performers. For Arthur Roberts he wrote, "If I were only long enough"—also "Mabel, sweet Mabel," "Timid little maid," and many other popular songs, including "Give me a cab-fare, ducky," which Arthur Roberts sang by special request before his late Majesty the King, then Prince of Wales, at a private concert.

Mr. T. S. Lonsdale recently composed a new pantomime song for Miss Frances Kapstowne, the principal girl in The Sleeping Beauty pantomime, at Portsmouth, entitled "We hear they want more," the music being composed by Mr. George Goodfellow and orchestrated by Mr. Ernest G. Oram, the musical-director of the King's Theatre, Portsmouth.

Mr. Lonsdale is the compiler of the composite photographs "Faces Past and Present" and "Find Whom You Know," and now has in hand an International picture, called "the World; Are You in This?" The portrait we reproduce of Mr. Lonsdale was taken only this week, and does not represent him as a "Rip Van Winkle" or a "lean and slippered pantaloon," as the description of veteran which was recently given to him would seem to imply. Mr. Lonsdale is apparently as youthful and vigorous as ever, and good for any quantity of work, either in the song-writing or any other line.

"A PRAIRIE WOOING."

Playlet, by Ivan Patrick Gore, Presented for the First Time in London at the Grand, Forest Gate, on Monday, Aug. 15.

Jem Grayston .....Mr. Frank Carlile
Nebraska Joe .....Mr. J. G. McHahon
A Mail Guard .....Mr. Fred Hughes
A Patrol Officer .....Mr. Harry Lovel
Nancy Smith .....Miss Mildred Sylvester

In this sketch, which was originally produced at the Palace, Aberdeen, on July 31, 1909, under the title of Miss Smith of Pine Ridge, Nancy Smith, a postmistress in the Wild West, is visited by Nebraska Joe, a desperado and horse thief. He burgles the office safe, and then snatches away Nancy's locket. Opening it and finding his own portrait within, he realises that Nancy is his daughter. She, however, refuses to harbour him, and he threatens to shoot her, and fires at her lover, Jem Grayston, when the latter appears on the scene. The desperado is finally despatched by a patrol officer. Mr. J. G. McHahon was picturesque and powerful as Nebraska Joe; Mr. Frank Carlile was strong and natural as Jem Grayston; and Miss Mildred Sylvester was an agreeable Nancy Smith.

"Men were Deceivers Ever" is doing big business at the Olympia, Shoreditch, this week. On Friday and Saturday Mr. Charles M. Daly and company deputised for Joe Elvin at the Empire, Islington, creating another success.

SHEPHERD'S BUSH EMPIRE OUTING.

The annual outing of the staff of the Shepherd's Bush Empire was held on Sunday last week, under the presidency of the popular manager, Mr. Lewis Vincent, and took the form of a river trip to Cookham. The party met at the Empire at 9.30 a.m., whence they drove to Paddington, catching the ten o'clock train for Windsor. Arriving in the Royal borough about eleven o'clock, they immediately embarked at Bridge Wharf on the steam launch Queen of England, and commenced their ten-mile trip over what is generally considered to be the most beautiful part of the Thames. Splendid weather favoured the company, which numbered about thirty, and an extremely enjoyable day was spent. Light refreshments and an excellent cold luncheon were served on board, and on arrival at Cookham some amusing sports were held. The principal events were a race for the ladies and a race for the gentlemen, for the former of which Mrs. Lewis Vincent gave as a prize a chatelaine bag, and for the latter Mr. Vincent gave a case of pipes. After leaving Cookham tea was served, and the return down the river in the cool of the evening was possibly even more enjoyable than the journey up, the delightful Cliveden Reach looking particularly beautiful. The return train left Windsor at 8.40, and the party arrived back at Shepherd's Bush about ten o'clock. Social events of this kind are to be encouraged, for they do much to create a feeling of good fellowship and make the wheels of business run smoothly. In the present instance the thanks of the party were in great measure due to Mr. Eric Smith, the genial stage-manager at Shepherd's Bush, for he was responsible for the whole of the admirable arrangements.

Miss Sybil Arundale will, we hear, shortly be seen at the Empire Theatre, Leicester-square, news which will be gratifying to the clever lady's hosts of admirers.

Madame Adah Payne, the Australian prima donna, late of the Moody-Manners' principal opera company, will pay a return visit to Dewsbury's handsome new Empire next week. Madame Payne has this week, by special request of the management, featured "Killarney" at the King's Theatre, Nottingham, and has scored an immediate success with this evergreen favourite.

"A NOBLE REVENGE."

A Dramatic Episode, by Albert Ward, Produced at the Camden Hippodrome, on Monday, Aug. 15.

Richard Tremayne .....Mr. Albert Ward
John Beresford .....Mr. George Ingleton
Beatrice Beresford .....Miss Sheila More

This new one-act play, which is being presented by Mr. Harry Barford, is indeed a most striking work, and Mr. Albert Ward, who is playing the leading character in his own play, has written a most dramatic and convincing little piece, which is as telling as it is brief, and it should have a most successful future in store for it. The story is that of an author, and in his poor lodging he has written play after play without much success. However, he finally has produced a masterpiece, which is really the story of his own life, and tells how he has been deserted by his wife, who has gone abroad and married again, and left him in despair. John Beresford, theatrical manager from the Colonies, comes to see Tremayne and arrange terms for taking his play, which he is so struck with, and with him comes Beatrice, his wife, who is to play the leading part. In Beatrice, Tremayne finds his lost wife, and though she at first does not recognise Tremayne, he soon brings back the past to her; and while they are supposed to be reading the play they are in actual conversation, which Beresford does not notice, and thinks it is the play, and is delighted with the strength of the story. Tremayne wonders whether he shall tell Beresford the truth, and under pretence of discussing the finish to the play he gets Beresford to decide what should happen in such a case. Tremayne accepts his decision, and handing Beatrice the last act of his play, with the happy ending he had written, he falls back dead. It is a very strong play, and Mr. Albert Ward gives a most finished and dramatic embodiment of Tremayne. Mr. George Ingleton is capital as the large-hearted Beresford; while Miss Sheila More creates a good impression as Beatrice.

THE BRISTOL EMPIRE ANNUAL OUTING.

BRISTOL EMPIRE OUTING.

The staff of the Empire and Hippodrome, Bristol, held their third annual outing on the 14th inst. Motor char-à-bancs conveyed the party over the Mendips and through the Cheddar Gorge, one of the most delightful drives in England, to the Cliff Hotel, where a sumptuous dinner was served at 1.30. A handsome souvenir booklet, giving the menu and list of sports, with photographs of Mr. B. Pearce Lucas (president) and Mr. G. Rhodes Parry (vice president) were handed to each of the party seated at the table.

After dinner the fun of the day commenced on the lawn of the beautiful hotel, with its waterfall, little trout brook, and vista of sheltering trees. Various sports, including 100 yards race, sack race, long jump, high jump, egg and spoon, jug and bottle, wheelbarrow race, three-legged race, blindfold race, cock-fighting competition, veterans' race, visitors' race, etc., were indulged in. The judge was Mr. David Crombie and the starter Mr. G. Rhodes Parry (manager). He was most indefatigable in his work, and presented the prizes.

After the sports high tea was served in the large hall at 6.30. The toasts included the health of Mr. B. Pearce Lucas (managing director) and family, and Mr. Harry Day (general manager), and "Success to the Empire." Mr. Sid Macaire proposed the health of Mr. G. Rhodes Parry (manager), and a vote of thanks was passed to him for the way in which he had carried the outing through. The company after a most enjoyable day returned at 8 o'clock, reaching the Empire at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Kennedy Russell, from the Paragon, has been appointed musical-director of the Walthamstow Palace.

Miss Cissie Lawson is likely in a week or two to introduce a startling innovation into the orchestra of her house, the Empire, Camberwell.

Although engaged too late to be placed on the regular bills of the Aquarium, Scarborough, Clown Inanda and his clever dog Bute, the canine barrel act performer, have attracted great attention. When standing erect on its hind legs, the little animal jumps into and out of barrels as tall as itself, and turns twelve somersaults out of a barrel, a concluding feat that brings down the house.

MUSIC-HALL CELEBRITIES.

LINN AND DARIUS.

With their novel and original musical and vocal scena the above-mentioned artists have become great favourites. Miss Linn is the daughter of the well-known performers, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Phillips (Miss Nellie Wilson), and commenced her professional career at an early age with her sister. Under the name of the Sheldon Sisters the couple appeared with great success, and were acknowledged at that time to be one of the smartest pairs of harmonising vocalists on the variety stage. Miss Linn afterwards dissolved partnership with her sister, and worked four weeks at the old Royal, Holborn, and several dates at the Palace, Croydon, Middlesex, Paragon, Metropolitan, Canterbury, &c. She was seen to advantage in pantomime at the Grand Theatre, Newcastle-on-Tyne, under the management of Mr. Weldon Watts. Afterwards she toured Australia and New Zealand with Harry Rickards' companies. Returning to England she played principal girl at the Elephant and Castle Theatre in the year 1900, and was at the Brixton Theatre in 1908, having meanwhile distinguished herself in many provincial pantomimes. Miss Linn is a sprightly little lady, very fond of her work, and an artist to her finger-tips. She is the possessor of a charming mezzo-soprano voice and a talented pianist.

Mr. Darius was born in Yorkshire, and started his studies at the early age of four years under his father, a well-known violinist, afterwards having tuition from Professor A. Chidzey, C.V., F.C.L., and Professor R. Wood. The latter quickly detected the boy's wonderful abilities, and gave him the bâton to conduct an orchestra of thirty professional musicians at the age of fourteen years, rendering well-known overtures, such as "The Mistress," "Oberon," "Well of Love" (Le Puits d'Amour), and "Poet and Peasant." At the age of sixteen years the youthful musician began to combine his talents on the violin, violoncello, and piano, with an acrobatic act on the variety stage; but later found that gymnastic work did not coincide with his musical abilities. Whilst appearing in a northern provincial town with his present partner, the pair were secured by Mr. George Peel, of the well-known variety agency, to appear in London, and made their début at the Camden Theatre in their musical and vocal scena, and were immediately engaged to appear the following week at the Holborn Empire, with the London Pavilion and other principal London halls to follow, receiving also offers for America. The couple are now booked many years ahead.

EMPIRE, EDMONTON, OUTING.

The first annual outing of the Edmonton Empire staff took place on Sunday last, the locale chosen being Southend-on-Sea. At 9.35, the merry party, marshalled by their popular manager Mr. Fred Alexander, boarded the train at South Tottenham Station, arriving at Southend by 11.15, when they proceeded to the Royal Hotel, where a sumptuous dinner was provided.

Mr. Harry Bawn, managing-director of the Edmonton Empire, occupied the chair, supported by Mr. Henry Balding, a director of the company, and Mr. Angelo A. Asher, musical-director. After grace Mr. Bawn, in felicitous terms, proposed the Royal toast, after which the vice-chairman, Mr. Henry Balding, proposed "The Firm—Mr. and Mrs. Bawn (My Fancy)." The announcement of this toast was the signal for loud and prolonged applause. Mr. Bawn responded in his happiest and wittiest vein, remarking that he considered his staff and orchestra deserved the greatest praise for the loyal way in which they performed their duties. He much regretted the absence of Mrs. Bawn, but her heart was with them, and he knew how delighted she would be to learn that the staff were passing the day so happily.

Mr. Angelo Asher proposed "The Vice-Chairman," and incidentally remarked that the cordial relations existing between the staff and orchestra of the establishment were quite unique. Mr. David Weston gracefully responded for the visitors. After dinner the company indulged in boating, drives, and other salubrious pastimes, returning to the Royal Hotel at six o'clock, when they partook of a substantial tea. At 8.20 the merry party started on the return journey, loud in praise of Mr. Fred Alexander's perfect organisation.

Frame, the Flying Scotchman, now touring Bonnie Scotland with his vaudeville company, is meeting with much success. This evening he appears in the Land o' Burns—the auld toon o' Ayr—"wham ne'er surpasses for honest men and bonnie lassies." So said Rabbie.

Miss Eva Chidwick, the charming versatile comedienne, has been for some time compulsorily resting on account of sore throat, but her friends will be glad to learn that she is commencing work again, with several new songs, on Monday next, the 22nd inst., at the Palace, Glasgow.

Among the applicants to the Stratford Justices on Monday was a lady who asked for a licence to allow her daughter, aged twelve years, to perform at the Ilford Hippodrome. Mr. J. R. Roberts (the chairman): Has she been licensed before? The Mother: Oh, yes, many times. She gives a display of toe-dancing. You are a French lady, are you not?—Yes. Have you any more daughters like this one? The Mother (laughing): Yes; but they are all married. All of them?—With the exception of one who is not old enough; but I have some grandchildren. Mr. Roberts: You look young to have grandchildren. Is your husband a Frenchman?—No; he is an Englishman, and that is where the mischief comes in. The licence was granted.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We do not answer inquiries by post. In all letters the names and addresses of inquirers must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the answers if so desired.]

A Concert Artist.—Arthur C. Roberts, secretary, 9 and 10, Pancras-lane, Queen-street, E.C.

J. Green.—Write to Mr. C. I. Coltson, Actors' Benevolent Fund, Adam-street, Adelphi, W.C.

D. H.—Write to the business-manager of the St. James's Theatre. He will be able to inform you on all points.

Peter Higgins.—W. H. McCarthy, 98, Charing Cross-road, fills the office, we believe. The word "secretary" is not used. The officer in question is called "Scribe Rat."

F. and O.—There is a suggestion for registration of agents, and though it has not actually become law, it will probably soon become so. Then there is the Arbitrator's award on agents. Consult Strong's "Dramatic and Musical Law," price 5s., published at this office.

H. Usher.—It would be scarcely possible to answer your question accurately. The date probably would be late in the seventies—thirty years ago—and many changes have been made in Huddersfield halls since then. The editor of a local paper might be able to tell you, or an old music-hall frequenter in the town, who may remember the days of the old free and easies.

G. R. King (Romford).—Address Mr. Arthur Collins, at Drury Lane Theatre, London, W.C. He has not been knighted as yet. It was Queen Victoria who conferred that distinction on his predecessor, Sir Augustus Harris. Mr. F. R. Benson, the famous Shakespearean actor and scholar, may be written to, care of 11, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, London, W.C., or Green Room Club, Leicester-square, W.C.

Knox.—Mr. J. W. Rowley was the original singer of "Hang up your hat behind the door that leads into the shop," written and composed by John Stamford, who also composed "Jeremiah, blow the fire." Mr. Rowley published it about 1874, and it was also sung in the Gaiety burlesque Forty Thieves. Copies, adorned by a fine portrait of Mr. Rowley in character from Alfred Concanen's pencil, may still be had at Messrs. Francis and Day's, the original publishers of the number when Messrs. Francis Bros. and Day.

Duncan G. MacCallum.—Misses Jennie Lee (Jo), Alma Stanley, Letty Lind, Sylvia Grey, and Marion Hood are still living. We have not the dates of their births. James Rogers died April 15, 1863; Paul Meritt, July 7, 1895; Henry Pettitt, Dec. 24, 1893; William Holland, Dec. 29, 1895; the Great Unsworth, Feb. 21, 1875; Washington Irving Bishop, May 14, 1889; Kate Vaughan, Feb. 21, 1903; Harry Boleno, Jan. 25, 1875; Robert Heller, Nov. 27, 1878. We can get no particulars concerning Alfred Davis, Fred Belton, or Charles Bernard. Mr. Walter Bentley is living.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, & DEATHS.

The charge for inserting in "The Era" an announcement of a Birth, a Marriage, or a Death, or an "In Memoriam" notice, not exceeding twenty-four words, is One Shilling and Sixpence.

As a guarantee of good faith, the name and address of the sender must accompany each notice.

BIRTHS.

Almero.—On the 18th, wife of Walter Almero, of a fine daughter. Mother and child doing well. 84, St. Peter's-road, Great Yarmouth.

Haviland.—Aug. 15, at 14, Lanark-mansions, W., to Mr. and Mrs. William Haviland (Miss Edyth Latimer)—a son.

DEATHS.

Courtenay.—On Aug. 5, at Liverpool, Dr. Fred Courtenay (second son of the late Lindo Courtenay), from aortic aneurism. Interred in the family vault Aug. 9.

The Great Raymond
Breaking Records for Big Business Everywhere.

A great many artists in the music-hall world, as well as a very large number of others resident at Watford, Dover, Darwen, and Dartford—which latter place he made his home—will be greatly shocked to learn of the sudden death, which occurred at Watford, of Frank Kethro, whose splendid gifts as a pianist were known to so many, both in the professional world and those who knew him only as listeners and friends.

Upon completing an engagement at Darwen three months ago, Frank Kethro returned to Dartford, and after resting a few weeks, went to Watford to take an engagement under Mr. George Howard, manager for Messrs. Jeapes, in which town he was so well known through a previous engagement, covering a period of at least two years. He was in the best of health, but in the early part of last week was taken suddenly ill, and died within forty-eight hours, to the grief of a host of friends. The cause of death was acute meningitis. The widow was telegraphed for, and arrived just in time to see her husband die.

Mr. Kethro leaves a widow and four children—little mites—and when this notice appears they will no doubt have extended to them the sincere sympathy of many members of a warm-hearted profession. The Woolhafs, who were at the Palace Theatre, Watford, last week, and accordingly learnt of the death of poor Kethro in that town, have written to the widow from Southend, enclosing a small sum of money they themselves collected, and referring in most sympathetic terms of their knowledge of the geniality and ability of deceased, extending over a number of years.

"Rayne's Pocket Date Book." Price 1s. The proceeds from the sale will be divided equally amongst the two great charities of the dramatic and musical professions, the Actors' Benevolent Fund and the Music Hall Home Fund. Address: The Publisher, "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

BRONCHIAL TROCHES.
For Sustaining the Voice.
Invaluable for ACTORS and SINGERS.
Indispensable for PUBLIC SPEAKERS

Gentlemen,—For sudden affections of the Bronchial Organs I use and most cheerfully recommend "Brown's Troches." They are regarded as most eligible, convenient, and indispensable by numerous artists of my acquaintance, BOTH IN EUROPE AND AMERICA. They seem to act specially on the organs of the voice, and produce a clear enunciation.—Yours truly (Signed), Maria Rose Mapleson.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT
FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
By ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes" which is at present required. — St. James's Gazette.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR
ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
By ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Copyright confusion is like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his textbook on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, AUGUST 20, 1910.

THE MILLIONAIRES' THEATRE.

The richly endowed New Theatre, in Central Park West, New York, commonly called The Millionaires' Theatre, which was opened on Nov. 6 last year, has now been working for a sufficiently long time for an estimate to be formed of its efficiency. In sumptuousness and splendour the playhouse left little to be desired. In the conformation of the building the architects followed the style of the Wagner Theatre at Bayreuth, making it narrow and broad like an outstretched fan. The auditorium, with its red draperies and massive marble columns, is brilliantly illuminated by the massed lights of a great central chandelier, and for the decoration of the foyer Mr. W. K. VANDERBILT, the president of the New Theatre, has contributed from the ceiling of his private ballroom three paintings by BAUDRY, whose work in the Paris Opera House foyer made him famous.

The house was opened on the date mentioned with great pomp and ceremony. When the orchestra had played "The Dedication of the House," by BEETHOVEN, the curtains were drawn aside, disclosing the guests of honour seated on the stage, conspicuous among whom were Governor HUGHES and Mr. J. PIERPONT MORGAN. In the group around them were Chancellors, Ambassadors, professors, authors, and eminent dramatic critics. The builder of the theatre began the ceremonies by presenting the silver keys of the house to the architect. The latter, in turn, handed them to Mr. J. PIERPONT MORGAN, who represented the founders. Mr. MORGAN made a suitable acknowledgment, and in declaring the New Theatre open, said, "I dedicate it to the services of the drama and the citizens of New York." Then followed the singing of the following choral ode, written by PERCY MACKAYE:—

Awake, awake, awake,
Spirits of Aspiration!
And hasten to renew
Your ministering vows;
For lo! the Prince of Faëry
Returns within your walls,
Back from his ancient bright dominions.
Awake, awake, awake,
For he is crowned again.

The opening performance was a dress rehearsal, amounting to a public performance, of SHAKESPEARE'S Antony and Cleopatra. Although the prospectus of the house shrewdly pointed out the evils of the star system, the theatre (says the author of an article in the Atlantic Monthly) opened with a star play, if ever there was one, and engaged for the two star parts Mr. SOTHERN and Miss MARLOWE, "for a limited period." Those in charge of the New Theatre were so habituated to the popular estimate of a name (and a novelty) that they called in two prominent stars and chose a play long disused, to give their theatre this dubious advantage, in defiance of the repertory-company idea. After Antony and Cleopatra the management put on The Cottage in the Air, an adaptation apparently of the novel from which Why Priscilla Ran Away was taken—surely a strange choice for an "advanced" theatre!

On Nov. 17 Mr. JOHN GALSWORTHY'S strong drama Strife was presented. It was, we are told, "superbly acted" by the New Theatre company. On Dec. 4 a piece called The Nigger was produced. The author was a Mr. EDWARD SHELDON, a youthful dramatist. In The Nigger he tried to set forth the tragedy of a high-spirited and high-minded Southerner—the governor of a State—who finds suddenly that his blood is tainted by ancestral miscegenation, and renounces all he has held most dear, to go down and labour among his black kind. Here, says the Atlantic, was a big, vital theme, an honest attempt at significant native drama.

The next of the dramatic productions was a revival of The School for Scandal, which took place on Dec. 16. Then, on Dec. 30, came a one-act play, called Liz, the Mother, which had but a single performance, and RUDOLPH BESIER'S Don, which was such a success at our Haymarket. On Jan. 26, 1910, Twelfth Night was revived. On Feb. 14 The Witch, a play adapted by HERMANN HAGEDORN from the Scandinavian of H. WIERS-JENSSEN, was given. It was described as gloomy, unreal, stilted, and theatrical, dull as well as false. On March 14 Act 4 of IBSEN'S Brand (condensed) was performed; and also MAETERLINCK'S Sister Beatrice, the title-part beautifully acted by Miss MATTHISON, and supplied with one of the most exquisite settings ever shown on a New York stage. On March 28 The Winter's Tale was revived, with scenery in the Elizabethan manner. We are told that the presence of Miss MATTHISON in the cast and the interest of the archaic setting and the complete and coherent text, combined to make the production well worth while.

The New Theatre, New York, then, has made in its first season of twenty-four weeks eleven dramatic productions with its own company, four of them classics. Thus one-third of the repertory was classic; of the remaining seven plays, only two were original works by American authors, and only one of them was a treatment of American characters and conditions.

The experiment of the Millionaires' Theatre can neither be said to have entirely succeeded or entirely failed. Certainly Strife, Sister Beatrice, and the fourth act of Brand would not have been presented to the American public without the aid of the New Theatre endowment; and probably the same may be said of The Nigger. In London, with enterprising and electic managers like Sir HERBERT TREE, Mr. HERBERT TRENCH, and Mr. CHARLES FROHMAN, we do not need an endowment to ensure the presentation of Beethoven—which was promised, but never performed at the New Theatre, New York—but it is different in America, where, we are authoritatively assured, it is difficult to secure production for a native play with no star part; and doubly difficult to secure production for a poetic play, or one with sectional appeal, or one that might conceivably offend this, that, or the other class. It is difficult, also, to secure production for a "literary drama" or an intellectual farce or a satire, and it is almost impossible to secure production for a tragedy. Native plays of all these descriptions the New Theatre should—and doubtless will—welcome.

The experiment of the Millionaires' Theatre was worth trying, because for a long time past it has been asked why in England some rich man or men did not come forward and endow a theatre to be devoted to uncommercial art. The thing has actually been done in America, and it cannot be denied that the caution of the English capitalists has been to a certain extent justified. Up to the present the returns on the expenditure of capital by the American millionaires may not appear to justify either its investment or the flourish of trumpets with which the house was opened; but these are early days, and we must give time for the tree to grow and for its fruit to ripen. As we have already pointed out, the great difficulty in running an art theatre, an intellectual theatre, or a national theatre is the supply of plays. Two thousand pieces were sent in to the reading committee of the Millionaires' Theatre, and out of these only one, The Nigger, could be accepted. But a National Theatre cannot be established, any more than its building can be erected, in a day; and at any rate, thanks to the endowment, the American experiment can be continued. It is still possible that the "Prince of Faery" may inhabit the building, and the Spirits of Aspiration awake in the hearts of American playwrights.

EXTENSIVE alterations and improvements have been carried out at the Crook Theatre during a few months' closure. The auditorium has been entirely redecorated and private boxes introduced, greatly adding to the pleasing appearance of the building. An important addition has also been made to the theatre in the shape of an operating chamber, so that cinematograph pictures may be shown at any time.

THE Nottingham Watch Committee has distinguished itself of late in the censoring of theatre posters. Last week Mr. Walter Melville's drama, The Girl Who Lost Her Character, had the two last words obliterated. A little while ago The Girl Who Went Astray was billed as The Girl Who Went; and but recently a dagger in the Monte Cristo bills and a pistol in The Silver King posters had to be pasted out. The Committee also decline to allow posters to be sent out on which policemen are depicted.

THE chairman of the Nottingham Watch Committee, Sir J. T. M'Craith, interviewed on Saturday in regard to the censoring of theatre posters in that city, states that during the last three years not a single theatre poster had been brought to their notice. A few years ago many complaints were made of sensational and suggestive pictures and offensive titles which appeared, and the committee then gave a general instruction to the Chief Constable to exercise his discretion, so that nothing of which people could reasonably complain should appear on the hoardings. About that time a picture of a man throwing himself under a steam roller appeared, and simultaneously an affair of that kind occurred in the city. With regard to posters of policemen, Sir J. T. M'Craith declared that the question of refusing to allow them had never been mentioned, and he saw no reason for any such prohibition.

THE chief constable, Mr. Philip S. Clay, who has just returned from a holiday, said the general policy which has been adopted is to censor highly sensational posters representing the taking of human life—shooting with revolvers, tying down to railway tracks, throwing under steam tracks, stabbing, &c., which it is considered act as incitement. He agreed that the substitution of dashes for obliterated words makes matters worse. Mr. Clay added that the only posters of policemen which they object to are those holding the police up to ridicule.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, Aug. 11.—M. Tristan Bernard, one of our wittiest playwrights, is the author of many highly amusing plays, among which L'Anglais tel qu'on le parle, the shriekingly funny story of a Frenchman who acts as interpreter for an English gentleman and does not know a word of English. A few weeks ago a Spanish review outlined the biography of some of the leading French men of letters, and, somewhat to his surprise M. Tristan Bernard saw himself described therein as a "professor of languages." As it happens, "languages" are not M. Bernard's strong point, and, almost needless to say, this mistake on the part of our Spanish confrère aroused much laughter in Paris. As to M. Bernard, he is all the more convinced that the thing was intended as a practical joke as he himself is the greatest practical joker in the whole of France.

MME. LINA CAVALIERI, the charming prima donna, whose marriage was announced in these columns some time ago, has fallen seriously ill from a severe attack of appendicitis. The operation, however, having been very successfully performed, Mme. Cavalieri will soon be able to start for her villa near Trouville.

TOWARDS the 17th of this month the Vaudeville will give a revival of Les Deux Ecoles, originally brought out at the Variétés. As will be remembered, the second act of M. Capus' amusing comedy plays in a restaurant. This time much care has been bestowed on this tableau, which will be an exact reproduction of one of our fashionable restaurants. M. Lucien Prad will interpret the rôle created by M. Albert Brasseur, and that of M. Joulin will be held by M. Laurent.

IT is supposed to be a great honour to belong to the Comédie-Française, and the young members of the "profession" try all they can to be allowed to enter the "House." Once within the sacred walls (and whilst they are still "pensionnaires") they strictly attend to their duties, but things change the moment they have been raised to the rank of "Sociétaire." Their position then is perfectly safe, and they begin to take things easy—so easy, in fact, that they neglect the interests of the house. Thus, the other day M. Mounet-Sully convened nine Sociétaires to an important committee meeting. These nine Sociétaires were: MM. Silvain, de Féraudy, Albert Lambert fils, Paul Mounet, Berr, Truffier, Leitner, Dufios, and Dehelly. Do you know how many replied to the call? Exactly two: MM. Paul Mounet and Dufios. The others were either resting on their laurels or "starring" in the provinces. Yet the before-mentioned artists form, with M. Le Bargy (likewise absent), the élite of the company, and, as I said before, there were several important questions to be settled. And as, according to the rules, a quorum consists of at least four members, the meeting had to be postponed.

M. CHABRIER'S Gwendoline has now been added to the répertoire of our Opéra, and the work will be produced there in March.

PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Upon arriving at the Queen's Hall last Saturday at eight o'clock people were streaming out of the vestibule looking very disappointed at receiving the announcement that not even standing room could be found within the hall. There was a closely-packed audience in the arena, which from above presented a wonderful spectacle. There was not a vacant seat to be found in the upper part of the hall.

The hearty welcome Mr. H. J. Wood received when he came on to the platform can only testify to the earnestness and enthusiasm of the music-loving public. It is with wonder we see the popularity of these Promenade Concerts grow more and more every year, and it is a work which reflects great credit on the management, and calls forth the greatest praise upon Mr. H. J. Wood, the conductor, for the beauty of his tone is bewitching, the purity of his intonation is excellent, and the orchestral discipline truly remarkable; in fact, in the fullest sense of the word, his work is excellent.

After the performance of the National Anthem, the concert began with Elgar's "Cockaigne" overture, which was interpreted with the utmost verve, and showed that the orchestra was in excellent form. A most graceful rendering was given of Mendelssohn's scherzo from "A Midsummer Night's Dream." It would be impossible to imagine a nearer approach to a perfect blend of tone between the wood, wind, and strings, than obtained on this occasion. The other performances included "Ballet Music," Moszkowski; Suite for Flute and Orchestra, B. Godard, with Mr. Albert Fransella as soloist; overture, "William Tell," Rossini; symphonic poem, "Danze Macabre," Saint-Saëns; "Danze Piemontese," Leone Sinigaglia; overture, "1812," Tschaikowsky; "Fantasia on Scottish Melodies," Henry J. Wood, the sword dance being played by Pipe-Major H. MacLennan; and "Marche Hongroise" (Faust), Berlioz.

Owing to Miss Edith Evans suffering from a sudden indisposition, her place was taken by Miss Esta d'Argo, who sang the scena "Ernani Involami," by Verdi, and in the second part Sullivan's "Where the bee sucks," from his music to The Tempest.

Mr. Robert Burnett, who chose an unusual song in Moussorgsky's "A Song of the Flea," a setting from Goethe's Faust, sang with a delightful humour, and a second rendering was demanded by the audience. The song was orchestrated by Mr. H. J. Wood.

The programme for this, the sixteenth season of the Promenade Concerts, are very interesting, and include many novelties. Out of sixteen new works to be performed, no less than twelve are by native composers. This will give little opportunity to blame Mr. Wood for the scanty attention he has given to English music. The concerts are nightly at eight o'clock, and continue until Oct. 22, 1910.

On Monday the programme, mainly devoted to selections from Wagner's great music dramas, attracted a large audience to Queen's Hall. The Prelude to Lohengrin was played with refinement, and Mr. Wood's orchestra gave a capital performance of the Introduction to Act III., Dance of Apprentices, Procession of Masters, and Homage to Sachs, from Die Meistersinger. Siegfried's Journey (Götterdämmerung) and the Prelude to Act III. (Tristan) were also excellent interpretations; but the Song of the Rhine-Daughters, from Götterdämmerung, owing to the absence of voices, was not entirely satisfactory. An impressive account of Entrance of the Gods (Rheingold) was given by the orchestra; and the programme included Goldmark's Overture "In Italien" and "Krakowiak (Moszkowski). Miss Edith Evans sang the music of Brunhilde, in the last scene of Götterdämmerung, with ability, but hardly sufficient vocal power. In "Rienzi's Prayer" Mr. Morgan Kingston greatly distinguished himself; and mention should be made of Mr. McDonagh's fine cornet solo in the Prelude from Tristan.

SIGNOR LEONCAVALLO is at work at present in his Swiss summer home—a beautiful villa at Brissago, on the upper end of Lake Maggiore—"creating" the music for his new opera, which he has already christened La Foscarina. The libretto is being written by a Swiss, M. Angelo Nessi, of Locarno, and an Italian, Signor G. Macchi, of Milan. Leoncavallo hopes that the opera will be ready by early spring, to be played at Genoa by the Coramba Scognamiglio troupe, and afterwards in London.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"POLNISCHE WIRTSCHAFT."
Musical Farce, in Three Acts, by MM. Kraatz and Okonkowsky.
Produced at the Thalia Theatre, August 9.

Mangelsdorff	HERR SONDERMANN

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, AUG. 11.—This is one of the wild burlesque farces to which we are accustomed at the Thalia, and it may at once be stated that it was a success in every way. The audience greeted old favourites, such as the capital comedians Herren Sondermann and Junkermann, the ever-popular Frau Junker-Schatz, and the very charming Helene Ballot with the greatest enthusiasm, and altogether the new season has opened under the best auspices. To describe the plot is an impossible task: as a matter of fact, there is no plot at all. The scenes are loose and scarcely connected; to excite the risible faculties seems to be the authors' sole aim, and it must be admitted they have succeeded. The "milieu" is Polish—a thing in itself to afford amusement. A gentleman farmer named Hegewaldt has had the misfortune—as he considers it—to marry a Polish girl. Marga—that is the girl-wife's name—is certainly a handful; she is pretty, of course, and full of whims and fancies; she insists on keeping her husband in a state of adoration, and orders him to drink champagne out of her shoe. All these vagaries convince him that his wife is too "Polish," and he attempts to get a separation. Just before the legal proceedings are ended—Hegewaldt has even a second bride in prospect—he begins to yearn for his own little Polish wife, and after some difficulty he regains possession of her. That he is willing to drink from her slipper or perform any other abject service is a matter of course. The fun—as I have said—is in loosely-connected scenes, and not the least funny is the advent of Count Kasimir Schofinsky, with four nieces, whose names all terminate in the customary Polish "uschka." The broken German and the amusing couplets, to say nothing of the capital dances, made up a good entertainment for an average summer audience. The acting was extremely good, and costumes and scenery are adequately effective. Herr Gilbert has supplied the music, which is bright and melodious.

AT the Luisen Theatre a new play was produced on the same evening. It is entitled Auf der Goldwage, and has been adapted by Ernst Ritterfeld from a novel of the same name that recently ran in a well-known daily paper here, the authoress being Marie Stahl. It met with a cordial reception.

THE Lessing company has returned from its successful provincial tour, and opened the new season with Bahr's comedy Das Konzert, the piece which ran so well during last season. Hauptmann's Versunkene Glocke and Ibsen's Gespenster are also in this week's bill. Until the end of the month so-called "summer prices" prevail. Dr. Geyer's company—who occupied the stage during Dr. Brahms' absence—have removed to the Neues, taking their popular military play Kasernenluft with them.

ANOTHER admirable performance of Lohengrin was given at the Gura Opera last night, with Frau Gura-Hummel in the rôle of Elsa, one which suits her better than almost any other. An artist new to Berlin sang the name-part, and achieved a great and well-merited triumph. It was Dr. von Barth, from the Dresden Royal Opera, and he fully justified his reputation of being one of the best living exponents of Wagner. His voice is quite beautiful, ringing, yet delicately musical, and his dramatic and convincing impersonation of the Knight of the Swan was well-nigh faultless. It would be an acquisition for our own Royal Opera if the Dresden artist could be prevailed upon to exchange with a Berlin tenor or two.

A NEW three-act comedy by MM. Leo Stein and Heller is to be produced at the Royal Playhouse at Munich next week. The title is Der heilige Aloysius, and the piece is said to be extremely amusing.

PAVILION THEATRE, E.

On Monday, Aug. 15, the Play, entitled
"SEXTON BLAKE."

The detective drama Sexton Blake is drawing large audiences. Mr. Murray Yorke represents Sexton Blake with great ability; Mr. Edward McLean as Roger Blackburn is cheered by all parts of the house; Miss Elizabeth Watkins as the heroine is a great success; Mr. Millar Wilson is really funny, especially in his scenes with Euphemia Pattacake, cleverly delineated by Miss Dinah Wright; Mr. Paul Barry Lewers as Randolph Lovell makes a typical villain; Miss Lydia Mannington as Philadelphia Kate greatly amuses the audience with her eccentricities. The remaining parts are played by able artists.

THE Chief of Police of Berlin has issued an edict that will probably shake that excellent body the "Freie Volksbühne" (Independent Theatre) to its foundations. Herr von Jagow has decided that the Association has assumed such dimensions that existing conditions can no longer prevail in the interest of the public safety. The "Freie Volksbühne," having hitherto registered as a "Verein" (association), was subject to no red-tapeism in the matter of censorship and other disadvantages. Another similar "Verein," that of the "New Freie Volksbühne," is equally threatened, and both are making an appeal to a higher tribunal, which—in the interest of the masses—it is hoped will be successful.

ON his return to Cambo, in the Pyrenees, M. Edmond Rostand has been paid a fresh compliment by the little Basque town, of which he is the chief ornament. The municipality has decreed that one of its thoroughfares will henceforth be known as Rue Chantecler. Cambo already has a Cyrano-avenue. Such an example could well be followed in London, where the names of plays would serve as a fruitful source of street nomenclature. Smith-streets we have in abundance, but Hamlet-road, Society-square, Our Boys-avenue, Penelope-parade, and such celebrated specimens of dramatic penmanship are manifestly available to adorn the thoroughfares of the metropolis.

A RATHER funny incident occurred at the Palace Theatre, Bordesley, this week. Mr. Frank Bertram, who is playing Jack Hawkins in his company of The Sailor's Wedding, has to explain the quandary he is in, and how he has to marry a girl named Polly because he has a figure of a girl and a name tattooed on his chest. On coming out after the matinée on Wednesday, he was accosted by a seafaring man, who said: "Say, mate, excuse me speaking to you, but I was in this afternoon, and felt jolly sorry for you having to marry that girl. If you want the tattoo removed, there's a man lives in the High-street here, just below the theatre—you can't miss it—it's a barber's shop. He'll take it out for you for a shilling a square inch." Mr. Bertram thanked the sailor for his kindness, and said he would "think it over."

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP

Terry's Theatre.

MR. CHRIS PORTER will be the master carpenter, Mr. R. J. Carter the electrician, and Mr. Frank West the property master at Terry's Theatre for the season beginning on Tuesday next.

Australian Society of Stage Employees.

MR. JAMES CONWAY, a member of His Majesty's Theatre staff, Sydney, Australia, has come to London to see an eye specialist and for a holiday, part of which he has already spent in Paris. On Wednesday evening he met the committee of the General Staff Branch, National Association of Theatrical Employees, and, as a member of the Sydney Stage Employees' Association, desired to exchange views for the mutual benefit of both organisations.

MR. CONWAY furnished documents relating to the Australian Society of Stage Employees, from which the following particulars are given: The Sydney Branch of the Australian organisation has a large club-room for the convenience of its members, with billiard tables, &c. It has its law agent, and is affiliated with the Sydney Labour Council. All members of the stage staff of the Sydney theatres and music halls are members of the society. The society has a schedule of minimum rates of pay for its members.

THE union undertakes that all men supplied or recommended to managers shall be properly-qualified men; that mechanics shall be skilled carpenters able to make as well as work scenery; that property-men shall be qualified to make properties; and the electricians able to carry out the Fire Underwriters' Association rules in respect of wiring and management of electric current generally. One curious paragraph in the rules is as follows:—"No member of this Association shall accept employment from any management, knowing same management to be producing plays without the authority of the managers who are paying royalty or royalties on such plays." One would think this was more a matter for the actors and the authors.

ONE advantage which the stage employees of Australia enjoy over those of their craft employed in other countries is that they can appeal to the Wages Board established by law to fix or revise any of the rates of pay, and when wages are so fixed can enforce them by process of law. An agreement between the society and the managers endorsed by the Wages Board is so enforcable, and remains in operation until revised or set aside by authority of the Wages Board.

Stop all Sunday Entertainments if Necessary.

A MEETING of the Sunday Defence Committee was held on Thursday, when matters arising out of the meeting held in Terry's Theatre and in connection with the forthcoming Trade Union Congress were considered. Members present: Messrs. W. H. Clemart (presiding), J. B. Williams, C. Jesson, L.C.C., and William Johnson (secretary). With reference to the statements of Mr. Broughton, then president of the Cinematograph Defence League, at Terry's Theatre meeting, Mr. J. B. Williams informed the committee that the Musicians' Union, while having taken measures to protect the interests of its members, and being forced to enter into competition to do so, were prepared to support action to stop all Sunday entertainments rather than face the general opening on Sunday of places of amusement. Allusion was also made to the many misrepresentations regarding the Sunday Defence Committee which have been published in the cinematograph trade Press. In one journal it was stated that the Sunday Defence Committee had been formed by the theatre and music hall proprietors and managers, and that the meeting at Terry's Theatre was comprised of theatrical managers. These statements are, of course, devoid of any foundation. The Sunday Defence Committee was founded, and is conducted, by artists, musicians, and employees, and is solely responsible for its action, and is entirely dependent for its income, upon the Variety Artists' Federation, the Amalgamated Musicians' Union, and the National Association of Theatrical Employees.

Not Out of Any Ill-Will.

THE cinematograph trade Press evidently cannot understand that the Sunday Defence Committee regards the Sunday question from a general point of view affecting the entertainment business as a whole. The picture theatres are in this field competitors of the music hall and the theatres devoted to dramatic performances, and, as stated so pointedly by Mr. Mulholland, it is unfair that one section of entertainers should have facilities denied to the other two sections. The Sunday Defence Committe must, therefore, resist the Sunday opening, or be prepared to have a general opening of all theatres and music halls. It is not out of any illwill towards the picture theatres, as the committee has repeatedly stated, but with a desire to avert the general opening of all places of amusement on Sunday. In the provinces Sunday opening is not permitted, with few exceptions, and it is probable that the Cinematograph Defence League wish their provincial supporters to believe that once the fight is won in London success is assured for the provincial picture theatres. The Sunday Defence Committee have not by any means taken all the steps open to them to resist those who are opening on Sundays, and if a settlement is not arrived at before the winter sets in drastic measures will be adopted.

COMPLAINT is made at Stratford-on-Avon of the irreverent behaviour of a certain class of American visitors who attend the services in the parish church with the object of visiting Shakespeare's tomb in the chancel and not for the purpose of Divine worship. This practice is becoming so general that on Sunday, immediately after the service, a card is placed across the west end of the choir, "Shakespeare's tomb is not shown on Sundays." Further complaint against a section of Americans is that they have been seen to go through their purchases of pictorial postcards and actually to address them during the time of service.

A TRIBUTE to the memory of Richard Wagner is being prepared at Leipzig. An imposing memorial of polished granite, designed and executed by a Berlin sculptor, is now being erected over the graves of two of his ancestors. One is that in the cemetery of St. John of Johanna Rosina Geyer, the widow of Richard Wagner's father, the State actuary, Wilhelm Wagner, who died in 1813, the year of the great composer's birth. She was born on Sept. 19, 1778, at Weissenfels, and after the death of her first husband, Wilhelm Wagner, she married the well-known actor and painter, Ludwig Geyer. This union lasted for thirty-five years, until her death, which took place at Leipzig on Jan. 9, 1848. The other grave holds the remains of Richard Wagner's eldest sister, Johanna Rosalie, who married the well-known savant, Dr. Marbach, but died within a year of her wedding, at the age of thirty-four.

A WELL-KNOWN manager found a new member of his company a very bad study. He had great difficulty in memorising the lines. The manager therefore procured a phonograph, and made a record of the part causing the trouble. He then invited his "fluffy" comrade to his house, when the phonograph was kept busy with the new record for a couple of hours. At the end of that time, without any effort, the part was rehearsed "dead letter perfect."

VARIETY GOSSIP.

We regret to hear that Miss Cecilia Loftus, who underwent an operation at the conclusion of her engagement at the Coliseum, will be unable to play the heroine in The Man from the Sea, by W. J. Locke, to be produced at the Queen's Theatre shortly.

The new Finsbury Park Empire, the latest suburban enterprise of the Moss and Stoll amalgamation, is to open on Monday, Sept. 5. An army of workmen are busy on the interior of the fine house, which will be luxuriously fitted and furnished.

The site is an admirable one, and is of such extent that Messrs. Frank Matcham and Co. have been enabled to provide private roads at the side and rear, thus completely isolating the building, situated at the corners of St. Thomas-road and Prah-road.

Miss Adele Levey on Monday appeared at Hampshire House, Hammersmith, where her stories and monologues were much appreciated. On Wednesday the clever artist was at the Irish Club, where she had a very hearty welcome.

Mr. Arthur Williams, supported by Mr. Robert Whyte, jun., and Miss E. Nolan O'Connor, will appear in The Prize Winner, a new sketch by Herbert C. Sargent, part author with W. W. Jacobs of The Changeling and The Boatswain's Mate, to be produced at the Coliseum on Monday. The production will be under the direction of Mr. Whyte, who was so successful in Feed the Brute! at the Tivoli.

By special permission of His Imperial Majesty the Czar of Russia, W. W. Andreef's Balalaika Court Orchestra, which is maintained and controlled by the Crown, will reappear at the Coliseum next Monday. The permission to re-visit the Coliseum was given by the Czar last December after the two Royal commands to Windsor Castle and Sandringham, the latter command being at the express request of Queen Alexandra.

It is good to hear that Mr. Russell Wallett has regained his health, after a serious illness. He will be at the Hackney Empire on Monday next. "The lady in black" is well known and popular in the north and north-east of London, and his work in the pantomime at the Marlborough a year or two back is not forgotten by his staunch suburban admirers, who will be giving him an earnest of their sympathy and appreciation by a cordial welcome on his reappearance.

Datas, the memory man, had an exciting experience at Murrarundi, in New South Wales, where he was performing with Wirth's Circus. While Marco, the lion tamer, was giving his show, some of the animals escaped into the arena and thence into the main streets. Datas, on stepping out of his carriage, was confronted by one of the four-footed wanderers. We have no record of the conduct of the human almanack, but we take it that he did not stop to put the usual question—"Am I right, sir?"

Mr. W. L. Courtney's dramatic sketch, A Woman's Revolt, which when seen at a Maud Allan matinée at the Palace Theatre on July 7 last year, proved to be a failure, will be reproduced at the same house on Monday, Aug. 29, with Miss Ada Webster again playing the part of Gabrielle. The Colonel Routledge will be Mr. C. Croker-King; and the Lancelot Wrayne Mr. Walter Pearce. The scene is laid in a flat in Victoria-street. We are given to understand that the sketch has been overhauled, and in parts rewritten.

"Biddy," the mascot of the Shepherd's Bush Empire, is a bulldog, and is well known throughout the music-hall profession. An Era representative was chatting to its owner (Mr. Eric Smith, the Shepherd's Bush stage-manager) the other evening, and, inquiring for the dog, learnt that it had been missing since last Sunday morning. The dog was a great favourite with the staff and with many variety artists, and, although the circumstances of its disappearance point to its having been stolen, it is to be hoped that it may quickly be restored to its owner.

The annual river excursion of the Water Rats on Sunday last was by train from Waterloo to Reading, and thence by launch, through miles of glorious riparian scenery, to Wallingford, which was reached at 3.30. Here games and sports were enjoyed. During the return journey Messrs. Dave O'Toole, Seth Egbert, Fred Maple, Will Oliver ("My father's face"), Eugene Stratton, Dusty Rhodes, and others entertained. Mr. W. H. McCarthy, the energetic organiser, may be congratulated on the excellent arrangements made.

To his numerous friends in England Neil Kenyon has said au revoir. As stated in another column, he departed yesterday for New Zealand, taking the sea trip on the advice of his doctor. He has had an offer to play his part of the Scotch pastor in The Islander in Australia, but the acceptance of the offer will depend entirely upon his health. Australia will be visited, and on the return journey Mr. Kenyon will make a short stay in the States, where he is booked to open on the Percy Williams circuit. Towards the end of February he is due at the London Pavilion, where he made his first appearance on the metropolitan variety boards.

"The wholesome corn in the music hall is plain enough to-day to unprejudiced persons," says Mr. P. P. Howe in the Socialist Review. "Any amount of artistic ability is being exerted there, and—a thing that can't be said of all the arts—the positions do generally seem to be held according to the ability. When one comes to think it over, fewer prominent and affluent incapables occur to one's mind in the music hall than in any other of the professions. It must be the test of the possession of a power to hold audiences, a very useful test, which in the music hall brings the right people to the top."

We have had Japanese tragedy before in London, both at the theatres and halls; and the clever little people from the land of the chrysanthemum offer a curious and interesting study in temperament. Especially is this the case in the mimodrame entitled Vengeance, one of the new features in the Coliseum bill, which is presented by Udagawa and Kawamoura, both of them players of renown in their own country. Udagawa impersonates no fewer than three characters—the Father, the Assassin, and the Servant, his comrade Kawamoura representing the son, who revenges the murder of his father.

The two are on a journey, and the old man, while seeking shelter from the heat beneath the umbrageous shade of a tree, incautiously places a bag of gold by his side. The villain steals upon the stage, and ferociously does the old man to death. The son, too, is seemingly throttled, but, feigning death, disguises himself as a girl, and despatches the family servitor with a message to the Assassin that a fascinating lady awaits his presence. The murderer is lured to the "lady's" side, and a combat of remarkable ferocity ensues. It is quite in the spirit of a Grand Guignol thrill, with an extra shudder, perhaps, at the ruthless way both actors handle swords and daggers.

Mr. Albert Chevalier, assisted by Miss Tresilian Davy, paid a flying visit to Margate on Tuesday, and gave an afternoon recital at the Hippodrome. There was a large and appreciative audience.

The proprietor of the Alexandra Palace, Morley, Mr. Tom Diacoff, has taken up his residence in the town, and has already gained a large circle of friends. His autumn and winter bookings include some of the best "turns" in vaudeville, and with the assistance of his popular manager (Mr. Arthur Izon), good fare will be provided.

"A Woman's Way," which has met with gratifying success since its production at the Hippodrome, Manchester, on July 20, 1908, by Mr. George C. Doughty and Miss Molly Laney, has been booked by Mr. Alfred Butt to make its first West-end appearance at the Palace Theatre the week of Sept. 12 next.

Mr. Sam Lloyd, late manager of the Coliseum, Glasgow, has been presented by the employees of that house on his leaving with a magnificent solid leather attaché case and wallet. The gift to Mme. Lloyd was a lady's beautiful bag and purse. Mr. Lloyd is taking up the position of managing-director at the proposed Olympia Theatre, Glasgow.

The many friends of Mr. Mark Lorne, who recently took over the reins of management at the Bordesley Palace Theatre, Birmingham, will be pleased to hear that he has been the recipient of numerous letters of congratulation on his appointment. Amongst them was a message from the Duchess of Portland, of Welbeck Abbey, wishing him "every success, hearty congratulations, and good luck."

It was, indeed, a happy and jovial band of ladies and gentlemen connected with the theatrical world of Birmingham which, with Mr. Edward Foster, the ever-popular manager of the Grand Theatre, at its head, took train on Sunday last for Evesham, on the occasion of the third annual staff outing of that variety house. There were Mr. Lester Collingwood from the Alexandra, Mr. Bushell from the Gaiety, Mr. J. Whitaker, the conductor of the Grand orchestra, Mr. A. W. Matcham, and other managers of Birmingham houses.

The weather was all that could be desired, and under the warm smiles of Old Sol (we have not seen him smiling any too much this summer), sports, games of cricket, excursions up the river, and rambles among the glorious scenery which abounds in the district of Evesham were keenly enjoyed. A first-class lunch was provided at the Crown Hotel, at which Mr. Edward Foster occupied the chair.

Mr. Marooney, late stage manager at the Keighley Hippodrome, was the recipient of several handsome presents last Saturday evening. Mr. Barrasford made the presentation, and delivered an appropriate speech, expressing regret at losing the services of Mr. Marooney, who has accepted a position as stage manager at Rochdale Hippodrome. A gentleman's dressing-case and gold-mounted umbrella were given by the staff, Major Cass presented a silver-mounted pipe, and Captain Pawson a silver-mounted tobacco pouch.

Dr. Walford Bodie is breaking fresh records all along the line. At Seacombe and Bishop Auckland he has been playing to holding capacity. His new and up-to-date act is creating quite a furore wherever he appears. Recent events and the success of his publications have brought his name to the front, and he is now one of the best-known men in the country. Many flock to the theatres and halls to see this man of many parts. Over 50,000 copies of the "Bodie Book" have already been sold, and over 40,000 copies of "Stage Stories" have also been sold.

"A most enjoyable day," was the opinion of everyone who took part in the annual outing of the staff of the Bordesley Palace Theatre, Birmingham. The objective was Bewdley, and leaving Birmingham early on Sunday morning, it was reached in good time. In the unavoidable absence of the manager, Mr. Mark Lorne, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward, who a few weeks ago relinquished the reins of office, was regarded as leader. He was ably supported by Mr. W. J. Reynolds, of the Gaiety Theatre, who carried out the arrangements, and other friends.

A good percentage of the theatre staff are enthusiastic fishermen, and they were able to indulge in a long day's sport. None of them, however, experienced good luck, and a good many retired "water-whacked." A drive to Stourport was much enjoyed during the morning, and helped to create a good appetite for dinner, which was taken at the George Hotel.

At the Harbour Inn, Arley, the party were greeted by Mr. Lester Collingwood, the genial proprietor of the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, who had motored over from Evesham. Tea was partaken of, and in the course of a little speech Mr. Collingwood paid a happy tribute to the useful services which Mr. Woodward has rendered at the Bordesley Palace and amongst theatrical circles in Birmingham. At his request three hearty cheers were given for Mr. Woodward. The return journey to Bewdley was a pleasant one, and the excursionists had ample time in which to catch the 7.30 p.m. train back to Birmingham.

Mr. Carl Hamlin, the popular conductor of the Surrey, has received (per John Henderson) the official badge, in silver, of the Queen's Own Rifles semi-centennial reunion as a memento of the historical pageant produced at the Exhibition Park, Toronto, Canada, in June last, under the auspices of Colonel Sir Henry M. Pellatt, Kt., A.D.C., Commandant Queen's Own Rifles of Canada. Mr. Hamlin arranged the vocal music which was played by the massed bands, and scored a decided success.

Miss Elsie Kerry, who has been appearing this week at the Empire, Dublin, was accorded a most enthusiastic reception in her native city, where she has scored an unprecedented success. All the more credit is due to Miss Kerry, as she was selected to follow the artist who topped the bill. Her welcome was so warm that she was compelled to sing no fewer than four songs and an encore verse nightly, and even then the audience was reluctant to allow this favourite comedienne to retire. Miss Kerry reopens at the Belfast Empire next week, and fulfils an engagement on the following week at the Palace, Cork.

The Seven Sisters Matthews, who were quite kiddies when they made a hit in the Pavilion, Mile End, pantomime and at the Paragon, in a musical and an acrobatic turn, were the daughters of Mr. Billy Matthews, a famous clown of palmy days of pantomime at the house named. Billy, who played clown there for fourteen consecutive seasons, has now completed his eightieth year, and the hale and hearty veteran has been the recipient of numerous congratulations—none more welcome than those from Lord George Sanger, who has presented Mr. Matthews with a horse as a souvenir of his early days with the King of Showmen's circus.

Mrs. Isa Lowe writes to inform us that she has heard from her son, who on reading the paragraph concerning him in our "Variety Gossip" columns last week immediately set his mother's anxiety at rest.

Cleo de Merode, the famous Parisian actress and beauty, has been engaged by Mr. Stoll to appear at the London Hippodrome on Monday, the 29th inst. She will give excerpts from her large répertoire.

Miss Zena Dare will appear at the Hippodrome on Monday in a sketch, by Mr. Seymour Hicks, entitled The Model and the Man. Miss Dare will be supported by Frank Wilson and Ivy St. Hillier. The music is by Frank Tours and the lyrics by C. H. Bovill.

The famous Craggs commenced an engagement at the South London Palace last Monday night. It is over thirty-one years since their last engagement at the same hall. It was on June 2, 1879, that they commenced a nine weeks' engagement. On Monday they opened for six nights only.

Mr. Charles Collette, after a short and most successful tour, reopens in London on Monday at the Royal Standard, supported by Miss Joan Derry, the clever boy impersonator, in H. C. Sargent's farce-duologue Pyjamas.

Miss Melinda May, secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, will start on a fortnight's holiday to-day (Saturday). Miss May feels the need of complete rest, after the anxiety and worry caused by Miss Belle Elmore's death. Miss Elmore took up all Miss May's duties during her absence last year.

Mr. Geo. R. Sims has written a powerful miniature drama, entitled Nanon Lafarge, for Miss Mildred Blanchard, in which she will appear at the principal music halls, supported by a specially selected company of West-end artists. The production takes place on Monday at the Metropolitan, under the personal direction of the author.

A committee meeting of the Music Hall Home will be held at the Three Stags, Kennington-road, on Thursday next, Aug. 25, at 12 noon. The general meeting is fixed for Thursday, Sept. 1, at 2 p.m., at the same place. The secretary, Ben Woodger, would be pleased to receive any men's old clothes for the use of the inmates of the home, if sent to 31, Wilson-road, Camberwell, S.E.

Miss Lily Langtry, now enjoying the best of health in Australia, rejoices in the fact that she has been over nineteen weeks at one hall, singing all her own songs.

Happy Fanny Fields is enjoying her rest in sunny Folkestone. She will resume work on the 29th at the Empire, Shepherd's Bush, and goes to the Court, Liverpool, at Christmas for The Forty Thieves, in which she will be associated with an old pantomime comrade, Malcolm Scott.

Mr. Walter Norman, who has been managing the Merrythought Concert Party at the Corn Exchange, Ross, was recently presented by Mr. Stanley Hughes and Miss Iris Damon with a gold scarf pin and enlarged signed photograph of the company for the way he had worked for the success of the company. Mr. Norman is in town again.

Mr. Charles S. Kitts (of Kitts and Windrum) writes from the Managers' Club:—"In reply to your correspondent of last week, and his claim to the title of our little comedy What a Night! now running so successfully at the Oxford and Euston theatres, I am rather surprised he has not called my attention to this fact before, as it has been favourably noticed and advertised in the London and provincial Press for some time. However, I shall feel favoured if your correspondent can prove that he was the original person to hold the right of the title on the date of his said production in 1905.

"The play's the thing," so Shakespeare said,
But the issue isn't vital.
Some people say, "the play to-day
Is nothing—it's the title."

On behalf of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., Miss Melinda May (secretary) gratefully thanks the following:—Mrs. Fox (The Foxes), donation, 2s. 6d.; Miss Rosie Coleman (Mrs. Conlin), collecting 5s.

The following is a copy of a letter received from Queen Alexandra:—

"Home Office, Whitehall, July 30, 1910.

"Madam,—I am directed by the Secretary of State to inform you that the message of condolence of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild on the death of his late Majesty King Edward the Seventh has been laid before Queen Alexandra, whose thanks I am to convey to you.

"I am, Madam, your obedient servant,
"Edward Troup.

"The Secretary, Music Hall Ladies' Guild,
"Albion House, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C."

There was a big company on Wednesday afternoon to watch Sam Mayo and Chas. Phydora, the well-known music hall entertainers, play 750 up for the billiard championship of the music hall profession, and a trophy presented by Mr. D. Shuter, proprietor of the Loughborough Hotel, Brixton, the scene of the match. Mayo won by 117 points, his best breaks being 27 (twice), 26, 32, 39, 46, 36, 28, 34, and 29. Phydora made 24, 34, 27, 32, 24, 35, and 28. The final scores were: Mayo, 750; Phydora, 633.

Barney Armstrong writes:—"The report in The Era mentioning me as successor to Sam Jones as manager of the City Varieties, Leeds, has brought me quite a number of letters congratulating me on the appointment. As I have no intention of going into management again, I shall be pleased if you will contradict this statement. I am appearing at the Oxford with great success, and am negotiating returns with the directors of the Syndicate for 1911-12. I am also on the point of fixing up a contract to visit Australia. Please convey to those who wrote me my sincere thanks. I am quite content to be on the boards."

A match was played on Sunday last, at Toley's Ground, Acton, between Cranbourn (Moss' Empires, Ltd.) and the Variety Agents. Cranbourn won the toss, and started to bat on an easy wicket, but were out for 67, Mr. Bert MacLachlan making top score of 14. Mr. Davies (of Wieland's) took seven wickets for 22 runs. The teams and visitors, numbering about fifty, adjourned to the Leamington Hotel, where an excellent lunch was awaiting them. The Agents then went in to bat, and, thanks to some very safe hitting by Mr. Winton (Wieland's), the score rose to 60 for nine. Mr. Baldwin (Will Collins) and Mr. W. Edelstein knocked off the eight runs necessary to win the match, amid great excitement.

The second innings was evidently not taken seriously by the Agents, as all the players were given a trial with the ball, and Moss' Empires were quick to avail themselves of the opportunity to have some practice. Stumps were drawn at 5.30, and the party, now numbering a hundred, had tea, and arrived back at Paddington after a most enjoyable day. Thanks must be extended to Mr. Ernest Aplin for his excellent arrangements. We understand that a return match is to be played in a fortnight's time.

Mr. Frank Macnaghten, head of the Macnaghten Circuit, which controls Sadler's Wells, was summoned at Clerkenwell Police Court on Thursday by Frederick George for having, from July 25 to July 28, unlawfully performed stage plays, The Devil's Elbow and Beware of the Dog. Each piece, it was stated, lasted about twenty minutes.

Mr. Blackwell, for the defence, said that this was the oldest theatre in London, but it had allowed its licence to lapse in July. It had since been renewed. Frederick George said that his only object in prosecuting was to obtain publicity and to ridicule the state of the law in this matter. He knew of the arrangements whereby sketches were allowed in music halls by theatre managers if they had no more than six speaking parts and took no longer than thirty minutes.

Mr. Bros, the magistrate, said that it was a bad plan to bring a prosecution to "ridicule an Act," but as long as the Act stood he had to administer it. He imposed a fine of 40s., with 2s. costs.

Mr. H. Naylor Grimson has secured a capital little sketch in Knocked Out, which will in future be known as The Knock Out. It was recently played with wonderful success at the Camberwell Empire. He is appearing in it at the Standard next week.

Miss Madge Temple's most successful engagements have been interrupted by a disagreeable touch of influenza, but the charming singer of "On the silvery sands," who has received many messages of inquiry and sympathy, is quite her bright self once more.

Mr. Ernest Shand has been delighting the Edinburgh by his various impersonations and his songs and patter, and "Standing Room Only" was the legend displayed outside the local Empire during his stay. He is now in Douglas, where the warm-hearted Manx folk are just as appreciative.

Miss Jessie Albini, who has been taking a holiday this week at Hastings, resumes business on Monday at the Hulme Hippodrome. This charming comedienne will shortly produce an original number, entitled "Mum, mum mum is the word," written by Kenneth Morrison and Maurice Scott.

Miss Vera Saunders scored an instantaneous success this week at the Palace, Clacton, being personally complimented by the management. This clever little artist has two new numbers in active rehearsal for her return to the Tivoli, and will shortly introduce a new work from the pen of the author of "Come over to Hanover."

The space formerly occupied by the Bostock Menagerie at the Brussels Exhibition presents a most lamentable spectacle, having been shockingly devastated by the flames. Of all the animals composing the menagerie the elephant alone was rescued, and a frightful smell of grilled flesh emanates from the wreckage.

Messrs. Henri Bekker, Harry Luck, Frank Peskett, W. B. Raby, and Alan Rand were initiated into the mysteries of the Terriers' Order on Sunday last. The ceremony was performed by Terrier Russell Brandow, W.T., assisted by Terrier Billy Kloof, V.T. Terrier Arthur Were officiated as organist. Four of these new Terriers were proposed by Terrier Billy Kloof. Messrs. George Ernest Aplin, Billy French, Griff Hodson, W. H. Kirby, A. Marconi, and Jack Straw have successfully passed the ballot as candidates for membership of the association.

Terrier Tom Packer has been presented with a handsome gold scarf pin by Terrier Arthur Were in recognition of the able manner in which he acted as secretary, pro tem.

A Terriers' Cricket Club has been formed, with Terrier W. R. Dunkley as captain, and Terrier Ted Karno, vice-captain. All Terriers desirous of joining the club are requested to communicate with the hon. secretary, Terrier Tom Packer. Terrier Dunkley has presented the club with a complete kit, consisting of bag, bats, gloves, pads, stumps, &c. Photographs of the river outing (2s. 6d. each) and the cricket match groups (1s. 6d. each) may be obtained from the secretary.

A hearty welcome was accorded the secretary, Arthur Were, and Terriers R. Abel, T. C. Callaghan, C. McGovan, J. Ross Elvio, W. Welsh, and S. W. Wyndham upon their reappearance in the Kennel on Sunday last.

Playgoers, as distinct from music-hall habitués, have been enjoying a rare innings this week at the Walthamstow Palace. For the first time since its opening, the handsome variety theatre, now under the management of Mr. Pierre Cohen, has had a week's dramatic season. The play chosen is The Bad Girl of the Family, played by Mr. Frederick Melville's company, headed by Miss Violet Crossley as Bess Moore.

Notwithstanding the necessary increase in the prices of admission, the Palace has been literally besieged every night, "standing room only" being the common order. For the more expensive seats the advance booking began immediately the announcement appeared, a fortnight beforehand, and continued with unabated zeal until every purchasable box and stall had been secured, while from the other parts of the house money has been turned away nightly as soon as the doors were opened.

When application was made at Croydon on Monday for permission for Nellie and Lillie Bennett, twin sisters, aged twelve and a half years, to appear for a week at the Croydon Empire Palace Theatre of Varieties as "Tiny and Mite, talented juvenile dancers," Chief-Inspector Mackay interposed by direction of the Commissioner of Police.

He said that the children had no parents living. When their mother died they were placed in the care of an aunt, Mrs. Payne, of Pudsey. They had since drifted into the care of a half-brother, a young lad (the present applicant), and the aunt objected to the lad making a living out of the children. Mr. Eustace H. Jay, manager of the Croydon Empire Palace, said that from what he could gather the children would have to go to the workhouse if they did not earn their living on the stage. The application was granted.

The members of the Gaiety, Chatham, staff had their outing on Sunday. Leaving the Gaiety in a motor char-a-banc at 8.40 in the morning they proceeded, by way of Sittingbourne and Faversham, to Canterbury, where they stayed for lunch. Their next call was at Birchington, and their destination Pegwell Bay, where they arrived at 12.45. Dinner was served at the Belle Vue Hotel, and at the close a trio of toasts were proposed. That of "The King" was submitted by Mr. G. Humphries, the genial manager, who presided. Mr. Harry H. Braham, the stage-manager, who occupied the vice-chair, proposed "The Health of Captain H. E. Davis. The merry party left Pegwell Bay at 3.30, and motored via Minster, where a short halt was made, to Herne Bay, where they had tea at Wiffen's Hotel. The return journey was commenced at 6.30, and with another rest at Canterbury, the party arrived back at Chatham at ten o'clock, after a most enjoyable day.

Mr. Wilfrid Harvey is conducting the Grand Pavilion orchestra, Weston-super-Mare, the popular Bristol Channel seaside resort, accompanying the high-class vaudeville entertainment, which is given from 6.45 to 9 o'clock every evening.

The Four Scorsys, with their novel musical mélange, made their fifth appearance in Northampton on Aug. 1, and introduced Palmyra, who is correctly described as "the elastic lady."

Mr. Ivan Berlyn finishes his engagement to-night with the music hall play Chantecler, in which he created the Fox. The clever young character actor makes a natural transition to The Pigeon House, the new play by Lord Yarmouth.

Mr. Charles Francis (Frank) Postlethwaite, variety agent, of London and Hastings, who died on Monday, Aug. 15, at the age of thirty-seven, was interested in the Empire, Camberwell, as a director. He was buried at Nunhead on Friday (yesterday).

The price of sheet music will from Sept. 5 be raised in Birmingham, and while it will be possible to buy a popular song or waltz for 1s. 6d., all oratorios, foreign editions, and most of the book publications will not be subject to discount.

Wolverhampton and Walsall music dealers have joined with Birmingham in advancing the prices, and it is expected that Coventry and Leicester will follow. The reason given is that the margin of profit is so small.

Mr. W. Fraser-Brunner writes:—"In your notice of sketch produced at Woolwich Hippodrome, Aug. 8, you say, A Soldier of Fortune, by Fraser-Brunner. This should read, A Soldier of Fortune, by Alec Forbes and William Fraser-Brunner, produced by William Fraser-Brunner. Trusting you can find room for this correction."

Controversy has arisen as to who was the first singer of that popular song, "The Zuyder Zee." It was Miss Millie Hylton who first sang the song on one of the Stoll tours. It was also Miss Hylton who created such a success with "Anglesey's Isle" at the Empire, Holloway.

A new song has been written for Miss Hylton by F. Thompson and Orlando Powell. It is entitled "For a Woman's Honour," and will be produced with full scenic effects at the Empire, Holloway, next week. Miss Hylton's striking success as "The Last of the Dandies" has prompted her to produce at one of the West End halls "A Dollar Princess," a song scena with a collection of dances which have been arranged by Mr. Fred Farren.

Report has it that Miss Fanny Dango, the youngest sister of Miss Millie Hylton, who has been under the Williamson management for three years, is engaged to be married to a very wealthy Australian squatter.

It is on the cards that Mr. Harry Rickards will secure Miss Hylton's services for Australia. It will be seen that the vivacious lady is again in the heyday of success, Coliseum audiences recognising the clever comedy of her two numbers, "Puff! puff! out went the moon," and "I couldn't help being a lady," a number which gives capital opportunities for arousing laughter.

On Sunday last the staff of the Empire, Nottingham, took their annual outing. The river trip last year to Newark was so much appreciated that the Trent was again chosen, but the party went up stream instead of down. Blessed with ideal weather, the crowd started before 9 a.m. from Wilford-road Bridge on board steam yachts. At Shardlow, which was reached at noon, an excellent dinner was served, after which a river trip back to Trent Lock and up the Soar towards Normanton was much enjoyed. At Trent Lock the party took tea, and Nottingham was reached shortly before ten. Mr. Albert C. Duncan (the manager) was accompanied by Mr. Howard Finney (of the Theatre Royal), Mr. H. Upton (assistant-manager), and Mr. Joe Winfield (advertisement manager), who was responsible for the perfect arrangements.

Mrs. Cissie Lawson is this week presenting at her comfortable hall of amusement, the Camberwell Empire, a distinct novelty in the shape of singing pictures painted on canvas and framed in the usual manner. It is so rare nowadays that we see anything fresh on the halls worthy of special attention that a new item of this description deserves particular mention. The pictures themselves are merely painted portraits of different music-hall artists with a small hole in the mouth, and the construction of the frame—in fact, the whole thing—is so simple that it would be impossible for any mechanism of any description to be concealed in any part of it. It is claimed that neither gramophones, ventriloquism, or telephones are used in the working. Indeed, it is what it appears, a complete mystery which completely baffles the closest observer.

The various pictures sing, talk, and play a bugle, not only on the stage, but also in the midst of the audience in various parts of the house, and anyone thoroughly examining and listening closely at the mouth can obtain clear proof that the claims of the promoters of this mystery are quite correct regarding ventriloquism or hidden machinery not being employed.

Our correspondent was given the opportunity of a close inspection and a private performance, and nothing whatever could be deducted from this beyond that its mystery is probably a clever invention, the existence of which is not yet generally known. This attraction would be an acquisition to the programme at St. George's Hall, and without a doubt it should cause a considerable stir in scientific circles and secure many important and successful bookings.

The annual outing of the staff of the Hippodrome, Sheffield, took place on Sunday last. The party, numbering upwards of sixty, and including the genial manager, Mr. Frank Poole, and Mrs. Poole, Mr. J. G. Hahn (musical-director) and Mrs. Hahn, and a few private friends, left Sheffield soon after eight in the morning by Midland train for Hope, where carriages were in waiting to convey the company, via Castleton, through charming Derbyshire scenery, to Buxton, where luncheon was served. The health of the directors (who, with some of the Hippodrome patrons, had, as usual, subscribed towards the cost of the outing) was proposed by Mr. Poole, and heartily responded to.

The occasion was also taken advantage of to present to Mr. Frank Poole a handsome pipe in case and a tobacco pouch as a mark of the high esteem in which that gentleman is held, not only by the staff, but by the patrons of the Hippodrome, and also as a souvenir of Mr. Poole's first year of management, which has been so successful. The presentation was made by Mr. Frank Gummer, and supported in felicitous terms by Mr. J. G. Hahn and Mr. E. K. Smith. Mr. Poole briefly responded. After several hours had been spent in looking round the famous health resort, the carriages were again requisitioned, and the journey continued to Tideswell, where an excellent tea was provided. The party then returned to Hope, where train was taken to Sheffield, which was reached about 9.30. Fine weather and admirable arrangements made the outing a thorough success.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

Tom Mellor and Harry Gifford are jointly responsible for many present-day successes, but probably the finest song they have written recently is Tom Costello's great chorus song "I don't mind leaving the dear Homeland." A furore on the music halls, pantomime managers should secure this song immediately. It is published by Francis, Day and Hunter, and is free for pantomime.

Glasgow has been in the next heaven to the sixth during the current week, for at the Palace Miss Florrie Forde is the bright particular star, and with "Flanagan" and other admired numbers from her extensive budget has, as was but to be expected, delighted huge audiences at Mr. Richard Waldon's house. No pantomime, it is estimated, will be complete at Christmastide without this, the song of the year, and Messrs. Francis and Day are having a great demand for the item in sheet-music form.

At the Palace, Douglas, Miss Vesta Tilley has with her new song "It isn't the Isle of Man any longer," by Worton David and C. W. Murphy, had her hearers in the hollow of her hand, and the song—which fits her, like her male apparel, to perfection—has been accepted for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day.

A veritable tornado of welcome greeted Mr. G. H. Elliott, the chocolate-coloured coon, when he faced the huge house at the Hackney Empire on Monday evening last, and but a few moments later and he had them joining in the refrain of "There's a little black Cupid in the moon," Lester Barrett and Hermann E. Darewski's tuneful song, which though entirely new to the denizens of North-East London, was seized on with the same avidity as were the identical two writers' "Sue, Sue, Sue (I'm very much in love with you)" and "I used to sigh for the silvery moon," Mr. Elliott's enormous prior hits. He concluded with Alf. J. Lawrance's melodious and haunting song "Mister Owl," which, like "There's a little black Cupid in the moon," is also published by Messrs. Francis and Day, and was only allowed to retire after four "curtains."

Mr. Johnny Danvers at Bristol has been causing the same hearty merriment as he did at Eastbourne with his new parody, from the pen of Charles Wilmott, entitled "Hip-I-addy-I-ay," which he renders with the unctuous humour for which he has so long been famed. Messrs Francis and Day are the publishers of the parody.

Mr. Tom E. Finglass, both at the Canterbury and the Granville Theatre, Walham Green, has nightly been the recipient of welcomes of which he must be proud, and his renderings of "My Baby" and "Across the moonlit prairie" leave nothing to be desired. It is a marvel on Monday night during his wild, exultant dance after the latter song that the cowboy coon did not hurl himself into the stalls at the latter house, the stage of the Granville being, as is well known, several sizes smaller than that of the Coliseum, where he had executed the same dance recently. Messrs. Francis and Day publish both his songs.

Herbert Rule, who is nothing if not tuneful, has, in conjunction with Thomas McGhee and Paul Pelham, fitted Miss Victoria Monks with a song entitled "Never turn your back upon a fellow," in which the composer of "Good morning, Mr. Postman" and "My dear little Yiddisher boy" is again at his best. The song has been secured for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day.

Leonard Cooke has again written one of those lyrics in the ballad line for which he is becoming more and more noted, and it has been set to music by Charles Collins, a composer who has given London during the past ten years or more many of its most popular airs. The new ballad is entitled "The best love of all," and it has been purchased by Messrs. Francis and Day.

Worton David and C. W. Murphy's newest song "Come down Regent-street" is a worthy example of the work of one of the best writers and one of the most renowned composers for the variety stage of the present day. It is in the press, having been accepted for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day. It will be featured by those well-known artists Miss Daisy James and Miss Winifred Ward.

Dainty Miss Ella Retford at the Stratford Empire has during the week been specially featured on the bills for her well-known song "Hi! Hi! Mr. McKie!" and the effect of a big audience singing the chorus of this song of Messrs. Francis and Day is great. The French of Stratford-atte-Bow was once derided, but the Scotch during Miss Retford's stay is bonny.

It is not improbable that many pantomime managers this coming season will especially arrange for a beach or seaside scene the better to give effect to the song that is bound to shine in the annuals at the foremost houses—to wit, "On the silvery sands," by Arthur Findon and H. E Darewski. From coast resorts everywhere come glowing accounts of the manner in which Miss Madge Temple's song has caught on with the myriads of amusement-seekers; and, better still in a way, the music-sellers' order sheets tell all the same unvarnished tale of demands for copies. At the London Alhambra it can be said to be almost a leading motif of On the Sands, and its inclusion in Mr. John Tiller's magnificent production, Lovely Lucerne, at the Winter Garden Pavilion, Blackpool, is a further striking testimony to a deserved success.

The committee of the Islington Lifeboat Saturday Fund have now closed the accounts of the recent matinée held in support of the funds at Collins's Music Hall. The balance-sheet, which has been duly audited by Messrs. J. W. Hancox and A. V. Young, shows that the total receipts of the matinée were £57 5s. 10d., and that printing, &c., cost £7 5s. 7d., leaving a balance to be handed to the fund of £50 0s. 3d. The committee take the opportunity of thanking the proprietors for granting the free use of their hall, the artists and stewards for their services, and the proprietors of the News of the World for gratuitously providing the programmes, handbills, &c. Mr. Frank Hallam, the energetic secretary of the Fund, hopes to be able to announce shortly that his committee have arranged a further function for the benefit of the Islington Branch during the coming winter.

Mr. Bertie Ralland, the manager of the Holloway Empire, has written to the Islington Daily Gazette a letter in reply to a correspondent who stated that he did not remember seeing published the amount realised at the Holloway Empire at the recent concert given there in aid of the Fund. Mr. Ralland severely comments on the conduct of the "chronic grumbler," who himself never helps the cause of charity. "No wonder," remarks Mr. Ralland, "we find so few good people to work on behalf of good causes, and fewer to subscribe to such, when inveterate grumblers trot out ridiculous complaints months after the thing is over." He informs the correspondent that a full balance sheet was published in one of the local papers, and the accounts were duly audited, and that he holds a receipt for the payment of the balance of £61 to the Mayor of Islington's Fund. Mr. Ralland's reproof to the inveterate grumbler is well timed, and should have a good effect.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE PALACE.

Pavlova and Mordkin have returned to the land of their birth, but Russia, if not represented by art dancers, asserts her claims musically in another speciality—the Balalaika Orchestra, under the direction of M. Victor Abaza—a delightful combination of players, who manipulate the instrument of the peasantry—a kind of mandoline—in a way that is quite enchanting. The rubato effects and the light and shade are eloquent of the perfect control of the conductor, who, in choosing characteristic Russian melodies for the chief pieces of his répertoire, imparts freshness and piquancy to the turn which is extremely popular.

A most agreeable novelty in the early portion of the programme is The Girl from Yonkers, presented by Devlin and Ellwood. The mere man of the trifle is as susceptible to feminine charm as the incorrigible Bob Sackett in Brighton, and readily falls in love with a fascinating cracks-woman, who, on the pretence that she has come to the wrong flat by mistake, annexes all portable articles of any value. "I pinch what I love," says the larcenous lady, as she nips her victim's cheek and departs with his suit-case holding the swag. Devlin and Ellwood play admirably together, and the actress is a capital comedienne.

Myrma, the diving Hebe, is another attraction from across the waters. This delightful maiad displays her various methods of entering the water, and each seems to be more difficult than the last. Mr. Nat M. Wills is the latest joker from the States, and cannot complain, as so many Americans have done, that Britishers do not understand American humour. The laughter is continuous while he is dilating on the wonderful proportions of a lady. Humorous exaggeration could scarcely be more effective. The tramp get-up is a little bit out of date, and Wills, who has quite a way with him, would be just as effective in evening dress. He sings some capital parodies, and in doing so displays a voice that might have been trained for grand opera, but, fortunately for him, wasn't.

America sends us, too, the Kaufmann Troupe of bicyclists, who are a graceful crowd of pretty wheelwomen dressed in white, whose evolutions are very interesting to watch. The crowd has been trained by Nick Kaufmann, one of our earliest trick riders; and the laddie who displays so much cleverness is a promising youngster. Paris sends us Henrietta de Serris, whose reproductions of pictures and bas-reliefs are perfect; and from the same artistic capital comes Regina Badet, a poetic interpreter of "The Secret of Myrto," a dream dance, made significant and impressive by the artistic gifts of a beautiful woman.

Professor Morian and his amazing troupe of canine actors present a dog drama that is as funny as it is ingenious; and in the early evening Miss Dorothy Gould, a charming comedienne, Miss Dolly Denton, and Mr. Mark Leslie entertain.

A particularly interesting feature of the Palace programme just now arises from a further development in coloured photography, by means of which the Kinemacolor exhibition reveals the bursting of flowers into blossom. No more charming display than this could be imagined. Mr. Charles Urban selected for his first demonstration of the kind roses, lilies, carnations, gladioli, pelargoniums, and iris, and in no instance did the camera take less than two whole days and nights to record the flowering of a single bud. But, by a scientific system of speed magnification, the development of forty-eight hours is disclosed in a couple of minutes. By thus simplifying the intricate processes of Nature some very novel and charming effects are produced.

THE EUSTON.

The chief novelty of the current programme, presented under the direction of Manager Fred McAvoy, is the sketch presented by Fred Karno's picked company of comedians, written by that gentleman in collaboration with Mr. Herbert Sidney, and entitled The Wow-Wows. The following is the cast:—

Hon. Archibald Binks .....Mr. Syd Chaplin
Jimmy Bottles .....Mr. Jimmy Russell
Arthur Blazer .....Mr. Albert Darnley
Freddy Brunton .....Mr. Jack Royal
Lady Margaret Binks ....Miss Georgina Royal
Lydia Scotch .....Miss Vi Morrella

There is an underlying funny idea in this sketch, but the superstructure of farce raised upon it does not argue much in favour of the ingenuity of the authors. At the Nook up the river, a number of the "boys" are camping out, and some of them, in rowing shorts, are evidently training for a local regatta. Breakfast is being prepared in the way beloved of farce writers from the earliest times; and Archibald Binks comes upon the scene with an inquiry as to the nature of the menu. "Ham and eggs" is the reply. The eggs are of the usual stage type, and one of them is pocketed by Archibald, who, apparently, smashes it while making a declaration of love on his knees to one of the lady visitors. She inquires of Archie whether he has enjoyed his bathe, and whether the water came up to his expectations. "No; it only reached my knees," is the reply. This is a fair specimen of the humour of the piece.

Archibald has shown a degree of meanness, both in regard to the necessary work of the campers as well as his payments, and the other boys are resolved to serve him out. Conversing together loudly of country-house parties, yachting at Cowes, and other society functions, all of which are to cost nothing, they rouse the curiosity of Archibald, who eagerly nibbles. He is informed that the social delights set forth can only be enjoyed by the fraternity of Wow-Wows, of which they are members. Archibald will, of course, join.

Before he is ushered into the mysterious chamber he is blindfolded and interviewed by one of the "Wow-Wows" dressed as a witch, and when before the council the action of applying a hot iron to his seat of honour is gone through before the crowning act of initiation—the kissing of a stale haddock—is reached. There is other refined (?) business, with the alleged witch putting on a pair of stays, which are drawn up over the legs. Mr. Sydney Chaplin, jun., who plays Archibald, shows a fund of quiet humour, which should serve him in good stead in productions written on more legitimate lines than The Wow-Wows.

Mr. Joe Elvin and his company present another farcical interlude in Mr. Wal Pink's latest concoction, W(h)ines and Spirits, which we noticed at the Oxford on its first production. We have seen the droll Elvin in parts that fit him far better than that of Potty Porter, who discovers the secret of Professor Swanky's "spiritual" impostures, and finishes up his communications with the "bogies" by denouncing the medium and his crowd. The only Joe is, of course, the head and front of the fun.

An uproarious reception is given to Kitts and Windrum, in their lively farcette What a Night! The gentleman plays the scion of nobility to whom is let the identical bedroom occupied by his future fiancée. He reads of an escaped lady lunatic who imagines herself to be the Queen of Sheba, and when, from behind a screen, he sees the other girl let down her hair and remove her dress, he makes the usual farcical mistake as to her identity; but after the excitement has been sufficiently worked up by a boarding-house keeper, with reminiscences of his mother, and a maid of all work, the usual explanations bring down the curtain. What a Night! is played by all concerned with plenty of spirit and a real sense of the exigencies of farcical fun.

To the variety programme Mr. Walter Munroe, a favourite Irish comedian, contributes a tuneful ballad "Mary Moore," which is heartily taken up by the "gods"; Miss Gwen Lindon sings "The angel of my dreams," a favourite selection of Miss Millie Lindon; Messrs. Walker and Lake raise shouts of laughter by "Bumps," a satire on phrenology; Les Frasettis present a refined musical turn, of which a xylophone duet forms a spirited finale; and other turns include Guy Ryder, Josie Mooney, Queenie Essex, and Harry Grey, the Australian comedy merchant, whose burlesque ballad singing is heartily applauded. Ruffell's Bioscope presents the latest pictures.

PECKHAM HIPPODROME.

Mr. Cecil Paget's programme at this popular South London house this week is well up to the usual standard of excellence. After a well-rendered overture by the band, under the able direction of Mr. Julian Goldsmid, Mr. Alick Lauder, brother to the famous comedian Harry Lauder, opens the entertainment with some amusing ditties redolent of the "land o' cakes." Mr. Arthur Dome proves himself a clever clay modeller, and he perpetrates facial representations in clay of such widely-divergent individuals as Shakespeare, Crippen, Harry Lauder, mother-in-law, and a mysterious personage called "Kelly." Mooney and Holbein are two smart performers evidently from across "the pond." The gentleman is a most agile dancer, while the lady sings with much spirit. Their turn is accorded a favourable reception.

Miss Ada Oxley and company appear in a comedy sketch, Peggy, which serves to illustrate Miss Oxley's humour and cleverness in impersonating an heiress and a Lancashire mill girl. A lady and gentleman whose names are not on the programme render Miss Oxley most efficient assistance, and the piece is well received. Miss Ida Barr is a shapely young lady whose item "I don't care if I don't get home all night" it well rendered. Baines and Reed are marvellously clever comedy acrobats, and one of the pair possesses a delightful sense of humour. They are excellently assisted by Miss Wiarda, an accomplished Russian dancer. The trio are deservedly accorded a hearty reception.

A notable item in the bill is Fred Karno's latest nautical production, Wontdetainia. The sketch is splendidly mounted, and the third scene, representing the grand saloon of an ocean liner, realistically moving in a storm, is wonderfully effective. Mr. Shaun Glenville scores well as the ingenious Irishman Patsy O'Flynn; Mr. Eric Campbell's long experience in the legitimate drama stands him in good stead as Captain Nelson; Mr. Harold Wellesley is amusing as Percy Dart; and Miss Elsie Skillings makes a stately adventuress as Maude De Vere. Mr. James Howitt does well as the swell cracksman, Desmond Marsh. The sketch is well up to the high level of all Mr. Karno's productions, and is received with rapturous applause.

Miss Nellie Coleman is very amusing in her two comedy male impersonations of an old Jew pedlar and a red-haired low comedian who sings of one "Selina." Mr. Mark Leslie is a chocolate-coloured coon who dances nimbly and sings melodiously "A little bit is better than nothing at all." Mr. Herbert La Martine also scores a decided success in song and dance. The bright bill concludes with an interesting series of films on Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope.

SHEPHERD'S BUSH EMPIRE.

Mr. Lewis Vincent has a remarkably fine programme at the popular hall on Shepherd's Bush Green this week, and, in spite of the excellent weather, good houses have been the rule. The bill is headed by Mr. Eugene Stratton, who contributes three songs—the first, "I'm good"; the second, his latest success, "I may be a millionaire"; and the third, an old favourite, "I may be crazy, but I love you." Mr. Stratton has for many years now been one of the most popular artists on the halls, and the delight which he is able to afford audiences seems to be as great as ever. His quaint and various methods of singing coon songs, his delicate and highly individual dancing, and the general grace and ease of his performances all show his work to be that of a genuine artist.

Bert Williams, the ventriloquist, and his "cheeky, chatty companion" Ted, provide much amusement; and Miss Bertha Winder does some wonderful dancing, as might be expected of the owner of the ladies' championship belt. The Brothers Egbert contribute their well-known and splendidly funny turn as the two dustmen, receiving rounds of applause; and Hans and Lux do well as two argumentative college chums.

The names of Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery at once bring to mind that most amusing sketch The Would-be Actors, but this week they are to be seen in a new playlet, entitled An Amateur Anarchist, written by George Arthurs. In this little comedy Miss Rosebery plays the part of Olga Petrovitch, a Nihilist; and Mr. Livesey that of Adam Armstrong, a Yorkshire porter in the employ of the Lightning Express Co.; whilst there is a third part, the Count (Olga's accomplice), well played by Mr. Leo Minster. The action takes place in a room in Olga's flat at Richmond-on-Thames, and Mr. Arthurs has been very successful in supplying Miss Rosebery and Mr. Livesey with parts which give them plenty of scope for the exercise of their conspicuous ability. The sketch, which is handsomely mounted, causes great merriment.

A smart and entertaining turn is that given by Tom Haig and Millie Novel, an acrobatic comedy couple. The singing and dancing of Miss Novel and the humorous business and clever tumbling of Mr. Haig were all of a high order of merit. A really good turn. Harry Simms finds considerable favour with a song entitled "The very first girl I see," quite a good number, which he sings in excellent style.

Another splendid turn is that provided by Mr. Albert Whelan, the famous Australian entertainer. Mr. Whelan occupies the stage for more than twenty minutes, but even then the audience is very loth to let him go. His whistling, his singing, his piano-playing, and his mimicking are all really fine. The programme includes, as always, the American Bioscope, which is showing some most interesting pictures.

Mr. Lewis Vincent is as keen and attentive as ever "in front," and in Mr. Herbert Mack has an admirable assistant.

EALING HIPPODROME.

Miss Edie King is "down west" this week, and, with her character songs and dances is one of the most attractive items in Mr. J. A. Molloy's bill of fare. Miss Edie has four turns to her credit, "Dances wild and weird," "Out West," an Indian song, "Music of Spain," associated with a Bolero of Old Catalonia, and "The Music of Dreams," and in all this clever comedienne gives excellent terpsichorean and vocal expression of the diverse characters she presents. With a well-staged scena, a quartette of dainty costumes, and an effective colour-lighting scheme, Miss King, with her song dances and pretty toes, scores all along the line.

Mr. Ernest Montefiore's company is presenting The Little Colonel, with Miss Ivy Laurel in the name part, while the producer fills the rôle of Captain Burton, and Miss Belle Vickers is the Nurse. This pathetic episode of the South African War brings tears to the eyes of many. The news of a mother's death has to be broken to "Dear Daddy," and the child, with a winsome way and sweet singing, tries to fortify the man for the blow that is to follow. "Sing me the song that mother loves," cries the soldier; but, sad-hearted, her voice fails her, and, picking up a newspaper, the worst is known to him. With curtain fall we see the father, with his "Little Colonel" in command, calling him to attention.

Velanche's Football Dogs must be seen to be believed in. In the match Brentford versus the Rangers some fine sport is shown, and what the goal-keeping doggie of the latter team doesn't know about keeping the ball out of the home preserves is not worth knowing. The canines appear to enjoy the show as much as the audience, which is saying a lot. Athas and Collins are always sure laughter-makers with their comedy duo "How they do it on the stage." The gentleman's pantomimic dancing is pure fun from end to end, while his vivacious partner seconds all his efforts to create laughter both loud and long.

Mr. Burt Shepard applies the pot-boiling condenser unsparingly in his "potted plays and poetry at the piano." With iconoclastic wit he attacks "The Village Blacksmith" and "The Halls of Tara," with which he deals with deadly vigour, while there is much that is good in his "Budget" song. Miss Daisy Morrell, a chocolate-tinted cooness in a boy's dress, sings sadly of the "White man who stole his wife." Miss Kate Rozner's turn with violin and Lachenal's latest English concertina comes as a welcome interlude betwixt roars of laughter and sadness, and her instrumentation is much appreciated by music-lovers. Sam Richards's Six White Boys, synchronous dancing experts, come along with their twelve pattering feet, giving great joy to others besides gallery boys, who are always very critical in these matters. Miss Queenie May sings of the "Friends of days gone by" and "One day an old man was sitting at the door." While Mr. Tony Black, as a raconteur, has some goods that are not all "chestnuts." As a vocalist he sings of "McSwankey Ho!" He is also clever with his feet. During his absence on a well-earned holiday Mr. J. A. Molloy has had his lieutenant, Mr. Harry Wentworth, in command, and needless to say, in his hands, the good direction which distinguishes the Hippodrome has been maintained.

The suggestion that the taxi-cab is not sufficiently numerous in London is repudiated by the drivers of that vehicle, who maintain that the supply is sufficient, if not more than sufficient, to meet all demands. They declare that the shortage only exists in the theatre area of the West End during a small part of the evening, when the audiences are leaving, and that this is due to the fact that many of them are not allowed to get into the area by the police at the hour when they are most required. They quite realise that the traffic must be regulated at a time when the streets are naturally congested, but think that some allowances could be made in their case without any inconvenience.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

One of the greatest successes of modern times has been made by Miss Ada Reeve at the London Coliseum, where her two great Feldman songs, "Foolish questions" and "Nobody knows—nobody cares," have daily and nightly been applauded to the echo. Our contemporary the Referee last Sunday referred to songs and singer in the following highly-eulogistic terms: "Nothing finer in the way of song presentation is to be found than Miss Reeve's rendering of the pathetic ballad, 'Nobody knows—nobody cares,' and 'Foolish questions.' The latter is a gem of lyric writing."

Miss Lulu Russel, the Californian singer, following her successes in the Moss-Stoll halls and at Morecambe Winter Gardens, where she topped the bill, has taken a trip to the Continent. At the Orpheum Theatre, Carlsbad, she sang with great success Feldman's winner, "Beautiful garden of roses." So popular did this number become that ere her engagement had ceased she had requests from the different orchestras in the town to play it. The music was copied, and the melody—arranged with a 'cello first part—became instantly popular in that cosmopolitan resort. Miss Russel, who has been engaged to play principal boy in England at Christmas, is now engaged at the Apollo, Berlin, where "Beautiful garden of roses" is one of her most appealing efforts, the fact that the song is being sung in English to Germans and Austrians saying much for the musical power of the melody.

That charming burlesque actress and vocalist Miss Dorothy Ward has been received with every token of delight by overflowing audiences, both at the Holborn and Kilburn Empires, for her enchanting rendering of Chas. K. Harris's great new ballad, "Yesterday," published by B. Feldman and Co., and a big future may confidently be predicted for this beautiful number from the talented pen that gave "Somewhere" to the world.

One of the greatest successes at present being played by Herr Julian Kandt's orchestra at the Royal Yacht Squadron Castle, Cowes, is a delightful interlude, composed by Jas. W. Tate, "Come over the garden wall," published by Feldman and Co. At an early date Herr Kandt also purposes introducing the now famous "Beautiful garden of roses" waltz, published by the same firm, into his répertoire.

The Lovelaces (Jack and Marie), the famous American "song illustrators," writing to Messrs. B. Feldman and Co., report the pleasing fact that last week at the Winter Gardens, Morecambe, the beautiful ballad "Beautiful garden of roses" was enthusiastically received by close on 7,000 people at each performance. They return there again next week, when they will repeat this song, which they declare is a bigger success than "Somewhere" was with them.

Miss Alice Kingsley, at the Palace, Leicester, is creating a veritable nightly furore with Feldman's great ballad hit, "Beautiful garden of roses." This truly ubiquitous song is being sung east, west, north, and south of these islands just now, strong testimony to the merits of any number, in all conscience.

Miss Violet Romaine is enormously successful at the Spa, Bridlington, with "Beautiful garden of roses," and when she opens at the London Hippodrome, on October 3, will specially feature the same great Feldman success thereat.

At Douglas, in the various alfresco and other troupes, Feldman's "Beautiful garden of roses" is being sung by vocalists innumerable, amongst whom we may mention the following:—Messrs. Jack Truman, Colwyn Thomas, Ernest D'Almaine, and Will Fisher.

Miss Lil Hawthorne, at Derby Castle and the Palace, Douglas, has been and will be for the next two weeks charming her hearers with Feldman's "Come by the drum in the big brass band," by William Hargreaves, while Miss Lola Patey, at the Palace, is correspondingly successful with the same firm's "I wonder who's kissing her now."

Reports from Blackpool report the fact that Messrs. John P. Harrington and John Neat's clever song "Cock-a-doodle-do in the morning," the principal vocal offering in Mlle. Pauline Rivers's sketch, Chanteclair, at the local Tower, is veritably the rage of Blackpool, and the publishers of this decidedly novel morceau, Messrs. B. Feldman and Co., have been simply inundated with trade orders for copies of same in consequence.

"SHIP AHOY!"

A New Comedy Nautical Playlet, Produced at the Standard, Pimlico, on Monday, Aug. 15.

Jack Breese .....Mr. Maurice H. Hoffman
Cyrus Merryweather .....Mr. Tom Fibyr
Henry Taylor .....Mr. O. Youlno
Lucy Merryweather .....Miss Ethel King

Lucy is a "lass that loves a sailor." His name is Jack Breese, and, after a voyage, he turns up at the farmhouse, the owner and occupier of which is Cyrus Merryweather, Lucy's guardian. Jack would be bold enough in the presence of the foe, but when he meets the girl he loves he is as timid and bashful as a village yokel. The expectant maiden has to wait quite a long time before the sailor can summon up the pluck to make her an offer of marriage, and then he bungles it terribly; and even after the lady has accepted him fails at first to act on her hint that she expects him to kiss her. All sailors are not so bashful and backward as Jack in the presence of the fair sex. On the approach of Lucy's guardian, Lucy, aware that he disapproves of her sailor suitor, makes Jack beat a hasty retreat into the garden. Mr. Merryweather then has a serious talk with Lucy. He thinks it is time that she married, and says he has found for her a suitable partner for life, one Henry Taylor, who hails from Lancashire, and is quite prepared to wed Lucy, who, by the way, is an heiress. Of course, the girl raises an objection to marrying the "Lancashire lad," and her guardian makes a shrewd guess that it is the sailor who has won Lucy's heart. He informs her that if she marries without his consent she will be penniless, but Lucy is not the kind of girl to give up her sailor lover for the sake of filthy lucre. At this critical state of affairs a ring at the bell announces the arrival of another visitor; and Henry Taylor, "from Lancashire," is ushered in. He is bearded, wears glasses, and speaks with a strong Lancashire accent. The young lady treats her uncouth suitor with disdain, but Henry attributes her behaviour to shyness, and opines that she "will come round presently." He is a man of business, and, having no time for courting, proposes, to Lucy's horror and disgust, that the wedding shall take place in a couple of days; but suddenly the supposed Henry pulls off his spectacles and his wig and beard, and the delighted Lucy beholds her sailor lad ready to claim her as his betrothed. It may be taken for granted that the old gentleman will offer no further objection to the match, for surely Jack has fairly won his charming bride.

Mr. Maurice H. Hoffman acted well as the sailor and the supposed suitor from Lancashire; Mr. Tom Fibyr was excellent as Cyrus Merryweather; and Miss Ethel King proved to be a bright and winsome representative of Lucy. The new sketch deservedly met with a favourable reception.

MR KENDALL ROBINSON.

A well-known figure in dramatic and music hall circles, Mr. Kendall Robinson has now decided to devote his abilities entirely to the picture theatre, of which he will undertake the construction and management. Mr. Robinson is indebted to so good a judge as Mr. Alfred Butt, the manager of the Palace Theatre, for his realisation of the great possibilities of the picture theatre, and a visit to France and a wider acquaintance with the technical side of the business convinced him that there was a great future for the moving picture. When Mr. Butt organised Provincial Palaces, Ltd., Mr.

MR. KENDALL ROBINSON.

Robinson became associated with the enterprise, and later formed the Surrey and Sussex Picture Palaces, Ltd. The company is to have Mr. Robinson's services as manager for a period of ten years, and of the success of the venture he is confident. The first of the theatres to be erected will be opened shortly at Kingston-on-Thames, where the company's offices are situated. Here the local manager is Mr. Cecil Frere, whose wide experience should prove invaluable. Operations have also been commenced at Merton, and at Richmond Bridge a freehold site has been acquired on which it is proposed to erect a picture theatre, together with various shops. Mr. Robinson hopes to have seven theatres open shortly, and has formed great expectations of their success.

Of the future of the industry Mr. Robinson is highly optimistic. The picture theatre, he maintains, is the newspaper of the future, and instances the Daily Mirror and the Daily Sketch as evidences of the success of the picture newspaper, which he is convinced has certainly come to stay, though it can never do so much as the picture theatre. The man in the street will throng in ever-increasing numbers to see the world's daily events paraded before his eyes, and thus, to a large extent, the place of the daily newspaper will be usurped by the picture theatre. Mr. Robinson is determined to provide the public with the best the cinematograph can offer. It is his intention to place his houses at the disposal of schools and colleges to serve educational purposes and in any way to promote the best interests of the business.

The subject of this interview is also a prominent personality in journalism. He began his career at the age of fourteen as a printer's "devil," and two years later found him sub-editor of the Newcastle Chronicle. Before he was twenty-one he had edited a weekly newspaper for three years. Subsequently he went to Australia, and joined the staff of the Melbourne Age, making a speciality of crime work, and following up many sensational cases. Returning to England, he became a descriptive reporter on the Evening News, with which paper he remained for three years. The desire for fresh adventures, however, was strong upon him, and later we find Mr. Robinson fulfilling the position of mining editor of the Standard and Diggers' News, at Johannesburg. Here he remained for some time, but eventually returned home and joined the staff of the Financial News. In 1902 he again went to South Africa to represent both the Daily Express and his own paper during the Boer War. With the declaration of peace he returned to his native shores, and accepted the post of financial editor of the Globe, adding to this appointment the financial work of the People, the Liverpool Journal of Commerce, and other papers, including the Paris Financial News and La Liberté. For the space of eight years Mr. Robinson remained with the Globe, until he resigned that post, together with his other appointments, for the amusement business.

Appearing with success at the Palace, Blackburn, are Apollo, the Landix Trio, Gladys and Alber, the Garricks, Edith Chantler, Frank H. Fox, Ford Williams, Alsopp and Beckwith, Beech, Aveling, and Reekie, and Jimmie Danvers and Eva Rosslyn.

Emerson and Baldwin, with the American club juggling act that has just completed a successful run at the Empire, London, have been fixed for a twenty weeks' tour in Australia with Mr. Harry Rickards, through the agency of Mr. Will Collins.

BERT FELDMAN'S HOLIDAY.

Re-invigorated by his three weeks' sojourn in the Isle of Man, Mr. Bert Feldman returned to London on Monday last, accompanied by his great friend, Mr. Laurie Barnett (Miss Florrie Forde's husband), the genial head of the Arthur-street publishing firm, and gives some incidents connected with his recent visit to Mona which may prove of interest to our readers.

"You will readily guess," remarked Mr. Feldman, chatting to an interviewer, with a smile, "that my little holiday, albeit a delightful recuperative after what I may term the 'strenuosity' of my early summer campaign, was not entirely unallied with the interests and welfare of my firm. Mona, of late years, has become an unerring index to the 'song of the season.' To put it plainly, the number that takes the Isle of Man by storm is that which will later on be en evidence in every pantomime in the kingdom. And unhesitatingly I aver I have already found that number!

"Towering head and shoulders above everything of the ballad order throughout the length and breadth of Manxland, listened to in rapt delight by 5,000 people nightly, while 2,000 people daily and nightly waltz to its dreamy measure, Dempsey and Schmid's entrancing ballad, 'Beautiful garden of roses,' has already proven itself to be unmistakably the song of the year.

"That great chorus singer Miss Florrie Forde who has made so many songs popular in her time, opened at Douglas with 'Beautiful garden of roses,' and achieved an instantaneous success that will long live in the annals of Derby Castle. Her thousands of auditors sat simply spellbound, entranced, carried away by the beauty, refinement, yet withal intensely human sentiment of the words and music of this latest and greatest of ballads which America has given us. Again and again vociferous applause was rained upon the smiling and gratified artist. Holiday-makers and Manxmen alike took the new song to their bosoms, and hugged it close and would not let it go. Now every alfresco troupe makes 'Beautiful garden of roses' the bonne bouche of their entertainments; in every ballroom and dancing-room the glorious melody is played incessantly; indeed, Mr. Harry Wood, the genial musical-director of Derby Castle and the Palace, not only plays his audiences in with it, but out again also. Every good judge who has had the felicity of hearing the song predicts that it will assuredly be 'IT' this year in every Christmas annual throughout the Empire.

"As was the case last year, everybody again did all they could to make my stay in the island thoroughly enjoyable. Mr. Charles Fox, the manager of all Douglas's principal places of amusement proved as of yore more than kind; Mr. Chas Dare, of Dare's Minstrels, who is making a special feature of the Feldman catalogue at every performance given by his talented troupe; Mr. Fred Buxton, of Buxton's Pierrots, who also features a great number of our songs; Mr. Harry Wood, to whose efforts 'Beautiful garden of roses' owes a great deal of its popularity in the island, as he has played the waltz connected with that song incessantly ever since it first came to Mona; and last, but not least, Councillor Marsden, of the Douglas Head Hotel, whose innumerable courtesies tended to make my stay in the island altogether enjoyable and delightful: each and all vied in doing me personal kindnesses.

"The subjoined little snapshot of Miss Florrie Forde, Mr. Laurie Barnett, and myself may be of some slight interest to your many readers. It was taken in a 'beautiful garden of roses' what time the voices of hundreds were singing the song of that title on every hand.

"There are other songs ad infinitum of our firm which are also very popular in Mona, but to mention them seriatum would take up far too much of your valuable space. Suffice it to say that I am more than satisfied with the song outlook so far as my firm and the Isle of Man are concerned this year.

"I finished up my all-too-brief holiday with a truly delightful motor tour through some of the familiar villages of my native Yorkshire, with my old friend Mr. Stead, of Leeds, and so back to London—and work! I can, however, work with renewed vigour, a veritable 'giant refreshed' by the knowledge that once again, sans contradiction, it is in my power to assert that in 'Beautiful garden of roses' my firm this year possesses a number destined to equal and probably eclipse the success and phenomenal sales of last year's world's record-breaker, 'Somewhere,' truly a consummation to be devoutly wished, so far as the firm of B. Feldman and Co. is concerned."

"A GREEN ROOM MATCH."

Sketch, by Herbert Shelley, Presented at the Chelsea Palace on Monday, Aug. 15.

Millie Martini .....Miss Helen Miranda
Sammy Silver .....Mr. Wenlock Brown

Some Shakespeare, a bit of aviation, a sly reference to Dr. Crippen, and a whole lot of amusing nonsense—these are the things which go to make up A Green Room Match, which has been given a cordial reception at Chelsea this week. The sketch has undoubted merit. The underlying idea is not a strikingly original one, but the treatment of it is new, and success should attend the production. The story is that of an actress (Millie Martini), who has engaged with an actor to play a scene from Macbeth before the officers at Colchester. She is young and enthusiastic, and is full of delightful anticipations at the impression she is to make upon the "soldier boys." But there comes a wire from her actor partner crying off, and she is in despair, until suddenly Sammy Silver, her devoted admirer, arrives in his airship.

Sammy is ready to do anything for her, but he blinks when told he must fill in the rôle of the missing actor. His protests that he "can't Macbeth" are unavailing, and then and there he has to don a wig many sizes too large for him and be put through his paces. An agony of acting follows. Sammy spoke the truth when he said he "couldn't Macbeth," but love urges him on, and Shakespeare has certainly never been treated in such amusingly serio-comic fashion before. They are both almost heartbroken at ridiculous failure when a wire arrives announcing to Sammy that he has come into a fortune, and they decide to return to London by the most up-to-date method of transit, by airship, and get married, as the best way out of the difficulty.

The impression left on the mind by Monday's presentation was that both the principals are capable of making a greater success of the sketch. Miss Miranda was not wholly convincing at all times, and both her enthusiasm and despair would benefit from toning down. Mr. Brown, too, is capable of extracting more spontaneous fun from the part of Sammy Silver. The sketch is excellently staged, and proved immensely popular with a large audience.

It is rare that one sees such a well-balanced company, even at the Chelsea Palace, as has appeared this week. There are mirth and laughter, good jokes, bright songs, and clever dancing from start to finish. The names will show: Victoria Monks, King and Benson, May Moore Duprez, Charlie Dillon, Dolly and Madge McCalla, Cole and Rags, Sam Spira, and Dion Wade. And, as usual, Ruffell's Bioscope is a special feature of the show, while Mr. Aves's orchestra has its own large share in providing the pleasure of the evening's entertainment.

Under the managership of Mr. Ben de Frece, the Birmingham Hippodrome is doing wonderfully improved business, and the performances have been greatly improved. Behind the scenes Mr. G. Houghton controls affairs. Mr. Houghton, who is a stage manager of considerable experience, came to Birmingham from Glasgow when the Hippodrome was reopened a month ago. Mr. Houghton is very popular among the performers.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

MISS DOROTHY WARD, who is an undoubted acquisition to the music hall, has been appearing during the week at the Holborn and Kilburn Empire. Her charming personality and cultured voice have had their due effect on the critical patrons of these temples of variety, where she has been recalled again and again for her artistic rendering of A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott's two songs, "I wonder if you miss me sometimes" and "Cheer up, my Highland lassie." The refrains of both numbers have been chorused in no uncertain way. The Star Music Co. publish both numbers.

MISS CHUMMIE LA MARA, ever bright and sparkling, has been captivating Camberwellites at the local Empire by her delightful rendering of A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott's latest Irish song "Mona" (I'm an Irish Spanish toreador). This number strikes a welcome note of originality, and is entirely melodious. The Star Music Co. are the publishers.

MISS MARIE LLOYD, though suffering from a cold, has been scoring tremendously at the Oxford, the persistent and determined applause at the conclusion of her turn reminding old habitués of the happy days gone by, when popular favourites had to "oblige" again and again. This is as it should be, for Marie is still our Queen o' Comedy. Just now Miss Lloyd has some excellent material, a special favourite being a new song by A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott, "When I take my morning promenade." This goes with a bang. Miss Rosie Lloyd is duplicating her sister's success with the same number in the provinces. The Star Music Co. are the publishers.

PHIL PARSONS, the rapidly-rising light comedy star, is just now doing the trick on the Stoll tour. He has secured the exclusive rights of the great American song "My wife's gone to the country," and is everywhere triumphant with this catchy number. The Star Music Co. have made arrangements to handle this big winner jointly with the Ted Snyder Co.

CHARLES WHITTLE continues to make increasingly evident the fact that so far as popular choruses go he is a power to be reckoned with. It is not only that he shows excellent judgment in selecting songs, but he has a method of handling them which is peculiarly effective. At present Mr. Whittle's big winner, "Fall in and follow me," by A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott, is taking provincial audiences by storm. The Star Music Co. publish the song.

G. H. ELLIOTT returned to London on Monday after a triumphant provincial tour. At the Hackney Empire, where he is always a warm favourite, the people have greeted him with overwhelming applause. His new song, "Loo Sue," by A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott, was an instantaneous hit. Though the title conveys little, the song itself is not only exceedingly melodious, but the idea is refreshingly original, and the method of telling the story reveals the hand of a past-master in the art of lyric writing. G. H. Elliott's "Loo Sue" is destined to become one of the important songs of the year. The Star Music Co. will issue the numbers forthwith.

"A LESSON IN RINKING."

Sketch, in One Act, by Lewis T. Dalrymple, Produced at the Public Hall, Birchington-on-Sea, on Saturday, Aug. 13.

Mrs. Pride ..... MME. ISABEL BERESFORD
Trixy Pride ..... MISS DOROTHY GREIG
Algy Pride ..... MR. CLAUDE CASEY
Reuben Brown ..... MR. ERNEST DEANS

The scene of this little sketch, which overflows with mirth-provoking situations and crisp and humorous dialogue, is laid at Mr. Reuben Brown's private rinking establishment. Mr. Brown has received a letter from a Mrs. Pride, who wishes her daughter and son to take lessons in roller-skating, and he has an intuition that this is the same lady who had objected to his engagement to her daughter. In order to conceal his identity he adopts a disguise, and poses as a professional instructor. The arrival of Mrs. Pride and Trixie confirms his suspicions, and he makes up his mind that, as he was thrown over, he, with a bit of luck and the aid of the skates, will get a bit of his own back. Algy Pride is a "dude," and the fun with him on skates waxes fast and furious, the many falls of the pupils and the screamingly funny antics Algy is compelled to cut being artfully contrived and assisted by the pseudo-instructor. Trixie at last gets an inkling of her lover's identity, a flirtation follows, and the pair, who have come to an understanding, are caught in a very loverlike attitude by the mater. Explanations ensue, Brown apologises for having deceived them, and a reconciliation takes place.

Mr. Claude Casey as Algy played his part remarkably well, and, being a clever skater, made the most of a particularly amusing rôle. Mr. Ernest Deans was extremely good as Reuben Brown, and sustained the part with great vivacity. Mme. Isabel Beresford did excellently as the deaf and punctilious Mrs. Pride; and Miss Dorothy Greig made a charming Trixy. Miss Dorothy Greig introduced a very pretty dance which added to the effectiveness of the production. The sketch was briskly played throughout, and the applause bestowed at frequent intervals and the hearty laughter evoked indicated that the performance gave both pleasure and amusement to the audience, who demanded the appearance of the author.

WOOLWICH HIPPODROME.

This popular hall has again a most attractive bill, which is headed by the Six Brothers Luck in their side-splitting burlesque H.M.S. Perhaps, which simply brings down the house. The lady who impersonates the suffragette has a lively time, and adds considerably to the fun, the whole skit being a screamer. Harry Luck, a comedian who is clever enough to write his own songs, &c., is a huge success. His numbers include "Stick it, Jerry," and "Not a-goin' to work any more."

Gladys Huxley, vocal comedienne, is heard to advantage in "Come to Colombo with me." Ted Cowan, comedian, does not run on the old lines nor crack any chestnuts. The clever Barnard Family bring an up-to-date novelty in their marionette show, entitled "Dolls Alive," and finish up their act with a golliwog song and dance which is really clever. The Eight 'Varsity Girls are excellent, their singing and dancing being everything that could possibly be desired. One of their number possesses a phenomenal baritone voice. Sibb and Sibb are in the first flight of trapeze experts, their act being quite amazing, and requiring great strength and skill. The Sisters Burnett are distinctly good, their first number, "Ancient and Modern Dress," being perhaps their best. George Newburn is a remarkable mimic, his impersonation of Harry Lauder singing "Wedding of Sandy McNab" being particularly good. Miss Mabel Thorne, who is always a favourite, scored a success, her first song, "Come out on the briny," having a bright, breezy little melody. In her second number, "The 'Chanticleer' hat," arrayed in a "confection" representing a Dorking cockerel, with resplendent tail, &c., she took the house by storm, and had several calls. The Bioscope has a series of new films, Elephants at Work Among the Logs in India being very fine indeed.

"HER GUARDIAN ANGEL."

Sketch, in One Scene, by Alicia Ramsey, Produced at the Empress, Brixton, on Monday, Aug. 15.

Mrs. Lorrimer ..... MISS MILDRED COTTELL
Mollie ..... MISS BELLA TERRY
Hortense ..... MISS BLANKA STEWART
Edward Langton ..... MR. PAUL LOVETT

Angels' visits to this mundane sphere are proverbially few and far between, but the heroine of the sketch above named, which is produced by Alicia Ramsey and Rudolph de Cordova's company at the Empress this week, is able apparently to summon them at will. A dainty children's story is provided in the little piece, which shews how the cunningly laid plot of a French maid in an English household to steal her mistress's diamonds is frustrated by the simple faith and artlessness of a little child. Hortense, maid to Mrs. Lorrimer, has arranged with her lover, a burglar by profession, to hide in a wardrobe in the nursery, and take her mistress's jewels from the safe after the owner's absence has been secured by means of a forged telegram. Mrs. Lorrimer is preparing to attend a ball, and at her daughter Mollie's request, finishes her toilet in the nursery, while the youngster goes into raptures over the diamonds, with which she obtains permission to adorn herself. An urgent telegram comes saying that Mrs. Lorrimer's baby, which has been taken away for a change of air, is seriously ill at Chorley, and the mother rushes off with her maid, Mollie declaring she has no fear of being left alone, as she is sure her guardian angel will protect her from harm. The child, still wearing the diamonds, gets into bed with her "Teddy-bear," and the burglar duly enters. After a fruitless search in the safe, he discovers the jewels upon Mollie, who is awakened by his efforts to remove the rings from her fingers. The burglar is touched by the child's resemblance to his dead sister, to whom in happier days he was devoted, but determines at all costs to have the diamonds, and is handling the girl roughly when over the head of the bed appears the figure of a lady with wings and every semblance of a celestial visitant. The burglar, thoroughly converted, releases the youngster, gives up the stolen diamonds, and takes his departure, begging the child to say a prayer for him.

The effect of the playlet was due to the charm exercised by its principal exponent, Miss Bella Terry, who, it will be remembered, achieved so conspicuous a success in Where Children Rule at the Garrick, and is making a temporary appearance on the variety stage previous to joining The Blue Bird. Petite, graceful, and dainty, Bella is one of the most engaging little actresses who have recently brightened the stage, and in the part of Mollie she has a rôle that enables her to display her accomplishments to advantage. The sound of her sweet voice, which preceded her entry, at once prepossessed her in the favour of the audience, and her vivacity, animation, and ingenuousness throughout the portrayal of an exacting part compelled the admiration of all. She gave a delightful performance, marked by intelligence and care remarkable in so youthful a comedienne. Mr. Paul Lovett was a typical burglar, with a menacing but by no means repellent countenance, thus quite justifying Mollie's partiality for him at the beginning. Miss Mildred Cottell was a refined and ladylike Mrs. Lorrimer, and the French accent and mannerisms of the designing Hortense were well assumed by Miss Blanka Stewart, an actress of considerable dramatic gifts. The little piece was thoroughly mounted in every detail, and its effect on the audience was such as to justify the highest hopes of its success.

"THE TOUCH OF THE CHILD."

Play, in One Act, Dramatised by Leon M. Lion from the Story of the Same Name by Tom Gallon, Produced for the First Time in London at the Holborn Empire, on Monday, Aug. 15

Colonel James Fullard.. MR. WILLIAM MOLLISON
Captain Godfrey Steen MR. ARCHIE W. CHAPPELL
Winnie ..... MISS JEANNIE FITZGERALD
Mrs. Fullard ..... MISS EVELYN MCNAY

Nothing finer in the way of playlets is to be seen on the London stage at present than this powerful and engrossing little piece, and, perfectly played as it was by the well-known actor Mr. William Mollison and his companions, it from the outset gripped the attention of a large audience on the night of our visit, and held it throughout, its success being most pronounced. The scene is the house of Colonel James Fullard, D.S.O. The Colonel and Captain Godfred Steen, V.C., have been warm friends for some eleven years, and at the rising of the curtain Godfrey is expected on a visit. On his arrival, the two old chums and Fullard's wife discuss old times, and refer to Godfrey's approaching marriage. In drinking health and prosperity to Godfrey and his future wife, and a continuation of the old friendship, Fullard's glass is broken, and this he looks upon as an ill omen He has appeared depressed and generally out of sorts, and his wife asks Godfrey to try to persuade him to disclose any trouble he may have. Previously to this, it must be mentioned, Fullard's little girl had managed to get hold of a loaded pistol Fullard had carelessly left about; and when the two men are alone Godfrey prevails on Fullard to tell him the tragic story of his brother's death, hitherto unknown to anyone but Fullard. Many years ago, in Mexico, the Colonel's loved young brother had been found shot, and Fullard had vowed over his grave to revenge him.

Believing in fatalism, the Colonel is quite convinced that the man will one day cross his path as surely as a fly comes to the web of a spider, and then he will force a duel on him. The loaded pistols found when his brother was killed he has kept ever since. Eventually, it transpires that Godfrey was the man who killed young Fullard but was unaware of his identity. There is a very tense situation when each man realises the awful truth. Godfrey explains that the affair was the outcome of a quarrel at cards; that the duel was practically forced on him; that he fired in the air; was wounded; and that his opponent insisted on a second encounter, in which, shooting blindly, Godfrey had killed his adversary. Fullard, however, is bent on carrying out his revenge. "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," and the duel shall take place with the loaded pistols then and there.

Godfrey absolutely refuses to fight his old friend. Fullard may kill him as he stands, if he will, but he will not consent to a duel. The Colonel's little daughter Winnie is then heard outside waiting to say "good-night" to her father and Godfrey; and finally Fullard says the child shall decide who shall live. She is fondly attached to both her father and Godfrey, and the first one she touches on entering the room shall take his own life within an hour. Godfrey reluctantly consents, and, the two, seating themselves on a couch, the youngster is called in. Silently they sit, whilst the perplexed Winnie questions them. Is it a new game? Won't they tell her what she has to do? Still not a word. "Oh, do tell me what it is?" implores the youngster, throwing her arms simultaneously round the neck of each. A pause; the chums grip hands, and the curtain falls. Mr. William Mollison, as the pale, determined Colonel James Fullard, so bent on revenging his brother's death, submitted a most intense and finished portrayal; and Captain Godfrey Steen was also convincingly and cleverly enacted by Mr. Archie W. Chappell. Miss Evelyn McNay skilfully indicated the anxiety of Mrs. Fullard, and was admirable throughout; and Miss Jeannie Fitzgerald was a delightfully natural Winnie, the concluding incident being particularly well enacted.

There are many other entertaining items in Mr. Leslie Conroy's programme at this popular house, prominent among which is Fred Karno's company in their latest "screamer" Mr. Justice Perkins, recently noticed in these columns. Since its production, Mr. Albert Bruno, who so humorously plays the "hero," has added many funny little bits of business, and the impersonation is now a particularly droll one. Praise is also due to the other principals and the "crowd," who all contribute valuably to the merry and bright absurdity. Miss Lil Hawthorne, who clothes a charming personality in a handsome costume, sings "Little maid of Monte Carlo" to the delight of all; Gilday and Fox, American Hebrew comedians, submit a funny interlude, Cohen's Ward, and introduce some amusing snatches of parody and a quaint song, "Yiddisher Love," their turn being loudly applauded; the Picquays contribute a particularly attractive and clever acrobatic and contortion act; and Geo. Wilson, a nigger responsible for much mirth, has a funny laughing song and some amusing patter.

That always welcome Irish comedian and raconteur, Mr. Joe O'Gorman, has many racy tales and "tuneful trifles," including "Top of the morning" and a couple of other amusing ditties, and is accorded a most flattering reception; Mr. Launceston Elliott, the British Hercules, demonstrates his wonderful strength by lifting and supporting a number of men in various positions, his most sensational feat being the swinging round rapidly of a couple of darkies on bicycles yoked to his shoulders; Charles Mildare scores in decided fashion with his realistic reproductions of the notes of the skylark and other songbirds; Tambo and Tambo, speciality artists, do some wonderful tambourine spinning and other novel tricks; Dorothy Ward, the well-known musical comedy artist and a most delightfully natural boy, vocalises effectively; and Ridiculous Recco, burlesque acrobat, Jack Marks, boy raconteur, the Two Brilliants, clever lady xylophonists, and the Bioscope are also in the prodigious programme given twice nightly.

AN important feature of the Musicians' Union Sunday Concerts is their desire to meet the demand that has been created for Sunday amusements without compelling musicians and all others engaged in the entertainment profession to work seven days per week. As a result of the propaganda of Sunday amusements by people not connected with the profession, a compulsory seven days' week has been forced upon musicians in nearly all their summer engagements, and the object of the Union in giving concerts is to prevent a similar state of things in their winter business by supplying the public demand for Sunday concerts on a co-operative and non-compulsory basis. The musicians are paid a fixed fee for their services at these concerts, and any balance at the end of the season is placed to the credit of the A.M.U. Benevolent Funds. Under this arrangement every member is free to please him or herself whether they play or not. The members naturally take a keen pride in their own concerts, and the esprit de corps and enthusiasm which is always a feature of the concerts is transferred to their audiences.

FILM GOSSIP.

Cinema Picture Palace, Devonport.

THE Cinema Picture Palace in St. Aubyn-street, Devonport, is being exceedingly well patronised. The programme provided this week is full of interest and well varied. Some beautiful films are shown of the Italian lakes, and Dogs of All Nations is entertaining and instructive. Over Silent Paths and The Sweets of Forgiveness are two of the best dramatic series, and whilst Four Little Tailors, The Wild Man from Borneo, and Rustos in Zululand are being shown the audiences are in roars of laughter. The excellent pictures of the launch of the cruiser Lion are again being placed on the screen at the desire of many frequenters of the Cinema.

Presentation to Mr. George R. Beaumont.

A FAREWELL dinner was given on Monday evening at the Woolpack Hotel, Newcastle-on-Tyne, to Mr. Geo. R. Beaumont on his relinquishing the management of the Northern Depôt, New Bioscope Trading Co., Ltd., to take up an important South Country appointment with the same firm. Mr. J. Woods occupied the chair, and after an admirable dinner had been discussed, in presenting Mr. Beaumont with a handsome gold watch, made a neat little speech, in which he referred to Mr. Beaumont as a gentleman and a sportsman. Mr. T. Harry Ward, who succeeds to the management, seconded the resolution, and in the course of his remarks said the only consolation that he as a loyal servant could find was that Mr. Beaumont's valuable services were not to be lost to the firm. The inscription in the watch reads: "Presented to Geo. R. Beaumont, with sincere good wishes from a few Newcastle friends."

Andrew's Pictures, Limited.

THE Andrew's Pictures, Ltd., who have secured a long lease of the Temperance Hall, Northampton, intend reseating it throughout with the latest and best velvet tip-up chairs, and to instal a perfect system of ventilation by means of the famous Blackman electrical fans. A new and up-to-date operating chamber will be built. These improvements, with the redecoration, are estimated to cost £1,000.

Brussels Exhibition Cinema Palace not Burnt.

THE Cinematograph Palace at the Brussels Exhibition—the only picture theatre in the Exhibition grounds—was, fortunately, not burnt in the disastrous fire of last Sunday, and was opened on Tuesday as usual. The proprietors of the Palace are the London Cinematograph Co., Ltd., 20, Bedford-street, Strand, and they are to be congratulated on such a handsome and luxurious picture palace. First-class films only are screened, including the pick of the best English, Continental, and American pictures.

"Kinemacolor."

THE withdrawal of "Kinemacolor" after a long and highly successful season at the Palace Theatre may be taken by an appreciative public as being only the first step towards a more ambitious presentation of the Urban-Smith art of natural-colour kinematography in London in the not distant future. It had long been agreed that it was impossible within the limits of a twenty-minute "turn" to do justice to the aim and scope of so fascinating a subject as life-motion scenes in Nature's veritable hues; but the future arrangements, when announced in the Press, will, it is believed, be deemed worthy of this popularised science, by which knowledge is presented attractively, simply, and chromatically.

THE FORESTERS.

Inspired by the success of the recent Folkestone Beauty Competition, the principals of this popular East End establishment have inaugurated for this week a similar function, which is proving quite a success. Many entries have been received, and on the evening of our visit two of the competitors were selected to appear in the final at the end of the week. A special setting has been made, each aspirant for the premier honour displaying her head in a frame, which is brilliantly illuminated. The arrangements have been well carried through, and much credit is due to Mr. Charles Hale, who is the manager pro tem.

Mr. Joe Archer, one of our most popular comedians, sings "Kelly's gone to kingdom come"—not a particularly happy selection. His second item—viz., "What a conjure! what a cop!" is much the better. His gags are greatly enjoyed. Miss Norah Desmond, with the aid of illustrated pictures displayed on the Bioscope, sings extremely well two well-written songs—"The wreck of the good ship Love" and "Daddy, don't go down the mine." Each has a tuneful melody, and the sweet voice of the artist is appreciated. Walton and Williams, a smart pair of comedians, indulge in some witty repartee, which is quite good, their dancing also being a feature. The Great Sados, billed as the world's greatest juggler—a rather tall phrase—performs several ordinary feats, which are helped by stage effects, his principal item being the balancing of a table on four billiard cues on his head.

Miss Flo Burnett, a lady with good appearance and a delightful voice, renders admirably two capital songs—"Soon, Eileen," and "Your eyes have told me so." Miss Flo Warner has a powerful voice, and is heard to advantage in "I wonder if it's someone I know"; and Wheeler and Wilson, cross-talk comedians, also score well.

Bernard Mervyn and company are appearing in a new and original miniature play, in one scene, entitled The Devil's Elbow, by John F. Traynor. The scene is the drawing-room of a Canadian farm, owned by Harry Allerton, whose wife is expressing her dislike for the lonely life she is leading. Ralph Morgan, whom the husband regards as his only friend, has plotted to take the wife away with him to England, the meeting-place being the "Devil's Elbow." Soon after the wife has left the servants enter and inform the master of an accident which has happened. He orders them to bring in the sufferers, who, to his surprise, are his wife and her lover. In a scene, which is carried through in silence, the husband hands the culprit a revolver, himself taking one. Two shots are fired, and the husband re-enters, so we gather that the wrong-doer has been killed. The little piece is well played, Mr. Mervyn's character of the loving husband being a fine study. He is ably supported by Miss Eugene Magnus as the wife, Mr. John F. Traynor acts well the friend Ralph. Interesting films are displayed on the Bioscope.

MR. ROWLAND HILL has created a record this week at the Palace, Huddersfield, with his chorus number, "Why does Mrs. Flanagan want to go to the Isle of Man?" which is from the pen of Tom B. Newsome. On Monday night, after the first chorus, the audience sang it like one man, and at the end of the song would not let Mr. Hill retire until he had taken four calls and made a speech in front of the curtain. This number should be a winner for pantomime comedians.

AMERICANS IN LONDON.

[By Americus.]

Frost.
Our little blow-out last Saturday night was a cold proposition. In other words, it didn't get by at all; it was the flattest show I have been interested in for some time. In fact, whenever a booking agent blows in with some of the real actors there is a quietness everywhere. Everybody last Saturday night down in the basement of the German Club were afraid to cut loose with any of their laugh stuff. All on account of a good-looking booker who happened to be the guest of one of the real ones for the evening. Next time a booker wants to come into our society I am going to put him in a closet with glass holes, so he can see the whole show, and will not let him out until after the show is over. Then Africa will get some real acts that will make the Boers set up and laugh in all kinds of ways. If this same booker had been there the Saturday previous and been under cover there wouldn't have been an actor around Lisle-street for some time to come, for he would have booked the entire show at any old price.

The Live One.
Rinaldo was the only one who held the show up: in fact, he was the life of the evening.

Marathon Actress.
You have all heard of the Marathon actor, dancer, and runners of the masculine type; but there was a real Marathon actress who showed her skill Saturday night. She could sing, dance, and talk with any of them. In fact, she was so good she was kept in the middle of the floor for the majority of the time during the entire evening. Seventy-five bows after each number was nothing, and a lightning calculator registered over a hundred numbers she did during the evening. I didn't get her real name.

Gilday and Fox.
Gilday and Fox, the two Hebrew comedians, opened at the Holborn Empire on Monday evening, and from the start the boys got them a-going, and never let up until they put the finishing touches on with some good parodies on "Rings on her fingers."

Heely and Meely.
Although this act has been on this side for many years, these boys still uphold their reputation, and favoured with a fine entertainment at the Coliseum during the past week.

Kennedy and Ryan Doing Fine.
Kennedy and Ryan, who formed a partnership some time ago, were at the Coliseum, Ilkeston, this week, and from the Press reports and the applause the boys have been getting all the week the act has been a fine success, and will prove a valuable addition to most any bill.

Donavan and Arnold.
The Bedford Music Hall has had the act known as Donavan and Arnold all this week, and this team have made a decided hit at the little West End hall, and have proved a big drawing card.

Blackpool Gets the Tournament.
The Club Jugglers are all at Blackpool this week. I was informed that an organisation known as the American Club Jugglers would be formed this week. There will be a great contest when it comes to electing a president of this organisation. Ginger Mowatt looks like holding the winning hand, for he will demand the support of his quintette, and their votes should about elect him, unless Emerson rings in a few unknowns in the ballot-box. Ginger will likely be the first president.

American Dancers Go Big.
The Palace, Manchester, witnessed one of the best combination dancing acts America has ever sent to this side this week, and the Press and public were not slow in appreciating their efforts. The dancers come to the Palace next week, and London will have an opportunity of seeing some real stunts of various kinds pattered out on the maple dancing mat by these great dancers. Walter de Frece, who saw their opening Monday, told me they were what you call "a real knock-out."

Olympia Desvall's Artistic Performance.
While passing the Alhambra the other evening I dropped in for a few minutes' stay, and instead of staying a few minutes as I had intended, I made it a few hours' stay. Olympia Desvall, who has recently returned from America, showed her beautiful and artistic horse act shortly after nine. The Alhambra patrons applauded her clever performance throughout, and it was evident she is just as big a hit here as she was in America. Miss Desvall returns to America next season to play another twenty weeks' engagement at the New York Hippodrome.

Ritter and Foster Away.
Ritter and Foster packed their collar boxes and baskets and took the Scotland fast train out last Sunday night to commence a tour of the provinces, opening at Glasgow. After this tour they will go to the Continent for the winter season, where they are booked for six months.

Will Return.
Mayuz-Maizette, who have been at the Empire for some time, will return to America to play some thirty weeks, booked on the United time, as soon as their English and Continental engagements are finished.

Gilday Making Fuss.
Myron Gilday is making fuss over here by trying to engage all the acts in London for the Inter-State time. Papa making fuss, Rosali making fuss. Theatres will have some good shows when Myron gets through with his work.

Ziegfeld, Jun., in Paris.
Florence Ziegfeld, jun., arrived in Paris last week, and remains in the French metropolis for a few weeks, returning to America via London, where he will spend a few days with Earle Reynolds looking over a few novelties for musical comedy Reynolds has written him to book.

Mrs. Fred Ginnett's Letter.
I had the pleasure of seeing a letter written by Mrs. Fred Ginnett, who is at Roselle, New Jersey. Mrs. Ginnett was instrumental in identifying Dr. Crippen, and was also one of the leaders to detect that there was something wrong in the disappearance of Belle Elmore.

White Rats in England.
I will be pleased if every White Rat who is now in London or any part of England, Scotland, or Ireland, will send me by postal card their permanent address. Please do this just as soon as you read this; do not wait until Monday or Tuesday; but send it to me at once. Want your address on this side of the water, also so on the other side.

Constance Spissell's Father Ill.
I regret to note the serious illness of Mr. Tom Fowler, father of Constance Spissell, who is with her husband now in America. I am advised that Mr. Fowler is on his death-bed as this goes to press.

Nellie Donegan at Brighton.
Nellie Donegan, who has been in a private hospital in Beaumont-street, W., for the past six weeks, has recovered, and went to Brighton yesterday, where her husband, Earle Reynolds, engaged apartments on Marine-parade. The team will remain at Brighton until Miss Donegan gets perfectly strong enough to return to work, when the act will play a couple of weeks at the Palace before commencing their tour of the Continent, opening at Wintergarten, Berlin.

Friend and Downing.
Friend and Downing are out of London playing the provincial theatres. They will come back into London for a few weeks in September, when Al Friend will make his office with Chuck. Friend writes for the Player and Chuck writes for the Variety. I have been invited to take a desk also and I may accept.

Monohan at Camberwell.
The Great Monohan put on his music-hall skating performance at Camberwell this week. George has introduced a clown into his act, in addition to a dummy woman, whom he does a neat little waltz with. Monohan has accepted a few months in the German rinks, and leaves for the Continent in a few weeks.

Brilliant Lights.
Shaftesbury-avenue is well lit up during the engagement at the Palace of Nat Wills. Not only can one see at the stage-door a mammoth 100 horse-power motor, with its ever-penetrating searchlights in front; but the rear seat of the car, after the show is over, is one maze of sparklets, which resembles the northern skies in the vicinity of the Midnight Sun.

Hard to Get Back.
About the hardest proposition one can run up against just at present is the steamship companies. They are booked up solid, and if anyone can get passage on any of the big boats, why, he is a dandy. Many acts who have neglected booking their passage back will be compelled to go back steerage. Two acts I know are going on a transport to-day in order to get back in time to open their tour.

Murray's Resignation.
Paul Murray, the ever-popular booker and European representative of the William Morris Agency here in London, recently sent in his resignation to the independent king of vaudeville in America. Up to the present writing, the resignation has not been accepted, and rumour has it William Morris will sail for London about the 1st of September to induce Murray to remain in charge of his London office for another year at least.

Chuck Goes Home To-day.
London is too speedy for Chuck. In fact, Mrs. "Sime," Chuck's sister, is of the same opinion, and has called him back home to New York. Brother Jesse will pass Brother Chuck in mid-ocean, and they will exchange their brotherly greetings by wireless. Chuck chuckled and said, "I have my wireless already written. It reads, 'I am homeward bound. Keys with Britt. We are now in latitude 23, longitude 32. Figures go both ways. All's well.'"

Nick Kaufman, formerly from Rochester, N.Y., has his big troupe of expert lady cyclists at the Palace Theatre, and the act is doing great.

Herman Finck and his thirty-five expert melody producers would look fine in those gold chairs on the Palace stage.

Callahan and St. George sailed this week for America.

Barnes and Crawford sail the coming week for the States, to open on the Orpheum tour, providing they can secure passage.

The two vaudevillians, Montgomery and Moore, are playing a few weeks on the De Frece circuit.

McLallen and Carson go to Australia for twelve weeks next season.

"THE MODEL AND THE MAN."

Musical Sketch, by Seymour Hicks, Music by Frank Tours, Lyrics by C. H. Bovill, Produced at the King's Theatre, Southsea, on Monday, Aug. 15.

Miriam Vandeleur .....Miss Zena Dare
Maggie .....Miss Ivy St. Helier
Etienne .....Mr. Frank Wilson.

A house, packed from floor to ceiling, enthusiastically welcomed the latest production of Mr. Hicks, under whose personal supervision and the stage-management of Mr. Roland Chester the new play went with a swing from start to finish. The bright and tuneful music of Mr. Frank Tours, who conducted the orchestra, contributed greatly to the success of the piece. The scene is laid in the Studio of Etienne, the sculptor, and the opening discloses his latest work—a statue modelled from Miriam Vandeleur, with whom the sculptor has become enamoured. Etienne's servant, Maggie, is in love with her master; but magnanimously decides to help him in his wooing. Miriam enters the studio, and Maggie, satisfied that her master's love is returned by Miriam, informs her that the carriers who had come to transport the statue to the exhibition had smashed it. Learning from Maggie of the grief the loss of the statue would cause her master, Miriam decides to pose as the figure, and to test and, if possible, evoke a declaration of love on the part of Etienne. The latter, unaware of the trick being played on him, and imagining his soliloquies are addressed to stone, makes his declaration of love, when the supposed statue descends from the pedestal, and an explanation ensues with happy result.

Miss Zena Dare's captivating personality was employed to advantage in the character of the model. Her singing and dancing were both admirable, her principal song "If I were only a boy" being rendered in fascinating style. The Maid was played with conspicuous ability by Miss Ivy St. Helier, who shone both in humour and pathos and in singing. To Mr. Frank Wilson's fine voice and artistic impersonation of the artist lover the play owed much of its success. Miss Esther Fleming as a Model was attractive. At the conclusion of the play the curtain was raised several times in response to repeated plaudits.

Catlin's Royal Pierrots, at Great Yarmouth, are going stronger than ever, and drawing crowded houses at every performance. The concerted items are a special feature. Charles Kay continues a popular favourite, and has now added Madge Temple's "silvery lands" to his repertoire, with marked success; Will Harris is a funny comedian; T. Braham-Fox an accomplished dancer; and Reg. Belmont, an excellent accompanist, is also a brilliant soloist. Robert Turley (tenor), W. E. Rouselle (baritone), and Leslie Harold (light comedian) make up an excellent all-round company.

Big Display of Shows and Machines at Mitcham Fair.

What would our fathers have said to the amazing growth of Lavenderland Fair at Mitcham? Less than fifty years ago it would have taken half the available shows in all England to have made anything like the display that was seen at the historic fair in the present year. Without counting the large number of show concerns that had to go away on account of paucity of space, or the horde of "pirates" and undesirable providers of doubtful games, who were either bought out or came too late, the invasion of showland into Mitcham has been an amazing spectacle. A certain class of undesirable "bogus" and "blackleg" entertainers, who have no connection or interest in the legitimate business of the fair ground, men who would be tabooed by any decent showman, and not permitted to join the Showmen's Guild, rushed the various pitches on the Green, to the disgust of all well-wishers of the fair. We are given to understand that the lamentable shooting affray was the outcome of an unsuccessful attempt to extort money for surrendering a pitch. Despite all these regrettable events, the Fair was bigger and better provided with up-to-date amusements than ever before—two big shows, six small ones, ten big roundabouts and machine novelties, seven smaller ones, three sets of park swings, twenty houp-la frames, fifty stalls and refreshment barrows, every shop around the Fair catering, as well as the itinerant traders, for the enjoyment and feeding of the crowds. Over half a million people visited the Fair, and the weather conditions were perfect. It was a demonstration in force that not only Mitcham and the immediate neighbourhood, but also South London, enjoys Mitcham Fair.

On the Old Fair Green.

The Fair Green still remains the centre of attraction. Here were set out the machines of Messrs. William Wilson, John Beach and George Holmes, a bike circle, a set of swings, a bottle battery, two or three sets of Gem roundabouts, and several circular houp-la frames. The Green was, as usual, girdled with stalls, toy and other bazaars, and the refreshment stands of local traders. On the triangle of the Fair Green that forms the junction of Croydon and London-roads, on the direct tram route, were located Manders' roundabout, Gray's similar machine, and the razzle-dazzle of the White City Amusement Syndicate, Bretts' swings, several sets of Gem swings and horses, Biddall's Royal Bioscope and Variety Empire, Bedford's miniature menagerie and abnormal show, and two boxing booths, with stalls and games fixed on every inch of available space.

Shows, &c., on Private Pitches.

In the Laundry Field were located as usual the celebrated aggregation of fairground novelties controlled by H. Thurston and Sons, the chief attraction being the magnificent set of Gordon-Bennett motor-cars. Here were also Sol Elliott's school of boxers, shooting ranges by Andrews and Harris, houp-la frames by Messrs. J. Biddall, H. Barnard, and others, stalls, &c., by Andrew Harris and local traders. On the excellent private ground on the London-road Messrs. Alf. Ball and Sons pitched their tent. This year it was in very truth "pitching a tent," for next to nothing remains of the spacious show pavilion that for several years past Alf. Ball, Mitcham's favourite showman, brought to delight his patrons at the fair; the magnificent organ front, built to Messrs. Ball and Sons' order by M. Gavioli and Cie, of Paris and London, was destroyed by fire recently at Tilbury. The undaunted showman-hero of Mitcham was overwhelmed with manifestations of public sympathy. With Mr. Ball were several of the injuncted amusement caterers, amongst whom were Messrs. S. Mayne, William Manning, Joseph and John Manning. A few of the other injuncted ones were located on odd bits of ground adjoining the Fair Green. It is a sad commentary on the scheme to abolish the Fair by prohibition and injunction that highly respectable showmen, honoured and esteemed by the people, are under an injunction and the "pirates" and "undesirable" class escape unpunished.

Guild Service at Mitcham Fair.

A pleasing feature of the fair was the Guild Service held in Ball's Show (kindly lent for the occasion by the proprietor) on Sunday night. It was timed to commence at 8.20, after evensong at the Church of St. Mark's (the show being in St. Mark's parish). The curate (the Rev. Lough Fargan) read the lesson, and at the close of the service, at the request of the Guild Chaplain, addressed a few earnest words of exhortation to the congregation. The Rev. T. Horne conducted the service, and preached. The show was well filled. A large number of showpeople were present, and great satisfaction was expressed with the service, both by showpeople and their friends and neighbours for the fairtime at Mitcham. Mr. Lough Fargan was invited to become hon. local chaplain to the Guild.

Bostock and Wombwell's Royal No. 1 Menagerie at Dundee.

This famous show, larger and better than ever, concluded a four days visit to Dundee on Monday. The menagerie was located on the new Esplanade, and drew large audiences at each of the performances. The collection is a magnificent one, and contains excellent specimens of birds and beasts from the jungle, forest, prairie, and desert. The display of lions, tigers, and leopards is an unusually large one. A unique exhibit which proved of much interest to lovers of natural history was Romeo, half lion and half tiger, the value of which is about £1,000. He is a magnificent animal. Exciting performances were given by Captain Wombwell and Don Carlos. The former put a troupe of six lions through a number of clever tricks, and concluded his daring display by putting his head in a lion's jaw; while Don Carlos gave a clever show with a number of bears, the great hulking brutes showing much intelligence in obeying the commands of their trainer. The elephants Lill and Jenny were huge favourites with the younger members of the audience, who continuously fed them with snaps, biscuits, and other delicacies. The zoo is a comprehensive one, and all the animals are in the best of health. One of the most striking and pleasing features was the cleanliness of the whole establishment.

Notes from Wales.

Carmarthen August Pleasure Fair was held on the Corporation Fair Ground on Friday, but business was not good, owing to the countryfolk being busy with the hay harvest, and the attendance of young people at the fair was consequently meagre. In the evening, however, the attendance of townspeople was very large, and the various shows did a splendid business. The chief attraction was Wadbrook's Variety and Picture Palace, the pictures shown being up to date and of a humorous as well as interesting character. The variety turns were also of a high character. Olonzo Brown, the champion sand dancer, gave excellent exhibitions of dancing, while the Bohemians, in their musical entertainment, showed exceptional musical abilities, and were well received at each entertainment. Messrs. Alf North and Hill's juvenile roundabouts, Boswell's shooting saloons and coker-nut shies, Thomas Hill's coker-nut shies and swings, hoop-las, &c., were also among the other amusements, and were equally well patronised in the evening.

Notes from Yorkshire.

At South Elmsall Feast were the excellent show and machines of Messrs. G. T. Tuby and Sons, Hodson's theatre of varieties, Hague's school of boxers, Fisher's shooter and swings, and throwing games, stalls, and varieties by Messrs. Lloyd, Campfield, Percival, Silverwood, Johnson, Jones, and other caterers.

Answers to Showmen Correspondents.

Robert Moy.—No. We have no reliable figures to give you.

Vindex.—The obvious meaning of the amended Movable Dwellings is to deal with objectionable gipsy and other squatters on commons and waste lands by giving the police powers to move them on at once. The present law is that the landowner must take action by way of ejectment or injunction. Under the new Bill it is proposed to give the police power to move them off without waiting for the landowner to take action. Another point (and a novel one) is that the moving off common or waste land cannot take place until the county has provided a sufficient number of camping grounds. From the report it is obvious that only the more difficult and objectionable classes of gipsy and other campers are meant to be forced into the county camping grounds. The Bill in no way proposes to interfere with the existing right of property owners to let their land to individual tenants for camping purposes.

DASTARDLY ATTACK ON SHOWMEN AT MITCHAM FAIR.

Arising out of the invasion of Mitcham Fair Green by "pirate" showmen and gipsies—two days before the customary time—disputes arose as to the amount of compensation to be paid to the invaders to quit their holdings or to rearrange their pitches that the bigger shows and roundabouts might build on their usual ground. Henry Harris (who is quite a recent comer on the London suburban fair grounds) owns an houp-la stall. This he claimed a right to build up on the roundabout pitch occupied last year by Mr. Fred Gray, a well-known showman of the metropolitan circuit.

Mr. Gray recognised that on the principle of "first come first served" he would have to compensate the man who had stolen a march upon him and was in possession of the ground. According to the statement of Mr. Gray, it was arranged between them that Harris should move his stall and let the roundabout be built up, and that when this was done there would still be room for the houp-la stall to be erected in proximity to the roundabout. Harris was not being squeezed out by the bigger concern; he would still be able to fix up and open. The night before the fair all this had been talked out and without any apparent bad blood on either side. A sum was mentioned and agreed upon to compensate Harris for his trouble or prospective business loss. In the early hours of the opening day of the fair, when Gray's son asked Harris to remove his things and to let the roundabout be built up, Harris refused unless he was paid more money. When Mr. Gray heard of this new demand he decided not to pay it, and told his son not to build up at all. Harris a little later accosted Gray and renewed his demand for increased payment. With Mr. Gray were his son Harry and two or three showmen. Determined to give Harris no chance to create a scene, Mr. Gray and his friends moved away from Harris. It was at this point, and with hardly a word, that Harris fired four or more shots in rapid succession.

Both Gray and his son were wounded, and fell to the ground. Maria Herrick, Harry Gray's sister-in-law, rushed up to Harris and pluckily wrested the revolver from him, and the crowd, led by a policeman, seized Harris.

At the first examination of the prisoner at the Croydon County Court on the following day, Detective-Inspector Williams said that he went to Dr. Bentley's surgery, where he saw the two injured men. Frederick Gray was shot in the chest, the bullet having struck the breat bone. Harry Gray had been shot twice in the hip, the wounds being about 1½in. apart. The story of the scene at the fair was told by Constable Abbott, who said he was on duty at the Fair Green, Mitcham, when he heard the report of a firearm. On looking round he saw the prisoner with a revolver in his hand. He heard another report, and saw Mr. Gray, jun., fall to the ground. The witness rushed at the prisoner, who was about nine yards away, but before he could reach him he fired another shot. He was then seized by the crowd and thrown to the ground.

The prisoner reserved his defence. The case was remanded until Saturday, Aug. 20.

The Guild Chaplain visited the wounded men in Guy's Hospital, and found them rapidly mending, and quite cheerful. Hundreds of letters and telegrams of anxious inquiry have reached the Grays from all parts of the Showman World. Mrs. Gray (although anxious to deal separately with the great mass of correspondence) asks us to communicate, through the medium of our columns, her husband's and her own heartfelt gratitude for all the kind expressions of sympathy. We gladly do so. Mr. Strong, the London hon. Guild solicitor, has also visited the Grays at Guy's Hospital. Mr. Strong will ask the magistrates to adjourn the case for another week, as both father and son are not yet fit to attend the Court.

THE SHOWMAN'S GUILD AND MITCHAM FAIR.

The Rev. T. Horne, Guild Chaplain, has compiled a concise statement of the history of this question during the past five years. It is cast in the form of a short catechism, and gives in "Question and Answer" the salient points of the controversy.—

Q.—What claim has Mitcham to a fair?

A.—From the spacious days of Queen Elizabeth, by Charter and by custom, Mitcham has held a fair for the people on Aug. 12 and two following days.

Q.—Who has tried to abolish the Fair?

A.—A limited number of local gentlemen, who, having failed to convince the Home Secretary of the justice of their petition for abolition, have since endeavoured by prohibition and by injunction of the High Court to deter showmen from attending the Fair.

Q.—What say the people of Mitcham to the abolitionists?

A.—That they want to retain the Fair. This the people have repeatedly done—in open public meetings, in duly convened parish meetings, by petitions to the Home Office, and by returning at the last Parish Council election members distinctly pledged to preserve the Fair for the people.

Q.—What is the present position of the question?

A.—A general agreement that the best way to preserve the Fair is to remove it to a better place on the common lands. This suggestion is favoured at the Home Office and meets all the reasonable demands of those who desire to beautify the old Fair Green, and also recognises the increasing objections to a fair in the centre of the village.

Q.—What local authority can deal effectively with a scheme to remove the Fair?

A.—The Board of Conservators, (1) as being the guardians in the public interests of the common lands, and (2) as now being the owners of the Franchise of the Fair.

Q.—What rights have the showmen in the matter?

A.—They have a statutory right of petition and appeal to the Home Secretary whenever attempts are made to abolish fairs. They carry on a business that is recognised as serving a public need. Their interests as a class of entertainers and traders are perfectly legitimate. They will suffer loss and damage, hence their claim to be heard and considered in the settlement of the question.

Q.—What have showmen tried to do to preserve their own interests?

A.—They have repeatedly endeavoured to effect a wise and just settlement of the matter. Through their trade society, or Guild, they petitioned the Home Office, organised protest meetings, made representations to all the local authorities, they repeatedly tried to come to terms with the Franchise owners, and, finally, to test public Councillors, one of whom, Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, is an officer of the Guild, and entered the Council mainly in order to help forward a peaceful settlement of this question.

Q.—What are the advantages of a wise and peaceful settlement of the question and what is the best way?

A.—Undoubtedly, the best thing to do is to remove the Fair, say, to the Three Kings Common. It would on that admirable site still remain a fair primarily for the people of Mitcham. Besides all that the site would be large enough to set out a fair on the best modern lines. Still further, like the holiday fairs under the London County Council, it would supply the reasonable requirements for open-air amusement to the workers in the South London suburbs fast crowding over the Surrey border.

Q.—What would be the advantages to local ratepayers?

A.—The revenue from tolls taken every year from the showmen and stallholders would be—as the Fair grew in popularity and extent—an income that the Conservators would find useful in the upkeep and improvement of the commons under their control.

Q.—In what way can the people save their Fair?

A.—By properly approaching the Board of Conservators in a petition that will show the overwhelming number of those who desire a wise settlement—a petition that will ask the Board to take steps to remove the Fair to a new and better site. Now that at last the Conservators own the Fair Rights, it is possible for them to take action. It is for the people of Mitcham to show that wise removal and not abolition is what they desire.

It is well to reiterate what is the official attitude of the Showmen's Guild with regard to Mitcham Fair. The Guild Executive Council in 1907 clearly defined its policy. In the report for that year it is set out as follows:—

"Carefully avoiding any reference of the questions at issue to the Law Courts, your committee have rendered every possible assistance to the showmen tenants of Mitcham Fair by organising a monster public petition against the abolition of the fair, and presenting it to the Home Secretary, by organising and conducting public meetings in Mitcham itself, and by advising the showmen tenants to keep well within the authority of the Charter governing the fair, by scrupulously observing peaceful methods and by negotiating with the Board of Conservators, by petitioning the local governing bodies interested, and by endeavouring to bring about a reasonable compromise, in advocating the removal of the fair from its present congested site to a larger and better ground on Mitcham Common. The action of the Guild Executive in this important matter has been throughout of a pacific and advisory character, and your committee have been careful at all times to differentiate between the appeal to public sympathy and any reference of the matter to the arbitrament of the Law Courts."

Only so far as the question was of importance to the general interests of showmen in all parts of the United Kingdom did the Guild interest itself in the matter. Clearly the Guild was interested in preventing, by all legitimate means possible, the abolition of a fair of great popularity locally without the consent of the people, and also without the sanction of the Home Secretary as provided by statute. The Guild, acting for the whole body of organised showmen, has a clear case in this respect for action.

The London Committee of the Guild.

The Guild is a democratically governed body, with district committees to deal with local matters. Questions of local importance only are naturally dealt with by these committees. The London District Committee, so far as the Mitcham Fair defence work is a local matter, has done all the work and has provided the money to do it. The London Committee has no power to pledge the Guild or to spend its funds for purely local objects. London showmen have generously supported the Mitcham Fair Defence Fund. Every year for three years now the defence has been financed by London showmen, the general funds of the trade society only being drawn upon for work of importance to the whole fairground industry, and to Mitcham only as a part of that work.

Three years ago the Special Fund was started and every year since it has received generous support. A largely-attended meeting of the London Committee was held in Ball and Son's show, Mitcham, on Monday, Aug. 15, the last day of the fair. Mr. Alf. Ball presided. The Rev. T. Horne, in speaking of a visit he had paid to Guy's Hospital to see their two wounded members, Fred Gray and his son, Harry Gray, referred in feeling terms to the horror and detestation of the dastardly shooting affray that had laid up their two unfortunate Guildsmen in hospital. There was no single instance on record where a genuine showman had attempted such a crime. He had made inquiries, and had spoken on the matter to both the wounded men. Their statements supported the evidence of all showmen that the man who did the murderous deed was not a showman. For a year or two past he had attended fairs with throwing games, carrying on his own business in Bermondsey as a coal dealer in the winter months and visiting a few suburban fairs in the summer with a hoop-la frame. Whatever punishment was meted out to the man, he wanted it to be understood that the whole body of showpeople indignantly repudiated him as belonging in any real sense to Showland. To Mrs. Gray and Mrs. Harry Gray their sympathy went out in fullest measure. Providentially, both the father and son were progressing favourably, and he trusted that they would soon be out of the surgeon's hands and at home again.

Emphatic Condemnation of the Crime.

The following resolution was moved by Mr. James Manders, and seconded by Mr. William Wilson:—"That this meeting of showmen present at Mitcham expresses its horror and detestation of the wounding outrage on the fairground. We also emphatically deny that the man who did the crime is in any sense recognised by us as a showman." The resolution was carried unanimously.

The Guild Chaplain undertook, at the earnest request of the committee, to seek an interview with the Home Secretary and personally convey the expression of the showmen's detestation of the outrage and their utter repudiation of the man as a fellow-showman.

The Mitcham Fair Defence Fund.

In making his now annual appeal to London showmen to support the Mitcham Fair Defence Fund the Rev. T. Horne said that the detestable crime that had marred this year's fair would probably do their defence work great harm and injury. His labour and the toil of others to make friends for the travelling showmen would be thrown back, or at least materially prejudiced, by the regrettable events of the fair—first the invasion of the Green by "pirate showmen" and gipsies, eager to take advantage of the liberty of action in seizing pitches on the fairground that the unfortunate slow-moving stages of the dispute had brought about. Prohibition of the fair by the cumbersome, expensive, and ineffective method of High Court injunction was mainly, in his opinion, the creator of the present undesirable state of affairs. It gave all the advantages to the "pirate" and penalised the legitimate showman. It was but poor consolation to them to point out that year by year they had warned the abolitionists of the growing seriousness of the risk to good rule and government by the unwise action of the franchise owners to prevent the fair and to defy public sentiment. He trusted that now the fair rights were in the hands of the Conservators before another year the Charter Fair, with all its ancient rights and privileges, would be removed by the sanction of the Home Secretary to a better site, under new conditions and under full local control. For this object he and Mr. Pedgrift, with others, had been labouring, and would still labour. Their members, who claimed a lawful right to frequent the fair, dissociated themselves entirely from the "pirates." They had been obliged to make the best of the unfortunate state of affairs, and some of their members had summonses for unlawful trespass on the Green before the customary time. It was a regrettable necessity, and they would frankly admit it. The evil was accentuated by the fact that many of the real first invaders used their advantage—made their market—with the later comers, the legitimate showmen, and cleared out before the names were taken for summonses. He still had faith, despite the deeply unfortunate events of the present fair, that the sound sense and justice of the Board of Conservators and all the better elements of public opinion would find a way out of the trouble, and that the next fair would be a joyous celebration of settled peace. He commended the Mitcham Fair Defence Fund to their renewed support.

A vote of thanks to the Rev. T. Horne and Mr. F. H. Pedgrift was carried with acclamation, and the following subscriptions were then received:—

An Octogenarian Clown.

Living in retirement and, like his grand old chief, George Sanger, Mr. Wm. Matthews, the famous circus clown and circus performer, has just celebrated his eightieth birthday. Mr. Matthews, who is as hale and hearty as ever, may often be seen out riding near Liverpool, and both he and his wife, Lauretta, are an example of what hard work and plenty of open-air exercise can do. "Billy" Matthews was one of Sanger's principal artists in the old days, travelled through America with the Barnum show, was fourteen consecutive seasons at the Pavilion Theatre as clown, and has toured all over the world with his own company. Himself a fine old performer, he is father of seven daughters, of whom the following are well-known to-day:—Mme. Frasetti, Mrs. Tom Foy, Mme. Haydee, and Mme. Canze (La Foy), all of them well known in the variety world. He is still seen riding out on "old Joe," a present from Lord George Sanger to his old friend "Billy" Matthews.

Another Surrey Fair Threatened.

Haslemere Fair, which, like Mitcham Fair, dates from the spacious days of Good Queen Bess, is again threatened with abolition. The Hambledon Rural District Council is moving in the matter, with a view to petitioning the Home Secretary, under the provisions of the Abolition of Fairs Act. A similar attempt was made thirteen years ago, but it failed. The Showmen's Guild will fully consider the matter, and, if advisable, petition against the proposed abolition.

Jacob Studt's Coliseum on Tour.

This colossal show, with the switchback motor-car track and the galloping horses set of the same proprietor, are at Trowbridge this week for the flower show. Mr. Peters' new steam roundabouts, shooter, swing boats, and variety games are located on the Cattle Market, Ledbury; Scott's gallopers and amusements at at Radford; Herbert's similar concerns at Bexley, and Strickland's roundabouts, &c., are at Much Marcle, on the same circuit.

DESTRUCTION OF FRANK BOSTOCK'S MANAGERIE.

Only the other day Frank Bostock, the animal king, sent a message of sympathy and a generous donation to a brother showman whose show, struck by lightning, was burnt down. To-day Frank Bostock himself is a sufferer from a calamitous fire, the information to hand indicating the almost total destruction of one of the finest menageries ever brought together. The hundreds of thousands of visitors who visited the famous jungle at Earl's Court and at other centres in the provinces will realise the enormous loss such a priceless collection of rare animals must be. The trained animals especially can hardly ever be replaced. The world-famous show has been located at the Brussels exhibition. Together with the whole of the Luna Park shows Bostock's jungle was destroyed by the calamitous fire. A Press correspondent the day after the fire wrote:—

"The burning of Bostock's menagerie in the Kermesse was the most terrible incident of the conflagration.

"When it was seen that there was no hope of preventing the flames from spreading to this quarter, orders were given to the employees that they were on no account to attempt to save the large collection of wild animals which Mr. Bostock had on exhibition. It was feared that in any attempt to rescue them some might break loose, and an even greater panic be created among the escaping crowds.

"When the menagerie caught fire and the animals began to howl with pain, someone ordered the soldiers to shoot them one by one. Commandant Houziaux, however, noticed the danger of such a proceeding, and pointed out that there was the strongest probability of some of the crowd being hit by the bullets. He thereupon countermanded the order, and the animals were left to perish in the flames.

"Several magnificent lions, a couple of tigers, a giraffe, and several zebras were destroyed. Their screams of pain as the flames caught them could be heard all over the Exhibition, even above the roar of the flames.

"Only a single elephant and a few white asses remain out of the splendid collection. The site of the menagerie presents a terrible spectacle to-day.

"There were stories of all the beasts in the menagerie having been loosed and of lions roaming at large among the crowds. No tale was too wild to be rejected, and it is no exaggeration to say that between midnight and two o'clock in the morning three-fourths of the adult population of Brussels were in the streets heading in the direction of the Exhibition."

A later report gave some saddening details:—

"In the midst of the raging fire a number of monkeys in the menagerie found a way of escape from their cage, and one by one they crawled out of the smoke and bolted for some neighbouring trees. One gorilla returned to-day to the scene of the fire, as if trying to find its former home, but nothing has been seen of any of the others."

"Danger from fire and falling débris was slight compared with that incurred by the British officials from the animals in Bostock's menagerie, which was situated to the north-west of the British section. In it were confined several lions, tigers, panthers, a number of cobras, and a camel. As the fire ate its way towards the menagerie the fiendish roaring of the terrified beasts added another note of horror to the scene. As some of the British officials told me to-day, at every moment while they were busy fighting the fire they expected that their savage neighbours would succeed in breaking loose, and would be upon them. One tiger did break away, and, as panic mad as any of the human throng that had fought so madly to escape, dashed wildly round the fire-free portion of the grounds. Luckily it was shot in time by a party of soldiers. A camel alone was saved. The calcined remains of the other captives in the menagerie may still be seen where a lingering death overtook them."

The fire demon was indeed fully glutted at this awful fire. To Mr. Frank Bostock we tender our sincere sympathy. We know that the heart of showland is sore with grief at the thought of the dread calamity that has overtaken one of the best of showmen—a king amongst men, a veritable prince of real good fellows, as well as king of the animal world. We anxiously await further news, and trust that some of the horror of the calamity may have been exaggerated.

As we go to press, we have a message from Frank Bostock confirming the worst news of the disaster. One elephant and a monkey are all that remain of the menagerie.

ALF. BALL SUBSCRIPTION FUND.

We are confident that Mr. and Mrs. Alf. Ball's many friends in Showland will sympathise with them in this hour of calamitous loss. The destruction of the costly and beautiful Electric Lyceum by fire at Tilbury Docks recently will be a shock to many people, and its consequences terrible to Mr. and Mrs. Ball and family. It is no exaggeration to say that the hard work and well-won savings of a lifetime were spent upon the show, and now comes calamity and loss, not by any neglect on their part, but in the mysterious providence of events, struck by lightning and fired. On the Metropolitan circuit of fairs, where Ball's show is a household word, and where Alf. Ball ranks as a leader and champion of Showland, the consternation and grief will be widespread, and the sympathy most personal and real. We trust that response for contributions to the Ball Show Fire Fund will be both immediate and adequate. We strongly commend this matter to the ever generous heart of Showland.

THE LATE MISS BELLE ELMORE.

The inquest on the remains of the late Miss Belle Elmore, found beneath the cellar of the house, No. 39, Hilldrop-crescent, was reopened on Monday by Mr. Walter Schroder, the acting coroner.

After the jury had been discharged they were resworn, and viewed the remains a second time. "I must say at once," Mr. Schroder informed them, "that the probabilities are that this inquiry will be somewhat protracted. A great deal of evidence will be called."

There were three new witnesses. The first was Miss Melinda May, the secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, who stated that Mrs. Crippen was honorary treasurer of the guild.

"I last saw her alive on January 26," she said. "She was then at the rooms of the guild, and we were together some hours. She was then beautiful and bonny, and very bright—quite healthy and well."

"Had she made any complaint about illness?" inquired the coroner.

"Yes, about Christmas," replied Miss May. "She then said she had been ill during the night and had a suffocating and strangling feeling in the throat. She told me that she asked her husband to get up, and said to him, 'Peter, send for the police. I am going to die.'

"On February 2," Miss May continued, "Miss Le Neve came to the office of the guild at twenty minutes to one. Our meetings began at one. She brought me a parcel, a pass book, a cheque book, and a letter which was supposed to be from Mrs. Crippen.

"I recognised the writing as that of Dr. Crippen. The letter stated that she would be away for a few months, and asked us to elect a treasurer while she was absent."

"Have you since received any information from her?" the coroner asked.

"None whatever," was the reply.

Superintendent Froest informed the coroner that Dr. Crippen and Miss Le Neve would probably reach London in about three weeks' time, and Mr. Schroder suggested that the inquest should be adjourned for that time. Mr. Arthur Newton asked, however, that the adjournment should be for a month.

This course was agreed to, and Mr. Schroder fixed the adjourned inquest for Monday, Sept. 12.

Mr. Edwin Crouette is engaged as equestrian director for the opening of Mr. E. H. Bostock's Zoo Circus, Glasgow, on Aug. 29.

The recent fire at the Brussels Exhibition completely destroyed Luna Park Amusement Section, and its spacious grounds are therefore available for amusements and attractions of a superior kind. The exhibition is now in the very height of its success, and applications for spaces rendered vacant by the conflagration should be made immediately to Bostock, Exposition, Brussels.

In celebration of the first anniversary of the opening of the New Olympia Skating Rink, Darlington, the proprietors held a pierrot bladder fight and confetti battle on Thursday, the 11th inst. Some 200 rinkers of both sexes took the floor, whilst over 2,000 spectators visited the rink during the evening. Mr. Weldon, of West Hartlepool, succeeded in winning a handsome silver-mounted stick after a keen and amusing contest in the bladder fight. The ladies' orchestra, under Miss Handel, played choice selections of music during the evening, and the new floor manager, Mr. Percy Harrison, very capably looked after the comfort of the skaters. The management are to be congratulated on this highly-successful anniversary fête.

Lovers of music will be interested in the announcement that the Crystal Palace management have arranged with Mr. Percy Harrison for the appearance of Madame Tetrazzini at the Crystal Palace on Sept. 24, when a grand concert will be given by Madame Tetrazzini, supported by a company of well-known artists. On several occasions this gifted artist has expressed her desire to sing at the Crystal Palace, and this fact is not surprising, for the huge auditorium of the centre transept will suit her magnificent voice to perfection.

The eleventh annual National Band Festival will be held at the Crystal Palace on Saturday, Oct. 1, when bands of all descriptions and from all over the country will be competing for trophies and cash prizes of the value of £2,000. The festival was instituted by the late Sir Arthur Sullivan and Mr. J. Henry Iles in 1900, when forty-seven bands entered. It is confidently expected that at least 200 bands will take part in this year's festival, hailing from all parts of the United Kingdom. All through the day the competitions will be held in various parts of the Palace and grounds.

SONG PIRACY.

At Guildhall, on Friday, the 12th, before Mr. Alderman Cooper, there was a prosecution which, although of a grave nature, provoked a good deal of merriment from the intermingling of the words of popular songs—comic and sentimental—with legal phraseology. The accused, who are charged with conspiring together between May 1 and June 28 to print and publish for the purpose of sale the words of copyright songs, with intent to injure and prejudice the owners of the copyright, were:—

Albert Bowden, 29, of 11, Middlesex-street, coffee-house keeper;

Abraham Kinzett, 55, bookseller, Wick-road, Hackney;

Philip Fleming Bokenham, 32, printer, Howson-road, Brockley; and John Wesley Puddefoot, 51, printer, of the Milton Press, Milton House, East End-road, Finchley.

Mr. Oddie was counsel for the prosecution; Mr. Harry Myers appeared for Bowden, Bokenham, and Kinzett, and Mr. Ralph Raphael for Puddefoot.

In opening the case, Mr. Oddie said the accused were charged with conspiring to print and publish, and have in their possession for the purpose of sale, the words of copyright songs without authority. The proprietors of the songs in question were Messrs. Boosey, Messrs. Chappell, Von Tilzer and Co. (Ltd.), and Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, who had licensed Messrs. McGlennon and Co., Ltd., to publish the works, the latter firm, of course, paying a consideration for the right.

For some time past Messrs. McGlennon and Co. had been aware that large quantities of pirated versions of these songs had been sold in the streets of London and elsewhere, and as the result of inquiries had discovered that there was a systematic and organised conspiracy by the four accused to produce pirated copies of these songs. The sheets were printed by Puddefoot and Bokenham in large numbers, and despatched to 8, Hutchinson-street, Aldgate, where Kinzett rented a room, which was a sort of central store or warehouse.

Witnesses were called to prove the copyright of various songs. "Let's all go down the Strand," "The Girl in the Clogs and Shawl," and "Sweet Caroline" were the first dealt with, the proceedings becoming at once more lively.

Mr. Raphael suggested that prosecuting counsel, to vary the monotony, might sing these songs.

Mr. Myers: With instrumental accompaniment.

Mr. Oddie: My friends can do either if they please in cross-examination.

Proceeding to examine a witness, Mr. Oddie continued, "I wish I lived next door to you."

Mr. Oddie: I am not stating that as a fact, but I am directing the witness's attention to a song bearing that title.

Mr. Savill (Chief Clerk): What about "Yip-i-addy-i-ay"?

Mr. Oddie: That's coming; but now I'm on "I should like to be by the seaside."

Mr. Savill (to the Magistrate): Would you like to go through these songs, sir?

Alderman Cooper (modestly): No, thank you.

Mr. Myers: Perhaps his worship would prefer to do so in a more suitable place.

"Yip-i-addy-i-ay" came next.

Mr. Oddie: Now you're all right, Mr. Savill.

The clerk, however, had some difficulty in recording the title on the depositions, the combination of syllables being rather uncommon.

Mr. Felix McGlennon, managing-director of McGlennon and Co., Ltd., told the Court that the infringement of their rights by pirated copies of songs being sold had involved them in a loss of well over £500 a year.

The case was adjourned.

It should be mentioned that the accused were recently prosecuted for conspiring to sell pirated copies of Oscar Wilde's "De Profundis," and were convicted. Bowden now appears on a summons, the others having been brought up from Wormwood Scrubs on an order of the Home Secretary. Bail was allowed.

The company entitled the Margate Palace, Ltd., has approached the Corporation of the town with a view to their carrying out, at the Council's own cost, works of foreshore reclamation between the stone pier and the Kursaal property, so as to give an entrance to the property of the Margate Palace, Ltd. In consideration of this, the company proposed to give up a portion of the triangular piece of land in front of Bankside, already reclaimed, and grant a right of way to the public over the sea-wall in front of their property.

The company also made the suggestion that steps should be constructed from Fort Point to the promenade below, and that an exchange of a small portion of Fort Green should be made for a portion of the Kursaal property, including a strip of land, being part of the site on which the two shops in Fort-road, belonging to the company, are now built.

The proposal had been considered by the Works Committee, which was unable to recommend the Council to acquiesce. The Works Committee also reported that the notice given to the owners of the Kursaal property to put the bridge leading from the jetty to the Kursaal site and structure at Fort Point into a proper state of repair or remove same had not been complied with. A letter was subsequently received from Messrs. Lumley and Lumley to the effect that Mr. Kellett was arranging for the repair of the bridge. It was decided to adjourn the consideration of the matter for two months.

Alderman Hermitage, chairman of the Works Committee, explained at a recent meeting that the Committee felt great responsibility over the proposal from the Margate Palace, Ltd. If carried out, the work would undoubtedly be a great improvement, but they could not recommend acceptance of the proposal because it would land them into the expenditure of some thousands of pounds. Part of the offer was also illegal because they could not extend the land. They hoped, however, something might be done to improve this black spot on their coast.

Earlier in the meeting a petition was read from twenty-one occupiers in Fort Crescent, asking for the removal of a hoarding which had been erected on the cliffs at the Fort by the Margate Palace, Ltd., as it "seriously interfered with their view and their living." It was decided to consider the matter in the Works Committee.

Miss Dora Hammersley and Mr. Charles Kean, who have just completed a successful dramatic stock season at the Gaiety, Dundee, were accorded a farewell benefit at the Foresters' Hall on Monday evening, when two immense audiences at both houses testified to the popularity of these artists. The programme was a varied and very enjoyable one. A dramatic episode, entitled The Ways of Women, by Mr. Charles Kean, was much applauded, as was also a clever comedy duologue, Kiss Your Manager, also from the versatile pen of Mr. Kean. Enjoyable items were contributed by Johnson and Petrie, instrumentalists; Mr. Pat Bell, Irish comedian; Miss Clarise Jenner, soubrette and mandolinist; Mr. William Miller, baritone; Mr. Ted Mooney, comedian; Miss Bridget McGann, vocalist; the Two Farrells, in song and dance; Mr. Johnny Beveridge, society entertainer; the Twin Sisters McKenzie, dontiste and dancers; and Master George Bryan, international dancer.

JOHN SCOTT'S ROYAL BRITISH CIRCUS.

WANTED, Engagement for the Winter Season. Proprietors or Managers of Circuses, Skating Rinks, Zoo Gardens, or any Large Halls, please note: We can supply a first-class company of riders, specialities, clowns, and acts of every description. An incomparable stud of horses and ponies which, without exaggeration, will compare favourably with the best Continental studs. Arrangements may be made for our own family only, or for a complete Circus, with constant changes, supernumeries, and attendants in livery. An unequalled plant of effective lithographic printing. We have acquired the services of Mr. Joe Hastings, late manager of the West Bromwich Hippodrome and Crystal Palace Circus, as Equestrian Director. Modern spectacles produced, augmented by the engagement of some of the best riders in Europe if necessary. The time is ripe for a first-class circus on modern principles. Ancient methods superseded by the requirements of our time.

PLEASE NOTE.—NO DEPUTIES WILL BE ACCEPTED AT REHEARSALS.

Special provision has been made at each theatre for the exhibition of loose photographs. Artistes are requested to supply these to the Manager on reaching the theatre, and they will be returned in good condition at the end of the week.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.—All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier. Artists employing agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents. New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our Districts Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow :—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, and DISTRICT.—MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.
LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, and DISTRICT.—MR. PERCIVAL CRAIG, Empire Theatre, Bradford.
BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.
LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HORACE COLE, The Empire, Liverpool.
SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.—MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.
LONDON DISTRICT.—MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.
TOURS COMMITTEE.—LLEWELLYN JOHNS and DISTRICT MANAGERS.
EMPIRE THEATRE, SOUTH SHIELDS.—Artists and Agents wishing to submit TRIALS for their Acts in the North, should apply to the Manager, as Matinées are held every Wednesday for that purpose.

N.B.—MR. OSWALD STOLL or MR. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously. Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.—Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill matter, blocks, pictorials, &c., for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices. IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities. ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

Being a digest of the Law relating to Theatres and Music Halls, and containing chapters on Theatrical Contracts, Theatrical, Music and Dancing, and Excise Licences, Dramatic and Musical Copyright, &c., with an Appendix containing the Acts of Parliament relating thereto, and the regulations of the London County Council and the Lord Chamberlain, by

ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (London), Solicitor,

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS—

THE ERA, July 30, 1910.
Important changes in the law affecting the amusement professions have been made since the issue, nine years ago, of the second edition of Mr. Albert A. Strong's valuable book on Theatrical and Musical Law, and the third edition, just published, comes opportunely to hand. The work has been greatly enlarged, upwards of sixty additional pages being required to accommodate the mass of new information. The publication has been brought as nearly as possible up to date, and within its pages will be found analyses of important measures which have been adopted both in Parliament and out. There is, for instance, the full text of the recent Berlin Convention, and the new Copyright Act of the United States. The awards governing the relations between managers, artists, and agents are reproduced in their entirety, and a number of fresh cases illustrating the effect of the barring clauses is included.
The Musical Copyright Act, by which tardy justice was secured to song-writers and publishers, is given in full, and a digest of the measure, bringing out its salient features is also printed. A whole chapter is now devoted to the subject of children on the stage, and the important question of the Workmen's Compensation Act is exhaustively dealt with. All the decisions of the Courts affecting theatres and music-halls are referred to, many notable cases being recalled. The law governing dramatic and musical copyright is defined as clearly as its intricacies will allow, and a reliable indication of the methods to be adopted in securing protection is afforded. The progress made in the question of licensing has been too slow to allow of more than a reproduction of the terms of agreement entered into between the representatives of theatres and music-halls regarding sketches, but pronouncements under that heading are numerous.

THE ENCORE, May 26, 1910.
We have just received the third edition of Mr. Albert A. Strong's book on Theatrical and Musical Law, which is published at "The Era" Office, 5, Tavistock Street, Strand. Since the second edition of this work was published—nine years—many changes have taken place in the laws relating to entertainments, and these have necessitated a considerable enlargement of the volume. Full texts of the recent Berlin Convention and the United States Copyright Law are included in this edition, in which is also published the awards governing the relations between artists, agents, and managers. A number of new cases are also cited illustrating the effects of the barring clause. The Musical Copyright Act, children on the stage, the sketch question, and the Workmen's Compensation Act are all fully dealt with and in a readable and easy style, as free as possible from legal phraseology and technicalities. It is a legal axiom that ignorance of the law is no excuse for breaking it, and, therefore, it behoves everyone connected with the entertainment world to make himself acquainted with the law as it stands in relation to the profession or business in which he may be engaged. To every one connected with the Drama or Variety Mr. Strong's book is a necessity, and this last edition is so comprehensive that anyone who consults it can have no possible excuse for infringing the law on the ground of ignorance. The work will, no doubt, have a ready and rapid sale, for all artists, managers, and agents should have it at hand.

THE FINANCIAL NEWS, June 13, 1910.
In view of the frequent litigation concerning theatrical matters there can be no doubt as to the usefulness of this little book to those whom it concerns, and, apart from its usefulness, it is really quite an interesting little volume, in saying which we are paying tribute to Mr. Strong's lucid methods of explaining the intricacies of the law. He has avoided legal terms as far as possible, and theatrical cases exemplifying legal principles he has given in full. To make this, the third, edition as complete and useful as possible, Acts of Parliament relating to theatrical matters and the regulations of the Lord Chamberlain and London County Council are set out in full in the appendix, with the text of the recent Berlin Convention and the new Copyright Act of the United States.

THE PERFORMER, May 12, 1910.
THE ARTIST'S LEGAL HANDBOOK.
We welcome a third edition of Mr. Albert A. Strong's "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" Offices), as it is nine years since the second appeared, and much has happened since then, not least the foundation of the V.A.F. and the resultant Award of 1907. This will be found incorporated in the now greatly-improved and extended Appendix of Statutes, ranging from the Disorderly Houses Act of 1751, to last year's L.C.C. Cinematograph regulations. As far as is possible with further developments in daily progress, this invaluable work of legal reference for all interested in the entertainment profession has been brought up-to-date. Sixty pages have been added, and the whole revised and rendered easier of reference by the re-arrangements that have been made, and the numerous marginal headings that have been introduced. Strong, on "Dramatic and Musical Law," may be regarded as the layman's complete authority on the subject, whether he be PROPRIETOR, MANAGER, or ARTIST, and with a lucid explanation of the law so readily available, the artist will be wise to consult its pages before venturing on new contracts and agreements, whether as employed or—in these days of "combinations," sketches, troupes, and what not—as employer.

To the Publisher.
1, Renfrew-road, Lambeth, S.E.
15th June, 1910.
My Dear Sir,—
I have had an opportunity of looking into the third edition of Mr. Albert Strong's "Dramatic and Musical Law," published from your office recently, and I have pleasure in testifying to the great value I have found the previous editions in my practice among ladies and gentlemen connected with the profession for which your valuable paper caters so admirably.
That Mr. Strong has had a wide experience in the matters with which he deals so ably in his book is evidenced by the lucid yet exhaustive manner in which he has treated the various subjects therein, and this last edition is eloquent testimony of the care and ability which he bestows upon his work.
Brought thoroughly up to date it will without doubt find a wide circle of usefulness among the profession whose contracts, Mr. Strong aptly remarks, are so fruitful a source of litigation.
Believe me,
Yours very faithfully,
W. H. ARMSTRONG.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERAMAN.—POOLE'S PICTURE PALACE.—Lessee, Mr. John Poole; Manager, Mr. Robert Tebbitt.—The Wulfrunas, comedy acrobats, in their speciality, "Fun in a Café," cause much laughter; Maud St. Malo and Harry Coombs in their song scena are well received; and Sam Williams, singing comedian, meets with success.

ABERDARE. — NEW THEATRE.—Lessees, The Aberdare Public Hall, Theatre, and Billposting Co., Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Z. Andrews; Acting-Manager, Mr. B. Richards.—Mr. Oswald Cray's company is here in When it was Dark. Mr. Oswald Cray undertakes the rôle of the Rev. Basil Gortre with marked success; Mr. C. Wordley Hulse plays admirably as Constantine Schwabe; Mr. Vincent W. Carlyle capably represents Sir Robert Llewellyn; as the Rev. Mr. Byars Mr. Walter Manfree is good and the same can be said of Mr. Sydney Claydon as Charlie Gayfly; Miss Lilian Herries is an excellent Gertrude Hunt, and Miss Rosalie Notrelle as Helena Byars is decidedly good.

NEW EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Victor W. Rowe; Manager, Mr. Arthur Norton.—At the top of the bill here are the Whitworth Trio, expert trick cyclists, who are highly appreciated; Bertha McHamdon in her speciality musical act deserves praise; Phil Kaufman, refined coon singer and dancer, wins applause; Miss Jennie Alexander, child mimic, is also very good; and the pictures shown are interesting.

ABERDEEN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Robert Arthur Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Messrs. Chappell and Company, Ltd., present "The Grotesques" at His Majesty's Theatre this week. The entertainment provided is of a delightful and refreshing nature. The company includes Messrs. Cecil Cook, James Watts, Hugh Bayly, Harry Harmer, Maurice Besly, and Misses Dorothy Doria, Elsie English, and Kathleen Severn. A Village Concert is one of the principal features of the entertainment.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Percy H. Gallaghan.—Amy Anderson and her entertainers are features of this week's Palace show. They present The Banana Queen. The Permane Brothers give an inimitable representation of a "Nightingale's Courtship"; Fatmah Diard, an American vocalist, sings well; McLallen and Carson give a clever display of dancing and roller skating; Gladys Revell, as a musical comedienne, pleases grave and gay; Syd Walker is irresistibly funny as an unfortunate debt collector; and Josh Dixon as "The North Explorer" and "The Promoted Policeman" is a distinct success.

THE TIVOLI.—Proprietors, The Tivoli (Aberdeen), Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—The Kellinos are acrobatic artists of more than ordinary excellence. The sketch which they introduce, On the Road, is cleverly executed; Big Jock Sinclair and Wee Grace Whiteford present Getting Even; Martinette and Wallace are coloured instrumentalists of ability; Marjory Lawrence sings and dances with skill; the Daimlers are comedians and dancers of marked power; Lily Eaton sings well; Jack Rae's comic juggling is attractive; and Mr. J. W. Gallager, with quip and crank, and general buffoonery, proves a prime favourite.

ABERTILLERY.—PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; Manager, Mr. E. Price.—Mr. Percy Honri and his colossal combine in the musical scenic phantasy Concordia attracted a crowded house on Monday. The company also includes: Five May Girls, vocalists and dancers; Harry Tomp, the popular comedian; Sisters Mafrey, rag-time dancers; Tom Lee, chorus comedian; Ada Galley, lady juggler on the silver wire; Stanley Waller, Buttons at the piano; Kitty Leon, comedienne and dancer; and Nash and Noel, comedians and dancers.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Mr. Allan Wilkie and company are here in a capital selection of Shakespearean and standard plays. The Merchant of Venice was staged on the opening night, when Mr. Wilkie as Shylock gave a portrayal marked by power and energy. As Portia, Miss F. Hunter Watts was charming, admirably combining grace and dignity; Miss May Dallas as Nerissa was excellent; and Miss Hilda Plowright gave a good representation of Jessica. Mr. W. Henry Hargreaves played Bassanio in capital style; Mr. Philip Gordon was most amusing as Lancelot Gobbo; Mr. Herbert Mansfield's portrayal of Antonio was a complete success; Gratiano found an excellent exponent in Mr. Sinclair Neill; Mr. John Paley made a careful and dignified Prince of Morocco; Mr. Houston Meharry presented a fine study of the Duke of Venice; and Mr. F. Sullivan was all that could be desired as Old Gobbo. The Taming of the Shrew, Twelfth Night, The Sleigh Bells, with The King and the Miller, and Othello are also in the bill.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—Tom Davis Trio, in their marvellous and sensational cycling act, "Motoring in Mid-Air," top the bill here, and are successful in arousing the greatest enthusiasm; the Four Vagabonds contribute one of the best turns of the evening, as humorous vocalists; the Two Countees are amusing in comedy and pleasing in harmony; Spry and Monti receive deserved appreciation in a mirth-provoking skit entitled The Erratic Songwriter; Rolando Martin is a comedian of merit; Clare and Pastor are refined speciality artists; and Dot Hardy, character comedienne, creates much laughter.

ALDERSHOT.—ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Gladwin.—The Great Raymond, American fun maker and magician, tops the bill with two excellent performances. Included in his first turn is a series of original mystical surprises and comic conjuring effects, Japanese magic, fancy bon-bons, an extraordinary sharp-shooting act, a humorous lesson in cooking, the Witch's Cavern, introducing "Zeenah, the girl from Nowhere," and the Boy Scout's Dream. Each and everyone of these items shows the remarkable skill of Mr. Raymond, who is vociferously applauded. In his second performance Mr. Raymond presents "The Hand of Fate," and many other equally clever and mystifying items. Les Grossi, Continental dancers, delight the audience with "La danse des Apaches." Little Sunbeam, styled as Marie Lloyd in miniature, provokes applause for her singing and dancing; Morris and Moore provide a clever dancing turn; Fred Dunstone as a comedian does well; Luella Cross, comedienne and vocalist, is a great favourite, whilst Ryde and Breeman, acrobatic eccentrics, are clever.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—For the Wakes holidays Mr. Revill has secured a play by Mr. Charles Darrell entitled What a Man Made Her, and the company producing it is Miss Renee Glendower's. Miss Glendower, as the heroine, brings to her interpretation of Janet McAllister a sweetness and a naturalness of manner which are extremely winning; Mr. Frederick W. Freeman is manly and dignified as Dr. Mark Haven, subsequently the Earl of Saxon Royal; Mr. Chas. K. Francis scores as Sir Ernest Cavendish; in stage villainy of the frock-coated order Mr. W. J. Butler excels; Mr. Max Copland imparts eccentric humour to the story as the rich Jew usurer; Miss Dorothy Dewhurst as Deborah is spirited, sweet, and winning, and Miss Nora Kingsley as the Dowager Countess interprets admirably the manners of the society woman; Miss Beatrice Shirley as Lady Thora has some tragic passages, to which she does complete justice.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Mason; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jesse Burslem.—Mr. H. Foxwell's company has possession of the Empire stage this week, and is drawing holiday audiences with the stirring drama, A Broken Heart. Miss Dorothy Haigh and Mr. Jno. L. Millward sustain with dramatic power and distinctive skill prominent characters in the piece, the latter as John Barnard, a master-blacksmith, and the former as Mary, his wife; Mr. Denis Hogan scores as Stephen Raylton; Mr. Newton Pearce as Tony Tibbets gives a clever study of eccentric humour; Mr. Vernon Travers as Gash Gills is, as described, a social terror; and Mr. Eric Vayne acts with characteristic energy the part of a village curate; Miss Nelly Hope is matronly and sympathetic as Mrs. Barnard, and Miss Nancy Mitchell makes a good Sally Travner; Miss Daisy Rochefort is interesting as the child, and Miss Mamy Thorpe, as Grace Fanshaw, shows ability.

AYR.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—Mr. F. Wybert Clive's company is presenting The Outcast of the Family. In the title-rôle Mr. Jack McCaig displays considerable talent; and as the scheming cousin Mr. Bert Oates plays a difficult part with credit. Mr. Wybert Clive, Mr. Tom Roydon, Mr. Tom Armitage, and Mr. Edward W. Cudd are worthy of mention; and the three ladies of the company—Miss Elsie Shelton, Miss Maud Leslie-Cudd, and Miss Freda Beckett—play their respective parts with success.

BARNSTAPLE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Bridge Trustees; Manager, Mr. Harry Ashton. Mr. Bannister Howard's company has presented When Knights Were Bold here for two evenings before large and highly appreciative audiences; Mr. Sam Lyson's pranks and whimsicalities kept the house in continuous laughter; Mr. Alec Forbes as Isaacson depicted the scheming Jew with forceful effect, being ably backed up by Mr. C. Monde as Sir Brian; Mr. Bannister Howard, jun., made a favourable impression as the ubiquitous Whittle; Mr. C. Gifford and Mr. G. E. Hall contributed in no small measure to the general success; quite a spirited performance of Lady Rowena was given by Miss Elsie Roberts; Miss Nelly Murray and Miss May Romayne depicted with vivacity the irresponsible schoolgirls; and Miss Alice M. Maude's Hon. Mrs. Waldegrave showed dignity and feeling.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. Arthur Shelton's company is here in Beauty and the Barge. Mr. Maitland Marler as Captain Barley gives a capital portrayal; Mr. Russell Davies is admirable as Lieut. Seton Boyne, R.N.; Miss Hilda Vaughan as Ethel Smedley gives a charming portrayal; Mr. Frank Lilliput as Porter, Miss Ethel Stalman as Mrs. Porter, Mrs. Henry Renouf as Mrs. Baldwin, Mr. Fred Lake as John Dibbs, Mr. Ivor Bernard as Adolphus, and Mr. Gerald Carter as Major Smedley, and the remainder of the cast leave nothing to be desired.

HIS MAJESTY'S.—Lessees, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—The Blue Myths, society entertainers, are here for a short season. A bright and exceedingly clever programme of songs, choruses, opera scenes, and recitations is given.

TIVOLI.—Lessee, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Wood.—Tarro Miyake, the ju-jitsu wrestler, is the attraction here this week. Miss Jennie Johns, James Curwell, Dan Daley, O'Garison Brothers, Lucy Lind, and Vernon's Bioscope are also on the programme.

HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Fred Newman's picture and variety company are still drawing good houses here.

BARRY DOCK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Manager, Mr. Hamilton Warden; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Frank Dure. —The Cingalee is presented here this week by Mr. Haldane Crichton's company. Mr. HyHon Warde is a success as Chambuddy Ram; Miss Isa Bowman played the part of Nanoya admirably; while Miss Florrie Greensmith was a charming Peggy. Miss Ray Anderson, a favourite here, played the part of Lady Patricia Vane with credit; Mr. Frank Lennard makes an imposing Boomhamba; Mr. Frank Barclay does well as the Hon. Harry Vereker; Mr. Herbert Franklen is a typical Bobby Warren; and Mr. Hillier Le Maistre in the rôle of Sir Peter Loftus is all that could be desired. Miss Winifred Stone in her dances is remarkably clever. Her "Pas Seul" deserves special notice.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint; Manager, Mr. W. W. Minto.—A strong programme is presented by Mr. Vint this week. Bonar and Jess are a pair of clever quick-change artists; Renz Brothers are smart acrobats; while Tommy Clifford, as a ventriloquist, gives a good show. Mint and Mart are successful speciality artists and comedy cyclists. The pictures please.

BATH.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—The romantic sketch The Gambler was played here on Monday by F. S. Peake, Miss Dora Davies, and two gentlemen whose names are not given. Leonard Charburn's Young Stars (twelve in number), under the direction of R. L. Griffiths, appear in a vocal scena A Picnic up the River; Danvers and Rosslyn have a vocal burlesque piano duologue A Pantomime Boy, which is full of racy humour; the Cedrics submit an entertaining comedy and juggling act "Chish and Fips"; and two comedians, Chas. Vincent and Fred Ward, each have plenty of supporters to enjoy their ditties; Vela, comedy wire performer, is amusing.

SYDNEY GARDENS.—The Queen's Courtiers, under the direction of Mr. Herbert Dickeson, are the latest concert costume party to visit Bath, and in their endeavour to amuse can successfully challenge comparison with any troupe that has previously appeared locally.

BEDFORD.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Licensee, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Manager, Mr. Albert Leigh; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—Large houses are the rule here. Fred Russell and Lilian Held, vaudeville entertainers, are a smart turn; Archie Pitt's messenger boy song is productive of much merriment; Les Surpriskis, a couple of lady trapeze artists, come in for a deal of applause; and Rose Cambrey and Millie Doris contribute some excellent songs; Nellie Denver is a clever juvenile artist; and Mr. George Carncross and company appear in Sleigh Bells. The Bioscope concludes.

BELFAST.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. William Greet's company opened here on Monday with The Sign of the Cross, Mr. W. Lawson Butt, who has a fine stage presence, admirably sustained the rôle of Marcus Superbus; Miss Evelyn Hope depicts the self-sacrificing Mercia with undoubted skill; Mr. Bernard Elliott is effective as Nero; and a powerful interpretation of the part of Tigellinus is submitted by Mr. Charles Aldred. Some humour is infused into the rôle of Glabrio by Mr. Frank Wood; and Stephanus is capably sustained by Miss Winifred Delevante. Mr. Walter Fleets does well as Favius; and Miss Mabel Cooke is all that could possibly be desired as Poppæa. Miss Dorothy Lart creditably sustains the rôle of Berenice; and Miss Esme Lee is good as Dacia.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—The attraction here this week is the original melodrama entitled A Woman of Two Lives, produced by Miss Hilda Beverley and company. Miss Beverley herself plays the dual rôle of Ogarita and Angela Fenton with consummate skill; and Mr. Herbert Pearson appears to advantage as Captain Hon. Travers West. In the difficult rôle of Drampardi Lares Miss Mary Brammer is effective; Mr. Jack Armitage furnishes a capital impersonation of Lieutenant Lord Billy Tremaine; Miss Louis Gilmore is deserving of praise for her clever interpretation of Lady Arabella Mountphayton; and Mr. James Jarrett handles the rôle of Garda Khan with credit. Mr. E. Hall Eldon is an amusing Dick Smarter; and a vivacious representative of Lottie London is found in Miss Dorothy Hildebrande. Mr. Arthur Swaine is well suited as Colonel St. Aubrey Fenton.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs. —The leading feature here is the farcical episode entitled A Man of Spirit, presented, with undeniable success, by Daley Cooper and Miss Mabel Lait; Miss Alexandra Dagmar, the accomplished comedienne, makes a big hit with her songs, so charmingly rendered, and up-to-date patter; and the feats of the Achmed Ibrahim Troupe of Arabs have created quite a sensation. Muir and Bartlett evoke unbounded merriment with their well-acted sketch The Collar Stud; Mr. Will Rhodes is aptly described as a droll comedian; and the dancing of Mr. Billy French is certainly very smart. Also here are Karl Cynaki, one-man band; Les Zelovas, acrobatic equilibrists; Moon and Morris, comedians and dancers; and the Hipposcope.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. C. Laidler.—The star here this week is the celebrated dancer Ameta, presented by Richard Klegin, whose wonderful terpsichorean display has aroused much enthusiasm; a welcome return visit is being paid by Mr. James Stewart, the tramp at the piano, whose act is one of the features of the programme; Mount Stephens and Harry Rennior, smart comedians, are also clever dancers; and Miss Elsie Kerry, a fascinating comedienne, sings some catchy chorus songs, especially "T'pperary," which meet with a great reception; Mr. Walter Wade presents his new monologue Sandy McGregor; and also appearing are Miss Annie Braddan, the Manx girl; Vincent, acrobatic table expert; and the Bioscope.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—A fine series of pictures are being exhibited here this week, including The Face at the Window, The Stuff That Americans Are Made Of, True to His Duty, &c. The vaudeville element is sustained by the Nicholsons, comedy couple, and Mr. Dan Derry, an exceedingly humorous Irish ventriloquist.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Rogers.—Under the direction of the courteous manager, who knows what pleases his ever-increasing clientèle, some beautiful films have been shown here, including The Girl in the Barracks, The Call of the Heart, The Fruit of Vengeance, &c. Miss Mary Golding's illustrated songs command much success.

PRINCESS PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Captain T. A. Blake.—Among many interesting films produced here may be mentioned The Silversmith of King Louis XI., The Trail, Marco's Swan Song, &c. Messrs. Murray and Forsyth, comedians, appear nightly, and afford every satisfaction.

BILSTON. — ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Edwin C. Jazon; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. J. Tunstall.—Appearing here this week are De Lilo and Metz, comedy jugglers, and the Rurals, in their clever musical scena.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Herbert M. King.—During the summer months this theatre has been run on the twice-nightly system. The regular autumn season of single performances commenced on Monday with Mr. Douglas Bruce's company in The Girl Who Lost Her Character, which was received with many marks of approval. Rose Seymour has an admirable representative in Miss Dorothy Thayer; and Miss Letitia Rushforth enacts the difficult and unpopular rôle of Marion Franklyn with much artistic skill. The evil genius of the piece, Captain Caversham, is capitally played by Mr. Herbert Morgan; and Mr. Charles Sparrow is well suited as Jack Johnson. Other prominent characters are adequately filled by Mr. Walter Kellson, Mr. Charles Ashwell, Mr. Allan Carruthers, and Miss Lillian Drake; and the production has every assistance in the way of scenic effect.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Keating.—A capital combination includes Miss Maidie Scott, a talented comedienne, and an established favourite here; Mr. Charles R. Whittle, the popular comedian; the Brothers Horne, in an amusing boxing sketch; the Seven Bramusas, a clever troupe of instrumentalists; Mr. Fred Barnes, a talented vocalist; Alfred Wood and company, in the farcical episode Ten Minutes; Hughes and Elliott, good song-and-dance artists; Mr. George Lambton, an excellent light comedian; Mr. Ted Waite, a versatile comedian; and Brown's Royal Bioscope. Overflowing houses are attracted twice nightly.

HIPPODROME.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston.—Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Kimberley's company in Her Secret Lover constitute a strong attraction. Miss Laura Walker is prominent with an excellent portrayal of Ivy Seymour; Mr. Stephen Langton as Gilbert Seymour acquits himself with distinction; Mr. Alfred Stretton accords valuable assistance as John Strange; and a fine cast also includes Mr. Walter H. Wilson, Miss Flora Leslie, and Miss Lynn Darlington.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS, ROCK FERRY.—General-Managers, Messrs. B. Allandale and L. Blattner; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry A. Dooley.—Mr. Kennedy Allen, the popular comedian, heads the company, which also includes Mr. Martin Pitts, Mr. Albert Royle, Miss Felicia Firmin, Miss Ivy Broadfoot, Mr. Tim O'Connor, and Mr. H. Robinson.

BIRMINGHAM. — PRINCE OF WALES'. — Lessees, Messrs. Rodgers, Ltd.; Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. F. Graham; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Johnston.—Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company, in the merry farce The Naked Truth, is enjoying a successful week's stay. Mr. Stanley Logan as Bunny is the shining light, and he carries a weight of responsibility with wonderful credit. He comes in for a good share of applause. Miss Violet Ley as Mrs. Hayter creates an excellent impression; and Miss Kathleen Maude is well to the fore in the character of Norah. Mr. Whitling, Mr. Erskine Lang, Miss Ormonde Wynne, and Miss Dora Fellowes are also good. The play is preceded by a bright little sketch, entitled Feed the Brute.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest.—In a répertoire of dramatic plays, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Draycott's company draws crowded houses. On Monday and Tuesday evenings A Modern Adventuress was staged; on Wednesday matinée and evening performances of The Colleen Bawn were greatly appreciated; Thursday and Saturday evenings were devoted to The Shaughraun; and on Friday the company presented Shadows of a Great City. Mr. and Mrs. Draycott are responsible for a wonderful amount of clever work, and they have the support of a capable combination, including Mr. St. John Stuart, Mr. Clinton Baddeley, Mr. Joseph Magrath, Mr. J. Dobson Clyde, Mr. Theo Balfour, Miss Nana Flensberg, and Miss Shirley Dalton.

BORDESLEY PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Mark Lorne.—A strong melodrama, entitled Was She to Blame? is proving a very effective draw this week. It has a delightful country setting, and there are all the conventional figures that go to make up a successful piece. Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Kimberley, Travis Green, and Arthur Hinton's company is responsible for the production. Miss Nancy Roberts is a popular figure in the character of the vicar's daughter; and Miss Helene Forest portrays a striking part cleverly as Mrs. Kate Roselle. Mr. Charles Marsh as William Clark and Mr. J. A. Wilson as Captain George Courtney also take leading parts.

METROPOLE.—Proprietor, Mr. Andrew Melville; Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—Stirring drama is provided by Mr. John F. Preston's powerful company in Soldiers of the Queen. A feature of the piece are the clever tableaux which conclude each act. The principal characters are very capably portrayed. Mr. Preston undertakes an onerous rôle as Jack Willoughby, and is a big favourite; Miss Mabelle F. Barlow scores a triumph in a difficult dual rôle; Mr. W. Howard Barlow as Hans Muller is also noteworthy; Mr. Francis Everard shines in a double part; and other clever persons in the cast are Mr. Arthur P. Leo, Mr. F. C. Clark, Mr. E. G. Cove, Miss Rose Beryl, Miss Dolly Wright, and Miss Lily Pearce.

ASTON THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lewis Chapman.—The adventures of Nick Carter, the great detective, are nightly thrilling large audiences at this theatre. Mr. J. Forbes Knowles and Harry Masterman's company have arranged a production of the kind that appeals to all shades of theatre-goers, and the piece is meeting with deserved success. Mr. Knowles proves himself a resourceful actor in the title rôle; Miss Helena Walbran provides many clever touches as Madeline, his wife; Mr. Raymond Thomas as Eustace Lee, the head of a gang of criminals, deserves much praise; and he is ably supported by Miss Nelly Shirley. Rich comedy is furnished by Miss Nellie Fern and Mr. Harry E. Mowber.

CARLTON THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Exciting incidents follow one another in whirlwind fashion in The Wicked City, a romantic melodrama, produced by Messrs. Glenville and Elliston. Almost every phase of villainy of the melodramatic order is represented, and the greatest praise is due to the clever portrayals of Miss Amber Wyville (Cora Despard) and Mr. Harold Holloway (Paul Desmond). Miss Doris Grant as the heroine, Doris Grant, earns hearty appreciation for her emotional powers; and Mr. G. Edwards Clive appears as Harold Vereker. Miss Katie Norris, Miss F. Halton, Mr. J. H. Manley, and Mr. Henry Egilington are also prominent.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Williams.—George Bastow, in his latest successes, heads a capital bill, and earns the applause of good houses. He is particularly effective in his impersonation of Captain Ginjah Ot; Herbert Lloyd, the King of Diamonds, literally sparkles with gems of humour, and his "imitations" are well received; Loheawirth and Cohan are inimitable in their "pidgin English," and it is impossible to preserve a straight face whilst they occupy the stage; George D'Albert is another notable visitor; the La Scala Opera Company, in a selection from Cavalleria Rusticana, delight their hearers; Vesta and Minnie Pine are amusing in a golfing skit; Williams and Warden are up-to-date; and Charles Banks and Gladys Williams also contribute acceptably.

THE GRAND.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. E. Foster; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Lucas.—The announcement of Harry Lauder's appearance this week resulted in practically all the principal seats in the theatre being booked in advance; Tom Foy, in his laughable sketch, The First of April, is another very welcome visitor; the Sakanella Trio are the smartest acrobatic dancers seen in Birmingham for some time; the Leonards present a clever and original comedy act, entitled An Interview; Kathleen Gray is a popular comedienne; the Cumberlands are adept trick cyclists; Lestree performs smart juggling feats; and the Grassis are talented instrumentalists.

GAIETY.—Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—In sculpture, singing, and painting, the Venetians, who head the bill this week, are artists of a unique standard; in a series of high-class poses they score particularly well, and they earn warm plaudits. Harry Pleon satirises melodrama very effectively in "The Bad Girl of the Family Journal"; the Brothers Huxter display great cleverness in a difficult acrobatic performance, described as Languid Energy; the Six Manchester Lads are bright singers and dancers; Queenie Finnis is a pleasing, refined comedienne; the New York Nippers earn appreciation for smart work; Little Rosie Lee is a popular juvenile artist; and Nellie Martell is a pleasing comedienne and dancer.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasfords, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—John Terry and Mabel Lambert provide audiences with an entertaining idea of what various types of English people appear like from an outsider's point of view. Their turn is very sparkling. A big success is scored by Lottie Bellman and Bay Russell in a racy item, "Bits of Vaudeville." Their merriment is keenly enjoyed, and the turn thoroughly deserves its popularity. A pantomimic ballet scena, entitled Les Idolatres, provides a novel and very pleasing spectacle; the Schelwsky Bros. are very smart hand-balancers; Syd Crossley is an amusing eccentric; Metz and Metz are responsible for clever comedy and dancing; Karr and Kooney, comedians; Harry Rogerson, comedian; Boden and Belle, duettists and dancers; and Marie Braymen also earn applause.

ASTON HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Aston Hippodrome, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. T. H. Middleton.—Friend and Downing, the popular Irish and Hebrew combination, introduce some new and attractive business; the Lukushimas, a clever troupe of Japanese entertainers, are applauded for many clever feats; the Fijon Juvenile Troupe appear successfully in a refined musical scena; Hardwick and Garratt, in a high-class vocal turn entitled "The Battle Eve," merit appreciation; Richard Finberg scores well in a series of talented impersonations; Madison and Webb present a smart sketch, My Husband; Eva Barrie is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; Nellie Nora is a bright and talented little instrumentalist; and the pictures also arouse interest.

CURZON HALL.—Lessee, Mr. Waller Jeffs.—Events from all over the world are shown in pictorial form in "Pathé's Gazette of the Week," which is highly appreciated. The disastrous fire at the Brussels Exhibition is the latest addition to the list, and a popular item with the ladies is the Paris Fashions series. An elaborate reproduction of the Shakespearean comedy Twelfth Night excites considerable interest, and amongst the other subjects there is a good dramatic story-picture entitled "A Lesson by the Sea." Mr. William Kingsley entertains audiences by an excellent performance with hand and silver bells.

KING'S HALL.—Proprietors, Messrs. J. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—Pictures of the Brussels Exhibition fire are featured strongly at this hall, and are attracting many interested sightseers. The programme also includes many good dramatic and comedy subjects, and the vaudeville contributions are greatly appreciated.

QUEEN'S HALL.—Proprietors, Messrs. B. Kennedy and J. P. Moore.—The Queen's Hall well maintains its position among the picture halls of the city. Agreeable variety is imparted to the entertainment by clever contributions from local artists.

BISHOP AUCKLAND. — EDEN THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—The well-known drama Leah Kleschna is this week occupying the boards. Mr. William Clayton was accorded a rousing reception as Kleschna; Leah Kleschna was well taken by Miss Marguerite Cellier, and Mr. Cyril Austin Lee was responsible for Paul Sylvaine, the hero.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. Cyril Maude's company is here this week with Sir Walter Raleigh, and meeting with a very warm reception. As Queen Elizabeth Miss Winifred Emery is exactly suited; whilst the title-rôle finds an exponent of unquestionable ability in Mr. Lyn Harding. Miss Nell Carter thoroughly idealises Elizabeth Throgmorton; and Mr. Percy Rhodes is good as Don Bernardine de Mendoza. The numerous minor parts are also in the hands of capable artists, and the staging and dresses are irreproachable.

GRAND THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Harrop.—Two Merry Monarchs, played by Messrs. T. C. Wray and Austen Hurgon's company, is this week's attraction here. Mr. Hayden Coffin acts and sings as well as ever in the part of Prince Charmis; whilst Mr. E. Statham Staples is the chief funprovider as Rolandyl. Mr. Mark Lester as King Paul and Miss Marjorie Moore as Princess Cynthia also satisfy all requirements. The staging is admirable.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—A welcome return visit is being paid here this week by Harry Weldon, a very popular comedian; Winifred Ward is a charming impersonator of youthful male characters; Coram shines as a ventriloquist; the Banzai Family are a remarkable troupe of Japanese entertainers; Arthur Woodville is a smart light comedian; Sandford and Lyons, patterers and dancers, are well received; George S. Melvin finds favour as a Scotch comedian; the Stowe Brothers are clever boy equilibrists; and Irene Rose, a chic comedienne.

BOLTON. — THEATRE ROYAL, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Moncur.—Mr. J. Rice Cassidy's company is presenting The Beggar Princess. The principal characters are in the hands of Mr. J. Rice Cassidy, who appears as the Hon. Algernon Fitzhugh and Mrs. Cassidy as Seaweed, afterwards Princess Henri of Slavonia. Other parts are well played by the company, which is above the average. The drama is capitally staged.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—The top turn here is provided by Dr. Wilmar's Spiritualistic paintings presented by Mr. T. P. Selbit. The programme also contains turns by Will Walton, Lancashire comedian, assisted by his two children in a sketch; Marie Kay, dainty soubrette and dancer; Alpho, the sleping ventriloquist; the Fitzroys (Fred and Lily), society gymnasts; Burt Shepard, in potted plays and poetry; the Three Comedy Chanters, in humour and harmony; Alice Maude, male impersonator; Mr. Culpitt, assisted by Adele, in tricks, talk, travesty, and topic; Sid Doody and Edie Wright, comedians, &c.; and the Premier Imperial pictures.

THE EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Hippodrome (Bolton), Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Walter De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. R. Harrison.—The Belle of the Orient is being admired by large audiences. Other turns are Edith St. Clare, comedienne; Frank White, comedian; Spalding and Rego, in a comedy horizontal-bar novelty; Little Ganty, eccentric comedian; Hyde and Cody Trio of eccentric acrobats in "Insane Tricks"; Mr. and Mrs. Manning, comedy duologue artists; Victor Courtney, the boots at the piano; and Foreman and Fannan, popular comedians, together with the Hippodrome pictures.

BOOTLE. — MUNCASTER THEATRE — Proprietors, Messrs. Pennington Estate Co.; Manager, Mr. Harry Pennington; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alfred D. Adams.—The Muncaster stock company score another success this week in the sensational drama The Poor Must Live. The leading parts are ably presented by Mr. Alfred D. Adams, Mr. C. Vivian Charles, Mr. J. W. Evelyn, Mr. Douglas B. Watson, Mr. Fred L. Conynghame, Mr. James Wood, Mr. Robert Gore, Miss Mattie Crawford, Miss Marguerite Trevosper, Miss Louie Heathfield, and Miss Sassie Evelyn.

WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler, Sutton, and Allandale; Joint Managing-Directors, Mr. B. Allandale and Mr. L. Blattner; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Boult.—The Sylvester Trio of speciality dancers and vocalists are loudly applauded; Miss Jeanne Jeune, the popular prima donna, has a flattering reception; Mr. Wilfred Burnand displays exceptional talent as a character actor and mimic; and Laurie Leyton creates an excellent impression as a ventriloquist. A strong programme is completed by Val Brodo, tenor, Miss Flora Driver, and Miss Eva Dickson. On Tuesday evening, before a crowded house, Malcolm Scott appeared.

BOURNEMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietors, David Allen and Sons; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Hubert Dunbar.—A good company, a good play, and a good audience all combined to make Smith, which opened here for the week with Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company, a distinct success. Mr. Robert Minster is fitted with a part which he admirably sustains in that of Tom Freeman; Miss Cicely Stuckley acts with the requisite finish in the title-rôle; and Algy is effectively portrayed by Mr. H. Douglas Greet. Mr. F. G. Thurstans capitally represents Mr. Dallas-Baker; Miss Ethel Hodgkins displays power as Mrs. Dallas-Baker; and Emily Chapman and Mrs. Otto Rosenberg have satisfactory representatives in Miss Pauline Straus and Miss Ethel Wellesley. Mr. George Child doing everything necessary in theh part of Fletcher.

BRADFORD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—Supported by a capable company, that excellent comedian Mr. Horace Lingard is appearing in Mr. Jerome K. Jerome's clever comedy Fanny and the Servant Girl Problem. As the worried Lady Bantock Miss Beatrice Moreau is winning a huge success with her charming acting; Mr. Lingard's assumption of the exacting butler Martin Bennett is very clever; Mr. E. Rayson Cousens is fairly convincing as Lord Bantock; as Dr. Freemantle Mr. Edward Ray is amusing; Mr. W. Compton is good as George Newte; the Misses Wetherell are quaintly represented by Miss Margaret Saville; and exquisite vocalism of the gifted soprano Mme. Ella Russell, who is the bright particular star here this week. Orpheus makes a welcome reappearance, playing many instruments with rare skill; Griff is also here again, jesting and juggling as cleverly as ever; Dan Crawley's broad humour and make-up elicit much laughter; Lily Flexmore, comedienne, exhibits wonderful elasticity of limb in her acrobatic dances; Jock Whiteford is a remarkably agile and humorous Scottish comedian; and a good programme is made up with Amy Marsden, low-comedy comedienne, Phil Rees' Stable Lads in a variety turn, and the Bioscope.

The Palace.—Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—The great attraction here this week is Black-Eyed Susan, and interest centres in the reappearance of the esteemed manager Mr. Edward Harrison in his excellent impersonation of Admiral Burgoyne; Miss Dorothy Mullord is the charming heroine; Mr. A. Howard very effectively fills the part of William, A.B.; Chris Baker is amusing with capital songs; the Ten Dixie Girls dance and sing with spirit and charm in their scena The Silver Coon; May Rowe, vocalist, contributes acceptably; the Mars Trio of gymnasts give a clever and affective military display; Allsop and Beckwith submit a capital comedy act; Wat Tyler's character vocalism is good; and the Palace Perfection pictures interest.

BRIDLINGTON.—Spa Opera House.—Manager, Mr. R. C. Luxton.—Mr. Geo. Edwardes' company in that charming musical play The Merry Widow opened to a crowded house on Monday night. The play is beautifully staged and the dressing most gorgeous. The company gave a finished performance. The Sonia of Miss Mary Ridley was an admirable performance; Miss Mabel Hope shone in the part of Natalia, as did Miss Ethel Darnley as Frou, especially in her dances with Nisch. Mr. Robert Needham's acting as Prince Danilo was very good; Mr. H. Sinclair Cotter kept the house merry with his Baron Popoff; Mr. Ronald Pomeroy was capable as de Jolidon; and the part of Nisch gave Mr. Harry Emeric opportunities for showing his agility as an eccentric dancer. For the end of the week Miss Annie Hughes is billed with her company in Miss Tommy.

Grand Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—Miss E. Dexter and Mr. Harold C. Lloyd's company in The Passing of the Third Floor Back drew a full house here on Monday. Mr. Hodgson Taylor, Miss Jeannie Thomas as the landlady, Miss Elizabeth Dexter as Vivian, Mr. W. O. Billington as the old bachelor, and Miss Katharine Morris as the servant.

Royal Prince's Parade.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—The Grand Pavilion has crowded houses, a special feature this week being the visit of that popular artist Miss Yesta Tilley, who still retains her great reputation as the most marvellous male impersonator of the day.

New Spa and Gardens.—Manager, Mr. R. C. Luxton.—The special festival week of Herr Julian Kandt and his band concluded on Sunday. This week we have an additional attraction in Mr. Thornley Dodge, entertainer. Miss Annie Croft continues to make hosts of admirers.

Summer Gardens.—Lessees, Messrs. Beanland, Bath, and Danton; Manager, Mr. Charles Beanland.—This popular resort is drawing crowded audiences nightly to the capital and amusing entertainments provided. At the benefit performance to the genial manager, Mr. Charles Beanland, the house was so crowded that hundreds were unable to obtain admission. The programme included the best items by members of the company and a special show by Mr. Walter George's "Smart Set" concert party.

BRIGHTON. — Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Gates; General-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—The Fighting Chance is attracting good houses here. Mr. Austen Milroy submits a very fine impersonation of the oppressed Stephen Blanchard; Miss Marie Duncan is thoroughly artistic as Ethel Hardy; Mr. Sidney Vautier is realistic in his enactment of Captain Jim Blanchard; Mr. Arthur Elwyn is highly successful in his portrayal of the villainous Captain Philip Rivers; Mr. Charles B. Bedells is a very effective Izra Mahomed Khan; and the remaining parts are ably sustained.

Alhambra. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Alfred Smith; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Smith.—Captain Spaulding submits a novel turn, in which he swallows molten lead, eats liquid hot sealing-wax, and explodes gunpowder on his hand; the Alberto troupe of lady equilibrists are warmly applauded; Fred Hastings is a popular comedian; Herbert La Martine is a clever eccentric dancer; the Three Welsh Girls are charming vocalists; Mike Heman is a quaint Hebrew delineator; the Baynhams appear in a capital musical act; the Sisters Burnett are pleasing comediennes; Emily Delmere, comedienne, achieves much success; and the Alhambra Picturegraph is interesting.

Barrasford's Hippodrome.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Bertram J. Brown.—Walter Bird's company afford great amusement with the sketch Her Husband; Hetty King, male impersonator, is enthusiastically applauded for her songs; Maria Racko and company give a smart acrobatic entertainment; Arnold Richardson and company are very diverting in Ferdie's Ma-in-Law; Daisy Wood is a very attractive comedienne; the Three Cape Girls sing and dance themselves into favour; Webb and Branston are good operatic duettists; the Hassan Duo appear in a novel wire act; and the Sisters Brenton are effective duettists and dancers.

West Pier.—Secretary, Mr. A. W. Scholey.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company is achieving great success here with Brewster's Millions. Mr. Percy Hutchison gives a masterly portrayal of Monty Brewster; Miss Lilias Earle makes an admirable Mrs. Dan de Mille; Miss Dorothy Whittaker is a pleasing Margaret Grey; Mr. Gordon Ash merits warm praise for his impersonation of Charlie Harrison; Mr. A. P. Kaye affords amusement as M. Bargie; Miss Phyllis Stuckey's Barbara Drew is well played; and the remaining characters of the heavy cast are in very capable hands.

Palace Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Jay and Mann; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wilfred H. Kent.—Mr. Frank Curzon's company is here with The King of Cadonia. Mr. John Morley gives an admirable impersonation of the title-rôle; Miss Alice Venning makes a charming and graceful Princess Marie; Mr. Arthur Staples is diverting as the Duke of Alasia; Mr. Robert Selby achieves great success as General Bonski; Mr. Lawrence Robbins is an excellent Captain Laski; Mr. Alfred Clark is distinctly effective as Bran; and Miss Joan Penrose makes an attractive Melitza. The piece is elaborately staged.

Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Maud Barrasford; Manager, Mr. F. J. Thompson.—The admirable series of animated pictures exhibited here attracts good houses. Mr. Ostand Denner's illustrated songs are warmly appreciated.

Theatre de Luxe.—Proprietors, Electric Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. H. Cousens.—The animated pictures here continue to attract large houses. They are marked by pleasing variety, and fresh programmes are submitted each Monday and Thursday.

BRISTOL.—Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Macready Chute. — The Speckled Band is being played here to good houses. The play is well staged, and Mr. Arthur Hardy's company is a very capable one. Mr. C. W. Somerset presents a highly creditable and, in many ways, a remarkable exposition of Dr. Grimesby Rylott; he retains a very firm grip of the character throughout, and the restraint he puts upon his outbursts of passion is really telling. Mr. Julian Royce is an ideal Sherlock Holmes; he looks the part admirably, is always resourceful, cool, and collected, and ably displays the power essential to the character. Miss Alice Leigh acts cleverly as Enid Stonor, fully realising the state of uncertainty in which she is living; Miss Adelaide Grace presents a good study of the shady housekeeper, Mrs. Staunton; Mr. Bellenden Clarke makes the most of and is very earnest as Dr. Watson; Mr. Herbert Vyvyan is effective as the nervous butler, Rodgers; Mr. Gerald Rogers successfully imparts a certain mystic air to his impersonation of Ali, the Indian valet; Master James Woodings is pert and sharp as Sherlock Holmes's page, Billy; and Mr. E. H. Paterson presents a capital character study of the Wesleyan grocer, Mr. Armitage. The remaining parts are all most carefully taken, and the play was followed with much interest on Monday evening.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mrs. Emma Carpenter; Manager, Mr. Henry C. Alty.—The musical farce Miss Lancashire, Limited, is being well-played here by Miss Florence Baines's company, and it is proving attractive, though out of the ordinary run of plays appreciated at this theatre. Miss Baines is really clever and most amusing as Mary Ellen Thompson, she is also a charming vocalist, her "Home sweet home" being an exquisite treat, and her other songs are all cleverly rendered; Miss Mollie Shine acts pleasingly as Eva Lancashire, and scores with her pretty song and dance.; Mr. David Donaldson, Mr. Charles Swinburne, and Miss Frances Ferina are effective as John, Harry, and Bertha Higgins; Mr. Joseph Burley is too funny as Herbert Fox, the lawyer; Mr. Payne Fletcher and Miss Maud Locker make good comedy parts of Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Thompson; Mr. W. E. Passmore does well as the American Jew, Moses Goldberg; and Mr. Henry Lloyd and Mr. Hubert Mitchell make the most of Grant, the butler, and George Hart, the coachman. The one scene, representing the drawing-room in John Higgins's house, London, is effective.

Palace.—District-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Treasurer and Assistant-Manager, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Radford and Valentine are eccentric skilful jugglers, and their comic business is highly diverting; Wilson Hallett, child impersonator, presents a clever turn; Mark Hanbury, comedian, is appreciated; Hilda De Grey, comedienne, is a pleasing and successful vocalist; the Darntons are tuneful harmony vocalists; Ada Cerito, comedienne, is always appreciated in Bristol; the Jackley Trio score with a comedy speciality; Lotto, Lilo and Otto are exceptionally expert trick cyclists; and interesting animated pictures are projected by Jury's Bioscope.

Empire. — Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry; Assistant and Advertising-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—George Ali and company amuse with their comedy sketch, Papa's Day Off. Mr. Ali's bulldog, Sport, being a remarkably clever animal study; Bambusio Brothers excel as head balancers; Amy Savile is a pleasing comedienne; Geoffreys and Benson please with their comedy duologue; Edie Anderson is a smart comedienne and dancer; Donovan and Arnol amuse with their speciality, Doing Well, Thank You; Harry Russon, actor comedian, is appreciated; and Ritter and Foster score with their eccentric comedy and dancing speciality; amusing animated pictures conclude.

BURNLEY.—Victoria Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—The last week of pictures previous to reopening with "the legitimate" is drawing excellent houses.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—A meritorious programme is attracting good business here. Everhart presents a smart turn of hoop manipulation and Minola Hurst and her miniature artists are delightfully novel; the Havana Troupe are a set of clever comedy acrobats; and as dancers, Drury and Lane perform some excellent steps; Stanley and Vandyke are responsible for screams of laughter in their comedy act; Marion Adelaide is a sweet soprano; Torti is possessed of a powerful tenor voice; clever concertina-playing is executed by Albano; and Barney Murphy amuses with songs and dance; All's Well that Ends Well is the concluding item by the Empire Theatrescope.

Palace Theatre and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. R. Badcoe.—Chung Ling Soo is the chief attraction here, and his wonderful illusions call forth great admiration; the Four Garricks are delightful in a dainty drawing-room pot pourri; and Sinclair's Three Diamonds are a pretty trio of dancers; Stockdale and Marginson have excellent voices, which are fully displayed in sweet duets; and Ford Williams is a good baritone vocalist; Nellie Farrell, comedienne, is vivacious; and Shrillo, an excellent whistler. The Palace pictures conclude.

BURTON-ON-TRENT. — Opera House.—Proprietors, Messrs. Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. De Hague Body.—Mr. John Warren, in a dramatic illusion entitled "The Conjurer at Home" and also a Military Mystery, appears with the greatest success, receiving valuable assistance from Miss Mollie Winter (lady whistler), Messrs. Frank Morton, F. G. Fenn, and Alfred Potte; Miss Cissie Williams gives a dainty and pleasing turn, singing sweetly; Silverstone, the mimic, meets with great applause; Mr. Geo. Rapley is well received in song and patter; a pleasing little turn is given by Royston and Bradfield; and Foy and Staples in a comedy scena entitled Pinched for Life, show marked ability.

BURY (Lancs.). — Royal. — General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. J. McPherson.—The Village Blacksmith, presented by Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company, opened here on Monday, and proved as popular as ever. Mr. Sam Livesey's performance as John Strong is well known, and he has a flattering reception; Mr. Joseph Carter as Captain Leo is excellent. The wrestling match between the two is very cleverly worked. Miss Maggie Edwards is a sympathetic Kate Strong, and plays well throughout. Others prominent in a good cast are Mr. J. Milne Taylor as Lucas Marler; Mr. J. H. Langford as St. John Harman; Mr. Joe Hodson as Billy Twigg; Mr. Edwin Maydew as Jeremiah Parkins; Miss Nellie Graham as Sal Parkins; Miss Cissie Le Grande as Ruth Parkins; and Miss Nellie Sinclair as Martha Mopps.

Circus of Varieties.—Another capital series of films is on view this week, and two good turns are provided in Dan Frazer, Scotch comedian, and Wagner and Ward, in vocal and musical act.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Sons; Resident-Manager, Mr. Thomas Baker.—Morny Cash is the star turn, and laughter is continuous during his stay; Tom and Eileen Melbourne are very successful in a sketch, A Sentry-box, a Soldier, and a Maid; Edwin Garth is a versatile comedian; Dick Whittington is a clever comedy skit, ably presented by the Whittakers; Adeline Yohle and company in a musical interlude, entitled "Difficulties"; Wyllie, a tramp musician; and the Mackinnon Family, refined vocalists and speciality dancers, are all capital turns.

BURY ST. EDMUNDS.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Miss Florence Glossop-Harris; General-Manager, Mr. Max Jerome; Resident-Manager, Mr. James Mason.—Mr. Alex. Maclean is presenting My Lady Bellamy to appreciative audiences. Mr. Maclean is to be complimented on a vigorous portrayal of Sir Gervase Bellamy. He is supported by a powerful cast, in which Mr. Geo. Lyttleton Holyoake as William III. and Mr. Arthur Layland (Lord Crawford) figure prominently, other excellent work coming from Mr. Eric Snowden as Tarfax and Mr. A. L. Burke (Captain Ottley). Miss Laura Leigh is wholly bewitching as Lady Bellamy; Queen Mary II. finds a graceful representative in Miss Mary Palmer; and Miss Viola Marsh makes an excellent Mrs. Mackie. Praise is due to the faultless mounting of the play.

CARDIFF.—New Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Robt. Redford.—Cardiffians are favoured this week by a welcome visit to the city of Mr. Laurence Irving and Miss Mabel Hackney and company, in two new plays. On Monday Margaret Catchpole was staged, and was accorded an enthusiastic reception. Mr. Laurence Irving gave a truly realistic rendition of the exacting character of John Luff. His impersonation will be long treasured in the memory of his admirers, his make-up alone being quite a triumph. Miss Mabel Hackney appeared in the title-rôle, and submitted a remarkably powerful performance, completely winning the sympathies of her audience. An excellent study is that of Mr. Frank Esmond's William Land, who brings out the strong points of a difficult rôle to the best effect. Quite as successful, and exceedingly natural, is the portrayal of Jim Cook by Mr. A. Field Fisher, who won much applause for his clever acting. A great deal of praise is due to Mr. Rupert Harvey for his quiet yet effective representation of Jack Barry; and Mr. Henry Elmore as Edward Barry created a favourable impression; Mr. James Woodhouse as Philip did well; and the same can be said of Miss Katherine Herbert as the nurserymaid Kate. The whole company combined artistically, whilst the picturesque mounting added considerably to the success. On Tuesday and Friday evenings Mr. Irving staged his stirring play The Unwritten Law, Margaret Catchpole being billed for the other evenings.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Herbert J. Taylor.—The principal item of the programme was a wonderful aerial display by Mr. Raymond Phillips' airship, a marvellous invention, controlled entirely from the stage by wireless electricity; a particularly dramatic episode is that presented by Miss Lilian Dundas and company, entitled Convict Nance; Billy Howard and Kathryn Harris have a smart turn; the Musical Jees are more popular than ever; Harry Simms presents a catchy song in excellent style; while other contributors are Tom Haig and Millie Novel, in a comedy acrobatic number; Mina Denvil, a charming vocalist; and Adam Tomlinson, a comedian from the Tyneside.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr Arthur Burton.—Good business prevails here nightly. Williams's Jubilee Singers head the bill, and their harmonising vocalism proves most acceptable; the Three Van Dammes gain hearty applause for their skilful acrobatic act; the Four Rosebuds prove expert dancers; Frank Cumminger and Frances Colonna provide another clever exhibition of dancing; and Walter Read, a gifted banjoist; Harry, a clever and amusing ventriloquist; and Gladys Wells, a contralto comedienne, are others who add to the success of the programme.

CARLISLE.—Her Majesty's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—For the lawn tennis tournament week, the ever enterprising manager has secured a strong attraction in Madame Albani, the celebrated operatic and classical vocalist whose delightful rendering of popular ballads and excerpts from famous composers never fails to create enthusiasm. Madame Albani is supported by a strong company, including Witty Wattie Walton, who contributes comic patter and amusing songs and business; Liane Marigny is giving her graceful dances with success; Victor Newman, a clever actor, impersonates Irving in The Bells with dramatic effect; Ching Ling Fee is a smart illusionist; Mr. Henry Fransella is a flautist of recognised ability; the Brothers Hunnaway cross-talk and dance to everyone's delight; Rosie Solman, an entertaining comedienne and dancer; and Fame and Fortune, distinctly quaint and humorous, complete an enjoyable entertainment.

The Palace.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. D. Askew.—Wee Georgie Wood, the child comedian and mimic, is here in a pretty scena entitled The Nursery, and finds ample scope for a display of his abilities; the Scottish Meisters, the Six Lancashire Lasses, and the Ives are as popular as ever; Cosgrove and Burns contribute an amusing sketch, The Singing Academy; Hurman and Arthur, in a comedy juggling act, are clever. Excellent pictures complete a popular programme.

CASTLEFORD.—Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Hy. Masterman, J.P. — Mr. Wilson Howard's company is here in Under the Iron Heel. Mr. Howard as Rene de Maupassant gives an admirable performance; the resentment of the audience is vigorously aroused by the villainies of Otto Marx as portrayed by Mr. Robertson Foulas; Miss Carlotta Anson as Germaine manifests grace and tenderness; Mr. Austin H. Longford is a capital Sergt. Bleucher, and shows exceptional talent; Mr. Gerald Smythe as Michel Bomet has much of the true comic vein; the part of Colonel Muller is filled with effect by Mr. R. Merring; Mr. J. P. Sallen ably sustains the character of Father Mirbleau; Miss J. Douglas Hicks is a capital Maman Gouffe; Lieut. Songy is well played by Mr. Fred M. Best; and Andre finds a clever exponent in Miss Marie Angus.

Queen's Theatre of Varieties. — Proprietors, the Castleford Queen's Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Directors, Messrs. Chas. Beanland and Will H. Emerson.—An attractive programme is presented here by the Loyal Dominion Company's animated pictures. In the way of variety Master Leonard Bedford is to be complimented on his expertness with the cornet; and Kirk and Saraski give a graceful aquatic display.

CHATHAM.—Gaiety Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Captain H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. Geo. Humphries.—Miss Annie Schuberth delights her hearers with her song-scena, entitled "The Deputy; or, A Private Rehearsal"; the Cheers introduce some well-trained cats; Syd Cupp scores with a burlesque coon song and eccentric dance; Flora Cromer has a highly-flattering reception nightly; the Maples present a very amusing turn under the title of Hamper-ed. Others appearing are Ida Brophy, comedienne, and S. Osada, Japanese equilibrist; while the films projected by the Edisonograph are well up to the mark.

CHELTENHAM. — Opera House. — General-Manager, Mr. H. Oswald Redford.—This theatre reopened on Monday with Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company, The Earl and the Girl. Mr. Edward Lewis as Jim Cheese and Miss Lina Hicks as 'Liza are very clever; Mr. Herbert St. John and Miss Lily Gullick act and sing pleasantly as the youthful hero and heroine, Miss Gullick's "In Zanzibar," and Mr. St. John's "Cosy Corner," scoring a success. Miss Blanche Astley as Daisy Fallowfield sings prettily; the energetic group in pursuit of the Earl are capably represented by Messrs. D. Fisher, Harry Courtin, James R. Tate, and Miss Edith Blande. Mr. Lionel Scott as Crewe Boodle; Mr. A. Burgoyne as the innkeeper; and Miss Flora Gordon as the Lady of the Hall do well. The solo in the military scena is sung excellently by Mr. F. D. Fraser; and Mr. J. Dutton Nicholls performs a clever eccentric dance in the second act. The "Chantecler" trio, in which Mr. Herbert St. John and Misses Lily Gullick and Blanche Astley score heavily, caused quite a mild sensation.

Montpellier Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. Alfred W. Newton.—The March Hares gave place to The Dandies on Monday. Mr. Wensley Russell's light humour is irresistible; and Mr. Stephen Fitzgerald is no whit less capable; Mr. Anthony Gordon's classic baritone singing reached double encores; Miss Josephine Gordon is a charming soprano and amusing comedienne; and Miss Ruby Lingard's contralto singing was enjoyed. The pianist is Mr. Charles Matthews, completing a strong and talented sextette, who should enjoy a successful engagement.

Winter Garden Electric Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Cecil Gill Smith.—This place is still growing in popularity. The pictures are pleasantly varied to suit all tastes, the pièce de résistance being Through the Darkness. Miss Alice Forbes' singing is popular.

Poole's Picture Palace.—Manager, Mr. E. B. Shinton.—The varieties here are a show in themselves. Dome is a clever comedy clay modeller; the Matt Winkinson Trio appear in a laughable farce, The Registry Office; Miss Violet Beatrice renders a good song and step dance; and the Vocophone gives a popular ditty. The pictures are capital, The Hindoo's Treachery rousing the audience to a high pitch of excitement.

CHESTER. — Royalty Theatre. — Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton.—Mr. Bulmer's company is presenting When Woman Hates to full houses. Lieut. Rokeby, the hero, is well sustained by Mr. Richard Ferris; and Mr. Austin Mortimer does full justice to the part of the villain, Godfrey Lawton. Mr. B. H. Davis makes a dignified Sir Henry Rokeby; Messrs. Reg. Oldroyd and Evan Roland are excellent mirth-provokers as Alphonse Picolot and Patrick O'Brien; Miss Ada Oakley is a sympathetic Marie Rokeby; and the difficult part of Edith Rokeby is pathetically acted by Miss Jean Scott. Miss Doris Brookes plays the adventuress Cora Daintry, "the fiend with the angel face," with great power and thoroughness.

CHORLTON-CUM-HARDY. — The Chorlton Theatre and Winter Gardens.—Proprietors, the Chorlton Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Stott.—The season opened here on the 18th inst., when Messrs. Levy and Cardwell's company presented The Sleeping Beauty. Wee Georgie Harris proved a host in himself and sang his songs effectively; Miss Olive Purcell was an excellent Fairy, and Miss Daisy Wood a charming Prince Florizel; Miss Evelyn Major as the Prince's valet acted with plenty of go; Miss Kitty Rafferty, in the part of the Princess, won favour; Mr. Jack Harrison as the King of Shoeland, and the Bros. Armstrong as Queen Adelaide and Asbestos, kept the comedy well to the fore. The dresses were excellent.

COLCHESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Chas. Macdona; Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Graham Macdona.—Messrs. E. Lockwood and Harry W. Lumley's company in The Girl in the Boat is here for six nights. Mr. Chas. McNaughton as Potts is throughout a source of humour; Miss Irene Verona works successfully as Mrs. Hope; Miss Ruby Vivyan looks a charming Clementa; and as Miss Isobel Miss May Garstang wins high encomiums; Mr. Henry Agnes causes heaps of fun as Admiral Weber; Mr. Frederick Hobbs sings powerfully as Sir Walter, and Mr. Lockwood Philpott makes an efficient Stephano.

Hippodrome.—Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Leslie.—The top-liner this week is A 33 to 1 Chance, very capably staged, with two well-known pugilists, Ben Jordan and Young Sullivan. Gwilym T. Evans, the South African tenor, establishes himself immediately as a high-class artist; the Due For Trio of dancers are excellent exponents; Cissie Thompson sings with dramatic intuition; Billy Rex gives his versatile show in good style. Florence Wix appears to advantage in comedy songs, and the films are high class.

CONSETT.—New Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance.—The French Troupe of trick cyclists present a marvellous performance on wheels; Williams and Parker give an entertaining turn in song and story; a clever and neat turn is submitted by Hilton, magician; the Snow Family, grotesque skaters, elicit laughter. Up-to-date pictures complete.

New Town Hall.—Proprietors, Town Hall Co., Ltd.; Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Campbell.—T. W.'s Tiny Stars are an attraction here in a charming song and dance scena; Mae Merlin, "the Crocodile," is well received; a good turn is Florence Raymond, ventriloquist. The pictures continue to be of a high standard.

Daly's Hall.—Lessee, Mr. John Cottrell; General-Manager, Mr. W. D. Murray.—The Primrose Quartette, in comedy vocalism are much appreciated; Flo Melville is a dainty comedienne; and as jugglers, equilibrists, &c., Kavados score a big success. Pictures are also shown.

CORK.—Opera House.—Manager, Mr. R. J. Bell.—The Irish Animated Picture Company opened a week's engagement with scenic, comic, and historic subjects. The pictures were good and much appreciated. The varieties were capital, and include the Sisters Colley, child entertainers, the Welsh Ladies' Orchestra, and Ralph Goggin, vocalist.

Palace Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Thomas F. O'Brien.—The bill of fare here is a capital one. Mike S. Whallen keeps the audience in roars of laughter; Miss Ann Hope possesses a sweet contralto; Harry Vardon, ventriloquist, is very entertaining; the juggling performance of Halma is clever and difficult; the Broadway Belles present a singing and dancing act, which is heartily applauded; Frances Boyle, comedienne and quick-change artist, is very successful; Marcus Boyle, comedian, sings in a pleasing fashion; the Croisit Trio of French acrobats give a turn of high-class merit; and the Palascope pictures are enjoyable.

COVENTRY.—Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—A very attractive piece is A Chinese Honeymoon, and under the direction of Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennet it is excellently staged. Miss Gwennie Harcourt as Fi-Fi keeps the audience continually amused; Miss Gladys Ivery, who possesses a pleasing voice, is successful as Princess Soo-Soo; Miss Gertrude Melville is very active as Mrs. Pineapple; Mr. Will Harman is intensely funny as Mr. Pineapple; Mr. Rudolph Kloss does full justice to the part of the Emperor; Mr. Frank J. Crimp makes a typical Englishman as Tom Hatherton; Mr. Colin Bryce is a good Lord Chancellor; and Mr. Leonard May ably takes the part of the Admiral.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. S. T. Newsome; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. E. Wright.—The Five Mowatts, lightning jugglers, head the bill, and very much astonish the audience; Mason and Moore appear in a dramatic episode entitled The Usurer; Bromley and Fontein have a humorous musical turn; the Sisters St. Julien are smart duettists and dancers; and Sammy Shields is a racy Scottish comedian. Neski and Neski, grotesque gymnasts; Gillin, ventriloquial humorist; and Guyer and Vale, eccentric humorists, complete an exceedingly good programme.

CROYDON. — Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Charles Wood; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Archer.—This house reopened on Monday for the autumn season with Mr. James Welch's well-organised company in When Knights Were Bold. Mr. H. Langdon Brice has closely studied the part of Sir Guy de Vere; Mr. Chas. F. Lloyd would be hard to improve upon as Isaac Isaacson; Mr. Percy R. Goodyer hits off to a nicety the part of the Hon. Charles Widdicombe; Mr. Colin Johnson submits a scholarly rendering of the Rev. Peter Pottleberry; Mr. Humphrey Warden has a real grip of the character of Sir Brian Ballymote; and Mr. Lawrence Stevenson and Mr. John Cecil are all that can be desired in the parts of Wittle and Barker. Miss Isla Glynne sustains with dignity the rôle of Lady Rowena Eggington; Miss Violet Noel is seen to advantage as Miss Sarah Isaacson; Miss Lena Flowerdew is equal to the responsibilities of the Hon. Mrs. Waldegrave; Miss Sadie Hope is brisk as Lady Millicent Eggington, and Miss Elspeth Oliphant is dainty as Alice Barker. The farce is preceded by a comedietta entitled Milly's Mother, acted by Messrs. Percy R. Goodyer and John Cecil and Misses Sadie Hope and Lena Flowerdew.

Empire Palace of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—Fred Karno's company in the sketch The Wow-Wows is here this week. Nicholl.—Tom and Marie Motramo fetch the house as musical and comedy artists; Ted Curtis and company are a fine troupe with their dancing and vocal comedy act; Gilbert Girard, animal and instrumental mimic, evokes loud applause; Wal Langtry, dialect comedian, is capital; and the bill includes Beatie and Blanche, duettists; the Millwards, in vaudeville; Les Luzellas, in a wire act; and the Bioscope.

DARWEN.—Albert Hall.—Lessee Mr. Harry Holden; Manager, Mr. J. Morris.—Varieties are supplied by the Birkenhead Family in a musical interlude, "Her Boy's Birthday," and Horace Monto, versatile entertainer.

DERBY.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley.—The Elliott Savonas are paying a welcome return visit here this week, and judging by their reception on Monday night, are more popular than ever; Sid Bedford and company's playlet, The Second Mrs. Chester, abounds with amusing situations, and causes much hearty laughter; another very amusing turn is that of Hadley Harman, whose clever parody of "Kelly" fairly convulses the house; Zasma is to be commended on his novel gymnastic act; Becketow Bros. as the eccentric butler and the dude are clever knockabout comedians; Sisters Wingrove are pleasing duettists and graceful dancers; the Milfords provide some clever dancing, and Maxwell and Francis are entertaining in their comedy scena. A humorous film on the Bioscope concludes a very satisfactory bill.

DEVONPORT. — Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. G. France.—An almost human turn is provided by Dandy George's chimpanzee; Tom E. Finglass, the cowboy coon, proves a fine acquisition to the bill; Ted Karno and company, in their sketch The Hotel de Quick, are amusement caterers of the first order; Miss Florence Esdaile, vocalist, gave the "Soldiers' Chorus" from Faust in a manner deserving the highest commendation; Fred Evans has an interesting number, in which reminiscences of Dickens are introduced; and the Sisters Edwards execute a pretty little kettledrum duet.

Metropole.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Mr. Harry Tilbury's company are on a return visit with The Dishonoured Wife. Mr. A. G. Foy ably impersonates Frank Lindon; Miss Belle Tilbury is a success as the wife; Messrs. Alex Alexander and Edwin Browne make a fine pair of villains as Tom Redman and Lord Devant respectively; and the humorous business is well done by Mr. Harry Tilbury as Micky Doolan.

DEWSBURY.—Theatre Royal. — Proprietors, Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Asquith.—Fred Granville's productions, Ltd., is producing the drama Another Man's Wife twice nightly. It is exceedingly well-mounted and staged. Mr. Stanley Radcliffe gives a fine portrayal of Carlos de Vergas, his acting leaving nothing to be desired; the part of Lucia de Vergas is in the able hands of Miss Ruby Loncraine; the villainy of Paul Bernstoff is fully illustrated by Mr. Fred Beverly, and is ably assisted in his work by Miss Hazel Head as Inez de Castro; capital comedy is supplied by Mr. Willie Reid, who, as Sam Smiles, keeps the audience in constant laughter; Miss Marian Mayne as Tibby and Mr. Leonard Marshall as Andy Bremmer are also responsible for quaint humour; Miss Dorothy Love as Lucy proves a clever child artist; Mr. Henry Carlisle is excellent as Gilbert Eardsley.

Empire.—Proprietors, Messrs. G. W. and G. E. Smith; Manager, Mr. Claude Shayler.—At the head of a very attractive programme are the Bellong Bros., cycle equilibrists, who are applauded for some very clever and daring feats; Miss Gertrude Bibby proves herself to be an exceedingly fine actress in her quick-change drama Bonnie Prince Charlie, in which she enacts all the five characters; the singing of Mme. Adah Payne receives the heartiest recognition; Goggin and Davis evoke much laughter in their acrobatic act, which is both clever and funny; much success is achieved by the Rosses, in a unique dancing act; Reno is a comedy cyclist much above the average; the Prince Milner Trio astonish and please everybody with hoop manipulating and wire-walking; R. G. Fry is a quaint comedian; and good films are shown on the Palascope.

ABBEY THEATRE.—This popular establishment opened its doors on Monday night for the Horse Show week, when a well-filled house heartily enjoyed the excellent programme provided. The triple bill included Hyacinth Halvey, by Lady Gregory; The Cross Roads, by S. L. Robinson; and The Rising of the Moon, by Lady Gregory. All the artists appearing displayed their usual abilities in their respective parts.

ROTUNDA.—The Irish Animated Picture Co., ever up to date, is showing this week a fine picture of the Johnson-Jeffries fight.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietors, Sprengel Bros.—Ruby Castelle, ballad vocalist; Harry Dunn, eccentric comedian; the Lemartons, sketch artists; Kitty Lee, comedienne; and Arthur Prustin, comedian, are appearing here this week.

PAVILION, KINGSTOWN.—Herr Fericescu's Viennese Band is still here, and gives a musical treat to full houses daily.

ARCADIA, BRAY.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jack Macdermott.—The constant change of programme by the Arcadian company, together with the reappearance of the popular manager here, continues to attract large audiences nightly.

DUDLEY.—EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. James Bainton.—The Walonells have had a rousing reception for their clever triple bar performance and good comedy business; another excellent turn is provided by the Saxones, in a vocal comedy and instrumental act; Dolly, Agnes, and Maud, original singing cardboard-box makers are also well received; Steinort, hand balancer and jumper, neatly executes many clever tricks; Babs Lloyd is a dainty comedienne and dancer; and other good turns are given by Dardan and Irish, vocalists and acrobatic dancers; and Dan Arthur, comedian.

DUNDEE.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—Alone in London, admirably enacted by Mr. Charles Gibbon's powerful company, is playing to good business. Miss Nellie Clyde scores a success as Nan, her acting being characterised by skill and restraint; the heartless villainy of Dick Redcliffe is neatly hit off by Mr. Charles Gibbon; a clever and amusing study of Old Jenkinson is contributed by Mr. J. W. Wilkinson; Mr. Wallace Dunlop does well as Spriggins; Miss Ethel F. Greene must be warmly congratulated on her Tom Chickweed; Miss Evelyn Robson is a lovable and humorous Mrs. Maloney; Ruth Clifton has a charming representative in Miss Joan Harcourt; Mr. Gilbert Elvin as Mr. Burnaby is excellent; Mr. Robert Grey plays carefully and well as Walter Burnaby; and Mr. W. S. Stevenson acts with much vigour as John Biddlecombe. The comedy relief is well looked after by Mr. Bruce Lindley, an exceedingly droll Charlie Johnson, and Miss Carrie Young, who infuses much vivacity into the part of Liz Jenkinson. A word of praise must be accorded to pretty little Hetty Hornsby for a natural and finished rendering of Little Paul.

KING'S THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—Pride of place on an attractive bill is shared by the Five Faludys, Hungarian acrobats, who give a daring and exceptionally clever display, and Rowland Hill, "ye dame and historical humorist," who makes a great hit; Dalmere's Circus, comprising fifty dogs, cats, doves, &c., provides a remarkable entertainment; Spry and Austin contribute a bright and breezy turn; Clara Coverdale's Nine Dainty Dots display exceptional talent as singers and dancers in a pretty scena, The Gypsies' Revels; Mona Garrick, in dramatic impersonations, is well received; Curtis Leo, ably assisted by Little Noblesse, gives a neat and clever conjuring show; Dora Lyric is a great success with chorus songs; a pleasing musical turn is given by Taree; and the Kingscope pictures are, as usual, excellent.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. K. Stewart.—A fine series of films gives much satisfaction to large audiences. A pleasing item is the singing picture by the Cinephone.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. W. Austin.—A fine selection of films is exhibited here. The singing pictures on the Cinephone lend pleasant variety to the well-arranged and smartly-worked programme.

DURHAM.—THE PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes.—A strong bill is headed by Florrie Gallimore, who is rapturously received; the Five Jolly Bakers are clever and amusing in the Risley act. The Baker's Beano; the Royal Diamonds, one-legged acrobats and jumpers, create quite a sensation; and Jackson and May are well applauded for daring cycling feats; Ted and Artis are expert banjoists, and give a pleasing entertainment; and Annie Lang is a capital dancer. The Cathedoscope shows The Little Doctor of the Foot Hills and A Cloud.

EASTBOURNE.—DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—On Monday evening a new romantic light opera, entitled A Bedouin Beauty, was produced here with all the signs of a very successful first night. The Speckled Band is billed for the last three evenings of the week.

PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. Mouillot's No. 1 company appeared here for the first part of the week in The Geisha. Miss Aimee Grey, as O Mimosa San, used a fine voice with excellent results; Molly Seamore had an interesting representative in Miss Adela Crispin, who was dainty and charming throughout; Miss Rennee Reel was a chic and smart Juliette; and Miss Edith Jeffries, handsome and dignified, did good work as Lady Constance. Mr. Edward Carlton was the life and soul of the play as Wun Hi; Mr. Colin Coop extracted much fun from the part of the Marquis Imari; Mr. Edmund Sherras was a popular Reginald Fairfax, his vocal efforts meeting with hearty applause; Mr. Herbert Uzielli made the most of a clear tenor voice as Captain Katana; and Mr. Harry Reynolds lent efficient aid as Takemine. On Thursday evening Miss Evelyn Millard and company are billed to appear in the new play, The Crisis.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. F. Woodward.—Heading the bill this week are Lennie and Hast, whose pretty musical sketch, The Maid of Polaria, with special scenery, is pleasing and bright; the Musical Marve's have a vocal and instrumental turn which deserves high praise; Miss Louise Zetland sings in an artistic manner; Miss Jessie Burg is skilled in the art of violin playing; the Videos are a trio of fine skaters; Mr. Cecil Bray, as a comedian, has a funny style; Miss Kitty Crowther is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; and new pictures are shown.

EDINBURGH.—ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Managing-Directors, Mr. F. W. Wyndham and Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—A company under the direction of Messrs. Williams and Dunn is playing Are You a Mason? at the Lyceum. There is much vitality in the piece, and acted by an all-round clever cast, it is received with shouts of laughter and hearty applause from start to finish. Mr. William Lockhart, an exceedingly capable comedian, is admirable in the part of Amos Bloodgood, and he is well supported by Mr. Howard L. Tracy, who gives an excellent bit of comedy acting as Frank Perry; Mr. Archie Selwyn is very amusing as George Fisher, and his scene as the French modiste evokes uproarious merriment; Mr. Stanley Arthur's impersonation of Hamilton Travers, of the Folly Theatre, is an able character sketch; Mr. Edward J. Hinge is entertaining as the farmer, John Halton, and Mr. Andrew Buck is easy and natural as Ernest Morrison. Miss Agnes Maude is stately and incisive as the domineering Mrs. Bloodgood, and her three daughters, Eva, Lulu, and Annie, are played with much grace and charm by Miss Grace Denbeigh Russell, Miss Renee de L'Estrange, and Miss Claire Townshend; Miss Peggy B. Yeoman acts with humour and force as Lottie, and displays versatility as Mrs. Halton. The play is preceded by J. B. Buckstone's funny old farce, A Kiss in the Dark, renamed My Wife's Friend in the playbill.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Directors, Mr. F. W. Wyndham and Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—Mr. Edmund Tearle, Miss Kate Clinton, and company are on their annual visit, and opened on Monday with The Three Musketeers. Mr. Tearle's D'Artagnan is one of his best and most convincing impersonations, and the popular actor repeated his former success; Miss Clinton considerably strengthened the cast by her acting in the rôle of Miladi; Athos, Porthos, and Aramis found suitable representatives in Mr. Ernest Lodge, Mr. Edmund Grogan, and Mr. Gilbert E. Colona; the humour of the lighter scenes was pleasingly developed by the Boniface of Mr. Fawcett Lomax; Mr. Bernhardt Turner made a good impression as the Duke of Buckingham; and Mr. Horace Price appeared effectively as Cardinal Richelieu. The feminine rôles of the Queen and her tire-woman Constance were well interpreted by Miss Mary Campbell and Miss Constantia Brookes. East Lynne and Macbeth found places in the week's bill. Mr. Tearle's rendering of the Thane of Cawdor deserves more than a passing word of praise. It is a singularly impressive, intelligent, and tragic conception, admirably carried out in all its phases.

KING'S THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Amand Mascard.—The foremost position on a well-varied and attractive bill has been assigned to Miss Alice Hollander, whose artistic rendering of operatic and other selections obtained very flattering recognition. Miss Aggie Nolan danced herself into favour; Miss Alice Golding gained popularity by her chorus songs; and a third lively comedienne turn was contributed by Miss Viva French, whose specialities included terpsichorean gymnastics. The calm method of the Lauri Brothers made their clever acrobatic feats very entertaining; and Mr. Arthur F. Ward's juggling with hoops "and other descriptions" combined novelty with dexterity. In The Maid and the Artist Wadham and Sterling supplied a somewhat weird and complex turn, introducing much that was new—and all of which was interesting and clever—in the way of painting, singing, and dancing; Mr. Charles M. Daly's company appeared with success in an acceptable miniature comedy entitled Men Were Deceivers Ever; and some excellent pictures were shown by the King's Bioscope.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—Mr. Courtice Pounds and company hold first position with the smart playlet, Charles, His Friend, in which Mr. Pounds again proves his abilities as a comedian and his talent as a singer. Miss Gladys Ivery and Miss Mary Sheridan are graceful actresses, and Mr. J. Cook Beresford is capital as Peter Ward. A vivid and picturesque performance, heightened by excellent bioscopic views, is carried through by Jackson and McLaren, champion tree fellers of Australia; Miss Hilda Jacobsen sings with effect and feeling two pathetic ballads, and Mr. Luis Alvarez, a Spanish tenor, gifted with a capital voice, is recalled for his masterly rendering of selections. Mr. Bert Weston contributes a droll turn of songs and patter, in which he shows an excellent mimetic faculty. Two turns of more than average merit are furnished by the Anartos, smart comedians and pleasing instrumentalists, and by Burley and Burley, amusing and dexterous acrobats, and the programme is further enlivened by the work of Miss Peggy Pryde, comedienne, and Little Keeno, a clever dancer. An amusing film, A Smoked Husband, completes the bill.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. J. H. Sanders.—An attractive programme at this house includes The Gold Seekers, an exciting film, and views of the Military Tournament, admirably depicted.

PRINGLE'S PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. Edmunds.—A Thousand Pounds Reward is the principal picture in the bill here. It is only one of many films, pathetic and humorous, which appeal both to the serious and lighter sides of human nature. Jim Crow and Cliff Vanstone contribute to an excellent variety programme.

MARINE GARDENS.—Manager, Mr. G. B. Smith.—The band of the Royal Piedmont Hussars are proving favourites at this seaside resort at Portobello. In the concert hall a variety programme of much interest and excellence is presented. Mr. Leslie Harris, that notably clever performer at the piano, gives humorous extracts from his large repertory; Mr. Fred Pardoe, in his entertainment, "Poses and Impressions," contributes an enjoyable turn; the Child Trio continue for another week their admirable musical performance; Mr. Louis Nikola, conjurer, submits a series of deft sleight-of-hand feats, and Mr. Humphrey Bishop, baritone, proves himself to be a capital singer.

EXETER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford.—The boards this week are occupied by Boswell's Royal Circus, the two performances each evening being well patronised.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Resident- and Acting-Manager Mr. Frederick Sandy; Musical Director, Mr. Dudley Powell.—An excellent programme is headed by Fred Conquest and company, in the mirth-proviking absurdity Something for Nothing; another screamingly funny item is provided by Fred Karno's production Perkins, M.P., with Tom Nelson at the top of his form in the title-rôle; Lola and Otti Tate are clever acrobats; the Carina Sisters contribute a unique and popular instrumental turn; while Alf. Brookes is a comedian who evokes well-deserved applause; Puello and Cropp excel as dancers; and Freda Fern is quite pleasing.

FALKIRK.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace W. Ebbutt.—What proved a source of much attraction and enjoyment to a crowded house on Monday evening was the melodrama by Mr. Geo. A. De Gray's company, namely, The Angel of His Dreams. It is a drama of the sensational type, with a fine blending of pathos and humour, and its production was much enhanced by the manner in which it was mounted and dressed. The title-rôle was capably sustained by the author, while Miss Effie Bartlett played the part of "the woman who came between." A good deal of the life and vitality of the piece is left to Sam Tippett, a part which is undertaken by Mr. McIntosh Clyde (a son, by the way, of the famous actor John Clyde), who bids fair to become one of the best of the Scottish comedians. The part of Milly is sweetly taken by Miss Amy Daly; Mr. Wallace Campbell as Major Dudley Ferrars is a callous enough villain. The piece holds the boards all the week, and big houses are the order.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. W. H. Rowland.—Mr. Arthur Hardy's company, in the new sensational play, The Speckled Band, opened for three nights to an overflowing house on Monday. Mr. O. P. Heggie submitted a clever study of that ever-interesting character, Sherlock Holmes, and was very ably supported by Mr. Bassett Roe, who gave a skilful portrayal of Dr. Grimesby Rylott, the villainous Anglo-Indian surgeon. Miss Mary Forbes at once attracted the sympathies of the audience by the natural and charming way in which she delineated the part of the persecuted step-daughter, and her acting throughout deserved unstinted praise. Miss Lilian Brennard as the martinet housekeeper was exceptionally good, as also was Mr. Frank Vyvyan, who, as Ali, the Indian valet, exercised a weird effect; Mr. R. H. Brooke's sketch of Armitage, the irrepressible Methodist juryman was a good character impersonation; and the Coroner was ably portrayed by Mr. S. J. Warmington. A special word of praise must be given Mr. Talbot Homewood, who was "Dr. Watson" to life; Mr. H. Asheton Tonge also distinguished himself as the broken down old butler. Master Phillip Tonge as Billy, the alert page boy, gave evidence of his remarkable ability. Miss Lilian Rogers, Mr. R. Lumley, Mr. R. Jukes, and Mr. A. Bransgrove ably sustained the minor parts.

THE LEAS PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—The Gipsies and their Jester continue to be very popular, and draw excellent houses at every performance.

GATESHEAD.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessees, United County Theatre, Ltd.; Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Local Manager and Licensee, Mr. Sidney B. Stringer.—Viviana and company present an original dancing act here; Robb Wilton, a confiding comedian, pleases all parts of the house; Randolph King, described as the one-man programme, is an accomplished artist; Will Atom and his company score heavily with the farcical trifle Wiggles; Yetta, on the single wire, shows uncommon ability; and Sylvo, comedy juggler, Minnie D'Aubyn, comedienne, and the Kingscope furnish other attractive items.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Sole Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. F. Douthwaite.—Miss Grace Warner and company are here in The Wages of Sin and The Scarlet Clue. In the former drama Miss Warner realistically depicts Ruth Hope; Mr. George Gordon faithfully portrays George Brand; Stephen Marler is well regresented by Mr. Frank Esmonde; and Miss Lallah Price is a capital Barbara.

GLASGOW.—KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Directors, Mr. F. W. Wyndham and Mr. G. T. Minshull; Business-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane.—The second week of the D'Oyly Carte company's stay here was ushered in by a repeat performance of The Yeomen of the Guard, and again to a crowded house. Miss Louie Rene was again the Dame Carruthers, Mr. Fred Billington the grimly humorous Wilfred Shadbolt, and Mr. Henry A. Lytton the quaintly pathetic jester Jack Point. Misses Marjorie Stone, Beatrice Boarer, and Miss Hilda Cross as Elsie, Phœbe, and Kate respectively, made heaps of friends. Others whose operatic efforts were frequently rewarded were Mr. Sydney Granville as Sir Richard Cholmondeley, Mr. Stafford Moss as Colonel Fairfax, Mr. Leicester Tunks as Sergeant Meryll, and Mr. Henry Herbert as Leonard Meryll. Recalls were numerous and imperative. The chorus got through their exacting work in excellent style. Mr. Francois Celbier conducted. For the remainder of the week Patience, Pirates of Penzance, Princess Ida, Gondoliers, and Mikado are billed.

THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Directors, Mr. F. W. Wyndham and Mr. G. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy O. Humphrys.—After the summer vacation this house reopened on Monday, when Mr. Eugene C. Stafford's company presented The Private Secretary to a well-filled house. Mr. James Hussey is exceedingly funny as the Rev. Robert Spalding, giving point to the various amusing situations; a better Mr. Cattermole than Mr. William Hargreaves would be hard to find, his performance being most amusing; Mr. Horace George and Mr. Arthur Claremont do justice to their parts, the former as Harry Marsland and the latter as Douglas Cattermole; Miss Mary Malahieu is an attractive Edith Marsland; and the Eva Webster of Miss Elsie Blythe is a well-acted study. Mr. Kendal Chalmers satisfactorily portrays the part of Sidney Gibson; Miss Estelle Despa is quite at home as Mrs. Stead; and Mr. William Carriden does good work as Mr. Marsland. The comedy is preceded by The Captain's Wife, admirably played.

ROYALTY.—Sub-Lessees, the Scottish Playgoers, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Wareing; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jack Humphrys.—His Excellency the Governor has proved a welcome addition to the Repertory company's long list of plays, and the witty dialogue and amusing situations are heartily enjoyed. On Monday a new farce, entitled How Cottle Fell From Grace, was produced for the first time, and is noticed elsewhere.

GRAND.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Christie Grant.—This handsome theatre reopened on Monday, and a complete change of entertainment has been introduced. A stock company has been engaged, and will each week revive one or other of the famous old rollicking farces so popular in days gone by. The remainder of the programme consists of films, grave and gay, tragic and humorous. The farce selected for the opening week is My Turn Next, and it goes extremely well. Mr. Alex. Keith plays the village apothecary, and is well supported by Misses Elsa Brettingham, Margaret Zaidia, and Jane Howgate, and by Messrs. Byron Douglas, H. Wyngate, and Austin Ray.

PRINCESS'S.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—Mr. M. D. Waxman continues his season of Yiddish plays, and this week is giving King Lear, Sulamita, The Broken Hearts, Kohl Nidra, Bar Kochba, and Ureal Akosta.

METROPOLE.—General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Capital houses are being drawn by Mr. Morton Powell's company in How Girls are Brought to Ruin. Miss Alice Defoe gives a touching portrayal of the leading character, Jessie Burton; the sailor lover Harry Hailing being interpreted to the life by Mr. Harry Scott; as the villain, Edge, Mr. Richard Vane is particularly good; and the authoress, Mrs. Morton Powell, plays Winnie Waters most effectively. Mr. Sydney Bryant does good work as Jossie; the hypocrite Sleek of Mr. Alaric Burton is an amusing study; Mrs. Burton is represented in pointed style by Miss Kathryne; Miss Jeannie Risley gives character to the part of Lucy Lawton; clever sketches being also submitted by Miss Addie Adair as Mrs. Slutt and Mr. W. Blunton as Sparkle.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Waldon; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—Under the new two-house arrangement this week we have Miss Ada Wallis and company in The Major, an amusing piece, with lots of irresponsible fun. Mr. T. C. McQuire is very funny as Major O'Neale and Mr. J. W. Groves equally so as Jeremiah. Miss Ada Wallis makes a bright and lively Clara; Miss Ethel Tooney as Mrs. Gampney, Miss Mercia Davis as her daughter, and Miss Annie Frayle as Hilda give clever renderings. Mr. Emlyn Davis as Goodman, Mr. Arthur Douglas as a waiter, and Messrs. Fred Draper and George Hicks are all responsible for helping the fun along.

EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Reynolds.—The Empire patrons have this week quite a change in Chanteclair, or Hi-Cockalorum, a feathered farmyard phantasy. The brightly-coloured plumage, combined with the light effects, lends greatly to the spectacular side of the play, while much amusement is caused by Messrs. Ernest Sefton and Jas. Learmouth as the Boosy Rooster and Cat respectively. Mr. Jack Martin makes a capital Chanteclair, and Miss Madoline Rees is pretty in the part of the wayward hen pheasant. The whole is excellently staged and worthy of Messrs. Joe Peterman and Geo. Ricketts, who are responsible for its production. A very clever acrobatic act is given by the Great Lumars, who introduce the living electric horizontal bar; Howard Ward and Louie Davis are well received in a musical comedy duologue, "Wanted, a Typist"; Ed. E. Ford, the Australian Sundowner, keeps his audiences lively with his facial expressions; and Geo. Antill proves an eccentric comedian of more than average ability. Miss Bertie Herron is responsible for quite an amusing turn with her minstrel business; while Azella Wilson is a graceful gymnast. Mr. Graeme Goring, the well-known elocutionist, submits capital recitations from his extensive repertoire in most pleasing fashion; and the Bioscope is interesting.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Evan Good; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest R. Foster.—Miss Constance Collier, who has often been in Glasgow in dramatic work, is appearing in a vaudeville programme. Her contribution is Henry Hamilton's powerful recitation, "The Relief of Lucknow," and Miss Collier gives it with striking effect; Frances Letty appears in several cleverly arranged scenas, in which she gives a touch of Scotch comedy, Irish humour, and a sketch of coon life; the Royal Tokio Troupe of Japanese give a daring show; Joe Reichen's trained dog show is one of the best of its kind; Rose Elliott once again carries the audience with her in the tuneful choruses of her "sensible songs"; the Quaint Q's give a comedy quartette turn full of eccentric humour, and introduce some enjoyable singing; Foot Gers, the French comedian, takes well in his imitations of Fregeon and other stars; Estcourt is a novel entertainer, juggler, &c., and is well received; and Kenny Kay's ventriloquial turn causes roars of laughter.

PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry M'Kelvie.—Gilday and Fox, a couple of Hebrew comedians new to this country, have proved a great success; Graham Moffat and company cause roars of laughter with their Scottish farce, The Concealed Bed; Alice Hughes dances and sings with lively effect in the sketch, Star of the Bazaar, and is ably seconded by the members of her company; the Ellesmeres give a neat and clever cycling turn; Walter King, the doleful one, again causes hearty laughter; the Four Eugenes give a very smart aerial gymnastic act; Eva Chadwick is the possessor of a good voice; and Goodall and Knox, knockabout comedians, are well received.

COLISEUM.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. John M. Hay.—An attractive programme is drawing large audiences. A good leading turn is furnished by Harry Tate in Flying in His Veri'ot Tater Plane, which is exceedingly funny, and pleased the audience immensely; Chas. Fisher's Vocalesques are an artistic combination in comedy, burlesque, and harmony; and Miss Marquis's stud of wonderfully trained ponies are an example of equine intelligence. Other notable items include the Hardini Trio of violinists; J. H. Milburn, topical vocalist; Madge Brownie, Dutch impersonator; Lupino Lane, comedian and eccentric dancer; May Mars, in a pleasing vocal scena, "A Persian Garden"; and an interesting display on the Bioscope.

PANOPTICON.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Sinclair.—Olive and Vera, duettists and dancers, give a smart turn; Serron and Sunken are a couple of clever jugglers and conjurors; Mlle. Bartenelli takes well as a contortionist and gymnast; and Mary Vernon's items are very enjoyable. An excellent series of films forms the remainder of the programme.

GAIETY, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. Dickinson.—In addition to pictures a couple of good variety turns are introduced, Sam Elvery, Hebrew delineator, tickling the fancy of the audience with his song "Abraham," and Celia Vernon contributing a fine illustrated song. The talking and singing picture is entitled "I'm Shy, Mary Ellen."

HENGLER'S.—Proprietor, Mr. Albert Hengler; Manager, Mr. Harry Milne.—At the head of affairs are Les Tripellos Trio, who are responsible for a high-class musical entertainment; Retta Halkett, a dainty little artist, sings several Scotch songs well, and dances smartly; and the singing and dancing of the little Sisters Ormond, a couple of clever juveniles, is greatly appreciated. The Bioscope films are many and varied.

STAR.—General-Manager, Mr. Gus Lazenberg; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Chandos.—Durazcoe and Azella display wonderful talent in their equilibristic and pyramid act; the Moxon Trio mystify with their juggling and dancing; Wills and Warlock have very amusing patter; and Jack Morth proves a clever comedian. The pictures are of a high order of merit.

SCOTTISH ZOO AND CIRCUS.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—This is the last week of Volpi's Italian Circus here, and business is still good. In the Zoo many new animals have been added. Interest centres now in the daring performance of Mme. Vera Schuzzler with a group of "raw" lions, and, considering the short time she has had them in hand, her control over the animals is marvellous.

GLOSSOP.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sydney Spenser.—After being closed for several months, this theatre was reopened on Monday, when Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Spenser's répertoire company presented My Sweetheart to a crowded house. In the title-rôle Miss Lizzie Hall was charming and vivacious, her singing and dancing being delightful; Mr. Sydney Spenser gave an effective portrayal of Joe Shotwell; Mr. Arthur L. Read was a vigorous Harold Bartlett; Mr. Harry S. Butler made an effeminate Dudley Harcourt; Mr. A. W. Thompson was an able Dr. Oliver; Mr. Edwin Rawlinson was very effective as Tony, his singing and dancing being excellent; Miss Gipsy Alexander as the wily Mrs. Fleeter shone to advantage; Miss Belle Russell was a distinctive Mrs. Haizell; Peck-a-Boo, Christie, and Emmeline were nicely represented by Miss Hilda Eyre, Miss Elsie Heap, and Miss Violet Hethering-ton respectively. A Wonderful Woman, Fritz, and Peggy occupied the boards for the remainder of the week.

GLOUCESTER.—PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Will Smithson; Manager, Mr. R. T. Rea.—Messrs. Jay and Mann's company in The Truants is here. Miss Molly Tremaine contributes a capital impersonation of Freda Saville; and Bill Chetwood is in the capable hands of Mr. T. A. Shannon; Dick Chetwood being well played by Mr. O. Powis Griffiths. Mr. Mackenzie Rogan is good as the Rev. Philip Preston; and Miss Elmie Kemp an excellent Pamela Gray. Lord Strelland is adequately represented by Mr. Frank Danby; as is Lady Darnaway by Miss Mildred Orme. Miss Dorothy Booth is interesting as Jack Carstair; and Miss Rita Trekelle as Mrs. Collins is very prominent. The character of Checkley is effectively rendered by Mr. E. Compton Coutts; and Bent is suitably enacted by Miss Stewart Dawson. Mr. Geo. Martley as Peglar also deserves notice.

KING'S HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. Pooles' Theatres Ltd.; Manager, Mr. A. Stewart.—A splendid travel film, In the Pyrenees, is shown; and The Mystery of Temple Court is a good dramatic subject. The Deroneys give a smart comedy wire act; J. P. Durney, a champion skater and rolling globe performer, provides an attractive turn; the Vocaphone puts on two good selections; Miss Kitty Woodford is well received for her illustrated songs; and Hearne and Palmer, in The Hebrew and the Barman, have a novel acrobatic act.

THEATRE DE LUXE.—Proprietors, Electric Theatres (1908), Ltd.—This charming little building, with its new system of ventilation, is liberally partonised, and the pictures are well up to standard.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—ROYAL AQUARIUM.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Nightingale.—The Merry Widow company opened here on Monday to a house packed in every part. In the title-rôle Miss Phyllys le Grand appeared with great success; Mr. J. Warren Forster displayed fine artistic instinct as the Prince; Mr. Edward D'Arcy was excellent as Baron Popoff; Mr. Fred Fowler's Nisch was a delightful piece of comedy; Mr. Ripley Evans sang well as Viscount de Jolidon; and Miss Ada Thome was excellent as Natalie.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Nightingale.—The attraction here is The Little Damozel, capitally interpreted by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company. Miss Emilie Polini displays marked ability as the Little Damozel; Mr. Alick Chumley plays well as Recklaw Poole; Mr. William Matthews is an ideal proprietor of the Café Angelique; Captain Gambier gives a clever character-sketch of Papa Batholdy; Mr. Guy Newall is very amusing as the Hon. Fitzroy Lock; and Mr. George Brandon is good as Captain Neil Partington.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. George Gilbert; Manager, Mr. George Zalva.—The "Boy Scouts'" spectacle has been produced here with great success; Albos appears in a sensational wire act; the Tally-Ho spectacle is still very popular; Gicardo is a juggler of remarkable dexterity; Liugu Salvino is a musician of first-rate ability; and Doodles, with his original antics, delights the audiences.

BRITANNIA PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—Mr. Harold Nuttall's company, in The Ghost of Jerry Bundler, are topping the bill, the principal part being excellently portrayed by Mr. Martyn Roland. Mr. Tom Garland is a clever exponent of ventriloquism; the Three Rochesters' speciality act receives well-merited applause; Chummie La Mara is very popular with her excellent songs; Mr. Tom Moore is a first-rate character comedian; Morelli and Moore are very amusing and clever musicians; the Spanish Goldini troupe perform some remarkable acrobatic feats; and Mr. Bert Anderson gives a clever legerdemain turn.

WELLINGTON PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. Arthur Cash.—The Fantastics concert party is appearing here.

GREENOCK.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. L. Skivington.—A good programme is contributed by the Columbia Comedy Trio; Charles Prelle's bijou circus, in a smart show; Florence Cora and Sam Thompson in their well-known burlesque; Haidee St. George, a refined vocalist and pianist; Henry and Tyler, a couple of remarkably clever trick cyclists; the Sisters Cora, vocalists; Dennis and Morris, simultaneous dancers; and the Dromoscope, with up-to-date pictures.

EMPIRE.—Lessee, Mr. J. J. Bennell; General-Manager, Mr. J. B. Lawton; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. L. Clayton.—The excellent quality of the B. B. pictures ensures, as usual, full houses this week. The pictures include An Indian Girl's Romance, Two Sides of a Story, The Forest Ranger's Daughter, The Marked Time-table, Away Out West, and Tilly the Tomboy.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—The Greater Love is arousing much interest. Mr. Campbell Goldsmid acts with singular force as Paul Penfold, admirably realising the pathetic suggestion of the part; Miss Francesca Strickland does very well in the difficult rôle of Mary; Miss Marion Fawcett shows emotional power as Mrs. May; Mr. Algernon J. Hicks plays the interesting character of the Rev. Arthur Warren in an earnest manner; Mr. Stanley Bedwell gives an impressive portrayal of Jack May; Mr. Wentworth Lawson is amusing as P.C. Drayton; and Mr. Dennis Bryan is excellent as Andrew Isted.

THE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. F. Verner Walford.—Much fun is contained in the bright miniature farce Three of a Kind, and it is smartly acted; Miss Gwen. Lindon's attractive style and pleasing voice are much admired; Phil Percival has a fund of burlesque comedy that is decidedly entertaining; Maud Marshall and Fred Parr appear in a vocal act with much success; the W. T. Thompson Trio cause much laughter with Watch the Chalk; Len Hale is a clever dancer, especially on roller skates; and Lulu Lord has a variety of good songs which she sings well.

GUERNSEY.—THEATRE ST. JULIAN'S.—Joint Lessees, Messrs. Ed. Marris and Albany Ward; Manager, Mr. George A. Deighton.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company provides here a delightful treat in Smith. Mr. Robert Minster as Tom Freeman merits warm praise; Mr. H. Douglass Greet capably undertakes the rôle of Algy Peppercorn; Mr. F. G. Thurston is suitably cast as Dallas Baker, K.C.; and Mr. J. Child is of excellent service as Fletcher. Miss Ethel Hodgkins displays histrionic ability as Mrs. Dallas Baker; Miss Pauline Straus gives a well-studied performance of Emily Chapman; and Miss Ethel Wellesley enacts Mrs. Rosenberg with conscientious care. The week is filled in with electric pictures and excellent variety turns.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—The attraction here is supplied by the Whips, under the direction of Mr. Fr next week. A short descriptive account appears in another column. On Thursday and Friday The Geisha and on Saturday A Greek Slave were billed for production by Mr. F. Monillot's company.

American Palace Pier.—Lessees, Rinkeries (1909), Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Mr. J. D. Hunter and his company continue their season here, and have this week reproduced the farcical comedy The Guv'nor. A children's grand fancy dress carnival was held last Saturday. Alfresco concerts are given daily on the deck by the troupe of comedians, and roller-skating is followed with interest by many spectators in the open air skating rink, enlivened by Mr. J. Vince's military band. A fancy dress fête was held on Wednesday.

Beach Concert Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. George Blackmore.—The concerts here instituted by Mr. Wallace Arthur continue an attractive item in the borough's entertainments.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING.—Gaiety.—Proprietors, Messrs. J. Ainsley and H. Hall.—This week Mr. Ernest Dottridge's vaudeville company is here. Harwood's Juveniles top the bill in the scena Christmas Eve; Jimmy Hoffman, quaint comedian; and Wal Owen, in his funniosities, are both good, and the Marblesque Trio give a realistic performance of living pictures; Zelda is a charming and clever instrumentalist; Mario juggler, meets with success; and the Three Eltons bar comedians, give an excellent turn. The Girl Pierrots meet with much approval; and Les Rallis score heavily in the clever sketch, The Artist and His Monkey; Mr. James Rallis gives a capital impersonation of the monkey.

Picture Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood.—An enjoyable programme is being submitted at this place of amusement this week. Special films include Over Silent Paths, The Red Man's Way and Canine Sagacity.

HUDDERSFIELD.—Hippodrome, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—Miss Sable Fern and her company are the chief attraction with the new scena, Boy Scouts in Camp. Also in the bill are Agnese and Arthur Lynch, in illustrated songs; the Blessings, a pair of clever equilibrists; Heeley and Meeley, tramp acrobats; Rubee and Renee, lady vocalists; Fred Elton, a breezy entertainer at the piano; and Neville Delmar, light comedian and whistler. The pictures supply an amusing finish to the programme.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Herbert Garside.—The artists here are Juno Salmo, in his weird feats of contortionism; Maurin's Fairy Fountains; the Dick and Dorothy Trio of singers and dancers; the Four Figaros, character impersonators; Dick Tubb, comedian; Miss Jessie Buckle, comedienne; and Ruglus, an expert and amusing comedy juggler. The pictures complete the bill.

HULL.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Morton's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—The return of Old Heidleberg is very welcome. Mr. Benham's company have fully justified the interest shown in them. A newcomer to the city is Miss K. Ricimer, who has proved herself a fine performer, and realises the rôle of Kathie in every phase; Carl Heinrich is capitally placed in the hands of Mr. Owen Nares, whose work created a very favourable impression; the Kellerman of Mr. O. Wells was an excellent foil to the sadder side of the play; Mr. Sydney Hamilton was an able Lutz, the innkeeper; and Mr. Percy Crawford is an interesting picture. The student scenes were very well done.

Alexandra.—Morton's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—Can a Woman be Good? produced by T. H. Taylor's company, is drawing good houses. Mr. H. C. Robinson is the chief of the heavy brigade, and fills his rôle well; Mr. J. Millane is a safe Manuel Errington, and works well; Miss Mabel Rose plays the rôle of the heroine with conspicuous credit; and Miss Norah Melton and Miss Florence Hunt give pleasing impersonations.

ILKESTON.—Coliseum.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Albert Leigh.—The chief item on the programme is J. G. Grahame and Zerlina Harrington's company, in Olga's Oath, the latter artist displaying acting ability of a high order. The Hesses are accorded a hearty reception, their musical entertainment being quite a treat; Pete and Juno, in song and dance, are old favourites; Will and Rose, in Fun in a Café, prove clever performers; Claude Gardner, comedian, Sisters Robertson, song and dance artists, and the Bioscope complete.

IPSWICH.—Lyceum Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Murray King, Clark, and W. H. Savery.—Miss Florence Tyrrell's company is here with The Woman in the Case. Claire Foster in the hands of Miss Tyrrell is a clever piece of acting; Miss Mabel Ormonde shows power in the part of Margaret Rolfe; the Julian Rolfe of Mr. Cecil Newton is excellent, and Mr. Howard Brenan makes an interesting Thompson; Mr. Sidney Porter is a good Jimmy O'Neil and Louis Klauffsky is well played by Mr. Charles Clarke; Mr. Gerald Alexander is a good Walters, and Miss Ethel Lodge is the irrepressible Mrs. Hughes; and Miss Evelyn Carleton a capital Elsie Brewster.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Messrs. Spissell Brothers and Mack, American eccentrics, have an amusing turn entitled A Quiet Little Supper; Mlle. Haydee's miniature theatre is a clever show; Delvers and Wallace have a good turn with laughter and song; R. A. Speedwell is extremely clever with his lightning sketches; a novel ventriloquial act is given by Cavalli; the Delafoire's are expert baton spinners and xylophonists; Ohm's trained ponies dogs, and monkeys are very clever, and the Bioscope, with some special films concludes.

JARROW.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Edward Evans.—Her Love Against the World is pleasing patrons here. Mr. Fred Emery gives an excellent rendering of Eric, the Earl of Strathmere; Miss Rossie St. John does full justice to the part of Lionel; and Mr. Roy Fortescue plays with force and skill as Ulric; Mr. W. H. Hallett does full justice to the rôle of Prince Othmar; and that of Prince Maurice is carefully handled by Mr. Arthur Chisholm; as Iris, Princess Idalia, Miss Ellen Snow is seen to perfection; Mr. John Mill and Mr. Fred Acton as Fritz and Heinrick cause much amusement, and are ably assisted by Miss Winifred Acton and Miss Hetty Ferguson as Katinka and Gretchen, and the mounting is excellent.

Palace.—The Jarrow Palace Co.; Manager, Mr. John V. Kane.—This place of amusement continues to draw good houses and some excellent pictures are shown. Sira, one-legged acrobat, introduces extraordinary feats; Lil Garrick, comedienne and dancer, is well received; and Tom Casey, the singing newsboy and champion march whistler, is popular.

The Kino.—Proprietor, Mr. Dixon Scott; Manager, Mr. John R. Scott.—This new picture hall is receiving liberal support. The Royal Kino Juveniles do well.

The Gem.—Lessees, Messrs. John Tweddle and Co.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Rabey.—This picture hall is showing some excellent films. Mr. Hyman Long, speciality artist, and Master Stobart, the juvenile Patti, are popular.

JERSEY.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Edward Marris; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lesley Edwardes.—Mr. Dudley Bennett and Mr. T. C. Wray's company is paying a return visit with Miss Hook of Holland. Mr. E. Russell as Mr. Hook is the life and soul of the piece; Mr. Cuthbert Hardy acquits himself creditably as Captain Adrian Paap; Mr. Sam Lockridge still appears as the conceited Bandmaster; Mr. Wilson Blake takes the part of Schnapps; and Mr. Reginald Hunter is amusing as Simon Slinks. Miss Kathleen Starling is a pretty and taking Miss Hook; whilst the part of Mina is still inimitably played by Miss Muff Carew.

Royal Hall.—Lessee, Mr. J. T. West; Manager, Mr. George Francis.—The new electric films here this week are The Mule Driver, Tontolini as Nero, and A Bolt from the Blue.

Alhambra.—Proprietors, Messrs. L. C. Langlois and L. Ponlain.—Some excellent pictures are being shown here, and Miss Esaline Thorne is making herself a great favourite.

Olympia.—Proprietor, Mr. Louis Marks; Manager, Mr. Percy Leopold.—The Vivandières are getting quite a good reception here this week.

Triangle Park.—Mr. Wilson James's Enterpeans continue to be the attraction here.

Oddfellows' Hall.—Mr. Charles W. Poole's Myriorama is here, and, as usual, the variety turns are excellent, and include Inez and Pim, unique gymnasts; W. L. Rowland, fun furnisher; Harry Raymond, dancing extraordinary; the Jerome Duo, quaint jugglers; the Ettenason, the Globe, and Amasis, the Egyptian mystery man.

KEIGHLEY.—The Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Keighley Hippodrome Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Tom Barrasford.—Mr. Wm. Maclaren's company is here in Proof. Mr. Francis Roberts is a good Pierre Lorance; Mr. George Roberts's Count de Laval is a noteworthy performance; Mr. Thomas E. Marshall is a humorous Chamboran; Miss Hero Hathaway is a charming Adrienne; Miss Phena Powell scores as Madame Deprets; and Miss Millicent James is well placed as the Duchess. Mr. Herbert Stone, the musical-director, must be complimented on the meritorious performance of the orchestra.

KETTERING.—Victoria Theatre.—Managers, Messrs. Alf. Bailey and Co.—The Balzens, jugglers; the Sisters Roze, duettists and dancers; and the Vernon and Mars Trio contribute variety turns here.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint.—Sandwiched with up-to-date pictures are pleasing turns by Roche and Roche, Welda and Wynne, and Stirling and Cashen.

KIDDERMINSTER.—New Opera House.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. C. Gudgeon.—We have a visit this week from Mr. F. G. Kimberley's company with Two Little Drummer Boys. Mr. Edward Bertici ably portrays the part of General Kingsley, and Mr. Frank Austin that of Captain Frank Carsdale. Messrs. Polsen Turner and Chas. Oakley are respectively good as Captain Geo. Darrell and Lieut. Allen Kingsley. Mesdames Violet Langley, Ada Champion, and Patricia Connaughton are good in their various rôles. The play is well staged.

KING'S LYNN.—New Royal Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. Reginald Pareezer.—For three nights Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company has presented the fascinating comedy Smith. Mr. Montagu Love as Tom Freeman shows ability; as Algie Peppercorn Mr. Vivian Gilbert is excellent; as Mr. Dallas Baker Mr. Cecil Brooking faithfully interprets the part; Miss Eleanor Delaporte makes a striking Mrs. Dallas Baker; and as Smith Miss Jessica Thorne is charming.

LEEDS.—Grand Theatre—Licensee, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. Wynn Miller.—Mr. Fred Terry and Miss Julia Neilson have been here in Henry of Navarre. Mr. Terry's magnificent performance was a triumphant success from start to finish. Miss Julia Neilson's Marguerite de Valois was a most impressive performance. Mr. Philip Merivale ably impersonated Henry (Duc de Guise), and Mr. H. H. Wright capitally played Henry Duc D'Anjou; Mr. Horace Hodges, in the part of the Astrologer, gave an excellent interpretation; Miss Eileen Beatrice as Marie Bellefont was suggestive of much charm and vivacity; and Miss Phyllis Manners ably depicted the Queen-Mother.

Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Francis Laidler; Manager, Mr. Nathaniel Hepworth.—The Power of the King is being played here by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company, Mr. Clavering Craig, Mr. Charles Whitlock, Mr. Arthur St. John, Miss Marie Franklyn, and Miss Isa Lyndon being highly successful in the principal rôles.

The Empire.—District-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—George Robey successfully heads the bill here; the Seven Perezoffs are very smart in a juggling entertainment, Lena Verdi excels in mimicry, and other good turns include those of Carl Howard, J. G. Scatter, Annie Fielding and Bert Hull, Bros Durant, the Poluskis, and Frank Couch.

The Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. Harry Dunford.—Bellew and Stock's company, which includes Master Edward Garratt, presents Mortimer Magnus, M.P., here. It is an amusing comedy sketch. The Jaxon Troupe excel in step dancing, Ernie Myers is a favourite comedian, Lily Lonsdale's fine voice is much admired, Harold Heath is a coon singer and dancer, Jessie Templeton wins popularity in some smart songs, the Three Dixons do a nice banjo and dancing act, and the Four Burnells and Lilian French are included in an excellent programme.

Queen's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Manager, Mr. Charles Bush.—Consul is the principal attraction here; the Five X Rays provide an amusing item; the Days appear in a clever telepathy act; Mr. and Mrs. Royston Dene present a sparkling comedietta, My Lady's Chamber; Maudie Ford and Marie Glenn are favourite vocalists; and Cestria is a good comedy juggler.

The Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Booking-Manager, Mr. Johnnie Whiteman.—Marguerite Ismay and Girls provide a bright vocal and dancing scena here, Beale and Broadway are clever singers and dancers, Monty Walker and Bert Rayburn are favourite comedians, and other turns include those of Maclaine and Mac, and McBride and Logie.

LEEK.—Grand Theatre and Hippodrome.—Proprietors, the Leek Theatre Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Barry Bond.—A Woman Worth Winning is presented here by Mr. Percy Norman's company, under the direction of the author, Mr. A. B. Mackay, to large and enthusiastic audiences. Mr. R. Jerrold Ord ably impersonates the character of General Borinski; Mr. A. B. Mackay acts with ability as Fergus Lovinsky; Mr. Graham Hamlyn gives a powerful portrayal of Ivan Bardoff; Peter Popples is exceedingly funny as played by Mr. L. Newman; Mr. C. W. Black makes a pleasing Bertie Scribbles, and Miss Lillie Lewis acts with sympathy and feeling as Roma Pauloff. Other parts are well played. The Beginning and the End, by the same author, will be staged on Thursday. Mr. Barry Bond, the newly-appointed manager of the theatre, took over the management on Monday.

LEICESTER.—Royal Opera House.—Business-Manager, Mr. Trueman Towers.—Messrs. Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's No. 1 company is here this week in the romantic play, The Prince and the Beggar Maid. Those in prominent parts who should be singled out for special commendation are Miss Miriam Pritchett (Monica), Miss Jessica Black (Viola), Mr. G. Mayor-Cooke (Prince Hildred of Sylvania), Mr. Lionel Gadsden (Prince Michael), and Mr. Ernest Cox (Prince Olaf). Other parts are in safe hands.

Theatre Royal.—Acting-Manager, Mr. P. Allerton Turner.—This week's attraction is provided by Mr. Stanley Carlton's company in Night and Morning, in which Mr. Stanley Carlton, Miss Rubie Maude, Miss Marion Holiy, and Mr. W. H. Vernon play their parts admirably.

Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne.—Now that the redecorating and refurnishing of this handsome and palatial vaudeville theatre have been completed, the beautiful and artistic appearance of the hall is the theme and admiration of its many thousands of patrons. The principal turn in this week's programme is George Carney, who is creating endless merriment in the sketch, The Fool of the Force—Mr. Carney is supported by a capital company; the Great Fasola bewilders the audience with the rapidity of his illusions; Franco Piper is aptly billed as the maestro of the spinning, tossing, and swinging banjos; the Gothams, the harmonising and comedy vocalists, are as popular as ever; the De Wynne Brothers, who introduce two well-trained dogs, give a remarkable exhibition of hand-balancing feats in a sangfroid manner; Will Johnson is a laughter-compelling comedian; Woodhouse and Wells, pantomime favourites, are a pair of comedians and dancers who give an exhilarating turn; Bertha Winder excels in an exhibition of clog dancing; Daisy Martell is also a good dancer; and the Bioscope is still retained.

Pavilion Theatre.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joseph Lawrence.—Tom Taylor, the popular comedian, and company is this week's chief attraction in the funny sketch, The Plumbers, in which Mr. Taylor is conspicuous with a portrayal that keeps the audience in a continual roar of laughter—the other characters are capably enacted; Colbert is a smart club juggler and hoop roller; Doris Druce is a juvenile comedienne who should make a name with her imitations of various artists; and others in the programme are Nellie Neil, comedienne and dancer; T. C. Jacques, a versatile comedian; and Ernest Howard, a local light comedian. A fine picture programme of star subjects is also shown.

Grand Electric Picture Palace.—Proprietors, the Midland Electric Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Joseph Eke.—The dominant feature of this hall is the very latest released pictures, changed twice weekly. The Kinemacolour films prove exceptionally attractive, and this week the audiences are being delighted with a magnificent one of the River Seine, and a series of various Spring Flowers.

Empire.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. F. R. Griffiths; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. R. Craig.—The usual liberal programme of pictures is again in evidence here this week, the two principal films being The Cowboy Millionaire and The Spanish Girl, which are supported by Foolshead Preaches Temperance, Her Sister's Sin, True Love Never Runs Smooth, Western Chivalry, The Love of Lady Irma, and many others. Connie Ruby, a smart songstress, is the additional attraction.

Boulevard Electric Theatre.—Managing-Director Mr. John Noble.—Audiences here are greatly pleased with the first-class pictures shown. In addition the entertainment is varied by the Belmont Troupe of concert artists.

LEIGH.—Grand Theatre and Hippodrome, Ltd.—Secretary and Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Woolstencroft.—Heading the bill here are Haley's Juveniles, whose singing and dancing are deserving of high praise; Dix and Dox present quite a novel musical turn; Regan and Ryan, eccentric comedians, provide an excellent item; the Gilberts submit a clean and clever tight-wire act; Jock McNeil, Scotch comedian and dancer, is successful; Nobby, boy comedian, comes in for much applause; the Three Alskarnos present a smart tumbling act, and the Hipposcope pictures complete.

LEITH.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Licensee and Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—Miss Ada Millais' company, under the direction of Mr. Henry Herne, have been performing No Man's Land to full houses here this week, the realistic scenes of the play and the methods of the players being evidently irresistibly attractive to Leith theatre-goers. Mr. Edwin Bennett and Mr. Villiers Stanley are prominent in their vigorous renderings of the villainy rôles of Silas Moore and Mat Marsden; Mr. Fred Lillywhite successfully doubles the parts of Gilbert and Norman Bathurst; and the Owen Rushton of Mr. Edward Adams deserves special mention; Mr. Phil Harper as Harry Oaklands does heroic deeds with happy effect; but herein he is eclipsed by Miss Marie Kildare, who, in the rôle of Mary Bathurst, jumps from a bridge into a river of real water and rescues Bessie Poodle (otherwise Lottie Pearce) from a watery grave. Comedy scenes are exploited in popular fashion by Mr. and Mrs. William Mallalieu as Dr. and Mrs. Buxton, by Mr. Reginald D. Hamer and Mr. Dan Matthews as Thompson Poodle and Ikey Moss; and last, but not by any means least, by Mr. Sammy Foster, who hugely delights his legions of local friends and admirers.

LINCOLN.—Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Payne Seddon and Ernest Pope; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Pope.—Mr. G. W. Bowes presented The Sign of the Cross on the first three evenings of the week, and it was welcomed by big houses. Mr. Leonard Yorke as Marcus, Miss Pearla Gardner as Mercia, and Miss Effie Dane as Stephanus scored the chief successes. On Thursday Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Levy were due to open with their juvenile company in The Sleeping Beauty.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. E. Dobney.—Jessie Broughton, a brilliant contralto, and Dennis Creedon, a fine baritone, present an effective singing and instrumental act, which is deservedly appreciated; Hera is an original and clever juggler, and Susie and Protti offer a particularly dainty dancing act; the Sisters Hula, Frank Boyce, Mollie Doon, and the Hulls also score, as do the Palace Pictures.

LIVERPOOL.—Shakespeare Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wentworth Croke; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—After its production at Douglas last week The Bishop's Son was on Monday evening presented at this theatre for a six-nights' run. The audience, a critical one, was not great in point of numbers, and the play did not receive as large a measure of enthusiasm as one might expect, considering the popularity of Mr. Hall Caine, the author. However, the manner in which it was put upon the stage, and the excellence of the work of the chief actors, compensated in some degree for the lack of interest which the drama showed at several points. Undoubtedly the finest character was that of the Bishop, undertaken by the talented Mr. W. F. Grant; Mr. Derwent Hall Caine did not at times seem to grasp the opportunities afforded by such a strong rôle as that of Daniel Mylrea; Mr. Julian Cross did the most with the part of the Deemster; Miss Verita Vivien proved a sympathetic Mona, playing with much tack and restraint; Mr. Matthew Boulton was an excellent Ewan Mylrea; the menservants, Fayle and Hommy-beg, were capably handled by Messrs. George Mudie, junior, and E. W. Thomas; Miss Agnes Knights carefully undertook the character of the blind housekeeper Kerry; Miss Dorothy Radcliffe was a neat Liza; and Mr. Herbert Winton did all that was necessary with Father Dalby.

Rotunda Theatre.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—A well-written play, Through the Divorce Court, is being presented here this week by Messrs. Henry Chattell and Jack Denton's company. Miss Hettie Chattell acts with much effect as Lady Penarth, and earns warm approval; Mr. Riddell Robinson shows a deal of ability in the part of Lord Penarth; Mr. Jack Denton stands out well as the Hon. Algy Fitzmaurice; in the rôle of Sybil little Constance Dagmar pleases generally; and other worthy supporters are Messrs. Henry C. Cooper (Mendoza), George F. Leicester (Peter Pettigrew), Harry Colbeck (Patsy), Miss Nellie Sheffield (Dinah), and Miss Edith Cruikshanks (Lady Hilda). The play is being well received on its first visit to Liverpool.

Star Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—Another play new to this city, The Master of the Mill, is being put forward at this popular resort by the Melodrama Production Syndicate, Ltd. Mr. Algernon Syms handles the character of John Greenfield with tact and discretion; Mr. Paul Beckett and Mr. Ernest E. Imeson thoroughly grasp the rôles of the nephews, Tom Bolton and Julian Croft; Mr. Danell Greene plays Adam Davenport with power; Miss Nair Jonghmans pathetically enacts Kate Rigby; Miss Valerie Russell makes a pleasing Isabel Ware; and Miss Enid Edoni shows much spirit as Nancy. The drama is put on in good style.

Kelly's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant.—Large houses are the rule here this week on account of Mr. C. Watson Mill's fine drama For Love and the King. In the rôle of Gerald Meredith, the soldier of fortune, Mr. Mill plays with considerable dramatic strength; Mr. Alfred Morris is impressive as the miser Obrenovic; Miss Rosa Mervyn makes a sweet Edith Meredith; Grazia Obrenovic is capitally handled by Miss Kitty Melville; Natila is daintily presented by Miss Joan Ellis. A deal of humour comes from Mr. Oscar Power as Oppenheim; and other supporters are Messrs. John C. Carlyle (Vladimir), C. W. Spencer (King Kara), and Beckett Bould (Prince Uros).

Empire.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—The popular Harry Randall is top here this week, delighting everybody with his latest; as trick cyclists the three Merrills show surprising cleverness, and earn rounds of applause; that particularly able mimic, O'Gust, finds great favour; Severus Schaffer goes through one of the best turns of the evening, his juggling being exceptionally able; the Arthur Lloyd Trio have a neat drawing-room playlet, Little Charlie; or, the Twin Sisters, which affords a deal of amusement; Fred Curran brings some of his newest sayings and parodies; as duettists and dancers the Sisters Jerome gain loud applause; the Cavalotti Brothers submit a really excellent musical turn; and Mary Ambrose sings and plays the violin to everyone's satisfaction.

Lyric.—Lessees, Liverpool Lyric Theatre, Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—The attraction here this week is The Prodigal Parson, played twice nightly by Mr. W. V. Garrod's company. Mr. Garrod gives a powerful impersonation of the Rev. Tom Godley, his work being watched with close interest; Mr. Ernest Vaughan thoroughly understands the character of Enoch Jaggins, which he presents in effective manner; Miss Bertha Kingston shows much talent as Fern Godley; Miss Madge Douglas is capital in the part of Gretchen; and good work is also done by Messrs. Carthage Caldcleugh (Ben Jaggins), Walter Vincent (Ned Kettlepin), Owen Remonde (Phil Drive), Miss Celia Barnard (Myrtle Godley), and Miss E. Fredericks (Pomeray).

Royal Hippodrome.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—A big line here is Mephisto, with very clever illusions, which are mystifying; Miss Elsie Southgate and James Coward provide a choice and talented musical turn, which affords general delight; Robins and Collier are as amusing as ever; Harry Levaine affords satisfaction with his latest funny songs; some really able juggling is shown by young Frank Hartley; Osborn and Brooks have some funny songs and sayings, which keep their audience in excellent humour; as comedians and dancers Stacey and Williams prove a capital turn; and contributions also come from Charles Penrose, eccentric comedian, and George Lawrence, light comedian.

Royal Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—An Abandoned Woman is being played here this week by the stock company. Mr. Harry Tresham makes a manly Captain Seaton; Mr. Sydney Grant proves a strong Phillippe Malvoisan; Mr. R. Seath Innes does himself credit as Robert Saunders; Mr. Cecil Ravenswood carefully handles the character of Sir Marmaduke; Miss Lina Nazeby acquits herself as the scheming Minon Malvoisan; Miss Gertrude Entwistle earns much favour as Eleanor Deane; and good work also comes from Messrs. E. D. Allen (Jean), Tom H. Solly (Paddy Boyle), Leo Montgomery (Sammy Sharp), and Miss Florence Cameron (Sally).

Olympia.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. M. Slater.—Foremost here this week are the renowned conjurors and illusionists, Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, whose work is attracting much attention; Will Evans has a screaming burlesque on the French play Chantecler; the New Macs are particularly amusing with their cross-talk, and dance in finished style; Arabella Allen affords every pleasure with her character studies from the works of Charles Dickens; Nina Wood has some neat little songs at the piano; roars of laughter follow the acrobatic act The Original Tumbling Waiter, shown by Briff, Braff, and Broff; Ray Espinosa presents several well-finished specialty dances; and A Woman's Way is an attractive trifle acted by George C. Doughty and Molly Laney.

Pavilion.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. George F. Slatter.—The popular Irish comedian Joe O'Gorman is here this week with his latest songs; Sam Elton is as droll as ever; a clever show is given by Villiers de Gaston, illusionist; Alice Raymond and company present their pretty spectacle A Night in Egypt; Edie Veno is a very amusing comedienne, and keeps her audience in shouts of laughter; Sydney Brandon, a young character portrayer, is a good turn; the Brothers Walford have a merry entertainment as comedians, comedy jugglers, and paper manipulators, for which they earn great applause; and Michael Madden, "Queen of Dames," also appears. The Girl in the Barracks is on the Bioscope.

LLANDUDNO.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. A. G. Pugh.—Mr. George Dance's company appeared the first three nights of this week in Miss Hook of Holland. Mr. Alfred Wellesley as Mr. Hook was the cause of hilarity from start to finish; Mr. Arthur Wood Mansey as Captain Adrian Paap made an excellent military man; Mr. Mansell Strainger as Bandmaster Van Vuyt was well placed; Mr. Charles Ross as Ludwig Schnapps did well; Mr. Charles Stanley made an amusing Simon Slinks; Miss Maud Denny as Mina was encored nightly; and Miss Dorothy Southgate made an attractive Sally. The Arcadians was announced for the remainder of the week.

LONDONDERRY.—Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Payne Seddon; Manager Mr. J. Mitchell.—The attraction this week is Arthur Shirley and Ben Landeck's pathetic play, For Mother's Sake, which is well staged by Messrs. Fox and Leonards' company twice nightly before crowded houses. Mr. B. M. Fox takes the part of old Goriat with marked success, and the rôles of Luigi Ferroni and Louis Myers, the villains, were well filled by Mr. Scott Fitzgerald and Mr. Herbert Leonards respectively. Miss Mabel Phillips gives an artistic interpretation of the heroine, Jacqueline, and Mr. Whitemore Ledgar's Henri Romaine, her sweetheart, is admirable. The other parts were capably sustained by Miss Evie Grahame, Mr. Ernest Waters, Miss Hetty Jeffries, Mr. Alf. Edwards, and Mr. Fred Werrell.

LOUGHBOROUGH.—Vint's Electric Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint; General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Bowmaker.—Continued success attends Vint's entertainments, the Hippodrome being packed nightly. The Elite Harmony Boys appear as midshipmen in a good vocal and dancing turn; the Three Behans are smart quick-change artists; and Little Doris, child vocalist and dancer, also appears. The pictures are highly appreciated.

Temperance Hall.—Lessees, Messrs. Weisker Bros.; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Evanson.—The Northcotes, operatic duettists, and Le Hurst, ventriloquist, supply the vaudeville turns here, and the films maintain their high standard.

LOWESTOFT.—Marina.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer.—For the first three nights this week the well-known comedy Don was presented by a capable company, under the direction of Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison. Mr. Gordon Bailey scored successfully as Stephen Barington; Miss Emma Hutchison being equally praiseworthy as Mrs. Bonington, for which she was warmly applauded. Mr. Chas. Harley (Albert Thompsett) and Miss Violet Harley (Elizabeth Thompsett) also added to the general success. For the latter part of the week we had the first local presentation of The House of Temperley, while for next week, which is the annual Lowestoft regatta and yachting week, The Flag Lieutenant is announced.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. W. Alvar.—A big attraction here is Lockhart's performing elephants, under Captain Taylor, which are on a welcome return visit. The whole performance is decidedly smart and clever. The De Breans are also making a welcome reappearance in their Japanese act; and Florence Leonard is heard to advantage in several pleasing vocal numbers. The pictorial portion of the bill is, as usual, a strong feature, some fine travel subjects being shown, to the evident appreciation of the large audiences.

LUTON.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Resident-Manager, Mr. Louis J. Beard.—Ferguson and Mack, the American eccentrics, top the bill here, and keep the house in roars of laughter; Andre Romanoff, the Gipsy violinist, is a great favourite; Maud Esmond suits the audience down to the ground, and May Hall is rightly encored for her singing and dancing; Paul Cavalli does some marvellous feats of strength; T. P. Carroll is a popular comedian, and Grace Lester and company stage an up-to-date drama, A Ruined Life, with excellent effect. The Bioscope concludes.

MACCLESFIELD.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. K. Gatley.—A Fast Life is presented here by Mr. Walter Steele's company. Mr. Steele as John Dixon is deserving of high commendation; Sir Oliver Franklin is capitally acted by Mr. F. Garratt; Mr. C. Taylor plays with ability as Harris Goldberg; and Mr. Willie Barratt is very amusing as Tommy Burke. Miss Lillian Ross cleverly delineates Mrs. Dixon; as Lady Franklin Miss Lillian Burns is very successful; and Miss Maud Ryder brightly portrays Juliana.

MAESTEG.—Picture Palace.—Lessees, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. G. F. Knowles.—The chief attraction here is the appearance of Ap Thomas's trio of Welsh instrumentalists, who are local people, and received quite an ovation. Petro and Leon, gymnasts, are clever; the Two Le Bums, comedy equilibrists, are smart and funny. Some excellent pictures on the bioscope conclude an excellent programme.

MAIDSTONE.—Palace.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Ewart C. Potter.—The boards here are occupied by Messrs. Mathew H. Glenville and Fred Osmonde's company in For Wife and Kingdom. As the Grand Duchess Marie Miss Hettie Zillwood plays effectively; Mr. Reginald Fox is a smart Capt. Max Lubeck; Mr. Albert Guyon as the wily Baron Breslaw is capable; Mr. Frank Sutherland portrays the General Von Nestolde; Mr. Fred Osmonde imparts rich humour to the rôle of Karl Ludvayr; and Mr. C. Gallier does well as Sergeant Offenbeck. As Camille Miss Margaret Frame is successful; Miss Alice Buckland as Nita Constadt and Miss Audrey Canning as Ottilie Schwartz play brightly; and Miss Lilian Malvern as Esther is good. The effects are realistic.

MANCHESTER.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edmondstone Shirra.—This theatre reopened on Monday with the engagement of Mr. Lionel Rignold and his company in the popular farcical comedy, What the Butler Saw, which has always been a favourite here. Mr. Rignold, in his old part of Pink, the butler, is a great force, as usual; and Miss Marie Daltra is cleverly equal to the many demands upon her ability as Miss Foden; Mr. Charles Fawcett's Jack Barrington is a familiar and welcome figure, easy and enjoyable; Miss Zoe Gilfillan plays Mrs. Barrington with smartness and distinction; while among others Mr. Harry H. Rignold scores as Weinstein and Mr. Raymond Dudley is good as Sir Chas. Foden. The remaining parts are well handled, and the staging is on an elaborate scale.

Prince's Theatre, Ltd.—Proprietors, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—Messrs. Leedham Bantock and Fredk. Mouillot's company are the attraction here in a farcical comedy, Those Terrible Twins, a very amusing piece. Mr. Leedham Bantock, who is also the author, causes endless laughter as William, the butler; and Mr. Cyril Delevanti works hard, and is seen to advantage as Charlie Pringle; the company is strong throughout, including, as it does, Mr. Robert Rivers, a fine comedian; Miss Maud Adams, Mr. Archie McCaig, Mr. Chas. Hanbury, Mrs. Watt-Tanner, Miss Enid Baird, and Miss Norah Walker. The farce is well staged, and is greatly enjoyed. The Lady Burglar precedes.

Royal Osborne Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—The Eve of Her Wedding, played by Mr. Wilson Benge and his company, is the attraction here. There is picturesque and sensational interest in it, and the leading rôle of George Tremayne is capitally played by Mr. Wilson Benge himself. Miss Pauline Nanton as Mavis Leverton makes a pleasing heroine, and the sinister interest is well sustained by Mr. Arthur E. Pringle as Dean Clifton and Miss Mona Gray as Renie de Telle; while Mr. Jay Kay and Miss Nora Mason are responsible for the humour as Rudolph Earle and Kinkie respectively.

Metropole Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hearn.—The Hand that Rocks the Cradle, Mr. J. A. Campbell's latest success, is the fare here, and is still drawing good houses.

Grand Junction Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brearley.—Mr. Alexander Marsh and company are doing good work here in Shakespearean drama, which is well appreciated. The plays chosen are The Merchant of Venice, Hamlet, and Othello.

Gaiety Theatre.—Proprietor, Miss A. E. F. Horniman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edwin T. Heys.—This week sees here a revival of Arnold Bennett's play, Cupid and Commonsense. The piece, though in many respects unnatural and unpleasing, was made interesting by the cleverness with which it was rendered on Monday night. Miss Hilda Davies as Emily Boothroyd was perhaps the most engaging, though Miss Marie Leonhart as Alice (this being her first appearance in the company, by the way) ran her close. Mr. Whitford Kane as Eli nent of Princess Melaneh, receiving a well-deserved encore for her rendering of "Under the Deodar." An entertaining bit of comedy was contributed by Mr. Percy Everard as Sir Joseph Verity; and his son, Douglas Verity, was amusingly played by Mr. C. B. Hargreaves. As Sophie Miss Hilda Darrell gained a host of friends by her piquaint style and skilful vocalisation; Mr. Coningsby Brierly, a clever comedian, as the irrepressible Barry played, sang, and danced with untiring energy; Miss Florence Linton made a charming Mrs. St. Quinton, Miss Sylvia de Lacey a stately Lady Anchester, and Miss Vi Small and Miss Nancy Vaughan a pleasing Lady Arnot and nurse respectively. Appropriate scenery, tasteful dresses, and new songs and dances added to the success of the production.

HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. de Freece; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Mayall.—Kate Carney, the popular comedienne, and her company are here in her new sketch, The Fun of the Fair, which is provocative of great hilarity throughout. Miss Carney as Carmen, the Gipsy Queen, acts and sings with her accustomed vivacity; Willie Phillips as a rascally lawyer, Albert Mason as a dude, Fred Malcolm as Jim (a Romany), and G. M. Marriott as Hogar, the witch, are all excellent. Another capital sketch is presented by Bert Coote, entitled A Lamb on Wall Street, in which Mr. Coote is supported with great success by J. C. Aubrey and Ada Russell. Other contributors to the programme are the Sisters Towers, duettiste and dancers; Ling and Long, clever eccentric juggling entertainers; L. B. Athol, comedian; and Irene May, soprano vocalist. The Three Thieves and Love in a Mining Camp are excellent pictures.

HALL-BY-THE-SEA.—Under the sole Management of Mr. Charles Evans.—Charles Coborn and Walter Munroe, billed "Two of the Bhoys," are both cordially received. Charles Coborn has a new song on a visit to the planets by aeroplane, and he also sings his old favourite, "The coster's friendly lead," with great success. Walter Munroe has two new Irish chorus songs, "She'll be seventeen on Sunday" and "Just remember me to Mary," both of which are taken up by the audience with enthusiasm. The Three Phydoras, in their ecentric musical act, give a clever performance; Merrie Messie Mills, comedienne and dancer, is especially successful; Charles Erard, pianist and mimic, secures a full share of applause; and Miss Josie Mooney, comedienne, is on the programme, which also includes illustrated vocal specialities and bioscope pictures. The ball each evening after the concert is largely attended.

MERTHYR TYDFIL. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, the South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson Withera—For Old Times' Sake is presented by Mr. Fred J. Webb's company. Miss Marie Danvers-Smith cleverly undertakes the rôle of Sareta Berkeley, and Phyllis Brookes is well played by Miss Mamie Stanton. Mr. Fred J. Webb presents an able study of Rupert Sydney, the character of Paul Sydney being well handled by Mr. Victor Raymond; Mr. Rolf Leslie as Jean Brooke made a favourable impression; Dr. Heathcote is well sustained by Mr. Dick Eckersley; and good work is also done by Mr. Victor Coleman as Jimmy Jepps, Mr. George Harvey as Frank Rivington, Mr. F. Cavannah as Evan Berkeley and Miss Dot Robins as Mrs. Hale and Miss Mary Robertson as Polly Pearson.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Lessees, the Merthyr Entertainment Co.—Will Netta's Singing Jockeys, who head the bill, have a good reception; Captain Devereux and his canine pets are a great acquisition; Sergt. Bert Powell in a pictorially illustrated chat presents his travels and experiences as a soldier; Cliny and Clancy, Scotch comedians, are highly diverting; and Ray and Douglas provide an amusing sketch in The Postman and the Girl.

MEXBOROUGH.—PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Goodison.—Mr. and Mrs. O. Silverstone and H. Wright's company are playing The Nihilist. Mr. O. Silverstone gives a vigorous portrayal of Prince Alexander; a dramatic interpretation of Ivan Nowasky is submitted by Mr. George Mitchell; Mr. Terence Nerrey plays forcefully the character of Carl Orloff; Mr. Morgan Dale is a typical example of official Russian tyranny as Sergt. Markoff; Mr. J. Brunelle Harvey plays capably as Father Gourko; Miss Edna Clarke presents a sympathetic portraiture of Alexina Orloff; a strikingly dramatic and forceful study of the Princess Olga is given by Miss Annie Hylton; and Mrs. O. Silverstone does well as Katrina.

PICTURE HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. W. H. Melton.—The star pictures this week are: A Knot in the Plot, The Master Mechanic, Mistaken Identity, Billy's Bulldog, The Little Trumpeter, and Hunting in France.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Ker Chatto.—M. Auguste Van Biene, the actor-musician, in The Broken Melody, occupies the boards here this week. Paul Borinski is cleverly undertaken by M. Van Biene, and as the Duchesse de Vervier Miss Hilda Moore is also praiseworthy. The other characters are in competent hands.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Imeson.—The Drama of Life, presented by Messrs. Sidney Cranston and Archie Helsby, occupies the stage here. Mr. Graham Woods ably takes the part of Harry Beech, and Sylvia Beech is admirably played by Miss Pattie Hastings; as Master Robert Beech Miss Dolly Bogue is a favourite, and Sir Dobson Wilde, as played by Mr. Sydney C. Cranston, is a very popular character.

EMPIRE. — General-Manager, Mr. Chas. G. Rembges.—The Ten Juggling Geraldos are loudly applauded for their clever exhibition; the Four Mayors in their comedy skating create laughter, and the Milton Trio are also pleasing. Carr and Rose, comedy artists, Cummin and Seaham, acrobats, Daisy and Dot, duettists and dancers, Perry, Willier and Perrier, vocal and dancing act, Mark Leslie, coon artist and eccentric dancer, and the Empire Bioscope complete a successful programme.

HIPPODROME. — General-Manager, Mr. S. T. Smurthwait.—Large audiences nightly witness the capital picture show, including The Lost Trial, a fine Vitagraph film. Entertaining turns are given by Fred Leslie, in illustrated songs, and Tiny Milmott, child artist.

MOTHERWELL.—NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Business-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wright.—Walter A. Chetham's répertoire company is here in Dan'l Druce, Admiral Guinea, and Caste. On Monday Dan'l Druce was produced, with Mr. Dickson Moffat in the name-part, and excellent indeed was his interpretation of the part; Mr. Henry Earlesmere looked handsome and courtly, and acted with ease and grace the rôle of Sir Jasper; the Reuben Haines of Mr. Sydney Bland was a delightful piece of comedy acting; Mr. E. Stuart Vinden represented the stripling Geoffrey Wynyaard; and Miss Mildred Hodson was admirable as Sweet Mistress Dorothy.

NEATH.—NEW HIPPODROME.—This house, which was originally the Crown Skating Rink, has been closed for some time, during which period extensive structural alterations and improvements have been made in the interior. The seating accommodation is now arranged so that a full view of the stage can be obtained from any part of the auditorium. The decorations impart a cheerful and pleasing effect; and Mr. Leon Vint, the enterprising proprietor, has spared no expense in making everything comfortable for patrons. In Mr. Noice he has secured a manager who is most courteous to patrons. Miss Winifred Maude and her talented company, with The Sins of a City, had the honour of opening the new house, and drew crowded attendances. Miss Maude is admirably suited to the rôle of Seaweed; Miss Ethel Crawford is an austere Lesbia L'Estrange; as Jenny, a Scotch fisherwoman, Miss Glad Maxwell is successful; Miss Annie Megson as Midge keeps the house in roars of laughter; Miss Mabel Lane is a typical Mrs. Muggs; Mr. William Vane is a dignified Sandy Macdonald; Mr. Harold Heath a good Donald McIvor; Mr. Maurice Jones ably impersonates Joe Woodley, horse trainer, and Jasper Woodley, a miser; as Ralph Blackwater, K.C., Mr. Reginald Green is a villain of the first water; Mr. Victor Du Cane as Isaac Levi is very amusing; and great laughter is also caused by the courtship of Midge (Miss Annie Megson) and Jonathan Blyne (Mr. George Bogue). Without in any way interfering with the existing arrangements of the theatre an operating chamber for Bioscope pictures has been installed.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint; Manager, Mr. Arthur Noice.—Some very interesting pictures are shown here this week to good houses. Maye and Bray, in a comedy duo, secure applause; Andrews and Thompson, operatic artists, are very popular; Dennis and Morris, comedians and dancers, also successfully contribute to a good programme.

NEW BRIGHTON.—WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Jones and Douglas.—High-class vaudeville is submitted here. Business is most satisfactory. Great success attends the efforts of Mr. Johnny Danvers, the Four Maisanos, the Hargreaves Trio, the Rawsons, the Claymore Trio, Mr. Walter Barrett, Miss Florrie Elliston, the Pimans, and Miss Lila Vesta. The animated pictures are interesting and instructive.

TOWER. — Secretary and Manager, Mr. R. H. Davy.—Good films and variety turns constitute the bill; Yera and Zena, equilibrists; Miss Winnie Darrill, comedienne; and Mr. Tom Ellis, eccentric comedian, all give satisfaction.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Adeler, Sutton, and Allandale.—The Stage Adventures of Miss Brown is well acted by Mr. Eric H. Albury, Mr. L. Palgrave, Mr. F. Dalton, Mr. E. Robson, Mr. E. Bridgeman, Miss Ida Chapman, and Miss E. Ross.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Teale Lingham.—The House Opposite is this week paying its first visit to Tyneside. Mr. Harold V. Neilson as Cardyne gives a powerful interpretation, and the Hon. Mrs. Rivers is in the capable hands of Miss Amy Sangster; Mr. W. Lemmon Warde makes the most of his opportunities as the Hon. Henry Rivers; whilst Messrs. J. F. Fox, Alfred Hilliard, and H. S. Heynam fill their respective parts with distinction. Miss Dorothy Blackader's impersonation of the French mind is lifelike, and the loquacious Mrs. Calthorpe is delightfully portrayed by Miss Effie Leigh Hunt.

TYNE THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Manager, Mr. Fred Sutcliffe.—Mr. James Willard's drama Paying the Price is drawing crowded houses here. Lord Delemere is played with distinction by Mr. James Willard, who also impersonates Paul Hartmann; the scheming Nell Fortescue is in the able hands of Miss Margaret Damer; Mr. Jackson Wilcock makes a manly Captain Dick Clinton, and Mr. H. Vyvian Thomas as the Hon. Cecil Dalrymple causes much mirth. The dual rôles of Hal and Jan Vortnone are capably filled by Mr. Frank Medhurst; Miss Gem Lloyd makes a charming Doris Delemere; and the remaining parts are all ably filled, the mastiff dog Tiger showing careful training.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. W. Rowe; Business-Manager, Mr. Edwin B. Clark.—Frank Lindo's romantic drama Love the Conqueror is here, and Miss Marion Wakeford fills the important rôle of Beatrice Mortimer in a convincing fashion; as Brian Norval Mr. Leonard Laurence has ample scope to show his talent; and Count Leon finds an excellent exponent in Mr. Norton Shields. The William of Orange of Mr. Eric S. Crowther is a capital study, whilst Mr. Sidney Dench is a distinct success as Sir John Mortimer. Mr. Tom E. Lewis is seen to advantage as Captain Rupert Armadale, and Mr. Arthur Trail is a clever Andrew Albertree. Mr. Bert Dench is amusing as Peter, and is ably assisted by Miss Liza Coleman as Nicholas. Miss May Barrett is successful as Brian's mother.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Manager, Mr. W. P. Wells; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. W. Kilgour.—Wilkie Bard is paying a welcome visit here this week with a stock of humour as fresh as ever, his items "The Man from Frightley's" and his inimitable version of "Hail, smiling morn," being received with great enthusiasm. Carrie Laurie's Kindergarten, a clever juvenile troupe of singers and dancers, are paying a welcome return visit; Matthews and Cowper are responsible for an amusing sketch, When the Clock Went Wrong; the Goltz Trio score in a clever globe and wire act; Ethel Beech is a dainty comedienne; Bert Harrow, comedian, scores in his various items; Ferry Corwey, the musical clown, is entertaining; Will Poluski, jun., is very popular; Aida Martine is a comedienne and dancer of considerable ability. Pictures conclude.

PAVILION.—Resident-Director, Mr. N. Wilkinson; Manager, Mr. Frank D. Todd.—Barclay Gammon is paying a welcome visit at this popular hall, and his items at the piano are heartily appreciated; the Wolkowsky troupe of Russian dancers and instrumentalists provide an excellent turn; Marie Santoi and her company score a success in the scena A Night in Japan; Dave Samuels, Hebrew comedian, proves a most diverting turn; the Bros. Ashley are responsible for a clever comedy boxing sketch, Next, Please; the Almas are clever equilibrists and tumblers; La Belle Greta comedienne, is a graceful dancer and charming singer; Rosie Lloyd, comedienne, has a number of catchy songs. Josie Delaine, a versatile lady, and the pictures complete.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder.—The programme here this week is an excellent one. Royal Togo is a Japanese artist, performing many wonderful feats, which are heartily applauded; Bertha Stuart, comedienne, contributes another enjoyable turn; and there is a strong picture programme.

BRINKBURN PICTURE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. T. McHary; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. T. Edwinson.—Fred Horsfall, humorist and mimic, is here this week, and the usual excellent show of animated pictures is greatly appreciated.

NORTHAMPTON.—THE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Samson and McNeil, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. H. G. Griffin; Musical Director, Mr. Walter Ashton.—A veritable vocal treat is furnished by the Herald Comedy Four, in a scena, entitled "The Hawkers"; Sylvesto and Rumbo, in a comedy act, are amusing, the lady displaying both elegance and skill on the silver rings; Gus Barra gives a good rendering of the "Poet and Peasant" overture on the English concertina; the Woolhafe vocalists and dancers, gain unqualified applause; Lily Hartley is a pleasing serio and dancer; Jack Renee is amusing in a dame song; and Mr. Frank Hardie, in a sketch, The Great Green Diamond, and the Palace pictures complete.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Andrews' Pictures, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Lyndon.—The Launch of the Battleship Lion is a grand subject well displayed. Miss Leslie Moyser pleases with illustrated songs.

NORTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's capable company, with Mother, has attracted large audiences. Mr. J. O. Stewart in the rôle of Duncan Fairweather is deserving of high commendation; Mr. Alexander J. Haviland displays much ability as Frank Rodney; Mr. Leonard Harrison makes the most of Stephen Carrington; and Tommy Noblets has a capital representative in Mr. Cecil H. Raymond. As Nellie Fairweather Miss N. Thorne Hallam sustains the part in admirable style; Miss Emilie Entwistle as Little May proves herself to be a clever actress; Miss Amy Wood makes a satisfactory Martha; and Miss Phillis Vaughan as Polly Crumpet is worthy of the highest praise.

CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. William Mould.—Bob Selvidge and Poppy Holland, in their musical absurdity A Dotted Crochet, have had a hearty reception from large audiences here; the Four Breens present a marvellous juggling act; the Sisters Kay, in their musical scena win much favour; Marie French, burlesque actress, is popular; Francesca, assisted by Frances Haskol in their picture songs, are greatly enjoyed; Charles Leighton, in "A Tramp Study in Harmony," is very funny; and the Bioscope concludes.

PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur A. Horner.—A great treat is provided by Mr. Gaston Mayer's Vaudeville company in F. Anstey's extravagant farce, The Brass Bottle. Memories of Arabian Nights Tales are vividly recalled with the enchanting scenes so splendidly stage-managed by Mr. Alfred Rivers. The Genie Fakrash-el-Amash of Mr. Holman Clark is as clever as it is original; Mr. Langhorne Burton capably fills the part of Horace Ventimore; Spencer Pringle is cleverly impersonated by Mr. Rudge Harding; Mr. Percy Marshall has much to do as the Professor, and does it well; both Messrs. R. Ayrton and Harry Paulton, jun., as Samuel Wackertath and Rapkins make the most of their opportunities; Miss Mary Brough is amusing as the worried Mrs. Rapkins; Sylvia Futvoye has a pleasing exponent in Miss Marjorie Chard; and Miss Edith Hunter is effective as Mrs. Futvoye. The dancing girls, with Zobeida (Miss Irene Wells) as their chief, are a pretty combination in the Oriental scene.

PRINCE'S.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Agate.—The Great Awakening is the title of the drama which is proving itself an immense success here. Miss Olga Andre, of Worst Woman in London fame, makes a most interesting Lola Selby; Mr. Herbert Barrs is well adapted to the rôle of James Selby; Guy Logan finds a capital counterpart in Mr. Tom Arkenstall, and Mr. Edwin Keith provides much amusement as Billy Brass.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Captain E. H. Warren-Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—Miss May Henderson, coon comedienne, is doing well here; the Twelve Fezzans perform extraordinary acrobatic feats with unequalled agility; Frank Lister and company are successful in a pathetic sketch entitled The Sundowner; Billy Hobbs scores in an original eten dance; Harry Bancroft is a pleasing actor-vocalist; Emmie Ames causes much merriment with her "Christmas Tree"; and the Cecilias, in their musical act, and Staffo, the juggling butcher boy, are turns deserving praise.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—Novelty has its exponent in Mlle. Denarber, a chic comedienne, who hovers over the stalls in a captive balloon, the house being in darkness; Miss Anna Chandler sings with verve "Hynotise me" and the "Yiddisher Rag"; Herbert Sleath's company (Mary Griffiths, W. F. Sterling, and Mervyn Rentoul) are very successful in Her Ladyship's Guest; Harry and Fanny Dent renew our amusement with the "Indian Bottle," &c.; Sam Stern's character impersonations are appreciated; the Five Whiteleys are entertaining; Hebraic patter is provided by Young and Evans; singing and dancing by the Solo Trio and Ivy Aberdare and Nick Carter, Detective, depicted by the Bioscope, completes.

KING'S. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. I. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Claude Marner.—The big attraction here is Fred Karno's spectacular production Wondetainia, with Shaun Glenville as Patsy O'Flynn, and Miss Elsie Skillings as Maude de Vere. Mlle. de L'Enclos possesses a voice of exceptional range and a grand stage presence; Max Laube is a powerful whistler; Cissie Lupino's smart character dancing finds much favour; the Hadji Mohammed-Ben Medain Tumbling Troupe rivet attention; Blake and Granby, with their duologue, "The System," provide plenty of fun; the Sisters Collins are graceful dancers and duettists; and Tod Lowen, comedian is amusing.

GOSPORT THEATRE.—Buster Brown, though indisposition, was unable to appear so Tatten Hall will deputise latter part of week. Madge Souter keeps the audience in good humour, and on Monday evening Lazern, the mystic, supplied an emergency turn. The Face at the Window, British Lives on Credit, and The Animated Gazette are capital pictures.

PRESTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, the Executors of the late Mr. W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Alban Newton.—Mr. Tom Watt's company, in the Heath-Wilson Barrett version of East Lynne, is here. Mr. Frank Beresford is powerful as Archibald Carlyle; Mr. John J. Hooker is well cast as Francis Levison; Messrs. Jerrold Manville and Eric Lugg, in the respective parts of Justice Hare and Richard Hare, are capital; Mr. Joe Rowland as P.C. Bullock is inimitable; and Miss Isabel Singleton is an excellent Cornelia; Miss Beryl Forbes a great favourite as Barbara, and Miss Alice Seymour a capital Joyce; little Willie and little Isabel are cleverly portrayed by Miss Alice Moseley and Miss Ethel Ray; while the part of Lady Isabel is really most excellently rendered in an exceedingly sympathetic manner by Miss Ida Heron.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Arthur Roberts tops the bill here this week in The Importance of Being Another Man's Wife, and succeeds in convulsing the audience; Ada Fawn is a favourite, and comes in for a large share of applause for her capital contributions; Willie Gardner is one of the cleverest dancers on roller and ice skates ever seen here, and wins loud applause; Eric and Nora contribute a bright and novel musical act, which is deservedly well received; Lucy Gillett does an exceedingly clever acrobatic and juggling act, her various feats being cleanly and dexterously executed; F. A. Martell gives a most wonderful exhibition of difficult feats; Merton and Rydon (George and Lillie) are a clever musical comedy duo.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page; General-Manageress, Mrs. M. M. Clarkson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Clarkson.—*As Your Hair Grows Whiter, and Morris, dancers; and Albert Le Fre. On Thursday afternoon Miss Vesta Tilley paid a flying visit.

BEACOMBE.—King's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Jas. Kiernan.—Packed houses are here this week with Mr. William Mollison's company in The Chorus Lady. Mr. John Sims-Woolley gets in some earnest and natural acting as Dan Mallory, and Mr. Henry Ludlow, as the villain, Dick Crawford, scores effectively; Mr. C. A. R. Shum gives a good study of Patrick O'Brien and Miss Josephine Woodward as Mrs. O'Brien places the character strongly en evidence. Miss Agnese D'Aragan presents an amusing Georgie Adams Coote, and the ladies of the chorus are excellent in their respective rôles; Miss Rita Carlyle as Patricia O'Brien imparts piquancy and naturalness to the character.

SHEERNESS.—Hippodrome.—Lessee, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Willerby.—The first three nights of the week The Arcadians formed a popular attraction. Miss Sybil Tancredi in the part of Sombra was greatly appreciated; Miss Violet Roberts as Chrysea acted capitally; Mr. Charles Stephenson as Simplicitas utilised to the full his opportunities for mirth-producing; Mr. Alfred Beers as Peter Doody was very amusing; Miss Gertrude Aylward as Mrs. Smith caused hearty laughter; Miss Mollie McIntyre as Eileen Cavanagh was excellent, and as Jack Meadows Mr. Arthur Macdonald acted well; Mr. Cyril Lane was capital as Bobby; Mr. Wallace G. Court was a masterful Sir George Paddock, and Mr. John Montague as Astrophel and Mr. Charles Henry as Strephon acted ably; Mr. Horace Nye as Father Time is also worthy of notice. The Cingalee occupies the boards for the remainder of the week.

SHEFFIELD. — Lyceum Theatre.—Managing Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Mr. Ernest E. Norris and company opened on Monday in The Education of Elizabeth. Mr. Ernest E. Norris communicated to the audience the thorough enjoyment he evidently felt in the humorous situations he was placed in as Harry, during the evolution of Elizabeth, a character represented by Miss May Norris with considerable charm and dramatic ability. Other parts were cleverly played by Miss Emily Stevens, Miss Una Erle, Mr. Herbert Garthorne, &c.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—That old favourite, Uncle Tom's Cabin, is again receiving a cordial welcome here, and the white and coloured members of Mr. Charles Harrington's combination all work together with a will. Miss Norah Bretton is a pretty and pathetic little Eva, and Mr. J. H. Boehm acts with dignity and feeling as Uncle Tom.

Alexandra Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—William Bourne's successful drama, Man to Man, is as popular as ever. Interest is attached to the fact that Mr. Clifford Bown is again playing his original part of Bill Berkley, a serio-comic creation, which would make many a worse play a success. Mr. Arthur Robinson acts with the requisite force as George Gordon; Mr. Edward Lloyd is good as Philip Ormond; Mr. Charles Sterling earns applause in the shape of hisses as the dispicable villain, Ellerton; Miss Beatrice Hone makes a graceful heroine as Ethel Maythorne; and other well-played characters are Miss May's Gipsy Madge, Miss Parera's Lavinia Dove, Miss Oakley's Ned Doyle, Miss Bradshaw's Mary Grey, Mr. H. Halland's Matthew Ellerton, Mr. Bruce Williams's Plumtree, and Mr. F. C. Roper's Roger Gammer.

Empire Palace.—The Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—Mr. George Formby is a comic with a style of his own, who is always popular in Sheffield; Mr. Syd May, the mimic, is another clever artist and a deserved favourite; the Picard pantomime troupe are well received in the comic ballet, The Burglars of New York; and others who successfully entertain this week are the Garden Quartet, in The Wreck of the Hesperus; the Three Sisters Kilner, dancers, &c.; Miss May B. Brilliant, vocalist and dancer; Phillips and Merritt, variety artists; Ethel Arden and George Abel in a diverting absurdity, Town Hall—To Night! and Mr. Peter Birmingham, Scotch comedian. The Bioscope concludes.

The Hippodrome, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Frank Poole. The Middleton and Speilmeyer dramatic company, in the splendidly staged one-act drama of Western life, A Texas Wedding, is the pièce-de-résistance here, supplemented by the following clever performers: The Twelve Kennedy Girls, dancers; the Menzies, in The Suffragettes; Miss Violet King, Miss Ethel Loftus, Miss Maud Lordy's dog actors, Miss Phyllis Seymour, Wild, Willie and West, in their agile and laughable comic acrobatic sketch, The Bouncing Nawvies, and the Bioscope, with up-to-date pictures, all the numbers being heartily applauded.

The Picture Palace, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Leonard Shaw.—This luxurious and perfectly appointed bioscope theatre is a great success, and the selection of films—dramatic, topical, scenic, and humorous—is kept up to a high standard of excellence.

SHREWSBURY.—Theatre Royal and Hippodrome.—Lessee and Director, Mr. W. Yates Gregory; General-Manager, Mr. Thos. Baugh.—Miss Lena Ashwell's company was here for the first three nights of the week, playing Diana of Dobson's, with the dramatic episode, Out West, as the curtain-raiser. In the first-mentioned play Miss Eva Leonard Boyne undertook the title-rôle capitally; Mr. Brisco Owen acted with conspicuous ability the part of Captain the Hon. Victor Bretherton; Miss Nannie Hume; Miss Edith Robey, Miss Cicely Oates, and Miss Winifred Trevor Lowe each merited praise for the excellent manner in which they filled their respective parts as assistants at Dobson's; Miss Marie Lake as Miss Pringle played creditably; Miss Hilda Francks was amusing and capable as Mrs. Canteloupe; Miss Mary Crewe merited encomiums as Mrs. Whyte-Fraser; Miss Nannie Hume did well in the character part of an old woman; Mr. Leslie Crowther was a typical London policeman; Mr. Thos. Pauncefort as Sir Jabez Grinlay made the best use of his opportunities; and Mr. R. F. Beach made a satisfactory waiter.

SMETHWICK. — Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Barnard; Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson.—The Stepmother is admirably enacted by Miss Nannie Goldman's company. Miss Goldman as Danny and Mr. William Holles as Captain Bristow are prominent; Mr. Herbert J. Walton is a typical stage detective; Mr. Henry C. Ward as Abraham Wiggins is a convincing villain. Mr. H. P. Owen successfully interprets Luke Trizel. a tramp; Mr. Teddy Myles and Miss Edith Bruce provide plenty of comic relief as Anna Vickers; the Stepmother of Miss Patricia Bostock is admirable, and Miss Walton Hemming as Clara, her child, makes a good impression. Other parts are well sustained by Misses Lucy Burrows and Amy Bristow and Mr. Ronald Roberts as Zeke, a verger. The Bioscope pictures are decidedly good.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA. — Empire Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. Julian Graham.—On Monday Mr. Harry P. Tower's company, by arrangement with Mr. Frank Curzon, commenced a week's engagement in Dear Little Denmark. Mr. Leonard Hornesy ably directed the music and orchestra, while the individual singing was particularly pleasing; as also was the unaccompanied song by eight male members. The ballet troupe with the clever Miss Nancy Rich as principal, were accorded well-deserved appreciation; Miss Thelma Raye gave a talented characterisation of Christine; Miss Winifred Volt, too, gained singing honours, and was eminently suited as Ophelia; Mr. Cameron Carr as Conrad Petersen, and Mr. Hartley Summers as Hans Hansen were successful; Mr. Edward Thirley proved an amusing and capable exponent of the Duke; Mr. Arthur Ballance as Karl sang with pleasing effect; and Miss Alice Waldie was suited as Xandra.

The Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Southend Hippodrome; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lewis de Burgh.—The artists here this week are Doris and Frances, duettists and dancers; Haley's Garden of Girls; Maud Courtney, in song and dance; Hayman and Franklin, in the matrimonial agency; Mary Law, violinist; Lalla Selbini, the American bathing beauty; "Mr. C.," in song and story; and Mr. R. A. Roberts, in Ringing the Changes.

SOUTHPORT.—Opera House and Winter Gardens.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Percy Hutchison; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Clarkson. — Mr. George Edwardes' company is paying a return visit in the popular musical play The Merry Widow. The magnificent costumes and brilliant stage setting are in keeping with the excellence associated with Mr. Edwardes's productions, and the efforts of the artists are highly appreciated by large and enthusiastic audiences. Miss Louie Pounds in the title-rôle captivates the audience by her clever acting, vocalism, and charming personality; Prince Danilo is exceedingly well played by Mr. Basil S. Foster, who sustained the part with commendable effect; Mr. Lionel Victor creates any amount of merriment by his humorous and fantastic impersonation of Baron Popoff; Mr. Tom Redmond is very comical in the part of Nisch; Miss Victoria Sievers is a pleasing and capable representative of Natalie, her vocal numbers being artistically rendered; Miss Gwendoline Brogden as Frou Frou is to be credited with some expert dancing, especially the Apache dance with Mr. Tom Redmond; Mr. Edward McKeown effectively portrays the part of the Vicomte de Jolidon, his tenor voice being heard to great advantage; the Marquis de Cascada has a very acceptable representative in Mr. Somers Bellamy; Mr. Grafton Williams is very good as the fussy General Novakovitch; and Mr. Bert Edwards efficiently represents the waiter at Maxim's. Under the direction of Mr. Ernest Vousden the increased orchestra greatly contributes to the success of the play.

SOUTH SHIELDS. — Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. John Coulson.—Mr. E. Hill Mitchelson's company presents The King and the Unknown Woman to good audiences. Miss Violet Carlyle creates a strong impression in her portrayal of Zora; Miss Adeline Raby as the Countess and Miss Ella Sennett as Elsie prove able exponents of the characters; Mr. James Stillwell makes a capital hero; and Prince Menski has a good delineator in Mr. Walter T. Clifford; General Platz is ably interpreted by Mr. W. R. Winning and Mr. Cyril Harrison is excellent as Corporal Gara. The comedy element is well brought out by Mr. Willie Hicks (Corporal Stack) and Miss Anena Walton (Schnapps). Cascar is capitally portrayed by little Prudence Auston.

Empire Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Bridgen.—A refined and artistic musical turn is provided by the Ziguener Quartette; another good musical item is contributed by Roma and Romani; an old Shields favourite is Tom Costello; Lilian is a graceful lady cyclist who does astounding feats; Charles Lewis, society ventriloquist; Kitty Wager, comedienne; Fred Poplar, and the Bioscope are also in the bill.

Grand Electric Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Will Clark.—This house continues to be highly popular with an entire change of pictures every Monday and Thursday. Kioto and Estea, Japanese marvels, delight the audience with their wonderful feats.

SPENNYMOOR.—Cambridge Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. David Collins.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stuart's company, under the supervision of Mr. Karl Edwards, is here in My Irish Molly. The title-rôle was cleverly portrayed by Miss May Warden; Mr. Karl Edwards as Billy Slim was very good; Mr. St. John Medley gave a capital sketch of Dennis; Mr. Gordon Robey as Captain Vere acted convincingly; Mr. Hodson Pointon, in the part of Tim Dolan, was successful; and Mr. Kenyon Gray as Father McGuire showed ability. Miss Rosie Kearns in the rôle of Sally became a great favourite; and as Lady Blanche Miss Elma C. Turner proved popular.

Picture Palace.—Lessee, Mr. Arthur Sleep; General-Manager, Mr. George Battle.—Heading the bill of fare at this hall are the Dancing Paceys, in their smart vocal and Terpsichorean speciality; Andrew McManus is a versatile entertainer.

Arcadia.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred J. Gowland; Resident-Manager, Mr. Robert Fening.—A couple of successful comedians top the programme here in Clifton and Gibson, late of the Newcastle pantomime. Some fine pictures add to the enjoyment of audiences.

ST. HELENS.—Theatre and Opera House.—Proprietors, St. Helens Theatre, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Harry E. Johnson.—Almost His Bride, produced by Mr. Stephen Pritt's company, is here. Mr. Pritt appears in the character of Simon Simson, an impersonation that is greatly enjoyed; the scenes with Emma Baxter (Miss May Neilson) being especially amusing; Philip Rowland is portrayed in an entirely satisfactory manner by Mr. Morris Maud; Mr. C. Quinton Fulford's Jasper Thorne is a creditable performance; and Mr. J. O. Stevenson is good as the Earl of Ullswater; Miss Sophie Reiss makes a sweet-looking Ruth; and Miss Kathleen Stewart a charming Mona; as Myra Thorne Miss Lydia Donovan is all that can be desired.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Wilmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Leo Weisker.—Kio-Tani's ju-jitsu wrestlers, Adam King, and Joe Osgood are giving interesting and exciting exhibitions of their art; Frank Mouira, the barrel king, is much applauded; the Quality Quartette are pleasing in their items; and Dan Whitley proves himself amusing; Addie Lennard gives a delightful song and dance; and Syd Bandon, character comedian, gives a good turn.

STOCKPORT. — Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—The familiar entertainment of the Leopolds in Frivolity has genuinely entertained large audiences here this week. Mr. Harry Douglas makes a capital Oliver Buckwheat; as Jules Vermiglio Mr. Tom Leopold is very amusing; and Mr. Willie Leopold as Samuel causes plenty of laughter. Miss Kathleen Kavanagh acts pleasingly, and the U.S.A. Girls are a clever troupe of dancers.

Empire.—Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.—Standing out promiently as the one great attraction here is John Lawson in Humanity, the celebrated Hebrew actor being accorded a gratifying reception. Enzer and Miss Clarice, sword experts, jugglers, and ju-jitsu champions, present a very smart performance; Ethel Thomas, soprano, delights everyone with her vocalism; James and Jenny Jee are exceedingly clever on the revolving wire; Amie Jumel, vocalist, whistler, instrumentalist, and dancer, is pleasing; and Bonnetti and Corrie are a pair of amusing jugglers.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES. — Castle Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Imeson.—Mr. T. Elder Hearn is here this week, with a full London company. The one-act drama, The Romance of a Studio, in which Mr. Hearn took six characters in two scenes, was a fine piece of quick-change work. The lively one-act farce, An Evening at Home, was also given, in which the Sisters Sprightly took the parts of the stage-struck servants; also The Rat, a dramatic episode of Parisian life where the "Dance des Voyous" was cleverly performed by Gaston Chevallier and Mlle. Etoil le Noir.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton.—The musical comedietta, Happy Holland, is successfully presented by Jake Friedman and company, including a chorus of thirty voices; Beatrice English is a good Australian soprano; the Daintees are clever vocalists and dancers; Farr and Farland are good comedians; Little Zola, comedienne is amusing; Stylo is a marvellous hoop expert and juggler; and David Poole is a novelty ventriloquist.

Montgomery's company is paying a return visit here and present the romantic drama, The Bellringer. Mr. Stanley Gordon portrayed the rôle of Allan Chesney to perfection; Mr. Chas. Freeman appears with distinction as Jas. Pengarth (the bellringer); Miss Nina Vaughton was capital in the dual characters of Brenda Chesney and Felicia Trewella.

SUNDERLAND.—King's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. S. F. Davidson; General-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Townrow; Acting-Manager, Mr. L. Crawford Orr.—This theatre has been reopened this week by Mr. George Edwarde's company in The Dollar Princess, and crowded houses are the rule. Mr. Abe Worcester gives a capital performance as Freddy Fairfax, and his vocal work is admirable; Mr. Fred Leslie makes an excellent Harry Conder; Mr. George Miller as Bulger is an endless source of laughter; Mr. Hugh Henson is also good as Dick; Mr. W. J. Douglas and Mr. Willie Ward, jun., acquit themselves creditably as the Earl of Quorn and Sir James McGregor; Miss Kathleen Courtney makes an excellent Alice, the DoNar Princess her acting and vocalism both being of the highest quality; Miss Daisy Elliston acts with much verve as Daisy; and Miss Madeline Seymour as Olga excellently imbues the part with a piquancy and charm which are delightful to witness. The piece is elaborately staged.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dunn.—Mr. Hubert Helliwell's company is playing here in The Wrongs of Woman. Miss Lowe Dare does strong work as Miriam Cronshaw; Miss Ada Hender also does well as Mrs. Helmstone; Miss Eva Brashier is good as Nellie Trulett; Mr. Ernest Dare gives a fine delineation of Paul Desmore; Mr. Chas. F. Johnson is a masterly Colonel Cronshaw; and Mr. Hubert Helliwell gives a meritorious performance as Comer Helmstone. Mr. Fred Garret as Sir Herbert Comerford proves himself to be an able exponent of villainy. The humour is in the good hands of Miss Lilian Bates (Kitty Maynard) and Mr. Fred Luard (Tom Drewitt), both of whom do good work.

Avenue Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Hy. Esden.—Sarah Ellen is being well received here with her popular numbers; Elly Adair is a pleasing Irish comedienne. The pictures are up to the usual high standard.

Palace Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Archer Hamilton.—George Sheldon and company are scoring here with their clever rendering of Before the Dawn; Leon and Tee cause much laughter with their novel act The Musical Farm; and Miss Ronna Shanara's Thibet mountain deer goats give evidence of careful training. The pictures are all good, the principal item being The Closed Door.

Empire Theatre. — Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—The pleasantries of Jack Pleasants are as much in demand as ever, and he is having a most flattering reception; Keen and Waller are also popular with their amusing acrobatic work; the comedy mélange of Wilson and Waring is novel and funny; F. V. St. Clair scores with some smart extempore work; Beatrice Bonnie and company win much favour with their skilful dancing act, as also do the Kathleen O'Hanlon Trio, in their vocal terpsichorean scena; Mona Vivian scores in song and dance; and the McConnell Trio are eminently successful in their smart musical comedietta, entitled The Invalid.

SWINDON.—Empire Theatre.—Proprietors, The Wiltshire Entertainments Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Manners.—Messrs. Paumier and Howard's company, in The Midnight Wedding, is here. Mr. A. E. Winnington Barnes fills the rôle of Paul Valmar to perfection; Mr. Dalziel Heron is a capable exponent of the Crown Prince Leopold; Mr. Malcolm Tearle is satisfactory as Lieut. Von Strelsburg; Mr. Stuart Black carefully enacts Captain Von Scarsbruck; Sergeant Max, Corporal Otto, and Private Bobo are amusingly represented by Messrs. Fred H. Constable, St. George Frere, and Algie Spalding respectively; Kathie is pleasingly portrayed by Miss Phyllis Hume; Miss Madge Rapee is well placed as Rozell; and Miss Lilian Hallows excels in her impersonation of Princess Astrea.

TODMORDEN.—Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Richard Dewhurst.—Mr. O. Mans Dayton's No. 1 Company of vaudeville artists are here this week. The Dayton Family top the bill with a smart acrobatic and risley performance, entitled Le Rendezvous; Miss Ivy Gallard is a clever comedienne and dancer; E. W. Selman, with his song "When I'm dreaming"; the Three Milfords give a smart trapeze act; the Adams are amusing in their cycling act; Dott and Williams are awarded an enthusiastic reception; Three Spanish Armadas give a daring tight-rope performance; Miss Dora Campbell is popular in her illustrated song-scena; and Professor Thornbury is an effective lightning painter and entertainer.

Olympia Picture Palace.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs. A. and H. Andrews; Manager, Mr. Chas. Tyers.—An excellent programme is given this week to good houses. Forgiveness is a fine A.B. film; The Angel of Delaim and Road Agent are two other dramas of merit. Mr. Chas. Tyers is appreciated in his song-scenas.

TORQUAY. — Theatre Royal. — Licensee and Managing-Director, Alderman W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Messrs. Walter D. Nicoll, Kenneth Rivington, and George Howard's company, in Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, opened here on Thursday for three nights. The character of Mrs. Wiggs was taken in excellent style by Miss Cecile E. Anson, and Miss Muriel Locking presented a capital study of Miss Hazy. Mr. Kenneth Rivington was droll as Mr. Stubbins, and the Mr. Wiggs of Mr. George Howard was distinctly good. Miss Ivy Shepherd gave considerable pleasure as Europena, and the part of Lovey Mary was successfully taken by Miss Clara Earle.

Princess Pier Concert Hall.—Proprietors, the Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—The regatta attraction here this week is Mr. Harry Leslie's Gay Lieutenants, who are doing good business. Mr. Arthur Holland is a popular light comedian, and Mr. Eric Thornber also gives satisfaction in coon songs. Miss Nan Taylor has a powerful soprano voice; Miss Cis O'Shea dances gracefully; Mr. Alec Rubinoff is a baritone of great range, and renders his numbers with acceptance; whilst Mr. Fred Shepherd, at the piano, is a talented instrumentalist; and Mr. Griff Hodson is energetic as a comedian, and deserves the applause which greets his efforts.

VENTNOR.—Pier Pavilion.—"The Georgians" are paying a return visit this week. On Monday they performed to a full house. Mr. Robert Carr, under whose able direction the company is, was highly appreciated, being recalled again and again; Miss Roma Castille and Miss Ida Freeman were excellent in their respective parts; and Mr. John Doran proved himself a favourite with his comic songs. Another highly interesting feature was the realistic imitation and memory feats of Mr. Sydney Locklynne, and Mr. Bertram Banks proved himself such a clever artist in "living marionettes," that in the end he had to refuse additional encores.

WAKEFIELD. — Opera House. — Proprietors, Messrs. Sherwood and Co.—Hush Money is here. Mr. S. Leigh-Courtney gives a strong portrayal of Sexton Blake; Mr. Martin Sands does good work as Mr. John Shand; Mr. Robert Barton is commendable as the Earl of Montressor; Mr Thomas Brooklyn is successful as Lord Walgrave; Mr. J. Westwood.—Jack Lorimer is to the front here this week; the Avolos are a pair of clever tumblers; an amusing duo, Frank and Free, are responsible for hearty laughter; Katie Moss is a greatly-appreciated violinist and entertainer at the piano; Les Marco Belli, comedy conjurers and illusionists, are distinctly good; Stella Stahl is a smart young lady who sings and dances well; and some fine pictures complete.

Electric Palace.—Proprietors, The Electric Picture Palace (Midlands), Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. H. Stanley Marks; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. W. Robinson.—Charming variety marks the exhibition of animated pictures here. There is a complete change of programme each Monday and Thursday, and packed houses are the rule. A very striking production, The Tyrant of Jerusalem—one of the best examples of Pathé coloured films—is greatly applauded; a very fine religious picture is The Resurrection of Lazarus; and The Amateur Grocer's Assistant keeps the audience in a roar of laughter. Other pictures worthy of mention are The Blacksmith's Daughter, Nick Winter's Smart Method, and Father Buys a Chimney-pot—a most laughable picture.

WARRINGTON.—Royal Court.—Proprietor, Mr. Joseph Beecham; General-Manager, Mr. A. M. Loader; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Warburton.—Mr. Andrew Melville's company is here in the evergreen play Driven from Home. Mr. Felix Pitts submits a powerful portrayal of Anthony Raybrook, and Mr. P. George Beresford makes Walter Hatherleigh a manly personage; distinction is gained by Mr. Howard Thornby as George Clissold; Mr. J. B. Shinton infuses dramatic force into the character of Geoffery Waring; a clever character sketch is that of Mr. Percy Danson as Willie, an outcast; Mr. Edward A. Finlay scores as Dick Saunders; the humorous element is in the safe hands of Mr. Fred C. Imbert as John Anderson and Miss Susie Bevan as Margaret Bailey; Miss Ada M. Ryder plays gracefully as Laura Raybrook and subsequently as Walter Hatherleigh; Miss A. Williams as Mrs. McCarthy and Miss Emily Burnley as Barbara Ashdown are seen to advantage. The scenery is very effective, and the setting of the Foundling Hospital and Saw Mill scenes are fine specimens of stagecraft.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Eric Longden.—Marcell and Bevis are astonishing large houses here with their remarkable equilibristic feats; the Westwoods are a very clever cycling duo, and their act is as dainty as it is daring; Reed and Stevens score in the sketch Married or Photographed; Gladys and Alber are amusing in a turn which is noted for fine tumbling; Edith Chantler is the possessor of a rich soprano voice, and her songs are well received; the Crown Trio are delightful entertainers; Fagan and Mahone are seen to advantage in a decidedly novel turn. The pictures are good.

Royal.—Proprietors, The Central Theatres and Franco-British Animated Picture Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. Wilberforce Turner; Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—Miss Fanny Robins is doing well here in burlesque business, singing a medley of songs in fine style; Billie Bint is a smart comedian; Hal Bert is a skilful contortionist; Lillian Rose's songs are encored; and Florence Cooper scores well. The pictures are very entertaining.

Grand.—Proprietors, The Palatine Company; Manager, Mr. Smyley.—Some delightful pictures are being shown here, the films depicting The Flower of the Ranch and The Stolen Heir being very good. The gramophone selections are much enjoyed. Mr. Smyley, who enters upon management here, is an old Warrington favourite.

WASHINGTON.—Alexandra Theatre.—Lessees, The Alexandra Theatre Co.; Secretary, Mr. Joe Turnbull; Stage-Manager, Mr. Ned Johnson.—Messrs. Gower and Faulkner's domestic drama, For Wife and Home, is being presented here. Mr. Robert Faulkner's acting in the rôle of Roland St. Pierre is admirable; Mr. Wilton Llewellyn as Henri St. Pierre is capable; the part of Gaspard Le Farge is cleverly played by Mr. Edwin Maydew; the Abbé Latouche is capitally delineated by Mr. Edward De Vere; Mr. Bruce Williams is excellent as Cicard Picole; Mr. Frederick Lisle shows ability as Jean Legraud; Miss Nina Harding is smart as Naneen; and Miss Alice Bradshaw well sustains the part of Miladi.

WEST HARTLEPOOL. — Grand Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. W. Seaward.—The Black Mask is the attraction here this week. The title-rôle is in the hands of the author, Mr. F. Marriott Watson, who interprets it in a very masterly manner; Miss Florence E. Florence is an actress of ability, her portrayal of the character of Nellie Cunningham being a very powerful one; Miss Dot Forde capitally sustains the rôle of Philip, the child; Mr. Edward E. Ashby does well as Walter Blackmore; and others who ably sustain important rôles are Mr. Willis Elton, Mr. Tom J. Taylor, Mr. Elton Morgan, Miss Mabel Holland, Miss Hettie Senior, and Miss Flo Norman.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. F. Thompson.—An artistic treat is this week provided by La Milo, who makes her first appearance here. Her exhibition of statuesque posing is thoroughly appreciated. Variety is added to the performance by the caricatures of Cruickshank; Ernie Mayne, the funny comedian, was responsible for much laughter; Jack Sheridan does well; in a pretty song scena, "In Andalusia," Sylvia Du Barry is successful; Rich and Rich retain their popularity for smart patter and comedy; Roze and Calvert are also popular in their sketch, Captain Kettle and His Mate; Elsie Roby appears as "The Slavey at the Piano"; and Bugler Carr does some clever equilibristic feats whilst playing cornets, &c.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — Knightstone Pavilion and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Miss Inez Howard's company is here in The Prince and the Beggar Maid. Mr. Alfred Brandon's impersonation of Prince Hildred is excellent; Mr. William J. Rea makes the most of Prince Michael; Mr. Chas. A. Baker is successful as Prince Olaf; Miss Ethel Savill proves herself a thorough artist as Monica; Miss Gladys Moss-Wright is chic as Viola; Miss Jessie Yatman is decidedly good as Camiola.

Grand Pier Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—Arthur Watson and company are well received in their sketch, H.M.S. Victory; Talberto and Douglas, knockabouts, submit an excellent turn; Rosa Neilson, comedienne, and Allen and Austin, comedians and dancers, are applauded; and Fred Dyer, Welsh baritone, Twm Jones, patter comedian; and Will Nosam are well received. Pictures are shown on the Bioscope by Mr. Lambert.

WEST STANLEY. — Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Theatre Royal Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Mark H. Linden.—Miss Winifred Chalmers and company are presenting Miss Plaster—of Paris. Mr. Charles Tolcher as Numskull Nubbs is good; as Tom Flubbs Mr. Frank Bellamy goes well; Mr. Harry Ed. Ray as Alexander and Mr. Sid Dean as Mr. Nubbs keep the house in roars the whole time they are on the stage; Miss Winifred Chalmers makes a most attractive Media Hamilton; and as Eliza Plaster Miss Nellie Harcourt is very pleasing. Specialities are introduced by the Sisters Holman, Miss Jean Ferguson, and Miss Nellie Harcourt.

Victoria Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes; Lessee, Mr. John Cottrell.—Some excellent variety turns are being given here this week. Smit and Smit, bar performers, top the bill; and in addition there are Walter and Eva Grey in musical scena entitled Cook's Excursion; and Gus Gauntlett, club swinger. The Sheriff's Sacrifice and Mario's Swan Song are two very fine pictures.

WHITBY.—Spa Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. Payne Seddon.—During the first half of the week the boards were occupied by Mr. Edward Compton's company in Davy Garrick, She Stoops to Conquer, and The School for Scandal, good houses being present upon each occasion. Mr. Edward Compton had a hearty reception, and was supported by a company of exceptional merit. On Thursday Mr. George Edwardes' company presented The Merry Widow to excellent houses.

Waterloo Electric Theatre.—Capital attractions are supplied, films of exceptional merit being shown.

WHITLEY BAY.—The Whitley Pleasure Gardens, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Auguste A. Penlève.—Menotti, the clever cyclist, in his creation, "The Twentieth Century Cycle Track"; Edie Haley, a versatile comedienne; Dale and Leigh, in an operatic sketch from The Bohemian Girl; the Four Netherlands comediennes and bare-footed dancers; the Three Veros, singers and dancers; and Craig, Roze, and Craig, dental athletes, all submit attractive items. Others contributing include Dollie Hook, comedienne; Reuben Hill, actor vocalist; Elsie Arnell, mimic and soubrette; Albert Hinton, comedian; and Harry Dunco, comedian.

Coliseum Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Wm. Smelt; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Patterson.—The main attraction here is animated pictures, of which there is an interesting display. In addition, Mlle. Le Breton gives a smart gymnastic exhibition, and Hayman and Houten are amusing comedians.

WIDNES.—Alexandra Theatre.—Managers and Lessees, Messrs. J. Gar Kiddie and Frank Bray.—Mr. Dickie Clare's excellent company of comedians, with that estimable gentleman at the head, is staging that well-known musical farcical absurdity Lucky 'Liza. Mr. Clare as the judge, Silas Slim, and the French waiter scores an unqualified success; Miss Vesta Brownie is charming in the title-rôle; Messrs. T. W. Benson and Harry George are typical barristers; Miss Rosie Coyne is a captivating Vergina; Miss Helen Douglas is an equally charming Mary Pettitoe; Miss Evelyn Wood, in the rôle of Sadie Potts, displays a fine singing voice to advantage; and the Jesmond Trio are clever dancers.

Co-operative Hall.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Hamilton and Hughes.—Mr. Harry Frisky, the American juggler and dancer, occupies pride of place here this week. He is well supported by Mr. Gus Hindell, refined humorist; Messrs. Roberts and Chambers, styled the "simple singers"; and the Misses Lily and Elsie Meynard, vocalists and dancers.

WIGAN.—Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co.—Mr. Fredk. Melville's company is here this week in Her Forbidden Marriage. Mr. H. Bonhote Wilson gives a powerful impersonation of George Maddison; Mr. Frank Denis is eminently successful as Sir George Lancaster; Charles Bevereux is excellently portrayed by Mr. W. H. Porter; Miss Alice Bowes makes a charming Lucy; the character of Lady Lucretia

WEDDING GIFTS.

BY TOM CRAVEN.

"By the way, has it ever struck you how extremely puzzling it is to know exactly what you ought to give as a wedding gift? I've had some, so I know. I don't mean to say I've had many wedding gifts, but I've had acres of experience. All I got on my wedding was a summons and an old shoe. The summons was served in my right hand and the shoe was served in my left ear. Oh! and I had some rice—oh! tons of rice—some of it was made up into puddings. Now, rice puddings are very tasty in the mouth, but not quite so pleasant in the nape of your neck. I've also had several things presented to me by my wife—since marriage, of course. No one can give black looks or black eyes better than my 'old bit of trouble.' However, that's neither here nor there. Where was I? Oh, I know! I was talking to you. Well, to return to wedding presents. Isn't it funny what a sameness there is in most of the gifts? There seems to be a run on one particular article for domestic use and a lamentable slump in everything else. A cousin of mine had thirty-eight cruets given her, mostly of a similar pattern. Her house presents an extraordinary sight—there were cruets on the sideboard, on the overmantel, on the staircase, on the landing, on the bed, under the bed, in the pantry, in the sponge rack, and up the pole. She used to get periodically hard up, and so pawned a cruet about once a year. It took her just on forty years to lumber the lot. Another female relative of mine had sixty-two pairs of silver nut-crackers given to her. She dared not insult her friends by selling or giving them away, so, being of an economical turn of mind, she made the best possible use of them. For every meal she put nut-crackers on the table instead of forks or spoons. Fancy having to eat soup with a pair of nut-crackers! Fancy stirring up your tea with 'em! She used them, too, as ornaments in the drawing-room, and when she had a card party she made them serve as counters. One pair happened to be exceptionally large. These she turned into fire-tongs, and another pair she taught herself to tune the piano with. Some people seem to absolutely go out of their way in selecting the most useless gifts conceivable. An old schoolfellow of mine had a perfect passion for giving some unfortunate married pair what they did not want. If they detested books he'd give them the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.' If they had electric light all over their house he'd give them gas fittings. If they had no garden at all to their residence he'd present them with a garden-roller or lawn-mower. If the bridegroom was a non-smoker he'd give him a pipe-stand; should he be a teetotaler he'd give him a 'Tantalus.' If they had gas stoves over the entire establishment he'd send them a ton of coals, with their monogram on each lump. But even he wasn't half so bad as an old uncle of mine. When my youngest sister did a silly thing and got married, she took a little, tiny villa about the size of a diminutive cabman's shelter. My uncle gave her a sideboard, with an intimation that if she ever parted with it he would slice her out of his will—he'd got any amount of filthy lucre, and she wasn't going to miss any chances. She accepted the sideboard with gracefully-assumed gratitude, but she little thought what it was going to cost her. Her dining-room must have been designed for 'Little Tich.' If you sat down near one side of it you nearly put your toes through the other. Now, the sideboard would have looked imposing in the Banqueting Room at the Mansion House. It was a colossal structure—it reminded me of a cathedral organ—it was so spacious, so roomy—so loud—so impressive! My sister christened it 'the Barracks.' Well, I'm sure it held more stuff than any ordinary canteen. We didn't half have to manœuvre to get the bally thing into the house. We tried the front door first—but we might as well have tried to get an elephant into a jampot. We succeeded in getting its off-side leg in, and the remainder spread its enormous proportions across the narrow street and stopped a steam-roller from proceeding on its cumbersome way. The sideboard insisted on remaining in this exasperating position for precisely two days and a half. All callers and tradespeople had to fulfil their respective missions through the bay window. People who wanted to pass along the street had to hire ladders, borrow alpenstocks, and do a little amateur mountaineering over the sideboard, which they for ever afterwards referred to as the 'Alps.' In the furious struggle for supremacy that ensued, not one of the 'movers' escaped without losing their knuckle-bones, knee-caps, and tempers. No less than three ambulances were employed to remove the injured. For exactly sixty hours that veritable Chang of sideboards bored us by putting on side and defied us all. We shoved it, bruised it, banged it, scratched it, kicked it, swore at it, but it wouldn't budge the tenth part of an inch. At last we sent for the builder from whom my sister had built her jerry-built villa. His tact was wonderful. He simply put his shoulder against the party-wall, and, with no perceptible effort, pushed down the side of the house. We gave a wild, but somewhat hysterical, cheer, and coaxed our white elephant into the hall, only to find that it wouldn't go through the dining-room door. So we retraced our weary steps and had a pop at the front bay window. We took the windows out of the casings and removed a foot or two of brickwork either side. Then, with a long, long pull, and a strong, strong push, we at last succeeded in getting the leviathan into the dining-room, only to find that it was some inches higher than the ceiling, which it promptly pushed up, going bang through the flooring of the bedroom above. This made us peevish. We flew at the destructive monster and pulled downwards with all our might. Crash, biff—bang—down it went into the cellar below, dragging us with it. I don't remember any more for some weeks, but when I regained consciousness in the hospital I was told how it all ended. My sister had had to pull her house down and build another one in its place to fit the sideboard."

WE sat five aside in the suburban train (writes a correspondent to the Manchester Guardian), and none of us had spoken to the others. The silence was broken without warning by the man in the opposite corner. Taking his greasy bowler in both hands, he first put it across his cranium sideways, and then bunching up his shoulders until they enveloped his neck, and contracting his brows into a deep frown, his arms folded across his breast, he snapped in a perk, Cockney voice: "Napowleon crossing the Elps." My neighbour smiled and tapped his head significantly.

THE moment afterwards our lunatic companion, for so we thought him, discarding his hat, adjusted his forelock, and looking portentously solemn, announced "The Earl of Beaconsfield after the Berlin Conference, Peace with Honour!" We thought he was going to follow it up with a verse of the "red, white, and blue," but instead of bursting into song he gummed a little wisp of white hair to his chin, and asked us to admire "Earl Roberts, Field Marshal—Little Bobs."

BY this time our minds were made up, and he stood fully committed at the next station. But when it came we found that we had judged too hastily. As the train slowed down for the first stop he disclosed himself as a distressed mummer. "Now, gentlemen," he said, passing round his bowler, "kindly spare a copper for a pore artist; absolutely stoney, s'elp me."

"SHAV" ON THE STAGE.

In its Philosophy of a Don series, the New Age recently printed an amusing "skit" on Mr. Bernard Shaw's opinions on the modern stage. G. B. S. is alluded as "Shav." We quote from where "Shav," in conversation with the author, the "Don" of the title, says:—

"I have often told you that the sole excuse for speaking should be that the speaker has something to say. Actually, his whole concern is to produce something that will pay. That applies to all classes of English speakers, and to no class more emphatically than to the one which speaks from the stage. In the circumstances, isn't it rather trifling to criticise the pulpit when the preacher himself is beneath criticism?"

"Ye-es," I said, doubtfully. "But are you quite sure that the preacher is what you describe him?"

"Bless the man!" Shav brought his stick down on the pavement with a violence that would have utterly disconcerted anyone less phlegmatic or less accustomed to his judicial methods. "Have you ever known me to be anything but quite sure of what I say?"

"Never!" I assented, fervently.

"Well, then, listen, and I will sketch out for you a so-called dramatic author's career. For some reason or other—usually because he has failed in every other trade—a man decides to earn a living by writing plays. The decision taken, he sets about to discover what sort of plays are in fashion. He finds that a certain class of subject and a certain manner of treatment are in great demand. To that class and manner he applies himself with such industry, intelligence, and insincerity as are in him, without any reference to his own predilections. In fact, a play-maker, like a dress-maker, to succeed, must have no predilections of his own. He must implicitly obey the prevailing taste. The prevailing taste happens to be vicious—so are the plays. The prevailing taste is for the cheap, the shoddy, the paltry, and the pretentious—the plays are cheap, shoddy, paltry, and pretentious. The supply naturally tallies with the demand. The Englishman who spends his day making money, in the evening is only anxious to squander it. So he first goes to a restaurant where he eats a hearty dinner, and then he goes to a theatre to digest it. Naturally he prefers the play which best assists him in that interesting function. The playwright knows his public, and, as a matter of course, panders to its insensate and insatiable appetite for trash. Like a ballet-dancer, a juggler, or a buffoon, he feels it his business to be, above all things, entertaining. He is a caterer for customers who care much for pleasure and nothing at all for truth. Haven't you noticed that people never ask whether a new play is true or not, but always whether it is smart or amusing."

"I suppose they take its truth for granted," I ventured.

"There is no harm in supposing," said Shav, with a grim smile.

"Anyhow," I pursued, "truth alone is not enough to make any work of art acceptable. I question whether it has ever been. If you want to instruct your fellow-creatures you must begin by amusing them. A child will take any pills without demur provided they are sufficiently sugared, and I know dozens of grow-up men and women who have learnt all the history they know from Walter Scott, Harrison Ainsworth, Bulwer Lytton, Thomas Macaulay, and other writers of the same sort."

"Truth, naked and unblushing Truth, should be the first recommendation of every work of art!" Shav declared, vehemently. "I want every play, every picture, every book, every building—in short everything that man makes—to be a confession of faith, or of unfaith; but in any case to be a frank and full confession of what the maker conceives to be the truth. Speak the whole truth, or not at all—that is my maxim."

"You are too literal, too direct, and too uncompromising, my dear Shav. The theatre, you must remember, is a place of relaxation, not of edification."

"I want it to be a place of revelation! I have no objection to clever trifles in themselves. It is natural to be entertained by frivolous pleasantries, to be interested in ingenious plots, to seek amusement wherever it may be found. I don't think that unreasonable or reprehensible. But, good heavens! what shall we say when we see a great nation not only liking but doting on these trifles, and that to such an extent as to leave no room in their minds or taste in their palates for other things—the things that really matter—the serious realities and sorrows of life; how shall we call this, my friend? Shall we not say that such a nation is a desperately stupid nation?"

"The mission of the theatre is not to aggravate but to mitigate the sorrows of life."

"You don't mitigate a disease by concealing it. What would you yourself think of a doctor who, instead of trying to cure his patient, only sent him to sleep? Soporifics may bring a momentary oblivion of pain: they don't abolish it."

"I am no authority on social therapeutics," said I. "But, speaking for myself, I would much rather be driven to sleep by an insipid comedy than to suicide by an inexorable tragedy. The introduction of distressing topics on the stage can only be justified by the elaborate success of the result, and hardly even then. The end of dramatic art is, as Corneille formulated it long ago, 'de plaire aux spectateurs.'"

"Of all pestilential fallacies, my boy, none is more fatal than that. The end of dramatic art is not to please the spectators, but to purge them by showing to them life as it really is. Corneille's formula is the formula of the pastry cook, not of the prophet, or even of the mere priest. It is a mean and vile conception which has been discarded even by the nation which conceived it. In France you now get plays alive with reality and vibrating with conviction. And so the modern French stage is a school for thought, whereas ours remains a school for stupid self-complacency. That is not surprising: the French public is willing to pay something for being made to think; the English public would pay anything to be spared thinking."

"Why, then, blame our playwrights for not giving us sincere and thought-stimulating plays, since, according to you, our playgoers do not want them? By your own showing, if an English dramatist ventured upon an honest study of the world as it appears to him his work would have no chance at all. If it was accepted by the managers it would be pronounced by the public 'depressing'; the critics would damn it, and audiences would stay away. After all, even a playwright must live."

"I don't see the necessity. But let that pass. The playwright's unreasoning attachment to life does not make matters better for us. It makes them worse. Our dramatists, by their sordid subservience to the depraved standards of their public, perpetuate its stupidity. What else could you expect from creatures that live and creep and work in the artificial world of the theatre, instead of in the real outer world? Their sympathies are cribbed and confined by the back wall of the stage. Their minds are warmed not by God's glorious sunshine, but by the glare of the footlights. The air they breathe is not the free and pure air of heaven, but the stuffy, polluted atmosphere of the green room. Consequently, the life they depict is not the real life of the present, but a conventional shadow-life of stage characters created by dramatists dead and gone. The upshot of it all is that, instead of rational human beings, we get on our stage a crowd of drapers' lay figures, talking and behaving as no decent drapers' lay figures have ever talked or behaved. Instead of dialogue, we pay genuine silver to listen to hollow, premosaic platitudes in which no one believes. Instead of an exhilarating exposition of the incongruous we are treated to ponderous exercises in hippopotamian humour. The audience gets what it deserves—like people like preachers. The English stage no longer needs a critic, but a cardinal armed with candle, bell, and book, and an ocean or two of holy water."

"I doubt whether they order these things better abroad," said I. "Look at the plays imported into this country from the Continent. Most of them, you will agree, are mere French indecencies, purged of their Gallic salt, or unexpurgated Flemish puerilities and Norwegian nightmares, full of the sempiternal pseudo-analysis of character, of the mental unequilibrium, and of the wordy inanities which form the stock-in-trade of the dramatic paradoxologist. These things, to my mind, are far more offensive than the innocuous insipidities of our own poor playwrights."

"You must not judge the Continental theatre by our own clumsy adaptations of its products. Continental dramatists of the first rank are realists in the loftiest acceptation of the term."

"Are they? Look at some of the most famous of foreign dramas in their original form. Look at Ibsen's plays. No plays, a short time ago, held a Continental audience as these did. And what are they? Neurasthenic obsessions copied, one would think, from some madman's dreams. The author seems to conceive his plots in dyspepsia and to deliver himself in delirium tremens. His men and women are placed in houses, churches, or monasteries of stone, brick, and mortar, like those we actually see in real life. But are they actual people such as we know in real life? Not a bit of it. They are miserable monomaniacs, contemplating, dissecting, analysing their own sick interiors to discover the imaginary disease they are pleased to call their soul. And the audience, after one of these performances, leaves the theatre, not purged or edified, or even humbly amused, but racked with self-questionings, tortured with regret, puzzled, bewildered, discontented, impotently enraged."

"Even rage is preferable to stagnation," said Shav, in his most superior manner.

"You may think so. For my part I think that better than rage is reticence—which means a sense of decency."

"Reticence is the excuse of the insensible and the refuge of the inarticulate. Have you noticed how remarkably reticent our cats and dogs are? I have a spaniel at home, and he has never yet uttered a word about his feelings. I suppose he considers it bad form."

This shaft produced no impression whatever upon the impenetrable panoply of my composure, and Shav, perceiving his failure, changed his tone.

"You were boasting the other day of the State," he said. "Why does not the State justify its existence by endowing the stage as it endows the Church, the Navy, and the Army?"

"If it did you would be the first to denounce it. I can see you leading a crusade for the disestablishment of the stage. I can hear you protesting against theatrical subsidies as a form of servitude——"

"I dare say I should," Shav laughed. "Thalia and Melpomene harnessed with red tape in the chariot of Departmental Dullness is not an inspiring spectacle. But I would almost endure even that humiliation if it rescued the drama from its present dependence upon the lowest intellectual elements. Any dictatorship, even that of a Government, would be better than the dictatorship of Mrs. Grundy."

"The change, I am afraid, would only be a change of chains. The capricious tyranny of the many would be replaced by the canonised tyranny of the few. For the spontaneous stupidity and timidity of the middle-class Pharisees, you would have the deliberate cant and pompous dogmatism of a board of official scribes—a hierarchy of highly-placed, highly-paid hypocrites. That being so, why strain after a revolution which would miss the one thing that makes revolutions at all tolerable—reformation?"

"I am sick of the whole business," he said, after a few minutes' silence. "This dramatic degradation going on year after year, without restraint, remorse, or remission, will force me to go to America or go mad."

"Why don't you put yourself at the head of a reforming movement?"

"I mean to do so. I think I will write a real play one of these days."

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, AUG. 17.—The Brass Bottle, a romantic comedy, in four acts, by Frank Anstey, was performed at the Lyceum Theatre on the 11th inst. Mr. Charles Frohman had engaged an excellent company for this play, and the performance was in every respect successful and praiseworthy. If laughter and applause count for anything, Mr. Anstey's whimsical play will continue to amuse large audiences for some time to come. The story is certainly ingenious and novel. In fact, one can hardly remember having seen such a fantastic comedy before. It must be admitted that it dragged a little towards the close, lacking as it did the touch-and-go quality to which American audiences are accustomed. But the surprises and quick changes, and the interesting characters, more than made up for that, and hearty enjoyment prevailed. Mr. Edwin Stevens played the part of the Genie with a sly humour that was very effective, and was the most successful member of the cast. Mr. Richard Bennett made the most of his opportunities as the architect, Horace Ventimore, and others who distinguished themselves in prominent rôles were Miss Irene Fenwick, Mr. Fuller Mellish, Miss Thomas Whiffen, Mr. Louis Massen, and Miss Carrie Perkins.

A MUSICAL version of Trilby is to be produced by the Shuberts, with Miss Fritzi Scheff in the title-rôle. Mr. Victor Herbert will compose the music, and Mr. Joseph Herbert will write the libretto.

MR. LOUIS MANN has made a success at the Lyric Theatre in a three-act play called The Cheater. Originally a German farce entitled Der Doppelmensch, by Wilhelm Jacoby and Arthur Lipschutz, it was adapted by Mr. Mann for his own use, and he appears as Senator Godfried Plittersdorf, who has projected a great reform movement, directed against disreputable dance halls and other places of a low character. Dame Fortune refuses to take the Senator seriously, however, for he inherits from his step-brother a notorious resort known as the Orpheum, at which the nightly receipts run into four figures. He keeps his wife in ignorance of the legacy, and his strange conduct causes her to fear that he may be suffering from an attack of lunacy. In order to attend a masquerade at the Orpheum, Plittersdorf disguises himself as a burglar, and Leokadia decides that he has turned housebreaker because he is financially embarrassed. The discovery of some money and jewels in a drawer confirms her worst fears, and Plittersdorf is even suspected of murder. Explanations are forthcoming in due course, however, and after disposing of the Orpheum for a goodly sum, Plittersdorf reassumes his former respectability.

Mr. Mann's Plittersdorf provokes no end of laughter. He is very, very funny. Mme. Mathilde Cottrelly's Leokadia is a fine example of finished acting; and the other rôles are in good hands.

MISS CLARA LIPMAN began an engagement at the Hackett Theatre last Monday, appearing in The Marriage of a Star, a comedy in three acts, from the French of Alexandre Bisson and Georges Thurner. Le Marriage d'une Etoile, the original play, had a long run in Paris. A French actress comes to New York to study English after leaving her husband, a puritanical Bostonian, who was at first fascinated by her unconventional ways, and then found them distasteful to him. They have a daughter, a girl of eighteen, whom they both love, and their interest in her welfare often brings them together. The daughter is like her father, and when he chooses a husband for her she accepts him. In rehearsing a play in which she is to make her début in an English-speaking part, the mother gives the rôle of her lover to her daughter's intended, and he wins her approval by the sincerity and ardour of his acting. She dominates every scene with her coquetry and charm, and when they go through the final love scene acting becomes a reality, for the young man suddenly proclaims his disloyalty and begs the actress to run away with him. Thus the second act has a dramatic ending; but the third reverts to comedy, and the final scenes are laughable.

Miss Lipman appeared as the French actress, Simone La Fee, and her performance was frequently applauded. In the stirring scene at the end of the second act her work was particularly effective, and aroused much enthusiasm.

"THE COMMUTERS," a farcical comedy, by James Forbes, who wrote The Chorus Lady and The Travelling Salesman, was produced at the Criterion Theatre last Monday, and was well received. In his new play the author illustrates some of the humours of suburban life. Larry and Hetty Brice, a devoted young couple, live at Auburn Manor, a suburb of New York. Larry's chum, Sammy Fletcher, is a typical bachelor with a strong dislike for country life. Known only by name and reputation to Hetty, he is the object of her particular aversion, as she holds him responsible for her husband's innocent but none the less annoying deviation from the accepted standards of suburban respectability. Larry invites Sammy to spend a day at Auburn Manor in order that he may revel in the real joys of a "commuter." His unexpected visit causes a breach between the young married pair, and Sammy, in trying to repair the damage, only succeeds in bringing down upon his head the wrath of both husband and wife. After a series of complications, in which an amusing group of suburbanites are involved, Sammy succeeds in straightening out the tangle.

Staged under the personal direction of the author, the piece proved highly diverting. The humorous possibilities of the theme could hardly be exhausted in one play, but Mr. Forbes has used up quite a number of them, and the characters are a mirth-provoking lot. The cast includes Miss May de Sousa, Miss Georgie Lawrence, Mr. Orrin Johnson, Mr. Taylor Holmes, and Mr. E. Y. Backus.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

THE new dramatic season in New York has made a good start, and the fact has been demonstrated that theatres can be filled even in midsummer when the plays are attractive. The interval between one season and another seems to be growing less every year. Although the country and the seaside and the open-air amusements near at hand deplete the resident population considerably, the presence of thousands of visitors in town insures the theatres against lack of patronage.

MR. ALFRED HURLEY, a member of the Bognor company of Pierrot, Limited, has been defending the Pierrot entertainers as a class against the accusations of impropriety which have been made against them of late. "It is a cruel shame," he said to an "Express" representative, "and if the critics had only known the serious harm they have done to a large body of men and women who are striving to make life at the seaside merrier they would probably have hesitated before making such false accusations. People imagine that we are happy-go-lucky strolling minstrels who live a hand-to-mouth existence. That is a thing of the past. The pierrot of to-day, although his life is still one of romance, can command a comfortable salary. A good funny man who is not vulgar can earn a salary of £15 a week; and I know a man who this year refused an offer of £18 a week because he earned more by working independently."

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

THE KING'S, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Aug. 22, the Play entitled

"UNDER TWO FLAGS."

A warm welcome awaited Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company in this play founded on Ouida's famous novel, on Monday evening. Under Two Flags has now been touring for many years, but it has always had a certain fascination for playgoers who have read the book—one of Ouida's best—and whoever is responsible for the authorship of the play can be complimented on having constructed a thoroughly interesting drama, which is seldom the case with plays adapted from novels. The circumstances attending Bertie Royellieu's exit from the Guards and enlistment in the French foreign legion, together with Cigarette's ill-fated love-story, are exceedingly well told, and create sustained interest throughout. As Bertie Cecil Royellieu Mr. Wernham Ryott has all the appearance of a Guardsman, and his acting is impassioned or reserved, as occasion requires; Mr. Wilfred Jessop represents Berklie Cecil Royellieu in incisive fashion; and Mr. Charles Brooke is sufficiently strong as Lord Royellieu. A very manly performance is that of Mr. David Hawthorne as Lord Rockingham, and it meets with deserved approval; Mr. Harry Benson as the faithful valet Rake is highly successful, and is amusing in a couple of songs and a dance; the tyrannical Colonel Chateauroy (Black Hawk) is skilfully rendered by Mr. Charles E. Johnson, quite deserving the resentment of the audience; Ezra Baroni, a moneylender, is typically impersonated by Mr. Horace Stewart; and Mr. J. O. Cuthbertson as Marshal of France wins praise, particularly where he informs Black Hawk that he must consider himself under arrest; Mr. Fred Hilliard as the Arab Chief plays consistently; and Mr. Arthur Redmond is a soldierly Captain Claude de Chaurellon. As Cigarette Miss Agnes Verity acts with much charm and vivacity, and the scenes of her ride to Algiers and her death arouse the audience to real enthusiasm; Miss O'Neil as the Princess Venetia Corona is distinctly good; and the Lady Beatrice Guinevere is daintily played by Miss Ethel Gordon. Very amusing and bright is Miss Tina Langlois as the maid Lavinia. The scenery is picturesque, and the military costumes are attractive.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, Aug. 22, the Drama, in Four Acts,

"HER ROAD TO RUIN."

Mr. Fredk. Melville's company is here this week with Her Road to Ruin. This play has already won a host of friends on a previous visit, and certainly it does not lack qualities to commend it to a popular audience. The scenery throughout is a prominent feature of the production, the Bishop's Palace, the Bishop's Garden, and the Savoy Hotel all being worthy of special mention. Mr. Charles Dickens in the part of Frank Temple gives a performance of outstanding merit. As the outspoken Curate his lines are delivered with true manly ring, and his acting throughout is vigorous and effective. In the character of Tom Wells Mr. Albert Grenville gives a breezy and manly exposition. Mr. Knox Orde as the villain, Philip Hardy, invests his part with malevolence and a quiet incisiveness. Mr. Dane Clark's abilities are admirably employed as the Bishop. Miss Doris Gilham gives an effective presentment of the much-tried Jess Willoughby. The part of May Willoughby suits Miss Gertrude Tate to a nicety, and Miss Margaret McClellan depicts the much-wronged Mary Dawson in a capable manner. Mr. R. Leigh Ellis is successful as Charles Cholmondeley, one of the ne'er-do-wells, and Messrs. William Wood as Sir John Lewis and Mr. Guy Ruth as Mr. Derwent contribute valuable assistance. Mr. Henry Powell and Miss Grace Emery create amusement as Dickey Gerald and Jenny Crickling, and the numerous other parts have suitable exponents.

THE CORONET.

On Tuesday, Aug. 23, the Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled

"DAVID GARRICK."

The eighth production of Mr. Robert Arthur and Mr. Eade Montefiore's season of Robertson revivals took place on Tuesday, the 23rd inst., in the shape of David Garrick, so long associated among latter-day playgoers with the names and fame of Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore. A careful and painstaking performance was given by the clever Coronet company, and their endeavours were very much to the taste of the audience, judging by the applause. Two newcomers to the company enacted the principal parts. Miss Viva Birkett, as Ada Ingot, the romantic, stage-struck, and lovelorn city merchant's daughter, acted with gracious tenderness and womanly sweetness, and looked the part to perfection. Mr. Frederick Sargent endowed the part of David Garrick with much youthful charm and earnestness, and indeed came out with flying colours in his determined tackling of this exacting rôle. A little more latent strength perhaps is required, but this may easily come with closer acquaintance with the part. Mr. Fred Permain made an excellent Squire Chivy, and thoroughly entered into the spirit of this Tony Lumpkinish character; Mr. O. B. Clarence is a dear old Simon Ingot; instinct with paternal love and solicitude; and as the motley gathering of city nonentities Miss Agnes Imlay as Mrs. Smith, Miss Rose Begarnie as Araminta Brown, and Messrs. Henry Kitts, William Rokeby, and James Gelderd as Smith, Brown, and Jones materially contribute to the fun of their entertainment. The pièce de résistance is followed by Buckstone's Good for Nothing, in which Miss Rose Begarnie as Nan of the title-rôle acts with archness and vivacity, and in very taking fashion suggests the happy-go-lucky nature of the girl. As her foster-fathers, Tom Dibbles the choleric and Harry Collier the philosophic, Mr. William Rokeby and Mr. Leslie Palmer are remarkably good, and cause much merriment. Mr. Montague Wigan as Charley, Mr. James Gelderd as Mr. Simpson, and Mr. Albert Upton as a footman are all well in the picture. The classical selections from Gounod by the Chamber Quartet, under the direction of Mr. W. Meyer are much appreciated.

THE GRAND, FULHAM.

"THE STILL ALARM."

Messrs. Matthew Glenville and Fred Osman's company is presenting The Still Alarm at the above theatre this week to large and enthusiastic audiences. That ever-popular drama never fails to supply the necessary thrills so dearly loved by the patrons of the theatre. The fire station scene, with the famous pair of trained horses, was greatly appreciated, and won well-merited applause from a delighted audience. Mr. Mathew Glenville enacted the part of the hero Jack Manley with great power, his natural delivery, accompanied by a true sense of humour, meeting with well-deserved success. Mr. Wilton Reed admirably portrayed the calculated villainies of John Bird alias Gormon, speaking his telling lines with great effect. Willie Manley had an excellent exponent in Mr. Edward Hobart, his hard work being worthy of praise. Mr. Lewis Gordon adequately realised the part of Franklyn Fordham. Mr. Henry Gilpin gave an excellent character sketch of Doc Wilber, the broken-down clerk, formerly in the employ of Fordham and Bird. Mr. Gerald Shirley as Joe Jones, the old New York fireman, compelled uproarious laughter by his droll antics; Mr. Monty Partridge was successful as Jenkins, servant to Fordham; Miss Minnie Willett enacted the heroine, Elinor Fordham, with great feeling and sympathy; Miss Mabel Veriton appealed straight to the hearts of the audience by her excellent performance as Mrs. Manley, the mother of the boys; Carrie Wilber, affectionately nicknamed Cad, found an able exponent in Miss Lydia Audre, whose song and dance in the second act was much appreciated; the Central Fire Brigade quartette sang several pleasant ditties which proved very acceptable; Mr. Henry Smith was good as Hal Sleeper; and the part of Charlie White was made the most of by Mr. George Owen. Mr. T. Varney was an excellent Bill Noozle. The parts of the firemen, Bob Stevens, Sid Perkins, Bill Foote, and William Blaisdale, were in the safe hands of Messrs. W. Edwards, E. Tudor, H. Johnson, and G. Francis. The orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. Alfred Moon, played melodious selections during the entr'actes.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 22, the American comedy, entitled

"MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH."

The quaint humour, the human touches, the pathos, and the American mannerisms of Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch have lost none of their grip upon the theatre-going public, and on Monday night Kennington Theatre was turning away money when Mr. Gaston Mayer's company opened a successful week's engagement there with this great play. The piece is splendidly produced under the supervision of Mr. Kenneth Rivington, with Mr. R. Shiells as stage-manager. In the title-rôle Miss Lucy Beaumont wins fresh laurels, captivating everyone by her gentle sympathy and never-failing humour. Fred Forrest, as Mr. Stubbins, plays the part for all it is worth, which is saying a good deal. Miss Armine Grace is intensely amusing as Miss Hazy; and the weird figures of Miss Eichorn and Mrs. Schultz could not have been better sketched than by Miss Sybil Brooke and Miss Violet Vivian. Miss Winifred Murray makes a sweet and engaging Lovey Mary; and Billy Wiggs is played with much boyish impulsiveness by Mr. Walter Hicks. Chris Hazy, the cripple, is impersonated with considerable success by Mr. Bailey Hicks; and Deacon Bagsley is graphically portrayed by Mr. Alfred Fisher. Mr. Harry J. Wright, who is favourably remembered by the Kennington audience from the summer stock season in which he participated, is an excellent Hunkerdunkus Jones, his natural fund of humour being turned to advantage as the matrimonial agent. Mr. Ernest Gray is distinctly good as the errant Mr. Wiggs; and Mr. R. Shiells forcibly impersonates the Sheriff. As the children. Miss Doris Murray, Miss Dolly Shiells, Miss Doris Beeton, Miss V. Holmes, Master H. Lindsay, Miss Gladys Noble, and Master H. Jeffries were all admirably taken. Miss Ethel O'Brien was a graceful Miss Lucy; and Mr. R. Neilance adequately filled the rôle of Mr. Bob.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, Aug. 22, the Play in Four Acts, entitled,

"THE WOMAN IN THE CASE."

Mr. Louis Meyer's company, travelling with the entire original production from the Garrick Theatre of The Woman in the Case, commenced, on Monday evening, a six-days' visit here. Miss Florence Lloyd's Claire Forster was a well-studied embodiment, the various changes from gay frivolity to passionate outbursts being realistically assumed. Miss Mabel Trevor created a great impression as Margaret Rolfe, the pent-up feelings of the outraged wife fighting for her husband's life being admirably shown. The great scene with Claire Forster in the third act was especially well rendered, and reflected great credit on both artists. Mr. Leonard Pagden distinguished himself by a clever delineation of the lawyer; and Mr. Clayton Greene gave a polished and convincing portrayal of Julian Rolfe. Mr. F. Clive Ross was effective as Louis Klauffsky; and Mr. Richard Fielding capably enacted the rôle of Jimmy O'Neill. Walters had a capable exponent in Mr. Lambert Plummer; and Mr. Reginald Maurice did all that was possible as Inspector Williams. Miss Sophie Lingwood, as Mrs. Hughes, acted in true light comedy style; and the unconscious humour of the character caused considerable laughter. Miss Madge Russell, Miss Esther Whitehouse, and Miss Grete Hahn were charming representatives of the three young ladies, Elsie Brewster, Dora Miller, and Louie Mane. The piece was preceded by an original monologue, "Yes, Papa," written and played by Miss Grete Hahn, who is to be complimented on her performance.

DALSTON THEATRE.

"THE BAD GIRL OF THE FAMILY."

The members of Mr. Fredk. Melville's own company are at the Dalston Theatre this week, giving representations of that author's drama The Bad Girl of the Family. Mr. Richard Lane has a popular part to play as Lieut. Richard Marsh, R.N., a character which at once appeals to the sympathies of the audience, as does also that of Gladys Erskine, daughter of Lord Erskine, a rôle gracefully sustained by Miss Daisie Cook. Mr. James C. Taylor acts with commendable ease as Lord Erskine; Barney Gordon, a wealthy Jack-of-all-trades, is played with a keen appreciation of the humour of the part by Mr. Luke Forster, who arouses roars of laughter; Harry Gordon has an efficient representative in Mr. Alexander Bradley; Mr. George Belmore supplies all necessary colouring in sustaining the character of Jerry Holmes; Mr. Tom May is Sammy Snozzle; Mr. Edwin Lever's John Moore is a creditable piece of character acting; and Miss Dulcie O'Mull Conry is sufficiently docile as Mrs. Moore. Mr. James Selwin is the Rev. Mr. Evans; and Mr. Fred Carr, who appears as a railway porter, also undertakes the duties of stage-manager. Miss Catherine Carew impersonates Honour Moore with well-sustained precision; the title-rôle, Bess Moore, is admirably undertaken by Miss Violet Crossley, who is the recipient of round after round of hearty applause.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

"SEXTON BLAKE, DETECTIVE."

The production of this detective-drama has aroused keen interest in playgoing circles in Brixton, and capital houses have followed with delight the doings of the sleuth-hound Sexton Blake, his famous bloodhound "Pedro," and—Tinker. In the title-rôle Mr. Murray Yorke displayed great ability, and his clever manœuvring of villainy was greeted with vociferous cheers; Mr. Edward McLean, too, was a huge favourite as Roger Blackburn; Mr. Paul Barry Lewers brought out well the scoundrelism of Randolph Lovell; Mr. A. J. Harding was a characteristic representative of Squire Lovell; as Tinker Mr. Millar Wilson was very comical, and in the low comedy scenes with Euphemia Pattacake, delightfully played by Miss Dinah Wright, caused roars of laughter; Mr. Victor C. Rolfe was a typical Farmer Blackburn; and Mr. Sydney Barnes well impersonates the burglar, Simon Faggot. Miss Elizabeth Watkins made a charming heroine as Marjorie Lovell, displaying genuine ability; Miss Lydia Mannington was most amusing as the eccentric Philadelphia Kate; Miss Ruth Woodhouse (Sally Brill) and Miss Alice Jameson (as a homeless woman) are well cast. Pedro (the pedigree bloodhound), impersonated by "himself," proved a popular favourite with the audience. Sexton Blake was capitally staged, many of the scenes being noteworthy, while the stage management was praiseworthy. It is presented by the Melodrama Production Syndicate, Ltd. Next week the Lyceum Tours, Ltd., will produce The Fighting Chance.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Aug. 22, the Play entitled

"HIS INDIAN WIFE."

Messrs. Travis, Green, and Arthur Hinton's company is arousing the enthusiasm of the Lyric audiences, the play, the acting, and the scenery appealing strongly to the sympathies of the patrons. Mr. Arthur Hinton is strong and impressive as Hubert Ainsworth, being particularly good in the scene where Lady Grace Kingsley (passionately interpreted by Miss Emma Litchfield) endeavours to lure him from the path of virtue. The part of White Rose is superbly handled by Miss Leila Zillwood, who is admirably suited by nature and accomplishment for the rôle. Miss Laura Wright is humorous as Black Duck; and Miss Nellie Richmond is piquant and sprightly as Jeannette, the French maid. Lagune, an Indian woman, is entrusted to Miss Maud Evans; Mr. Ardan Barne is good as the servant at Ainsworth Hall; and Mr. Harry Sidney adequately plays Lynx. Mr. J. D. Hennessy submits a studied reading of Dakuta; Master Max Gumpert as Little Lennie plays smartly; Mr. Tod Squires is buoyant and fresh as Billy Twiggle, the comedian. As Lonely Star, Mr. Travis Hinton is popular; and Mr. Graham Winsford portrays Wolfsfang, the heavy lead, with pronounced success. White Eagle is well represented by Mr. Gerald Byrne; and the dignified Sir Walter Kingsley could not be in better hands than those of Mr. G. Moreton Williams.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

"THE FATAL WEDDING."

Mr. Percy Williams's company is drawing big houses with The Fatal Wedding, the drawing powers of which are as great as ever. Mr. Hugh Montgomery appears as Howard Wilson to distinct advantage; Mr. Royce Milton is a typical stage villain, and his companion in crime, Cora Wilson, is cleverly enacted by Miss Leah Marlborough; Miss Ethel Kay is a sympathetic Mabel Wilson, and gains great favour. Little Lussanne takes the house by storm with her rendering of Jessie, "the little mother," whose brother Frank is well played by Miss Edith Dews. The comic element is supplied by Miss Marie Harcourt as Bridget the cook, and Messrs. Sam Sprigson and Frank Ashby as Toto and O'Reilly. In the third act several specialities are introduced by the children, and very clever indeed they are. The talented youngsters consist of Little Lily Wohlmann, Little Lussanne, Gladys Kelly, Sisters Wohlmann, Sunny Sarah Hicks, Margot Domican, Rosie Sanders, Tom Grice, and Dorothy Pain. The play is well mounted and capably played throughout.

ROYAL ARTILLERY THEATRE, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Aug. 22, the Musical Comedy, entitled

"THE NEW BARMAID."

Miss Violet Osmund's company is appearing here in a revised version of The New Barmaid, under the direction of Mr. Alexander Loftus. Crowded houses nightly have been the rule. As the New Barmaid, Ethel Joy, Miss Madge Prior is everything that could be desired, her songs and dances being executed with great taste; Brenda Louth is admirably sustained by Miss May Hawthorne; Miss Beatrice May is well placed as the aristocratic Lady Moulton; so also was Miss Betty Dalmany as the maid, Mary. Miss Murielle Mascot, besides being a most capable actress, as witnessed by her portrayal of Mabel, is also a clever composer, the duet "Good-bye," sung in the first act, being from her pen. Miss Maud Stead is smart as Braddy. Miss Violet Osmund is distinctly good as the lady journalist, her singing and dancing being beyond the average. Mr. Alexander Loftus as Bertie White stands out as the most prominent figure, his ready wit and jocular manner keeping the house in good humour. He is ably assisted by Mr. Chas. Adeson as Willie White. Mr. W. Granger is well placed as the peppery Colonel Claymore. Mr. Geo. Fox is a fine, manly Captain Loveday, and his powerful baritone voice is heard to advantage. The remaining characters are filled by duly-qualified artists. The dresses and scenery are superb and the effects well carried out.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Aug. 22, the Melodrama, by Frederick Melville, entitled

"MARRIED TO THE WRONG MAN."

This, the third Melville melodrama produced at the Royal County Theatre during the past three weeks, has been, like the other two, drawing crowded audiences at each of the performances this week. At the head of a strong company is Miss Mary Pemberton, who plays Ruth with great ability, and has entirely won the sympathy and admiration of Kingston audiences by her fine acting. The part of Jack Gladwyn is in the hands of Mr. Henry Lonsdale, who gives a fine soldierly impersonation of it. Mr. George Arthur makes an excellent Captain Deering; and a capital study is furnished by Mr. W. Pemberton as Sergeant Manners. Others in the company who acquit themselves well are Miss Clara Milvain as Rose O'Connor, Mr. Basil Lynn as Dr. Bird, Mr. Basil Thackeray as Jasper Skinner, whilst valuable assistance in lighter vein is rendered by Mr. Hyland T. O'Shea and Miss May Day. Like all Mr. Melville's productions, the play is admirably mounted in every particular, the scene representing the interior of the Central Criminal Court being particularly admired.

All good actors and true visiting London (says the New York Dramatic Mirror) journey to two shrines. One is to the strange old church as to walls, like most London landmarks, white as a sepulchre in spots, in other spots black as the worst of the city's fogs, St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, the nearest neighbour of the National Gallery. Beneath the chancel of this ancient church sleeps the one-time orange girl whose name Henrietta Crosman made a household word with us a few seasons ago. Nell Gwynn rests there by the desire expressed in her will: "I desire I may be buried in the chancel of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields; that Dr. Tennyson may preach my funeral sermon; that there may be a decent pulpit cloth and cushion given to St. Martin's-in-the-Fields; that he (the Duke) would give one hundred pounds for the use of the poor of the said St. Martin's to be given into the hands of the said Dr. Tennyson to be disposed of at his discretion for taking any poor debtors of the said parish out of prison, and for clothes this winter and other necessaries as he shall find most fit." This is "the last request of Ellen Gwinn to His Grace the Duke of St. Albans" (her son).

The visitor to this chancel tomb of the merry, loving soul for whom the last words of England's king and his best words, one of his judges said, were: "Don't let poor Nelly starve!" goes from the queer old church of mottled appearance, down Pall Mall, the little street with the National Gallery at its head and the Post Office at its foot, to No. 79, where the star of Old Drury lived. It is a handsome house even for London, and to-day a white, four-storied stone house with large windows and two small porticoes. The home where poor Nelly lived now houses the Baldwin Club.

The other of the actor shrines is the tomb of Sir Henry Irving, whose example, I recall, six actors in America told me had not only led them to the stage, but had led them upon a plane of higher and kindlier living. To Westminster Abbey go these reverent ones of the stage, one of whom told me with a burst of indignation that careful search of the Abbey had not revealed Sir Henry's resting place until a warder dislodged two fat women who were sitting on a bench munching their halfpenny buttered scones. The removal of the women and the bench disclosed the slab on which was simply engraved "Sir Henry Irving," with the dates of his birth and death.

In connection with the Kennington Theatre stock season, the success that was attained in the stage management and production of Hoodman Blind was due to Mr. George Elliston, who was specially engaged to stage manage and produce the play.

"FROM MILL GIRL TO MILLIONAIRESS."

A New Drama, in Four Acts, by Mrs. Morton Powell, Produced at the Pavilion Theatre, Mile End, on Monday, Aug. 22.

Lina Lee ..... Miss Isla Garnet Vayne
Liz Lee ..... Miss Alice N. Livesey
Granny Lee ..... Mrs. Sidney Halling
Muriel Marsh ..... Miss Yhda Moores
Tilly Tyndesley ..... Miss Lizzie Lennon
Our Mary Ellen ..... Miss Gertie Moody
Dr. Lace Levallie ..... Mr. Charles Vivian
Laurence Langdale ..... Mr. Douglas Murray
Mathew Marsh ..... Mr. J. A. Hybert
Sam Swaddle ..... Mr. Richard Webb
Tommy Turnbull ..... Mr. Victor G. Vayne
Dr. Druce Cloud ..... Mr. Gilbert Hall
Gabriel Grunt ..... Mr. E. R. Shrewd
Dick Dale ..... Mr. Albert Sangar
Telegraph Boy ..... Master G. Blaze
P.C. Floode ..... Mr. Phillip Clay
Betty Bobbin ..... Miss Arnie May
Sally Spindle ..... Miss Lucy Lauder
Wardress Crooke ..... Miss Marion Mason

According to a note on the programme, Mrs. Morton Powell's new drama "is founded on actual facts." From Mill Girl to Millionairess is quite an excellent specimen of the class of play to which it belongs, and is a success. The thread of the story is woven with neatness and skill; and there are scenes which make a direct appeal to the audience. There was evidence of this on Monday evening in the excited exclamations and spontaneous remarks of members of the audience at certain points in the play. The mill girl is Lina Lee, who is living with her blind grandmother in a modest little cottage. There has been a lock-out, the result being that Lina and the other millhands are without work. Then enters upon the scene the villain of the piece, Dr. Lace Levallie, who has wicked designs upon pretty, fair-haired Lina. He sees his opportunity. The rent of the cottage has not been paid, and the poor blind old lady receives notice to quit. It is then that the designing Doctor comes forward and offers Lina a cheque to pay the rent, at the same time pointing out that any shock to her aged and feeble grandmother is likely to prove fatal. However, the offer is refused; and the villain finds himself face to face with angry Laurence Langdale, Lina's manly young sweetheart, who is employed as engineer at the mill. In the first scene also appeared Liz Lee and the man she lives with, Sam Swaddle, a drunken travelling hawker. The woman passes as the mother of Lina, but by her own admission we learn that the girl is the daughter of Mathew Marsh, the mill-owner and millionaire, and that the young woman known as Muriel Marsh is the child of Liz Lee, she, while acting as nurse, having effected a change when the two girls were infants. Muriel reveals her true character very early in the play by her refusal to accede to the pitiful appeal of Lina for her intercession to prevent the blind old lady being turned out of her cottage. When Muriel learns that Laurence Langdale is really the son of the Earl of Eldon, she determines to throw over her lover, Dr. Levallie, and scheme to become the wife of the heir to an earldom. Granny Lee, to all appearance, dies suddenly from the shock caused by the news that she is to be turned out of her home, but Dr. Levallie informs Lina that it is a case of catalepsy, and if she will consent to marry him at once he will restore her grandmother to life. Eventually Lina agrees to sacrifice herself, and when young Langdale arrives he discovers that she has fled, leaving behind a parting message for him.

The first scene of the second act is Dr. Levallie's villa at Hampstead, to which the villain has brought his supposed bride. Langdale has traced Lina to her new home, and is under the belief that she has fled with the Doctor as his mistress, but the girl undeceives him by showing him her wedding ring and marriage certificate. After his departure Lina overhears a conversation between Levallie and Sam Swaddle, who is in his pay, whereby she learns that her marriage with the Doctor was a mock one. She fiercely denounces him as the villain he is, and then escapes from the house. Returning to her home, she discovers that her grandmother is dead, and naturally she is distracted with grief. Dr. Levallie certifies that Lina is mad, and she is removed to an asylum. Here she is placed under the charge of a brutal wardress, who does not hesitate to resort to personal violence, and also permits the girl Muriel to savagely attack the unhappy girl whom she hates as her rival. Lina is in danger of being driven actually mad; but happily Tilly Tyndesley, a good-hearted Lancashire lass, and her sweetheart, Tommy Turnbull, come to her rescue. They obtain from Swaddle (who is employed at the asylum in the interests of Levallie) the key of the door leading into the grounds, and Lina is enabled to make her escape. In the meantime, Laurence Langdale learns that his father is dead, and that he has succeeded to the title. Under the belief that Lina can never become his wife, Laurence promises to wed Muriel, little dreaming that she has been the mistress of Dr. Levallie. The third act concludes in sensational fashion with the murder of Liz Lee by the wicked Doctor; and in the last act there is another sensation in the form of a fight in a burning house. The end of the story may be readily guessed. Muriel's plan fails at the last moment, and evidence is forthcoming that the mill girl is no other than the daughter of the millionaire, Mathew Marsh, and is free to wed the man of her choice, Laurence Langdale, now Earl of Eldon.

Miss Isla Garnet Vayne, a young actress of charming appearance and real ability, proved to be quite an ideal heroine. She played the part of the mill-girl with genuine feeling, and aroused the warm sympathy of the audience in a manner that testified to the excellence of her acting. Her performance contributed in no small degree to the favourable reception of the play. Very good, too, was Mr. Douglas Murray's embodiment of the hero, Laurence Langdale. The manly qualities of the young engineer were duly emphasised, and there was the ring of sincerity in his passionate appeals to the girl he loves. Mr. Charles Vivian gave a powerful portrayal of Dr. Levallie, skilfully bringing into prominence the man's evil, treacherous nature. Miss Alice N. Livesey was successful in her impersonation of Liz Lee, whose love for her own daughter was very naturally expressed; Miss Yhda Moores gave an attractive representation of Muriel Marsh, and carefully accentuated all the repulsive features in the character of the female villain. The rôle of the mill-owner, Mathew Marsh, was well played by Mr. J. A. Hybert; Mrs. Sidney Halling presented a pathetic picture of the blind helpless old woman, Granny Lee; Miss Lizzie Lennon scored as the Lancashire lass, Tilly Tyndesley, who is ever ready to make free use both of her tongue and her fists in defence of her friends; and Miss Gertie Moody was bright as Tilly's younger sister, Mary Ellen; Mr. Richard Webb made good use of his opportunities as Sam Swaddle, the hawker who becomes gatekeeper at the asylum, but has a strong objection to the company of lunatics; Mr. Victor G. Vayne was a capital exponent of the part of Tommy Turnbull, a millhand who becomes a "tiger" in the service of the millionaire, and is Tilly's young man; Miss Marion Mason, in the rôle of Wardress Crooke, gained unpopularity by her realistic sketch of a cruel, heartless woman; and Mr. Gilbert Hall rendered good service as the Doctor at the asylum. In minor characters Messrs. E. R. Shrewd, Albert Sanger, Phillip Clay, Master G. Blaze, and the Misses Arnie May and Lucy Lauder acquitted themselves satisfactorily. The new drama was rehearsed and produced by Mr. Morton Powell, and the scenery was specially painted by Mr. W. H. Leigh and assistants.

"THE APPLE OF EDEN."

Play in Four Acts, by G. Carlton Wallace, Produced or the First Time at the Elephant and Castle Theatre on Monday, Aug. 22.

King Ferdinand of Slavonia ..... Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan
Prince Nicola ..... Mr. T. Renaud Lockwood
Julian Hanbury ..... Mr. Lauderdale Maitland
Robert Bertram ..... Mr. Bertie White
General Pavlos ..... Mr. John F. Traynor
Colonel Ferat ..... Mr. Henry Chalmers
Vassili ..... Mr. C. W. Grahame
Zlatan ..... Mr. Chas. Parker
Stefan ..... Mr. Francis James
A Sentry ..... Mr. F. G. Marler
Queen Margaret ..... Miss Janet Alexander
Lady Hanbury ..... Miss M. Hayden
Winifred Creason ..... Miss Tessa Myers
Anna ..... Miss Mysie Monte

Forbidden fruit is the theme of the newest effort from the pen of Mr. G. Carlton Wallace, the author of a number of touring successes, including The Village Blacksmith, and there is quite an air of the problem play about it, the solution, however, being arrived at in the conventional melodramatic way. The piece is admirably written, and though some parts of the dialogue are a little plainspoken, it is as a rule neatly pointed and the sentiments expressed coincide exactly with the views of a popular audience.

Attention is claimed at the outset by a mysterious lady who moves about with a queenly air at Ragusa, the "dream of the City of the Adriatic," and fascinates a young Englishman named Julian Hanbury, who, with his mother, Lady Hanbury, and his fiancée, Winifred Crèsson, is staying in the City. The lady is indeed a royalty, being no other than the Queen of Slavonia, who has fled from her kingdom, where she is known as the "Well-Beloved," to escape the ignominy thrust upon her by her husband, King Ferdinand, surnamed the "Ever-hated One," a profligate monarch, who makes his court the resort of bad characters. The King soon comes in pursuit, in company with his cousin and Prime Minister, Prince Nicola, and his commander-in-chief, General Pavlos. The King demands that the Queen shall return to Slavonia, but she resolutely refuses. Meanwhile, Julian's infatuation has not escaped the notice of Winifred, who is by no means upset at the turn of events, as she has transferred her affections to Julian's friend, Robert Bertram, a "Johnnie" of the most pronounced type, and see in Julian's infatuation an opportunity to break off her match with him. She receives unexpected help from General Pavlos, who is deeply attached to the Queen, and would fain see her back on the throne with the King deposed and a stalwart like Julian as her consort. He therefore induces the Queen to invite Julian, who has already given proof of his devotion, to her rooms at the hotel where the King keeps her practically a prisoner. Here the Queen makes passionate love to Julian, who is embracing her when a loud knocking is heard at the doors and the King demands admittance. There is nothing for it but flight, and the pair make off in Julian's motor-car, which stands in readiness outside.

A snug little cottage situated in the mountains serves as a residence for the runaways for a few days, until Julian receives a letter from his mother inviting him to return home with his bride. Julian is as yet unaware of the identity of the Queen, and imagined her to be unattached; but the truth is revealed to him by Prince Nicola, who tracks the Queen once more, and ruthlessly declares that Margaret is not only the King's wife, but that she had fled to gratify her own desires. In vain the Queen pleads that she has been a wife only in name to the King. Julian has a keen sense of righteousness, and bids her go back to her court.

To Slavonia accordingly the Queen returns, only to find the country in the throes of a revolution. Bandits have attacked the imperial troops, and are already at the gates of the capital. The secret of their success lies in the fact that Prince Nicola, who himself aspires to the throne, is in collusion with the insurgent leader, and makes him acquainted with the plans of General Pavlos, whose troops are constantly defeated. Meanwhile Julian, in his mountain home, is recovering from fever, and learns that Margaret has shown her love by leaving her soldiery to protect him from danger. Receiving a message from Pavlos informing him that the Queen is in peril, he determines to go to her aid. He finds her in the toils of the insurgents and suffering insults at the hands of Prince Nicola. Julian immediately attacks his Highness, and, after an exciting duel, disarms him and floors him with a blow from his fist. The bandit leader arrives with his men; but General Pavlos has grown suspicious of Nicola, and delivers an attack several hours earlier than was arranged, with the result that the rebels are routed. Nicola, who has established himself Regent, the King having become insane, calls a cabinet council at which to depose the Queen, bringing the King on the scene for the purpose. His Majesty, however, gives ample evidence of madness, going so far as to assume Julian's cloak and hat in order to look like an English gentleman and thus gain the Queen's love. That act is his undoing, for as a last resort Prince Nicola brings the bandit chief to assassinate Julian, and, mistaking the King for the young Englishman, shoots him dead. The way is thus open for the union of the Queen with Julian, who is to share the throne with her.

With a cast such as that enumerated above, a finished performance of the play was inevitable. The leading parts were in the hands of tried West-end players. Miss Janet Alexander won a complete triumph as Margaret, making a commanding appearance, and thoroughly impressing all with her dignity and power. She looked very handsome in several becoming costumes, and exercised her fascinations effectively, her emotional gifts, too, being admirably employed in the poignant scene in which the Queen is separated from Julian. The rôle of that chivalrous young man was entrusted to Mr. Lauderdale Maitland, who was a great favourite of the Lyceum, and has been seen recently in a sketch at the variety theatres with Miss Alexander. Mr. Maitland was perfect in appearance, speech, and action, and when the opportunity for dramatic intensity presented itself, took advantage of it artistically. The scheming Prince Nicola was in the experienced hands of Mr. T. Renaud Lockwood, who brought out cleverly the sinister side of the character, emphasising by many skilful touches the utter depravity of the man. A striking study of King Ferdinand was submitted by Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan, who, with thin red hair and beard, suggested the debauched monarch in make-up, manner, and expression. Mr. John F. Traynor was a vigorous and virile exponent of General Pavlos, whose breezy manner made him a general favourite. Excellent comedy was provided by Mr. Bertie White, whose absurdities as a "chappie," created much laughter, and by Miss Tessa Myers, who was bright and vivacious, as his sweetheart, and scored in every line. Miss M. Hayden acted with gentle motherliness as Lady Hanbury, and Miss Mysie Monte was dainty and refined as the Queen's maid. The faithful Stefan was portrayed with every effect by Mr. Francis James; Mr. C. W. Grahame made a duly ferocious brigand; and the minor parts were ably rendered. Every scene was completely realised, the City of Ragusa and the mountain cottage being particularly picturesque. Calls were numerous at each curtain, Miss Alexander was made the recipient of handsome bouquets, and at the end the author was summoned and warmly commended.

The part of Sadie Von Tromp, the Californian girl in The Dollar Princess at Daly's, is now being played by that charming young American actress, Miss Beatrice von Brunner.

"THE THIRD DEGREE."

A Play, in One Act, by Harry M. Vernon, Produced, for the First Time on any Stage, at the Palace, Manchester, on Monday, Aug. 22.

Inspector Robinson .....MR. CHARLES A. EAST
Night Watchman .....MR. E. BEVENS ROGERS
Sergeant .....MR. JOHN BELL
Jim Casey .....MR. GERALD VALENTINE
Mrs. Van Hudson .....MISS EAST ROBERTSON

The scene in which this episode of American police methods is portrayed is stated to be an exact replica of the Chief Inspector of Detectives' room at the police headquarters in New York City. Among its features is a cabinet containing photographs of criminals, called "The Rogues' Gallery," which is also an exact copy; and one may take it that the episode itself, which has been written from the author's personal experience, is as nearly life-like in its procedure as can be. It is well known that there is a strong objection of the public to the system known as "The Third Degree," whereby prisoners are so tortured, bodily and mentally, that even innocent men will confess to crime rather than endure the punishment, nothing but an admission of guilt being acceptable to the police, yet the method is still resorted to. The present example shows how cruelly it may bear upon an innocent man. Jim Casey, a previous offender, is in custody on suspicion of being concerned in a bank robbery to the tune of 10,000 dollars, in the stealing of which the night watchman of the bank had been attacked from behind, and left unconscious. Inspector Robinson, questioning him upon his uncertain knowledge of the matter, shows him the photograph of Casey, suggesting that the latter is the culprit. The night watchman cannot, and will not, swear to the identity of a man whom he did not see, and indignantly repudiates the wheedling persuasions of the inspector. Casey is afterwards brought in, and protests his innocence. He has been starved and otherwise brutally maltreated because he will not confess to the crime, but apparently nothing can shake his determination to adhere to his word. He is threatened with increase of torture, but at this point Casey becomes desperate, and swears to retaliate if he is ill-used any more. Nevertheless, on the inspector's orders, he is taken out for punishment. The inspector now has a call from one Mrs. Van Hudson, who tells how, a few nights ago, she was called from the theatre to find her house on fire. Going up the stairs, she had met a man, who had already rescued her child, but who disappeared before she had time to thank him. Now she wants to find the man, and asks the inspector's assistance for the purpose. It may here be mentioned that Casey's hand is bound up, but he has refused to explain how it came to be injured. While the inspector's back is turned to her for a moment Mrs. Van Hudson's attention is caught by the photo of Casey on the desk, and she at once recognises Casey as the heroic saviour of her child. This puts a new aspect on the matter, but the inspector does not admit anything at first, assuring Mrs. Hudson that the picture is that of a man who is in custody for burglary and violence. The lady persists, however, and in fact the occasions tally with each other. Thus Casey is cleared. When the inspector asks him why he did not explain his injury, Casey answers bitterly that his explanation would not have been believed. The sequel is that the inspector orders all records against Casey to be destroyed, and otherwise shows that it is the system, and not always the administrators of it, that is so seriously at fault.

As Casey Mr. Gerald Valentine gave a powerful and appealing depiction; and a very convincing sketch of the inspector was added by Mr. Chas. A. East. Miss East Robertson played well also as Mrs. Van Hudson; a vigorous impersonation of the night watchman was supplied by Mr. E. Bevens Rogers; and Mr. John Bell played the Sergeant efficiently.

The piece was an undoubted success.

PASTORAL PLAYS AT WORCESTER.

Thanks to the enterprise of Mr. Arthur Carlton, the popular lessee of the Worcester Theatre Royal, arrangements were made for two outdoor dramatic performances in the grounds of Barbourne College, Worcester, on Friday last, the 19th inst., by Mr. A. Walter Pearce's company. As, however, the weather was not propitious, the morning performance was given in the Theatre Royal and in the evening at the Empire. The programme opened with scenes from As You Like It, in which Mr. Walter Pearce, as Orlando, gave a fine impersonation. Mr. C. H. Croker-King was remarkably good as Touchstone; and Miss Ella Erskine was a fascinating and graceful Rosalind. Jacques found an able exponent in Mr. Rathmell Wilson; and the other rôles were well sustained by Mr. Alfred Bristowe (William), Miss Ella Stead (Audrey), a daughter of Mr. W. T. Stead, who made a hit, Miss Irene Clark (Celia), and Mr. James M. Buchan (Corin). The Roman Road, by Miss Ella Erskine, was also in the programme, and Mr. Croker-King found it well suited to his fine elocutionary powers; and Miss Irene Clark was a delightful boy. This was followed by The Typist, a very pleasing sketch, written by Miss Ella Erskine, and ably performed by her, Mr. Walter Pearce and Mr. Rathmell Wilson. The entertainment concluded with The Fantastics, translated from the French of Rostand by George Fleming, the respective rôles being well sustained by Miss Erskine, Mr. Walter Pearce, Mr. Croker-King, Mr Wilson, and Mr. Winston.

AMUSEMENTS IN NEW ZEALAND.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

WELLINGTON.—MONDAY, July 11.—OPERA HOUSE.—Messrs. Clarke and Meynell's company opened at this theatre on Monday last with Pete. It has completely conquered the local public. The stars, Mr. Harry Roberts and Miss Beatrice Day, appear as Pete and Kate Quilliam. As is usual with Messrs. Clarke and Meynell the piece is put on exceedingly well. Philip Christian is played with a very refreshng amount of fire and sincerity by Mr. Conway Wingfield; and Miss Mary Laing-Meeson is good in a subsidiary part. The repértoire contains The Hypocrites and The Case of Rebellious Susan.

MOVING pictures are to be seen at His Majesty's and The King's Theatres, and also at Messrs. Fuller's vaudeville house, the Royal, where, in addition, there is an attractive variety programme.

MR. WILLIAM FARREN writes:—"The American 'trust' system: what are its guiding principles? In effect, restriction of trade at its very worst. The American theatre trust assumed to itself the power to beat down opposition by every unfair means; the power to say to competing managers, 'Join with us, or we break you'; the power to command the actors to 'take our terms or starve'; and the power to order the theatre-going public to 'come to us or go without amusement.'

"THERE are many signs in America to-day that the tyranny of the trust system is to be fought against, that its unjust reign is to end. It is the American public that will in future call the tune, having hitherto only been allowed to pay the piper. The American 'trust' system will, fortunately, never succeed in England. The type of man in management on our side is very different. Managers and actors have the good sense to realise that to-day, as in Garrick's time, 'the drama's laws the drama's patrons give.' The American trust system might embark all its millions of dollars over here, it might buy up our theatres, shoulder out our managers, corner our authors, and dictate its terms to our actors, but it would find in the English public a master, not a servant; and it is well to give the American trust operators a timely and friendly hint."

"THE CRISIS."

Play, in Four Acts, an Adaptation by Rudolf Besier of La Rencontre, by Pierre Berton. Produced at the Hastings Pier Pavilion Theatre on Monday, Aug. 22.

Camille de Lançay .....MISS EVELYN MILLARD
Renée Serval .....MISS SARAH BROOKE
A Maid .....MISS E. MARTHÈZE
Canuche .....MR. LENNOX PAWLE
Raymond de Brévannes ....MR. ATHOL STEWART
Armand Vivien.....MR. DOUGLAS IMBERT
Adrien Serval .....MR. NORMAN MCKINNEL

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

To the frivolous all is folly; to the earnest mind this play affords a fine example of the discipline of life. Herein a great soul is contrasted with a frivolous, ignoble nature, and we have presented to us a love that purifies, elevates, and ennobles. The action opens at the Servals' house in Paris. Renée and Adrien have been married four years. She, of patrician family, despises her husband for being of bourgeois parentage, but values the influence of the political position he has attained. Their friend, Raymond de Brévannes, draws caricatures of Adrien, and is a secret opponent, and also seeks his dishonour. Camille de Lançay renews a girlhood friendship with Renée, and consults Adrien professionally in regard to her lawsuit. It is in pressing her to disclose the motives of her actions in regard thereto that he is attracted by her noble disinterestedness, and strongly emotional scenes of absorbing interest distinguish the remaining acts, which occur within a period of seven months.

The third act shows events after a fortnight has elapsed. This is a scene between Renée and Camille. The former reproaches Camille with having taken her husband from her. "For the loss of the man I care not; the loss of the husband I shall prevent." Camille at last confesses that it was Renée's perfidy to her husband that forced the avowal from her lips, and then insists that Renée herself must confess all to her husband, or Camille will. Renée hands Camille an incriminating letter. Adrien enters, and notices their agitation; but Camille says the letter is to summon her from Paris, and she secretly returns it to Renée.

The events of the fourth act take place six months later. Adrien has recovered more than his former political prestige, and, being suspicious of the liaison between his wife and Raymond, he has sent for Camille, secretly hoping to discover proof of his doubts concerning them. The discovery ends the play.

Miss Evelyn Millard acted very finely as Camille de Lançay. Swayed by powerful and conflicting emotions, the woman's mental struggles were naturally conveyed. She was the recipient of a splendid bouquet at the end of the third act, and an ovation from a house crowded in every part. Mr. Norman McKinnel had a rôle difficult to portray, but he successfully accomplished the task. Miss Sarah Brooke as Renée Serval, a frivolous woman, greedy of admiration, yet holding tenaciously to outward decorum, was responsible for a charming conception of a somewhat complex rôle, and her denunciation of Camille in the third act was powerful and well delivered. Mr. Lennox Pawle made an excellent creation of Canuche, a type of character requiring much art to keep it from silliness. His artless avowals of the tender passion thoroughly amused his audience, roars of laughter greeting his description of the way in which his wife married him against his will. Mr. Athol Stewart as Raymond de Brévannes acted convincingly as the unscrupulous man of fashion; and Mr. Douglas Imbert as Armand Vivien, and Miss E. Marthèze as a maid, were effective in small rôles.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOLVERHAMPTON.

This popular house reopened its doors on Monday last under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley. Although only closed for a week, wonders have been done in the way of redecoration, both inside and out, and the handsome theatre looked as clean as the proverbial new pin. The old scheme of decoration has been followed, whilst special attention has been given to the lighting of the stage, which is a vast improvement on the old order of things. Despite the fact that "the free list was suspended," there was a crowded house, and the hearty welcome that greeted both Mr. and Mrs. Kimberley must have gone far to assure them of the future success of their new enterprise. Mr. Lester Collingwood, the genial lessee of the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, motored over to add his congratulations, and there were also present Mr. Charles Darrell, the author, and Mr. Day, of the old Day's Music Hall, Birmingham; whilst numerous telegrams wishing good-luck were received from Mr. and Mrs. Kimberley's many friends in the theatrical profession.

Mr. Kimberley made a short, but terse, speech, in which he promised his patrons the best of dramatic fare. He then brought on Mrs. Kimberley, and a handsome bouquet of roses was presented to her amongst deafening cheers, which were again repeated when she made her appearance in the managerial box.

Mr. Lester Collingwood's company, in When London Sleeps, started the theatre on its new career, and the audience were not slow to show their appreciation of the successful and realistic play. Mr. Geo. B. Daiper as David Engleheart was all that could be desired; Mr. Kenneth Norbury succeeded in earning the execrations of the audience; Bob Jones had an able representative in Mr. F. E. Thomas; and Mr. Harry Cooke made the most of his opportunities as Sammy Blyth. Miss Mabel Scudamore acquitted herself admirably as Queenie Carruthers; Miss Cissie St. Elmo gave a powerful portrayal of Hilda Carode; Miss Mabel Tremere was full of vim and go as Carrie Jones; Miss Lottie Lonsdale caused plenty of merriment as Signorina Robertio Jonesio; and Miss Ida Lovett made a pathetic little Lelia.

ONE of the prettiest routes available by the River Severn was chosen by the staff of the Aston Theatre Royal for their ninth annual outing on Sunday, and the excursion proved a delightful one in every way. Leaving New Street Station at 8.45 a.m., they journeyed to the ancient cathedral town of Worcester, and it was a pleasant walk through the quiet old-fashioned streets to the river bridge, where the pleasure steamboat Lady Alwyne was in waiting to convey the party down the river to Holt Fleet, Tewkesbury. The river winds its way through green fields and wooded slopes, providing many scenic attractions, and everyone on board was in high spirits, and full of appreciation of the delightful surroundings.

LOWER LODE was reached about 1 p.m., and this gave the visitors a brief period in which to look round before sitting down to dinner at the Lower Lode Hotel. They numbered about fifty ladies and gentlemen, and included a few friends, the enterprising manager, Mr. Lewis M. Chapman, acting as leader. In the afternoon the principal feature was a programme of sports, in which there were several exciting events. The 100 yards race for ladies attracted a good entry; but two of the competitors fell "at the first hurdle." Youth told its tale at the finish, the winner being Miss Daisy Reed.

THE staff challenged the visitors to try conclusions in a tug-of-war contest, and had to admit defeat. The pretty walks in the neighbourhood were appreciated by those who sought quietude, and at 4.30 p.m. there was a second muster at the Lower Lode Hotel for tea. There were many regrets as the homeward journey was commenced, but it proved a very pleasant one, Birmingham being reached about 10 p.m., after a full day of genuine enjoyment.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MME. ANNIE MOLLER.

Manchester for the last few years has claimed Mme. Annie Möller for its own. Comfortably married and settled, with a country house, her dogs, her horses, her hunting seasons, in which she was always well in the front of the crowd, she had attained what many a hard-worked actress would have thought a position that no one could possibly wish to leave. Her penchant for the stage could always be gratified by appearing with many of the amateur societies of the district, to whom she was a tower of strength, for not only did she play the principal parts, but could help the various amateur stage-managers in a manner they thoroughly appreciated. One of the most brilliant and enjoyable of conversationalists, she was ever ready with an anecdote redolent of the time she spent with her first love, the stage.

At a very early age she extemporised a stage of her own by drawing a chalk line across the floor of one of the rooms in the house of her parents. Her audience consisted of all the chairs she could put one side of the line; on the other she placed her company—all her dolls. Suitably attired in a sofa blanket, with a tea cosy for a head-dress, and armed with a toy sword, she made a dramatic entrance, crying, "How dare you? How dare you? Villain! Monster! Leave my presence at once!" Unfortunately, at the crucial moment her baby sister entered the room, yelled with fear at the apparition, and would not be appeased. Her screams brought the members of the household hurrying towards the apartment, and fearful of consequences our heroine hurried to the bath-room, and, jumping into the empty bath, pulled the wooden covering over her. Baby's terror brought on convulsions, and it was decided to give her a hot bath. For this purpose the lid was raised, and the cause of all the trouble was discovered—a rather better dramatic ending than she herself could have planned.

On the loss of her husband, poor Victor Möller, beloved of everybody, she consoled herself with her pen, from which flowed many short stories and one long serial dealing with life behind the scenes. For this purpose she adopted the nom-de-plume of "Rhona." About three months ago Mr. Pitt Hardacre produced a one-act play from her pen entitled The Prodigal's Welcome. It was most favourably received, and will be heard of again. Mme. Möller herself created the principal part. Her forte has always been considered to be "juvenile lead," but in this play she displayed a surprising amount of tragic force.

QUITE a number of stage celebrities have been sojourning at Herne Bay recently, including the Misses Phyllis and Zena Dare, who have a house there, Miss Mabel Russell, Miss Mollie Lowell, Mrs. Bernard Beere, Mr. Fred Wright, and Mr. Lawrence Grossmith.

TWO special matinées organised by the Shakespeare Memorial Committee in furtherance of its project for a National Theatre will be given in October at West End theatres. The programme will comprise Mrs. Lyttelton's The Masque of Shakespeare, a short play specially written by Mr. Bernard Shaw, and a new play written by Miss Diana Cholmondeley. Leading representatives of the stage have consented to take part in the performance, among them being Lady Tree, Miss Ellen Terry, and Miss Lillah McCarthy.

ON Oct. 1 a new law will come into force in Berlin respecting the regulations of the agency fees for theatres and other entertainments. Hitherto no actual limit has prevailed one way or another. Many agents entitled to 10 per cent. from variety theatre managers have, it is stated, only received half, while others have made a good living. Everything will be henceforth placed under strict control to mutual advantage. Some dissatisfied agents, it is true, have expressed their determination to arrange their contracts abroad. Such a proceeding, however, is illegal when such contracts show any advantage over those made this side the frontier.

MR. HALL CAINE'S new play, The Eternal Question, which is to be produced at the Garrick Theatre to-night, has for its central motive the woman question, and is intended to deal with the relative rights and responsibilities of the sexes in the eyes of God and man. "Is it true or is it not true," Mr. Caine says, "that while, according to the laws of Nature, there may be many women for a man, there can be only one man for a woman? If it is true, there is a kind of hard and terrible justice in the way—the terrible way—in which human law in all ages has treated woman in relation to man. But if it is not true, then the whole course of human law and social custom has been a line of iniquities from the earliest ages of the world.

"IN writing the play I have merely presented the views of widely different classes, and stood aside as a more or less impartial witness. Thus into the mouth of the Baron Bonelli I have tried to put the opinions of the people who hold that woman is not in any sense a separate being, but the helpmeet (perhaps the chattel) of man; whilst into the mouth of David Rossi I have put the opinions of those who claim for woman at all points an absolute equality with the other sex, and in the person of Roma Roselli, one of the women about whom our problem revolves, I have tried to show the frightful odds at which woman stands by reason of the law of her sex, the blind alley into which she seems to me to walk the moment she is parted from the man to whom she first belongs—whether by the call of her own higher nature, by the whim of the man's lower nature, by legal separation, or by divorce."

FATHER OF THE LIVERPOOL THEATRE.

Strange as it may seem, yet few people could honestly say to whom belongs the honour of establishing the drama in Liverpool, says the Liverpool Post. Very little mention is made by the majority of local historians of the very interesting though little known figure who made theatrical history for this town. This man was William Gibson, who first came to the local Drury Lane Theatre during the summer in the early 'fifties of the eighteenth century. Gibson was a member of the London Covent Garden Theatre Company, and his principal performers came from that theatre. He continued to supply the dramatic fare each summer right up to the time of his death. It was during one of his visits that George Farren (father of Elizabeth Farren, afterwards Countess of Derby), who had just arrived in Liverpool, applied to Gibson for a position in his company. Lee Lewes, in his "Memoirs," gives the following amusing account of this meeting:—"'Our company, friend,' said Gibson, 'being formed and full ere we left London, cannot possibly admit of any addition. Thou has told me, friend, that thou hast never tried thy talents on the stage, and it is an unalterable maxim with me to reject all superfluities of any kind. I will not entertain more cats than will kill mice; and, therefore, as by thy own confession thou art not practised in the business of an actor, the most prudent course for thee would be to push thyself into some other way of life which may support thee better. Whatever thy vain hope may flatter thee with, expect not to keep up long the flashy appearance thou now dost make, should'st thou engage with any travelling company of comedians. But lest, peradventure, thou should'st lack wherewithal to answer for a bed and supper, I make thee a present of this half-crown; thou dost look most pitifully lank, young man, but this may, if properly used by thee, prevent thy growing thinner for a short space of time.' The exordium to this puritanical speech made poor Farren look blank; he thought proper, however, being in want of half a crown, to pocket the affront, and, making his best bow to his monitor, he went back to his lodging." Gibson, it is interesting to note, had been brought up a Quaker, though when nearly thirty had joined the Church of England.

The earliest recorded date of his company's appearance at the local theatre is in May, 1756, when they announced that they would perform "during the months of June, July, and August next." The first play they gave of which there is any authentic proof was The Constant Couple, performed on June 4, 1756. So successful was Gibson that in 1768 he applied to the Liverpool Corporation for their support in his petition to Parliament for permission to build a new theatre in Liverpool, to which Letters Patent would be granted. By doing this he hoped to raise the standard of the Liverpool Theatre to an established position in the theatrical world. This application was granted by the Corporation, and a petition was sent to the Houses of Parliament in 1769. This petition was passed by the House of Commons; but, unfortunately, the House of Lords rejected it. However, Gibson was not disheartened, and another petition was prepared and sent to London. This time it was passed, and the Royal Letters Patent passed the Great Seal in 1771, allowing Gibson to establish a theatre and form and govern a company of comedians for his Majesty's service in Liverpool. Such was the esteem felt for Gibson in Liverpool, that when he asked for money to build his theatre, the whole of the sum was subscribed in less than an hour after the list was opened. The shares were thirty in number, being equal shares of £200. This theatre was the Theatre Royal, Williamson-square, which was opened in 1772, afterwards rebuilt in 1803, and now converted into a cold storage. Gibson, unfortunately, did not live to see his ambitions realised, as he died on Aug. 21, 1771, at his residence in Everton. He was buried in Walton Churchyard on Aug. 25, where a fine tombstone was erected to his memory. The inscription, said to have been written by David Garrick, on a white marble medallion, is not now decipherable, owing to the ravages of time. It is, however, with many other interesting details of his life, contained in Broadbent's "Annals of the Liverpool Stage," and runs as follows:—"To the memory of William Gibson, late patentee of the Theatre Royal, in Liverpool, who died Aug. 21, 1771, aged 58. If Judgment and Industry in his Profession, if a Steady Uprightness of Heart, if an Invariable Attachment to Truth, Honour, and Friendship desire the praises of Mankind, no one ever had a more just title to them than he whose remains are here interr'd.

DOLLAR PRINCESS COMPANY V. SUNDERLAND.

Played at Sunderland on Wednesday.

The Sunderland team had county men on their side, so much credit is due to the Dollar Princess company for their gallant efforts against what must be considered a superior team. The theatricals gave the home team a capital game, which came to an exciting close one minute before time. Scores:—

"DOLLAR PRINCESS" COMPANY.—J. A. Castle, b Newburn, 52; H. A. Henson, c Priestley, b C. Brooks, 11; D. Knowles, b H. Brooks, 10; W. J. Douglas, c Priestley, b C. Brooks, 11; J. "SEVEN DAYS," produced at the Astor Theatre, New York, last November, was not withdrawn during the summer, and is still going strong. The Summer Widowers, with Lew Fields and Irene Franklin, is enjoying a prosperous run at the Broadway Theatre. At the Casino, famous for its summer attractions, Eddie Foy, in a musical revue called Up and Down Broadway, is one of the best of the Shubert productions. Four roof-gardens are flourishing. Hammerstein's and the American being devoted to high-class vaudeville, while a musical play called Girlies, produced by Frederic Thompson, is the bill at the New Amsterdam; and The Follies of 1910 is the attraction at the Jardin de Paris, on the roof of the New York Theatre.

UNDER a winding-up order of the High Court of Justice, a meeting of creditors was held at Merthyr last week of the Cambrian Theatre (Limited), Birkbeck Bank-chambers, London. Mr. W. Ormiston, deputy official receiver of Pontypridd, presided. Among the losses included in the statement of affairs was a loss on a lease of the Cardiff Theatre Royal of £2000. The nominal capital of the company was £5000. Two thousand shares were issued as fully paid, and the amount called up was £1 per share on 452 shares. The gross deficiency was thus brought up to £3662. It was resolved by a majority vote that the official receiver should apply to the Court to appoint Mr. H. Nesbit Price, chartered accountant, High Holborn, the liquidator, which Mr. J. G. Williams, on behalf of some creditors, who desired the official receiver to act, said would be opposed when the application was made.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

SYDNEY, JULY 12.—J. M. Barrie's homely lesson What Every Woman Knows has been cordially received at the Theatre Royal. Miss Nellie Stewart was warmly welcomed back to her native city, and her impersonation of Maggie Wylie, the devoted and self-effacing wife, was a delightfully natural one. The theatre was crowded on the 9th, and cheers and flowers competed in doing the favourite honour. Mr. Harcourt Beatty's portraiture of John Shand was a clever impersonation; and Mr. Eardley Turner gave us an exact Alick Wylie. His son David could not have been entrusted to better care than that of Mr. J. B. Atholwood; and James Wylie had Mr. Gregan McMahon as his sponsor, and he created a deal of laughter. Miss Gwen. Burroughs was Lady Sybil, handsome and wilful; and a charming impersonation of a French countess was that of Miss Madeleine Meredith. The cast was completed by Mr. Norman Campbell, who contributed an admirable portrayal. The direction of the play was entrusted to Mr. Gaston Mervale; and the J. C. Williamson firm staged the play capitally.

"A KNIGHT FOR A DAY," at the other Williamson theatre, Her Majesty's, has caught on with playgoers who love to laugh. It is by Messrs. Robert B. Smith (book and lyrics), Laymond Hubbell, and Fritz B. Hart, who supply the music. The scenery is by Messrs. John Gordon and Little. Miss Toby Claude made her first Australian appearance, and established herself as a dainty and clever little comedienne. Miss Emma Temple had one of her favourite parts as Mme. Woodbury, head of a ladies' seminary; and Miss Grace Edmond made the most of her opportunities as Muriel. Mr. Bert Gilbert played Jeremy Joy in his usual humorous fashion; and the fun was ably helped by Mr. W. S. Percy. As Marcelin Mr. Frank Green acted and sang well as Emile Sheldon; and the Sir Anthony Oliver of Mr. Pat Bathurst was also a capital performance. Miss Minnie Hooper was responsible for the charming ballets.

THE Criterion is still occupied by The Third Floor Back. Mr. Matheson Lang's quiet acting and rich voice make his performance a very enjoyable one; and Miss Hutin Britton wins much sympathy as the boarding-house slavey. On the 22nd The Third Floor Back will make way for Clarke and Meynell's production of The Arcadians, with Miss Maie Sydney as Ombra, and a new and enlarged cast.

MDLLE. ANTONIA DOLORES, the popular soprano, has made such a decided success on this visit that her director, Mr. H. N. Southwell, has arranged for more concerts. Mr. John Prouse, the basso, is also a fine vocalist. Mr. J. Edward Sykes and Mr. Christian Hellemann play the pianoforte accompaniments.

THE Tivoli received Pip Powell and Kate Vesey, in their comic sketch A Perfect Woman, with rapturous applause. Another new turn was supplied by Miss Leane De Lyle and M. Brunnier, who do wonderful work under the guise of a game at billiards. Billy Williams, Lillie Langtry, Fanny Powers, Lieutenant Frank Travis, Dorothy Swift, Con. Moreni, the Dardinis, and others are still at the Tivoli.

"LOVE AMONG THE LIONS."

(FROM OUR AMERICAN CORRESPONDENT.)

Love Among the Lions, a "farcical romance" in four acts by Winchell Smith, was the very successful opening production at the Garrick Theatre, New York, on the 8th inst. Founded on Frank Anstey's novel, the story runs that young Theodore Sanders has long loved the dashing Lorana de Castro from afar, though he could never make up his mind to confess his love for her. One day, however, summoning all his courage, he calls at the house of Lorana's stepfather, Professor Charles Polkinson, a teacher of elocution, and decides to take a course in the professor's wonderful system of learning how to speak properly. Lorana enters the room whilst he is waiting for the Professor, and, summoning all his courage, he declares his passion. Much to his surprise, Lorana accepts him, but stipulates that the wedding ceremony shall take place in a lion's cage. Two friends of hers have been married in that way, and she, tired of a humdrum existence, yearns for fame. Her one idea of happiness is to be talked about from one end of the country to the other for some startling exploit. Theodore is at first dazed by her request, but he is so enraptured at the thought of her becoming his wife that he agrees to the condition she imposes. Out of her presence, however, he begins to realise the danger of her plan. With delightful naïvete and ingenuity he tries to circumvent her, only to be defeated at every turn by the artful Lorana. They are to be married at the Agricultural Hall, and finally the day of the wedding arrives. The announcement of the unique ceremony attracts a big crowd. The lions are in fine fettle, and Lorana hears with glee that they are more than usually peevish and irritable. Theodore has a hard time of it in screwing up his courage for the awful ordeal. As he starts for the cage he is totally unnerved as he hears the roars of the savage beasts, and falls in a faint. The audience has been promised a wedding in the cage, however, and there will be a riot if it fails to take place. Chevalier Niono, the lion tamer, has conceived a passion for Lorana, and has played on the fears of her intended husband. Relying on his failure to stand up before the lions, Niono has obtained a marriage licence for himself and Lorana. So he takes Theodore's place, and is apparently married to Lorana. Theodore, when he recovers from his faint, is utterly miserable, but it turns out that Mlle. Leonie, whom Niono has wished to abandon, has tricked the lion-tamer into marrying her by veiling herself and impersonating Lorana. Theodore and his sweetheart are immensely relieved when they learn the facts and renew their love-making; but nothing more is said about a wedding in a lion's cage.

Mr. A. E. Matthews, who came over from London to play the part of Theodore, made an instantaneous hit, and kept the audience in roars of laughter. Mr. Matthews makes his points in a quiet, natural way, and never over-acts. His success on this side is fully assured. Miss May Blayney (Mrs. A. E. Matthews), by no mean a stranger here, maintained the popularity she had won during her previous visits by giving a delightful portrayal of the lion-tamer's partner, Mlle. Leonie. Mr. Ernest Stallard, who appeared as Prof. Charles Polkinson, father of Lorana, and Mr. Clarence Handyside, as Hannibal Sawkins, a blustering ringmaster, contributed clever character studies. Miss Jane Oaker as Lorana De Castro, played the part to perfection.

SOME interesting details are to hand respecting the fees paid to foremost artists in Vienna for making gramophone records. Fräulein Selma Kurz, the prima donna of the Imperial Court Opera, receives 2,000 crowns (£83) for singing into the instrument, and a commission of one crown (10d.) for every record sold. On an average the diva sings ten arias a year for this purpose. Next comes the celebrated tenor Herr Slezak, who is guaranteed £333 for fifteen songs, and 5d. a record commission or royalty, and his colleague, Herr Schmedes, receives about £16 a song, besides a commission on sales.

MISS MINA LE BERT, who went to South Africa to play lead with Messrs. Herbert Fleming and De Jong, is returning to England on the Kinfauns Castle, and is expected to arrive at Southampton to-day. She hopes to stay in London for a month or so.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP

We are glad to hear that the slight friction between Sir Herbert Tree and Mr. Herbert Trench with respect to the latter's "trenchant" article in the Saturday Review has been allayed. Mr. Trench, who is holiday-making on the Continent, has sent the following telegram to Sir Herbert: "Quite amazed you should take first paragraph in Saturday Review article as referring to your approaching production, of which I know nothing and hope everything. Reference to Cardinal's robes based on actual recent incident. Article purely general in intention. Least of all should I repay your most friendly courtesy by smallest attack or even reference, especially as I admire your Midsummer Night, Cæsar, and Richard II. more than any other revival. Sincerest regrets for misunderstanding."

It must be admitted, however, that certain passages in the article amply justified Sir Herbert in thinking that his coming production was alluded to. The allusions to the "avalanche of Shakespearean upholstery," with its "palaces, chapels, and coronations modelled upon fancy balls," and the "lace and velvet robes of the Cardinals," were doubtless not aimed at the production of Henry VIII., but could easily have been imagined to do so by those unaware of their general intention. We hope Mr. Tree will still publish his promised pamphlet on the subject of Shakespearean mounting.

Mr. Forbes Robertson, who has been spending his holiday at Bushey, will sail from Liverpool on Sept. 17, and will open his tour with The Passing of the Third Floor Back at Toronto on the 26th of that month. On Oct. 3 he will return to the Maxine Elliott Theatre, New York, and after visiting many American cities will end the tour about the end of May. Mr. Forbes Robertson has organised a second company, composed entirely of English actors, to appear in Mr. Jerome K. Jerome's play in the smaller American towns. Mr. Ian Robertson is the manager of this company.

Mr. James M. Glover is about to enter into the holy bonds of matrimony, and this morning, at the Westminster Catholic Cathedral, will espouse Miss Kathleen Collins, daughter of Mrs. R. Gratz Collins, of Montreal. Besides being the popular musical conductor at Drury Lane, Mr. Glover is director of entertainments at the Kursaal, Bexhill-on-Sea, of which favourite resort he has served as Mayor and Municipal Councillor.

By Mr. Glover's special desire not a note of music is to be heard at the wedding or at the reception afterwards. Only four friends will accompany the couple to the cathedral, but a large number will be asked to meet the bride and bridegroom afterwards.

Miss Lena Ashwell was the central figure at a gathering in the grounds of the Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, on Saturday, when she inaugurated a crusade organised by the Women's Imperial Health Association of Great Britain, of the executive of which her husband, Dr. Simson, is a member. A feature of the crusade is the tour of the caravan "Aurora," from which lectures on health will be given. Miss Ashwell said she hoped that just as Florence Nightingale had revolutionised the nursing world, this new departure might revolutionise the condition of the children of England, so that they might grow up brave, strong, and happy, and that they might make the homes of England bright, the mothers wise, and their future children healthy and happy.

The funeral took place, at Wormley Church, Herts, on Saturday, of Mr. George Proctor Hawtrey, who died suddenly on the 17th inst. at the age of 64. In addition to the plays mentioned by us last week, he collaborated with Mr. A. Hjorvers, of Brecon, in writing a legitimate comic opera, entitled The Grenadier, which was nearly completed, and which it was intended to produce shortly after Christmas. The two gentlemen had just finished a comic opera, entitled Jokes.

Mr. Hawtrey was also the author of Caramella, and for some time stage-managed at His Majesty's Theatre, and some years back revived the Greek plays at Bradfield and Cheltenham. He was specially interested in pageants, and at the end of July managed the City Pageant at Chester, where he had a large number of friends. Last year he managed the National Pageant of Wales at Cardiff, and two years back that at Cheltenham.

Amongst those present at the funeral were Mrs. Hawtrey (widow), the Misses Hawtrey (daughters), Mr. and Mrs. E. Hawtrey, Mr. J. Hawtrey, Mr. G. Harcourt, Mrs. Gleig, Miss Proctor, Mrs. Hartopp Nash, Mrs. Fabian Brackenbury, the Misses Mabel, Mildred, and Gabrielle Hawtrey, Mr. and Mrs. Haldane Macfall, Mr. A. Hunt, J. N. Hunt, Mr. A. Hjorvers, Father Dunford, Mr. Christy, and Mr. E. L. Hewitt (Mayor of Chester, representing the citizens and the Pageant executive managers).

The large number of handsome floral tributes included those from his sorrowing wife (a wreath of roses, his favourite flowers), daughters, son, brothers, sisters, and other members of the family; "The Dilettanti" Theatrical Co., Mr. Frank Curzon, the Chester Pageant Committee, the Band of the Royal Marines of Portsmouth (which accompanied Mr. G. Hawtrey in his Pageants), Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wyld (Chester), E. Baring (Cheltenham), Capt. and Mrs. Durand.

The son of the deceased, Ralph (who is in the Treasury), being in America, and Mr. Charles Hawtrey, being abroad, could not be present. The obsequies were conducted by the Rev. Bernard Nash, of the Good Shepherd Mission, Birmingham, and a nephew of the deceased, assisted by the Rev. P. Wilson, vicar of the parish. The hymns sung were "King of love my Shepherd is" and "Abide with Me," Miss Perks presiding at the organ. The grave was choicely lined with foliage, evergreens, and white flowers.

Mr. Stanley Cooke is the latest actor-manager, and will inaugurate his new enterprise by the production at the Strand Theatre on Saturday, Sept. 10, of The Man from Mexico, a three-act farce by Mr. H. A. du Souchet, preceded by His Living Image, a little Dutch play written by himself, with music by Mr. Arthur Wood, in which Miss Amy Francis (Mrs. Stanley Cooke) will play the leading rôle. In the first-named piece Mr. Cooke will be supported by Mr. George Giddens, Mr. Cecil A. Collins, Mr. Harry Parker, Mr. Kinsey Peile, Mr. King Fordham, Mr. Eric Leighton, Mr. Eldrett Gulson, Mr. Arthur G. Leigh, Mr. Tom Tindall, Miss Ola Humphrey, Miss Jean Harkness, Miss Faith Celli, and Miss Gladys Archbutt. The first and third acts of The Man from Mexico take place in a New York drawing-room, and the second is laid in the Warden's Office at Blackwell's Island Gaol.

By the will of the late Captain Robert Marshall, he left personal estate valued at £22,259. The rights in thirteen of his plays are valued at only 6s. each, yet one week's royalty due by Mr. Charles Frohman for performances of His Excellency the Governor amounts to £13 18s. 9d.

Mr. Thomas Beecham's preparations for the season of grand opera that is to open at Covent Garden on Oct. 1 are steadily proceeding. The official list from which the operas will be selected is as follows:—Wagner: Tristan und Isolde, Die Meistersinger, Flying Dutchman, Tannhäuser, and Löhengrin. Strauss: Salome, Electra, Feuersnot, and Guntram. Mozart: Don Giovanni, The Magic Flute, Il Seraglio, and Le Nozze di Figaro. Verdi: Otello, Aida, and Falstaff. Puccini: Madame Butterfly and La Bohème. Gounod: Romeo and Juliet and Faust. Massenet: Werther and Manon. d'Albert: Tiefland (first performance). Beethoven: Fidelio. Tschaikowsky: Pique Dame. Dukas: Ariane et Barbe-Bleu. Leroux: Le Chemineau. Bizet: Carmen. Smetana: The Bartered Bride. Ambroise Thomas: Hamlet. Rossini: Il Barbière. Goring Thomas: Esmeralda. Delius: Koanga. Sullivan: Ivanhoe. Holbrooke: Dylan. Humperdinck: Hansel and Gretel. Clutsam: A Summer Night. Offenbach: Tales of Hoffmann. Berlioz: Les Troyens.

Most of these operas will be sung in English, including the Wagner Cycles in November and December. The three novelties announced for October are d'Albert's opera Tiefland, the story of which is to all intents the story that we saw unfolded when a few months ago the Sicilian players produced at the Shaftesbury Theatre their sensational play Feudalissmo; the opera, by Leroux called Le Chemineau, which is based on the sory of Ragged Robin; and Tschaikowsky's opera Pique Dame. The season will open with Tiefland. We shall also hear in October revivals of Hamlet, Fidelio, Don Giovanni, and The Magic Flute; while Elektra, Tristan und Isolde, Carmen, and Tales of Hoffmann will be sung during the same month.

The list of artists includes such singers of distinction as Frau Anna Bahr-Mildenburg (of the Imperial Opera, Vienna), Edyth Walker (of the Opera House, Hamburg), Ruth Vincent, Agnes Nicholls, Marguerita Sylva (of the Metropolitan Opera, New York), Perceval Allen, Mignon Nevada (of the Costanzi Opera, Rome), Gleeson White, Maggie Teyte, Margaret Lémon (of the Metropolitan Opera, New York), Beatrice La Palme, Fräulein Petzl (of the Opera House, Hamburg), Zélie de Lussan, Edna Thornton, Muriel Terry, Blanche Hamilton-Fox, Herr Forchhammer (of the Opera House, Frankfort), John Coates, Walter Hyde, Joseph O'Mara, Frederic Austin, Allen Hinckley (of the Metropolitan Opera, New York), Robert Radford, Clarence Whitehill (of the Metropolitan Opera, New York), Lewys James, Harry Dearth, and Murray Davey. The conductors, in addition to Thomas Beecham, are Percy Pitt, Alfred Hertz, L. Camilieri, and Cuthbert Hawley—names that speak for themselves.

With reference to Strauss's world-famed opera Salome, of which so much has been said and written, there is now little likelihood that the Censor will refuse to sanction its performance, so that we may, with confidence, look forward to hearing and witnessing Salome early in November. Also we are promised in November several other novelties, namely, the opera, by Dukas, called Ariane et Barbe-Bleu, which is practically the story of Blue Beard; a Delius opera; and towards the end of the month we shall see the first production in this country of a Wagner opera that is new to most music-lovers. Mr. Beecham has increased the number of members in his orchestra to nearly a hundred, and his choruses number 120.

The 200th performance of that highly-successful and extremely funny play Tantalising Tommy will take place at the Playhouse on Wednesday. One or two members of the company who have been taking a short rest have returned, and the piece is presented with the entire original cast, which includes Cyril Maude, Kenneth Douglas, Maidie Hope, Fred Lewis, John Beauchamp, John Harwood, and Marie Löhr.

Mr. Oscar Asche is on his way back from Australia, where he and Miss Lily Brayton have secured such social and artistic success. The clever pair and their company are travelling by the Orient liner Orsova, which is due at Plymouth on Friday next.

Mr. Robert Arthur has arranged to make the Coronet Theatre a house for the production of new plays, abandoning in consequence the ordinary suburban system, with its weekly change of bill. The new arrangement will commence on Wednesday, Sept. 7, when an original play, entitled Sister Anne, by the well-known novelist Madame Albanesi, will be produced and put on for a run, just as at an ordinary West End theatre. The scenery, which is rural, will be painted by Mr. W. T. Hemsley. The cast will include Miss Marion Terry, who will enact Sister Anne, Miss Ruth Bower, Miss Viva Birkett, Miss Amy Ravenscroft, and Miss Rosina Filippi. Mr. C. Aubrey Smith will play the leading male part, and others engaged are Mr. Norman Trevor, Mr. Frederic Sargent, Mr. Henry Kitts, and Mr. Arthur Cleave. Sister Anne will probably be followed by a romantic play called Don Q., adapted by K. and Hesketh Pritchard from their novel "Don Q.'s Love Story."

The British Empire Shakespeare Society's ninth annual report shows a record of work which calls for congratulation. Not only are the individual centres making headway—a short report from the New Zealand branch is included—but the whole organisation shows solid achievement in the Shakespearean cause. The work is being carried on, or being inaugurated, all over the empire, so that the society may claim to be the largest of its kind ever instituted.

Miss Kate Flinn will resume lessons for the autumn in the first week in September. Two of her pupils have been most successful, one (Miss Daphne Glenne) having been specially engaged to play Alice in The Dollar Princess in America by Mr. Frohman, and the other (Miss Mabel Hope) having been re-engaged to enact Natalie in The Merry Widow in one of Mr. George Edwardes's provincial companies. Both are fine sopranos, and ought to do well, having had the advantage of Miss Flinn's excellent teaching.

Mr. Norman V. Norman has arranged with Mr. R. C. Carton to revive the latter's brilliant play, Lord and Lady Algy. Remembering the wonderfully successful run that the play had in London and the country, the revival, after a somewhat long rest, should be highly successful. Miss Beatrice Wilson will play Lady Algy, and Mr. Norman himself Lord Algy. Special scenery will be built for the production, and new dresses designed.

Mr. Alfred Hemming has been presented by the Committee of the Liverpool Theatrical Gala with a handsome "founder's" jewel to commemorate the coming of age of that movement. Twenty-one years ago Mr. Hemming, in conjunction with the late Mr. Albert Smith, a commission agent, founded the gala, which, during its existence, raised over £16,000, which yearly was distributed among local medical charities and charities connected with the theatrical profession.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's assumption of the management of the Theatre Royal, Wolverhampton, has naturally necessitated several alterations in the staff, and amongst those who have said "good-bye" are Mr. Fred Ball, the resident-manager, and Mr. Bradshaw, who has occupied the position of conductor at the Empire Palace and this theatre respectively for a period of nearly twelve years. Their many friends, however, were determined that they should not leave without something to remind them of the high esteem in which they were held, and on Saturday last Mr. Ball, who during his comparatively short stay in the town has made himself extremely popular by his unfailing courtesy to everyone before and behind the curtain, was the recipient of a handsome gold chain, whilst Mr. Bradshaw was presented with a purse of gold and case of pipes.

Mr. Hugh Fleming has completed a special engagement as advance-manager with Mr. Walter Maxwell's Mr. Preedy and the Countess company, and has joined Mr. George Dance's Whip company in the same capacity.

The Amalgamated Musicians' Union will hold their usual series of concerts at the Queen's Hall this year, commencing on Sept. 4, when Mr. Coleridge-Taylor will conduct his "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast" with the British Symphony Orchestra and choir. Many well-known artists have been engaged.

Mr. H. Marsh Allen, who is now playing Mr. Hawtrey's part in The Naked Truth at Wyndham's Theatre, won his first race at Hurst Park last week with the four-year-old colt Andrew Smith. Mr. Allen's racing colours are blue and orange cap. Andrew Smith came out two furlongs from home and won in nice style by two lengths. He was bought in for 220 guineas.

Mr. Johnny Osborne, after a successful experience in many musical comedies in England, has gone to America for Mr. Chas. Frohman. Mr. Osborne has already travelled a great deal, having been to India and the Far East.

Patrons of the Royalty Theatre, Chester, will to-day (Saturday) present Mr. C. B. Fountaine with a handsome diamond ring as a token of their esteem, on the occasion of his vacating the position of business-manager at the Royalty Theatre, During the past five years Mr. Fountaine has endeared himself to residents of all ranks and conditions in the old city, and his departure will be keenly regretted by his many friends. He leaves for the Theatre Royal, Huddersfield, where he will remain as business-manager until Christmas, and afterwards take up his duties in the same capacity at Messrs. Bode and Compton's Opera House, Northampton.

"The Merry Widow" is visiting Southport this week, and the popularity of the piece has not in the least abated. Mr. Percy Hutchison has secured Mr. George Edwardes' renowned company, including Mr. Lionel Victor, Mr. Basil S. Foster, and Miss Louie Pounds. Record business is being done, hundreds travelling from Patricroft, Oldham, Hollinwood, and Middleton, Kirkham, and Bolton to see this superb production.

The Crystal Palace Theatre will once more be opened for the autumn season on Sept. 26 under the able management of Mr. J. Bannister Howard, and Mr. J. E. Sharpe will resume his duties as resident-manager. The opening attraction will be D'Oyly Carte's Opera Company, which will present some of its best and most popular selections.

The cast of Miss Evelyn Millard's new production, The Crisis, which had a trial performance at the Pier Pavilion, Hastings, on Monday includes Miss Evelyn Millard, Miss Sarah Brooke, Miss E. Martheze, Mr. Lennox Pawle, Mr. Athol Stewart, Mr. Douglas Imbert, and Mr. Norman McKinnel.

Miss Hettie Gale, a native of Plymouth, won first prize at the beauty show held at New Brighton, Cheshire, on Saturday out of 500 competitors. The first prize consisted of a purse of gold, silver fruit and flower stand, gold pendant, and "the cake." Miss Gale has taken part in pantomimes at the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, and at Devonport, and is now appearing in Lucky 'Liza. She has also been engaged to play a leading rôle in The Right Mr. Wrong.

Miss Celestine Bertram, who is at present playing in Mr. Frank Bertram's Sailor's Wedding company, will shortly bring out a book entitled "Dainty Dinners for Delayed Diners." It contains a series of dishes which can be ordered and not spoilt by "missing the connection and arriving two hours late," and also the recipes and modes of cooking hasty dishes of trifles so that if one has not settled rooms one can have a little more comfort than the usual "nothing in the house but eggs and cold meat" which so often greets one.

That clever and versatile actor Mr. Howard Brenan is playing Mr. Tompson in The Woman in the Case, and the reception given to him at the Lyceum Theatre, Ipswich, has been particularly gratifying. The local Press are profuse in their praises, one of them stating that Mr. Brenan's performance was one of the finest that has been seen on the Lyceum stage for many a long day.

Mr. J. A. Campbell's production From Convent to Throne added yet one more to its many triumphs last week at Swansea. Business rose nightly. It is not too much to say that the production was the admiration of Swansea, the local Press being loud in their praises. On Saturday to a packed house Mr. Coutts publicly thanked the company, his audience, and Mr. Campbell.

Miss Annie Hughes has recently secured the provincial rights of The Mobswoman, by Leon M. Lion and W. Strange Hall, which was seen at the Playhouse in front of A Sense of Humour last year. Starting on Monday next at Lincoln, she is presenting it on her autumn tour of Miss Tommy, with Miss Winifred Pearson in the title-rôle.

Mr. Pelissier has postponed the production of the Follies' programme at the Apollo to Tuesday next, owing to the redecorating work not having been completed as early as he expected.

Mr. Robert R. Ashby has relinquished his engagement with Messrs. Alban and Bernard Limpus' Thief company, after a most comfortable nine months tour.

Papers to hand by last week's mail from South Africa are high in their praises of Miss Nettie Wheeler on the occasion of her twentieth birthday. Miss Wheeler began her theatrical career in infancy, being carried on the stage while still in short clothes. She was born at Pietermaritzburg, in Natal, just twenty years ago. At ten years old she played a small part in Zaza, with Miss Mona K. Oram. At twelve she enacted Cissy Denver in The Silver King. With a previous Wheeler-Edwards Gaiety company she was in the chorus; unfortunately she was taken ill, and took a trip to England to recuperate. On recovering, she returned to the land of her birth, and toured with the Wheeler Juvenile company, playing leading parts, her favourite rôle being Lord Clanside in In Town, in which she made her first real success. With the present Gaiety company she again started in the chorus, but soon rose through the small parts, from Fifi in A Waltz Dream and Phyllis in Dorothy, to O Mimosa San in the Geisha. Miss Wheeler is anxious to get to England and make a start here.

The leading character of the Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary at Terry's does not require to be resplendent in rich dresses, but several of the ladies who adorn the stage are seen in striking costumes. One elaborate frock worn by Miss Westner is of a peculiar shade of pink, with a note of copper in it, and it is trimmed with chiffon of the same colour. The corsage is almost entirely composed of folds of chiffon drawn into a deep band embroidered in white and steel beads, pearls, sequins, and silk. A long tunic of chiffon almost covers the skirt, except where it opens at the right side, and at the bottom is introduced handsome motifs of the embroidery. At the back the corsage is arranged in the same way as in front, and from the waist fall two long tails of the chiffon finished with heavy gold tassels. An enormous black velvet hat, trimmed with two long feathers, makes a charming contrast to the gay colouring of the dress.

Miss Westner's second costume is quite simple, being made of dark blue serge. The skirt is arranged in pleats kept in place by three bands of plain cloth; and the plain jacket is braided with black, and is fitted with two pockets put in diagonally at the hips. The hat worn with this dress is of black straw trimmed with velvet, the latter arranged in a plain band and a large flat bow.

Simplicity is also the note of a dress of white satin worn by Miss Cusick. The corsage is decorated with a large motif, worked in silver sequins and bead embroidery, which practically forms the band. Folds of white chiffon drawn over the shoulders give a very soft and pretty finish to the corsage, and the tiny sleeves are also of white chiffon drawn and finished with a ruche of the same material.

A striking contrast is furnished by the pastel pink cloth costume which Miss Cusick wears in another act. The skirt is arranged at the back in two box pleats, while in front the material has the appearance of being cut in pointed pieces fitted into one another and fastened here and there with satin buttons. A chiffon blouse is worn over a white lace slip and is finished with a collar band of gold net. Over this dress is worn a very long coat of pink cloth wonderfully braided in silk. In front there are long lappels shaped in scollops, and these cross over and are fastened invisibly beneath the side pieces. A deep cape collar, heavily braided, is worn on the shoulders, and a large cloth-covered buckle holding straps of cloth marks the waist at the back. A particularly novel note is given to the coat by the arrangement of pleats at the back. These fall almost to the bottom of the coat in long sash-like tails, which are heavily embroidered at the ends. A black straw hat trimmed with a feather and large pale pink roses finishes the costume fittingly.

Mr. W. V. Garrod's new play, produced last week at Fleetwood, met with such an enthusiastic reception that he is organising a special company to tour with it early in 1911. Billed for Thursday and Friday nights, it was deemed advisable to play the new piece on Saturday, and a big house proved the wisdom of the change. A large plant of new pictorials will be put in hand at once, and a newly-painted production, furniture, &c., will be carried. The title, Atonement, having been already used, another will be chosen.

The Committee of Management of the London College of Music, in order to encourage students possessing ability and special talent in music, and to provide for their systematic training over a given period, now offer for public competition nine open scholarships, giving free tuition, suitable for a professional student, for two years at the College. These scholarships are available for persons residing in any part of the United Kingdom, being entirely free and open, and are without any restriction or reserve in regard to age or sex (except the singing scholarships, in which the voice is specified).

The nine scholarships will consist of four for singing, one for pianoforte playing, one for violin playing, one for viola playing, one for violoncello playing, and one for organ playing, as follows:—The Schubert Scholarship for singing (female voices), the Rossini Scholarship for singing (male voices), the Sullivan Scholarship for singing (especially for dramatic singing and opera—male or female voices), the Gounod Scholarship for singing (male or female voices), the Beethoven Scholarship for pianoforte playing, the Spöhr Scholarship for violin playing, the Berlioz Scholarship for viola playing, the Romberg Scholarship for violoncello playing, and the Bach Scholarship for organ playing.

Candidates must perform one solo of their own choice, and also be prepared to play (or vocal candidates to sing), if required, a study; also scales or arpeggios. All candidates must be prepared to read at sight, likewise to answer general questions on the rudiments of music should the board of examiners so desire. The competition will take place at the College on or about Sept. 9, 1910.

George Paston's new piece Nobody's Daughter, which Mr. Frank Curzon and Mr. Gerald du Maurier will produce at Wyndham's next Saturday, is a serious play, propounding a novel system of philosophy involving certain feminist theories. The scenery will be ultra-realistic.

The cast of Nobody's Daughter includes Mr. Gerald du Maurier, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Mr. Sydney Valentine, Miss Henrietta Watson, Mr. Ronald Squire, Miss Rosalie Toller, Miss Mary Rorke, Miss Dorothy Bell, Mr. Leon Quartermaine, Mr. Marsh Allen, and Miss Mary Leslie.

Messrs Frank Curzon and Gerald du Maurier will produce at Wyndham's Theatre, after the run there of Nobody's Daughter, a costume play written by Mr. Leon M. Lion, and a popular actor. The period is that of Queen Anne, and amongst the characters are those of Marlborough and Bolingbroke.

Mr. Howard L. Tracy, owing to serious indisposition, was reluctantly compelled to relinquish his part of Frank Perry in Are You a Mason? (which he has sustained for over a thousand performances) on Tuesday of last week at Dundee to Mr. Andrew Buck, who successfully played the arduous rôle at very short notice. Mr. Tracy, though still under the doctor, pluckily resumed the rôle at the Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh, on Monday night.

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison conclude their annual four weeks' season at the West Pier, Brighton, this evening, having beaten all previous records with the four London successes presented, namely: Smith, Don, Lady Frederick, and Brewster's Millions, in which Mr. Percy Hutchison appeared, and received a great ovation. The official enumeration of the numbers paying for admission (covering the four weeks' season) totalled just over 43,000 people, Brewster's Millions alone accounting for 13,000. The beautiful staging and dressing of the plays received eulogistic comment both from the huge audiences and the Brighton Press. Mr. Hutchison, under whose personal supervision and control all the plays are produced, is to be sincerely congratulated on the unbounded success which has rewarded his efforts.

Mr. Alexander Marsh will shortly add to his extensive répertoire of thirty-five plays, a production of Much Ado About Nothing, Twelfth Night, and The Three Musketeers. Mr. Marsh's tour in South Wales and the West of England has proved a great success, and his reception at the Opera House, Leicester, last week was extremely favourable. Mr. Frederick Mouillot, who controls the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, Opera House, Cork, Grand Theatre, Southampton, Theatre Royal, Bournemouth, was so impressed by Mr. Marsh's production of Othello at the Star Theatre, Swansea, recently, that he has arranged with Mr. Marsh to visit the theatres mentioned next year.

In Mr. Lewis Waller's production, at Birmingham on Monday, of Messrs. Henry Hamilton and Rafael Sabatini's romantic play Bardelys the Magnificent Mr. Waller will be supported by Mr. William Haviland, Mr. Herbert Jarman, Mr. Alec F. Thompson, Mrs. Tapping, Miss Dorothy Dix, and Miss Madge Titheradge.

Miss Lucy Beaumont has made a genuine success as Mrs. Wiggs in Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, which has crowded the Kennington Theatre nightly this week, money being turned away on several occasions. Miss Beaumont has been the object of much enthusiasm, receiving three "star" calls at the end of each performance.

The Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company will visit the Kennington Theatre next week for the first time for many years. On Monday will be produced, for the first time in London, The Queen of Sheba, which will be repeated at Thursday's matinée. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings will be devoted to Tannhäuser, Carmen, and Il Trovatore, and Friday will be made the occasion of another first production, namely, Verdi's La Forza del Destino

Mr. Sidney Cooper, of the Lyceum Theatre, Newport, who was nominated by the Conservative party, was elected as Town Councillor on Tuesday last, his majority being the largest ever known in the Caerau Ward, which Mr. Cooper now represents. This is an achievement which testifies to Mr. Cooper's popularity, especially in view of the fact that he was only prevailed upon to contest the ward on the 13th inst.—seven days after his opponent had started canvassing.

A summons for assault taken out by Harry O'Callaghan, musical director at the New Pavilion, Lodge-lane, against William George Evans, the drummer in the orchestra, was recently heard before Messrs. J. Kellit and H. G. Crosfield, at the Liverpool Police Court. On the 8th inst. defendant threatened the complainant, and on the 12th he committed a very violent assault upon him in the band-room without any provocation whatever, O'Callaghan's nose, eye, and lip being damaged. The Chairman (Mr. Kellit) said the Bench considered an assault had been committed, and defendant would have to pay a fine of 20s. and costs.

A table of returns for Paris theatres during the last sixty years, just published, shows that the total takings for 1909 reached the highest amount on record, namely, over £2,056,000, or more than sixteen times the total for 1850. Authors' net royalties increased proportionately, and in the year mentioned amounted in the aggregate to £240,000.

Mr. H. Chiswell-Billing, who terminates this week a special engagement as business-manager with Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison's Smith North company, immediately commences his duties as advance representative to Mr. Herbert Trench's The Blue Bird tour, which opens at the Grand Theatre, Leeds, on Sept. 5. It will be one of the largest companies ever sent into the provinces. Altogether there will be about ninety performers, and with staff and special orchestra a total of at least 120 people will be travelled.

The benefit matinée for Mrs. Ernest Carpenter, to be held (by kind permission of Messrs. Melville) at the Lyceum Theatre, is now definitely fixed for Tuesday, Oct. 4, when a programme of a most remarkable strength will be presented.

Mr. Charles Vane, who has recently returned to England, after an absence of some years, has been engaged by Miss Ethel Irving for her forthcoming tour of Dame Nature.

Mlle. Cora Katti-Lanner, having returned from Mr. F. R. Benson's Shakespearean Festival at Stratford-on-Avon, resumes her lessons in dancing and elocution on Sept. 1 at her academy, 40, North Side, Clapham Common, S.W.

Miss Violet Vivian, of Mr. Ben Greet's company, is about to marry Mr. C. R. Hopkins, a native of Philadelphia. Though very wealthy, Mr. Hopkins became enamoured of the boards, and on leaving Yale two years since became a member of Mr. John Drew's Jack Straw company.

The friends of Miss Frances Wolviston (Mrs. Arthur Leigh) will be sorry to learn that her little Chinese dog Yum-Yum died suddenly last Saturday of heart failure. Yum-Yum had been Miss Wolviston's constant companion for over eight years, and was well known to many members of the profession.

At the Theatre Royal, Yarmouth, on the 13th inst., the part of Kathie, in Old Heidelberg, was taken up at a few hours' notice by Miss Florence Preddy.

"The Chocolate Soldier," which is to be produced by Mr. Alex. Henderson at the Lyric Theatre on the 10th of next month, is not an American production, and the entire company will be composed of English artists. The cast is now complete, and includes Miss Constance Drever, Miss Amy Augarde, Miss Elsie Spain, Mr. Roland Cunningham, Mr. Lemprière Pringle, Mr. Tom Shale, and Mr. C. H. Workman. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr. J. Heuval.

The 100th performance of Mr Robert Arthur's Robertson revivals at the Coronet will be reached on Thursday, when the sunny idyll School will be staged. The cast will include Mr. James Carew, Mr. O. B. Clarence, Mr. Fred Permain, Mr. Frederic Sargent, Miss Rosie Begarnie, and Miss Viva Birkett. Only a limited number of performances can be given, as the theatre will be wanted for Mr. Arthur's first autumn production.

Mr. A. C. Hardie undertook the part of Lord Beverley in The Whip at Drury Lane from the 10th inst., when Mr. Bucklaw left England, till the 19th.

An exhibition is to be held in the Whitechapel Art Gallery in October and November next with the object of interesting Londoners, and particularly those at the East End, in Shakespeare and his connection with the metropolis. The Shakespeare Memorial Committee, acting in conjunction with the directors of the Whitechapel Art Gallery, are gathering together a remarkable collection of Shakespeare relics, together with prints, costumes, and other objects illustrative of the growth and development of the drama and the theatre from Elizabethan times down to the present day. Amongst the most interesting of the exhibits will be miniatures of stages and stage settings as they appeared in different theatrical eras, together with the costumes worn by actors and actresses at the various periods.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The Era last week, writes our Parisian correspondent, related one of the recent exploits of our great national farceur, Tristan Bernard. But this gentleman is not the only practical joker in the French Republic. There is Dumoulin, the actor, and the trick he served his friend Mirande, the well-known draughtsman, is worth relating. Dumoulin, Mirande, and a young painter started off one morning to spend a pleasant day in the country. Dumoulin, the head of the party, took the tickets and selected a compartment where they were likely to remain undisturbed. Suddenly Dumoulin started investigating his pockets, and cried: "I've lost one of the tickets. I can only find two!" For a while the three travellers looked at one another in silence, and then Dumoulin exclaimed: "We'll soon arrange that. Mirande, who is a little chap, can hide below the seat, and when the ticket collector comes he'll not notice anything." It was a fair proposal, and Mirande squeezed himself in the best way he could. After a while, however, he began to lament. "Can't I get out?" he cried in a smothered voice, "it's so infernally hot and dirty here!" "Keep still, old chap," cried his companions, "the collector will be here in a minute." After a while the door of the compartment opened, and the dreaded collector made his appearance. "All tickets, please!" "Here they are!" "But, why do you two gentlemen travel with three tickets?" "No, sir, if you will kindly look underneath the seat you'll find the third traveller!"

A White Elephant.

Mr. Charles Barrett, of The Brass Bottle company, writes:—"On Tuesday last I attended the first house of the King's Theatre, Southsea, and found the place full to overflowing. I remarked to one of the attendants, 'The King's seems to be doing very good business now. It used to be a white elephant, didn't it?' Her answer was, 'Oh, no, sir; it has always been the King's Theatre.'"

"The Touch of a Child."

Mr. William Mollison, the celebrated Shakespearian actor and manager, sends the following verses:—

Hatred, passionate vengeance,
Brooding from day to day.
Seeking the cure'd assassin,
Vowing to make him pay.
Searching the world all over,
Every corner in vain.
God! will you ever give me
Solace to ease my pain?
God—my God, I thank thee,
Vengeance, at last, is mine.
But—ah!—what's that—that whisper?
"Vengeance is mine, not Thine."
Oh! God, don't stay my purpose,
'Tis justice, not vengeance wild;
And God in His wisdom stayed me,
But with the touch of a child.

A Born Mimic.

Miss Marie Dainton, who is touring with The Mountaineers, says she was "born a mimic."

Hours of Practice.

"I never present an imitation of any sort in public," she says, "till I feel positive that I can give it 'to the life.' I frequently spend hours before the looking-glass, endeavouring to get just the right expression and gesture of the subject I happen to be studying at the time. This lengthy practice is, I think, quite indispensable if you wish to be free from nervousness when you give a fresh imitation for the first time in public, for you know you positively can't feel humorous when you're nervous.

"As you may imagine, a mimic has many opportunities of having fun at other people's expense. I had a most amusing experience a year or two ago. I received at the stage door one evening a letter from a lady, in which she begged me very hard to grant her an interview, as there was a very great service I could do her. There was something so straightforward and touching in the way the request was made that I replied, asking her to call upon me at my flat the following afternoon.

"In due course she arrived, and confided to me across the tea-table that she had a very jealous husband, whom she wanted to teach a lesson. Her plan as to how this should be accomplished was so delightful that I fell in with it in a moment, just for the fun of the thing, and we there and then set about carrying it out.

A Surprise.

"A few days later Mr. P., as we will call him, arrived home one evening to find, much to his annoyance, a telegram from his wife stating that she would not be back till late, as she was spending the evening with her mother, who was not very well. Internally cursing all mothers-in-law and filled with doubt as to whether his wife was really there, Mr. P. was just on the point of going out to the club before going on to fetch her, when a very old family friend drove up, who announced that he had a box at the Pavilion, and asked Mr. P. to go.

His Wife's Voice.

"After dinner at the Trocadero the two men got to the Pavilion while I was on the stage, and they were still busily discussing my imitations after I had retired, when, to Mr. P.'s surprise, he heard his wife's voice in the next box. Apparently, she was in earnest conversation with a man who was speaking in a low, gruff voice. None of his words could be heard, but poor Mr. P. caught much of what his wife said. 'How simply ripping,' 'Bernard must not know,' 'Come on Friday afternoon, he won't be home till six,' and similar fragments drifted through the partition to him, till he was nearly beside himself. At length, hearing an expression of which his wife was very fond, and feeling all doubts thus set at rest, he rushed out of his box and burst violently into the next one, to find—your humble servant, who received him with a look of most utter surprise at such an intrusion!

That Poor Man's Face.

"I shall never forget that poor man's face. I think he guessed at once that a trick had been played upon him, for he went off without a word to his companion, and as I had a very happy letter from his wife shortly afterwards, in which she said they were on a 'honeymoon tour' on the Continent, I gathered that he had benefited by his lesson in faith."

Concentrated Lighting.

As for lighting, says Mr. Herbert Trench in an article on "Shakespeare and Modern Staging" in the Saturday Review, no attempt should be made to avail ourselves of the full physical capacity of a stage—or to make, say, the platform of the Garrick Theatre correspond in miniature with a brightly-lighted Trafalgar-square. The principle to be adopted should rather be that of the vignette. Light should not be shed abroad in an even steady glare, but concentrated only on that fragment of the stage where the passions are most intensely focussed—say, at the foot of the pillar where the two chief actors are talking. There only let the scenery become significant and telling, and at the edges be haloed away into obscurity, like an impressionist picture. At the focus of passion only should be high light. The faces of the actors should be intensely visible (for dimness of actors' faces merely irritates, like an indistinctness of speech). Garrick used to hang four lamps above his principal actor, and the principle is just. By a finely-graded concentration alone you can get the suggestion of sublimity and vastness outside the lighted ring.

"THE REJUVENATION OF AUNT MARY."

Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, by Anne Warner, Played for the First Time in England at Terry's Theatre on Monday, Aug. 22.

"God meant us all to be happy, only some of us don't just know how to do it—that's all." This is the keynote struck sharp and clear by Aunt Mary herself in the "tag" of the farcical comedy The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary, by Anne Warner, which has already been successful in America, and was presented by Mr. L. S. Sire at Terry's Theatre on Monday. Aunt Mary has a tremendous capacity for enjoyment of life—rollicking life, the life of the city, of crowds, of noise, light, and movement. Nevertheless, her existence has been passed in the quietest of quiet country homes. She is completely unaware that her discontent, her outbreaks of temper, the general crabbiness which overlays her genuine "heart of gold" are the results of an insufficient outlet for her superabundant vitality. Aunt Mary's capacity for loving is also very large, and there is a hint of an unconsummated love story in the past life of the old maid: "He never came back, my dear." For her delightful but somewhat graceless nephew, Jack, whom she has brought up, she keeps the warmest corner in her affections; the rest she expends on her cat, Ruth, and any poor battered thing that comes her way. Jack gets into scrapes many and varied. Aunt Mary storms, scolds, forgives, and pays up, until Jack is threatened with a breach of promise, when Aunt Mary becomes adamant. Jack is disowned, disinherited. He goes to New York, where he is taken in by a friend, Bob Burnett, with whose pretty sister Betty he falls very much in love.

For three weeks Aunt Mary holds out, then a decoy letter from one of Jack's chums brings her hot foot to New York, in the belief that her darling is "sick." She forgives the deception in her joy at the reunion, and Betty and the "boys" proceed to give her a "real good time." It is during this process that Aunt Mary becomes rejuvenated. On Betty and the boys she lavishes the surplus affection which had so long lacked a vent, and her excess of energy is expended on the pleasures of city life—motoring, theatres, dinners, and so on. It is a very different Aunt Mary who returns to her quiet home in New England at the end of three weeks' "racket" in New York. She has discovered that her temperament is not suited to the monotony of existence in a village. As she says, "she is not strong enough to live in the country," so she marries her hired man to her body-slave, Lucinda; gives them her house as a wedding present, and returns to her beloved city and to the more congenial society which she finds there.

As will be seen from the foregoing description, the plot is of the slightest; it serves merely as a background to throw up the vivid personality of a very delightful American actress, new to these shores, Miss May Robson. An American comedienne possesses in a superlative degree the art of swift transition "from grave to gay, from lively to severe." To verify this we have only to call to mind the prevailing features of the acting of Miss Rose Stahl, Miss Grace George, and Mrs. Madge Carr Cook. This art—we use the word with full sense of its significance—is even more obvious, though perhaps a little less subtle, in the case of Miss May Robson, who, though she was born of English parents in Australia, and educated in England, France, and Belgium, has all the characteristics of the American school. As she is dashing a flood of quick, angry words at some unfortunate offender, a sudden smile will flash over her features, transforming her in a second from a virago to a saint with a sense of humour; or the gladness will be struck from it with lightning-like effect by a few bars of haunting melody, instantaneously replacing sparkle and brilliancy by a wistfulness, a sadness which catches at one's throat. Miss Robson has the delicate touch of the true comedienne. The play is styled "farcical," but never for a moment does she descend to farce, her acting alone lifting the piece to the level of comedy. In appearance Miss Robson is plump and pleasing, with a face bubbling with fun and good temper. That she is a great favourite in her own country was evident from the enthusiastic greetings of her fellow-countrymen and countrywomen who formed a large proportion of the audience at Terry's, and who were no doubt responsible for many of the beautiful bouquets and baskets of flowers with which she was presented.

Miss Robson was supported by a loyal little company, who led up to her effects in a most natural and admirable manner. Foremost among them was Mr. Jack Storey, who made the scapegrace nephew a wholly lovable young man, and contributed a very pleasant and easy performance, whether wheedling Aunt Mary, making love to pretty Betty, singing love-songs in a fine baritone, or bully-ragging the long-suffering Lucinda. Miss Faye Cusick as the pretty Betty aforesaid had not much to do beyond looking charming and being very sweet, both of which she achieved without the least effort. Her one small outburst was well enough done to lead us to believe that she would be successful in a more exacting part. As Lucinda, the devoted and much-tried maid of Aunt Mary, Miss Nina Saville deserves high praise. Never once did the sour face relax or the rasping voice soften until in the last act Aunt Mary bestowed on Lucinda the house and the hand of Joshua, the hired man, when the bashful smile which crept over the maid's grim visage as she lays her head on his shoulder and blushingly murmured her willingness to take him was irresistible. Mr. Arthur Deering was bright and breezy as Robert Burnett; Mr. Paul Decker was very good as another of Jack's chums, Mitchell, "he with the wicked eye," who engages Aunt Mary in a desperate flirtation; and Mr. John McMahon as Clover, the fourth member of the quartette of friends, fitted well into the picture. Mr. C. C. Gwynne as Joshua and Mr. George F. Hall as James, the Burnetts' butler, gave interesting little sketches of types of American servants, and Mr. Lester Wallace was an alert and business-like lawyer. As the Girl from Kalamazoo, who threatens to wreck Jack's happiness, Miss Lillian Westner contrived with much cleverness to give a suggestion of underlying pathos to what is primarily an unsympathetic part. Miss Lotta Blake was good as one of the poor battered creatures befriended by Aunt Mary, and Miss Rose Fantuz was satisfactory as Betty's maid.

"The Law of Musical Copyright." By Albert A. Strong, LL.B., Lond. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d. Address: The Publisher, "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

THE ENCOURAGEMENT OF ACTORS AND ACTRESSES.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. H. B. BRANDRETH.

Mr. H. B. Brandreth, the acting-manager at Mr. Robert Arthur's Kennington Theatre, has been talking to a representative of The Era regarding the fifteen weeks' répertoire dramatic season which has been run there with such pronounced success during the present summer.

Asked if the season had been the means of bringing under the notice of the American and West End managers any promising artists, Mr. Brandreth said: "We hear a great deal from American managers and others who say there are few good English actors and actresses, and that the latter have got the price up to such a high standard that they cannot be engaged for America. Well, in regard to this I can only say that Mr. Robert Arthur has been running a stock season here for fifteen weeks, and during that time not a single manager of a West End theatre or a representative of an American syndicate has come into this place to see what sort of talent has been engaged in Mr. Arthur's productions. It certainly seems absurd to complain of the dearth of fresh talent when those responsible for the management of theatrical enterprises will not take the trouble to come and see the work of such an excellent company as that which Mr. Robert Arthur has had during the past season. Kennington Theatre is only an eight minutes' taxi-cab ride from the West End, and I should have thought that if anybody had been on the look-out for new artists they might have come across and seen what we had here. Theatrical managers are certainly not showing the same enterprise in this direction as music-hall agents. They go everywhere, and unearth good turns wherever they are to be found. That makes the music hall profession a very live thing indeed, and probably accounts for the way in which business is booming in that line."

"When the actor goes to a manager for an engagement," continued Mr. Brandreth, "he finds, as often as not, that the manager is not at all aware of what the actor's special qualities are. Consequently the manager says, 'Can you act? What are you doing? I should like to see you act.' The actor perforce has to answer him and say that he has been getting engagements for forty weeks or more per annum, and that he has been doing good work on the road, whilst he (the manager) has been sublimely unconscious of his existence, and he probably thinks to himself, 'If I were in a position for you to see me act I should probably not be applying for an engagement.' The company Mr. Robert Arthur engaged for the Kennington Theatre contained many excellent artists. I might mention Miss Jessie Winter, Miss Winifred White, Miss Nellie Burdette, Mr. Walter Gay, Mr. Fred Morgan, Mr. Maitland Marler, and Mr. George Cockburn, amongst others, whose performances are certainly worthy of being seen by any West End manager or American agent."

"Anyway," concluded Mr. Brandreth, "the proof of the pudding is in the eating, and Mr. Robert Arthur has had a record season."

PROMENADE CONCERTS.

At the concert at Queen's Hall on Thursday evening, Aug. 18, the first novelty of the present season was Mr. Easthope Martin's two Eastern dances. "Egyptian Bell Dance" is the title of the first, and "Snake Dance" the second. In both the young composer has written light and pleasing music for the orchestra of an appropriate Eastern character. The dances made a good impression, and the audience gave Mr. Martin a very cordial reception. In Grieg's Pianoforte Concerto in A minor Mr. Vernon Warner, the soloist, displayed considerable technical ability, and was warmly applauded. Miss Eleanor Felix and Mr. Thorpe Bates were the vocalists, and the orchestra gave excellent performances of Mozart's overture, The Magic Flute, Järnefelt's "Præludium," suite, "The Wand of Youth," No. 1 (Elgar), and the same composer's march, "Pomp and Circumstance," No. 4.

Saturday, Aug. 20, was a popular night at the Promenade Concerts, and a very large audience heartily applauded Mr. Wood's orchestra in a remarkably fine interpretation of Weber's Oberon overture and Grieg's "Peer Gynt" suite; admirable also was their playing of Tschaikowsky's "Capriccio Italien"; symphonic poem, "Finlandia" (Sibelius); and Sullivan's "Ouvertura di Ballo." Miss Auriol Jones was heard in a brilliant performance of Saint-Saëns's pianoforte fantasia "Africa"; while Mr. John Bardsley greatly pleased the audience by his able singing of "Oh! where has fled," from Tschaikowsky's opera Eugene Onegin. Miss Caroline Hatchard sang "Ah! fors' è lui," from La Traviata, neatly, but with hardly the emotional fervour such music requires. Saint-Saëns's "Le Déluge," and the Intermezzo from Mascagni's Cavalleria Rusticana, were also included in the programme.

Catalini was once invited to meet Goethe at a dinner party and was taken in to dinner by him. The famous cantatrice knew nothing about the poet except that he had written The Sorrows of Werther, and she at once proceeded to make herself agreeable to him. "My compliments upon your Werther; it is perfectly adorable," she said, "I never laughed so much in all my life." "Laughed!" gasped Goethe; "laughed at my Werther?" "Yes, indeed," replied the fair Angelica, "in fact, I roared. It was quite too funny for anything." The poet felt as though one of them was demented, but a neighbour finally came to the rescue, and putting some leading questions to the diva discovered that it was a parody of Werther that she had witnessed in a Parisian theatre.

"A BEDOUIN BEAUTY."

A New Romantic Light Opera, in Two Acts, by Talbot Hughes, Composed by Frederick Rosse and Raymond King, Produced for the First Time at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, on Monday, Aug. 22.

Hassan	Mr. Josef Klause
Marabut	Mr. Harry Hardy
Fatma	Miss Maie Hoey
Naila	Miss Nita Alexander
Aisha	Miss Marjorie Maxwell

(from our own correspondent.)

In this new light opera, the romantic story of a beautiful Bedouin woman is told with much originality and force; and although fun and merriment are liberally provided, there are moments of dramatic interest and intensity which grip the audience. Light, bright, and pleasing music has been cleverly arranged, but it is in the melody and sentiment of the love lyrics and in the more serious parts of the work that the composers have been particularly successful.

In Algeria is the beautiful Arab town of El-Kantara, where lives the prosperous Caid, Sidi ben Hamid. On the roof of his house lie, in indolent ease, his fourteen wives, and by a hidden chorus of male voices they are awakened from their noonday sleep to greet their lord and master. Sidi reminds them it is the anniversary of his birthday, and, according to his custom, he intends to celebrate the occasion by adding another wife to his already fine collection. But the demand for wives is greater than the supply, and the country has been searched in vain by Abdullah, the Secretary, for a suitable wife number fifteen. Chance, however, comes to the rescue, for a French family, consisting of the Comte de Lys, a savant and author, the Comtesse de Lys, and their beautiful daughter Denise, is staying in El-Kantara. Now, Denise is betrothed to a French officer, Henri de L'Orme; but the suspicious Comtesse has doubts of Henri's fidelity, and Denise, acting on a sudden impulse, quietly and secretly assumes the dress of an Arab girl in order to keep a watch on her lover. While dressed in this garb she is carried off by Abdullah to the house of Sidi as the required and suitable addition to the harem. Denise refuses to speak, and before she realises what has taken place, a few muttered words of a priest have made Denise the legal wife of Sidi. But hidden away in an alcove is a beautiful Arab girl, Aisha, the chief dancer of the Ouled Nail tribe of Bedouins. Denise, now fully understanding the dilemma into which she has been whirled, appeals for help to Aisha, the dancing girl. Denise implores her to find a means of escape, for she is already betrothed to a French officer in the Fifth Regiment of Spahis. Aisha lends a sympathetic ear, for she, too, has a soldier lover, an officer in the Fifth Regiment. The captain is the same in each case, for Henri de L'Orme has accepted the love of both girls; but Aisha, ignorant of this, at once helps Denise to escape from the house of Sidi, and, mounted on swift camels, the Arab girl and Denise travel quickly to the oasis of Djelfa, the home of the Arab tribe to which the dancing girl belongs.

The Comte and Comtesse de Lys have now lost their daughter Denise, Sidi has lost his latest wife, and Henri de L'Orme has lost his betrothed. A rapid pursuit is now organised, and next day all arrive at the oasis of Djelfa. Here Aisha finds that she and Denise are in love with the same man. Henri is bidden to choose between them, and when his choice falls upon Denise, the intense and passionate nature of the Arab girl breaks forth, and in bitter scorn and fury she denounces Henri, and as a fitting punishment for his duplicity he is condemned to be shot by members of her tribe. Denise makes an appeal that his life shall be spared, and Aisha grants this on condition that Denise shall go back to her lawful husband, the Arab Sidi ben Hamid. The Comte de Lys now seeks to set aside this marriage of his daughter by obtaining a divorce. A wise and wily old Sheikh of Djelfa, Sidi ben Achmet, demands very high fees to pronounce the divorce. The money is forthcoming, and Sidi ben Hamid is also not only willing but anxious to be divorced, for he has become enamoured of Fatma, a dancing girl. The only unwilling party to this arrangement is Denise herself, who now prefers to remain the wife of Sidi; and the Arab is unable to pronounce the divorce, for he has forgotten the name of his newly-found wife. However, he soon hears and recognises it, and, speaking the name Denise, he turns round three times, and Denise is his wife no longer. Henri, who really loves her, and her only, now asks for her love and forgiveness, and these she bestows upon him. Poor Aisha, sick at heart and despairing, gives way to uncontrollable grief, and the passionate and beautiful dancer, a sacrifice to unrequited love, falls to the ground and dies of a broken heart.

Miss Marjorie Maxwell was a conspicuous success as Aisha: beautiful of face, she had all the seductive daring and charm of the Arab lover; her sweet and pleasing voice was admirably used in the pretty songs she so daintily rendered, and her serious work in the second act was given with great earnestness and feeling. Miss Dora Lane acted and sang with great vivacity and charm of manner, and she was a refreshing Denise; Miss Dulcie Garland, clear and definite, gave a very good rendering of the part of Lucille, the Comtesse de Lys; Miss Maie Hoey, as Fatma, danced very gracefully, and delighted the audience; and Miss Nita Alexander made a perfectly satisfactory Naila. Mr. Murray King brought all his stock of fun and merriment into the part of Sidi ben Hamid, and in his well-known light and lively manner kept the audience in happy mood with song, dance, and quip. To Mr. F. Maxwell Stewart fell some exceedingly pretty numbers, which he rendered in very pleasing style, and he attained considerable success as the lover, Henri de L'Orme; Mr. Charles Cautley made the most of his opportunities as Jacques, and rendered his song skilfully and artistically; Mr. Tom Macfarlane evoked much laughter in his mock-serious work in his search for knowledge of ladies as the savant Comte de Lys; Mr. Claude was a restrained and satisfactory Raoul de St. Juste; Mr. Walter Brodie is a clever comedian, and he did with much point and effect all possible in the part of Abdullah; Mr. E. Delfosse, too, did cleverly all that fell to his lot as Picquart; and as his partner, Miss Raynor Golden was a smart and attractive Valerie. Mr. Ardene Linden supplied a full measure of humour in a droll way as Sidi ben Achmet; and good help was given by Messrs. Josef Klause and Harry Hardy as Hassan and Marabut.

Mr. Charles Frohman produced two new comedies in the Empire City last week, and public interest in the author of "Vice Versâ" was renewed by these offerings, both being founded on stories from his pen. In each instance the audience was large and appreciative. Several attractions whose popularity was by no means exhausted last season have been revived at the leading theatres, these including The Arcadians, with Miss Julia Sanderson and Miss Connie Ediss, at the Knickerbocker; The Fortune Hunter, with Mr. John Barrymore, at the Gaiety; The Spendthrift, with Mr. Edmund Breese, at the Hudson; and Tillie's Nightmare, with Miss Marie Dressler, at the Herald-square.

MISS GERTRUDE KINGSTON'S EXPERIMENT AT THE LITTLE THEATRE.

By Our Special Commissioner.

When Thomas Coutts, banker, married Harriett Mellon, actress, who, as everyone knows, afterwards became the Duchess of St. Albans, he acquired a stage connection, but he little dreamt that a part of his bank, that most celebrated of all London banks, the Telison's of Charles Dickens's "Tale of Two Cities," would ever contain under its roof and inside its very walls a real theatre. But such is the case. Has New London come to the Old London, or vice versa? one is led to ask as one enters the portals of Miss Gertrude Kingston's new theatre in the Adelphi. Verily it looks like Old London, for here stand the extinguishers as used by the link-boys in Thomas Coutts's time—not the original ones, be it at once said—but their exact replica.

Very few of the thousands who pass by the Strand entrance of Coutts's Bank, now monopolised by the L.C.C., ever dream of what a wealth of antiquity lies close at hand. Passing down the steep hill by the Tivoli stage door is some of the very finest of the late Georgian architecture London possesses. Thomas Adam, the constructor of the Adelphi Terrace, and, in fact, the whole of what is known as the "Adelphi," was a man of no mean taste, as anyone who has seen the interior of some of the houses, with their splendid entrance halls and fine old staircases, and glancing upward view the beautiful ceilings, composed of what is even to-day known as Adams's plaster, will fail to grasp; while turning to the right along the narrow street and passing under the bridge for which the aforesaid Thomas Coutts procured a private Act of Parliament in 1799, and which was built to connect what may be called the Strand portion of the bank with the John-street portion, he will pass the very spot where the last private watchman in London had his watch-box, and until very recent years used to patrol the buildings to keep watch and ward over the treasures deposited in the strong rooms of the descendants of Thomas Coutts, by whom he was employed—a Jerry Cruncher in another capacity. Continuing towards John-street, he will pass through the emergency exit of the new theatre; but why any emergency exit is required for a building that will not hold more than 400 people at the very outside is one of those things no one can answer save a L.C.C. official. But there it is, and anyone who does not feel secure within the most solid walls possessed, perhaps, by any place of entertainment in London, can sustain themselves with the thought that there is an emergency exit.

The architects of the new theatre, Messrs. Hayward and Maynard, have done all that is possible to design their part of the work in thorough keeping with its surroundings. The vestibule is decorated with the aforementioned Adams's plaster, and further inside the foyer will be seen to be the same.

And now for the theatre itself. It is somewhat difficult to describe. Theatre Royal Drawing Room is about the best way to do it. It has never been my pleasure, or honour, to be present at a "command" performance at Windsor or Sandringham, but from what I have read I should say the dimensions are about the same. Many and many a time in my younger days, travelling with a fit-up, I have come across assembly rooms attached to the principal hotels in old-fashioned country towns that strongly reminded me of the new theatre. Unlike them, however, there is a very considerable rake in the floor, and none will have to crane their necks to get a view of the stage, which, like many of the modern theatres, is quite flat. Right at the back are a series of seven boxes, and all the seating accommodation combined will not more than reach 400 persons.

I believe Miss Kingston intends to open her season at the end of September or the beginning of October, and everything seems to be so advanced that there need be no fear of any postponement. The stage for so small a theatre seems ample, and I am told that, although there will not be room for elaborate scenic displays, Miss Kingston has certain ideas of her own which she intends to utilise in the way of backgrounds, while the lighting will be of the very latest and most approved methods.

Without doubt the visitors to the place will feel themselves of a family party, and the absence of orchestra will enable them to indulge in the luxury of conversation such as family parties delight in without being distracted by the sound of music, good or bad.

No doubt Miss Kingston has fully considered the fact that the acting will have to be of the "Art which conceals Art" character to the fullest. There will be no chance for broad dramatic effects. It will have to be of the "drawing room" order from first to last. Anything out of the picture would of necessity jar upon the hearers, who will have to view everything from the delicately-pencilled point of view. An opera glass in this theatre will be a thing unknown, and none can fail to hear the dialogue even should it be conducted in a whisper.

The whole scheme holds out the idea of extreme comfort to small and appreciative audiences. Those who love art for art's sake. And no doubt the innovation will come as a boon and a blessing to all those who do not care for the crushing and crowding which is a necessary adjunct to all big gatherings of people at any class of entertainment which come under the head of "enormous successes." May Miss Gertrude Kingston reap the reward her enterprise deserves!

The ladies of the profession who have the pleasure of appearing with Miss Kingston will have one consolation. Jewellery to any amount will be perfectly safe. The dressing-rooms are constructed from what have been in the past—the strong rooms of the bank.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

Minutes of the Council Meeting held at 32, Regent-street, on Tuesday, Aug. 23. Present, Mr. Chris Walker (in the Chair), Mr. H. W. Mote (Hon. Solicitor), Messrs. Frederick Annerley, Leonard Shepherd, Edward Morgan, C. F. Collings, Clarence Derwent, J. Poole Kirkwood, Miss Mildred Cottell, Miss Vita Spencer, Miss Joan Pereira, and Mr. Robson Paige (Acting-Secretary). The Minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. In consequnce of the Secretary being constantly rung up by managers for non-members, he was instructed to send the Year Book, which contains a list of members, to several well-known managers.

A member objected to pay the 5 per cent. commission charged by the Agency, and the Council upheld his objection, at the same time contending that the said member would not have obtained the engagement without the work of the Secretary. The Secretary reported three engagements through the Agency.

Sarah's Souplesse.

Mr. Chas. Dawbarn, in the Pall Mall Magazine, describes a luncheon which he had "chez Sarah Bernhardt." "You know I am old," said Madame very suddenly. The alert and expressive face, crowned with the aureole of Titian red hair, denied the truth of birthday books and other damaging publications; but, like bishops and judges, actresses have no age—especially illustrious actresses. "I have not lost my souplesse," she continued in a note of triumph; "I am constantly renewing myself by doing new things. That is the secret of youth; the secret of adventure. The artist must strike out into new paths, refusing to allow himself to be bound. He must not always play the same rôle."

THE SKETCH QUESTION AGAIN.

A satisfactory settlement of the "sketch question" seems as far off as ever, and the summonses taken out at the instance of a "common informer" against Mr. Frank Macnaghten in regard to sketches produced at Sadler's Wells and the Surrey constitute a bitter comment on the present makeshift arrangement. It will be remembered that, after years of prosecutions and penalties and much negotiation, an agreement was arrived at in 1907 between the Music Hall Proprietors and Directors and the Theatrical Managers' Association to the following effect:—

"(a) The time occupied in the performance of any sketch shall not exceed thirty minutes.

"(b) No sketch shall contain or consist of more than six speaking or singing parts altogether, exclusive of supernumeraries, auxiliaries, and chorus, the number of whom and of the scenes in such sketch shall be subject to no limit.

"(c) No sketch shall be taken or adapted from any stage play or dramatic entertainment which shall have been licensed by the Lord Chamberlain, except after the expiration of fifteen years after the first public performance of such stage play or entertainment.

"(d) No more than one such sketch shall be presented in the course of such performance in any music hall except that, in addition to such sketch, there may be presented at the same performance either

(1) one short sketch, of one scene only, occupying fifteen minutes, with not more than four speaking or singing parts, with supernumeraries or auxiliaries; or, in the alternative,

(2) one operatic or musical sketch of one scene only, occupying not more than ten minutes in performance, but without being subject to the restriction imposed by clauses (b) and (c).

"No two sketches performed at the same performance to follow consecutively or be connected either in plot, story, character, or scenery with each other, or with any ballet at the same performance. The term 'stage play' shall be deemed not to include ballets which are performed without dialogue or singing (except two choruses, not occupying more than ten minutes together in any ballet)."

Unavailing attempts have been made to get the law altered by Bills, projects of this kind being connected with the names of Captain Jessel, the Entertainments Protection Association, and Mr. Robert Harcourt, whose Bill would have settled the sketch question by giving a single licence.

Last week "Mr. George," a "common informer," obtained the conviction at Clerkenwell Police Court of Mr. Frank Macnaghten, of the Sadler's Wells Music Hall, for performing two stage plays. "Mr. George" declared that he brought the case solely for the purpose of ridiculing the law; and Mr. Bros, the magistrate, had no option but to impose a fine of 40s., and 2s. costs.

After this "Mr. George" took out another summons against Mr. Macnaghten regarding alleged "stage plays" at the Surrey Theatre, which came on for hearing at the Tower Bridge Police Court on Thursday. Mr. Fred Baugh, Mr. Macnaghten's manager, communicated with the Sketch Association asking them to take steps to have this, as he considered, malicious persecution stopped. If it were not stopped he stated he would take out summonses against eleven London music halls which were transgressing the law in the same way.

MR. BAUGH PROTESTS.

"It is ridiculous," he said to a newspaper representative, "that we should be singled out for prosecutions of this sort. We keep within the terms of the compromise entered into with the theatrical managers, and unless this summons against the Surrey Theatre is withdrawn I shall immediately start eleven actions myself."

Mr. Fred Baugh was naturally extremely incensed at being singled out for these prosecutions. "Why," he asked, "should we be chosen for these attacks? We keep strictly to the terms of the compromise made between the theatres and music halls. I feel very bitter about it, and, although I shall be very sorry for the artists, I am going to fight to the finish.

"If the 'common informer' wants to ridicule the law I will help him to do it. It will be his fault, not mine, if music hall managers refuse in consequence of my action to put on any more sketches.

"There are about a dozen halls concerned at present, but the number of artists who will probably lose their employment will be between 500 and 600.

"I am not at all sure that it will not be necessary to withdraw all the sketches from our own programmes. The whole business is absurd, and I very much regret that I have been forced to take this action."

Mr. Baugh has no intention of instituting any proceedings in the provinces. "It is manifestly unfair that I should be attacked twice," he said, "and for that reason I propose to take out eleven summonses in order to bring the affair to a head. It is not fair to those who have invested millions of money in the properties that they should be harassed and annoyed at every turn by a common informer. The whole thing is absolutely iniquitous, and we shall see if we cannot bring it to a proper head. Eventually the matter will be settled by sketches being made legal—by giving to one house one licence to perform what the management likes. I have hopes that this crisis will result in a Bill being introduced next session into Parliament."

THE SKETCH ASSOCIATION'S ACTION.

The Sketch Association, which was formed to protect the interests of music hall sketch artists, held a three hours' meeting on Tuesday, at the Covent Garden Hotel, to consider the situation. Incidentally a prominent member of the Association took the opportunity of denying the suggestion that he had inspired "Mr. George" to take his course of action. The Association decided to organise a hunt for "Mr. George" and beg him, in the interests of the profession, to cease his prosecutions.

The following resolution was also passed on Tuesday:—"That this meeting of the Sketch Association regrets the action taken by a common informer against the management of Ye Old Sadler's Wells Theatre for producing two sketches without the licence of the Lord Chamberlain, which action resulted in a small fine, and instructs their solicitor to take any steps he may think proper to bring about a settlement of any pending summonses or any future prosecutions, the Association being of opinion that these prosecutions of sketches (produced within the terms of the compromise between the theatre and music hall managers) cause great injury and financial loss to the variety profession, and particularly to the members of this Association."

Mr. Arnold Bell, vice-president of the Sketch Association, said that if Mr. Baugh carried out his threat it would mean that not only hundreds of artists would immediately be thrown out of employment, but that thousands of pounds would be lost to music halls.

"In 'popular price' halls," he says, "sketches have become the feature of the programmes. To drop them would mean a loss of thousands of pounds a week. What it would mean to the artists I cannot imagine.

"Many of us have contracts, but these prosecutions would nullify them, and we should have no remedy."

A SERIOUS POSITION.

"It is a much more serious matter than the public think," said a South London manager. "In addition to the artists themselves—those with speaking parts—others who appear, the scenic artists, the electric light employees, and those engaged in the wardrobe section—all these will be thrown out of employment if common informers spring up everywhere, for no music hall manager is going to produce a sketch with the knowledge that he will be hauled up before a magistrate every week and fined. Of course a nominal fine is a small matter, but it is the precedent that concerns us."

MR. FRANK MACNAGHTEN SUMMONED.

At the Tower Bridge Police Court on Thursday, before Mr. Arthur Gill, Mr. Frank Macnaghten, head of the syndicate controlling the Surrey Vaudeville Theatre, was summoned by Mr. Fredk. George, described as an actor, of Cranbourn-street, W.C., for keeping a house and place of public resort for the performance of stage plays in contravention of the Acts of 25 Geo. 2, chapter 96, and 6 and 7 Victoria chapter 63. Mr. Macnaghten was not present, but Mr. Charles Baugh, the manager of the house, appeared in his stead.

Mr. J. D. Cassels was counsel for the prosecution and Mr. P. T. Blackwell for the defence.

When the case was called on it was intimated that if a few minutes more were allowed for a conference between the parties his Worship might not be troubled with the case. A few minutes later Mr. Blackwell stated that the case must go on.

Mr. Cassels, opening the case for the prosecution, said the complainant took these proceedings against Mr. Macnaghten, the lessee of the Surrey Vaudeville Theatre, for keeping that place of public entertainment for the production of stage plays, without having a licence as required by the Theatres Act of 1843. That Act required that all places of entertainment where stage plays were performed should have from the proper authority—in this case the Lord Chamberlain—a licence to perform them, and if stage plays were performed without that licence the persons responsible rendered themselves liable to a fine not exceeding £20 per day during the days upon which they allowed those stage plays to be performed. A stage play was defined in the 23rd section of the Act as including every tragedy, comedy, farce, opera, burletta, interlude, melodrama, or pantomime. The case before the Court that day concerned the performance of three stage plays in the course of the entertainment. He held in his hand the programme which gave the name of the first play as Perkins, M.P. That play concerned the adventures of a candidate for Parliament, with the introduction of the topical suffragette. Then the second play was one entitled The King of the Road, which was described as "A new and original romantic episode from the time of King Charles II." The third play was entitled Ned the Devil, which was described as a drama, and in which bar loafers and policemen appeared. Two of these plays occupied nearly half an hour each in the performance, and one of them about a quarter of an hour. That they were in fact stage plays he thought his Worship would have no difficulty in determining after hearing the evidence of Mr. George, who was a spectator.

The Magistrate here interposed with a remark that the summons did not seem to be in order, as it did not say "without the authority or without a licence from the Lord Chamberlain."

Mr. Blackwell: I do not take any point about that.

The Magistrate: Then I will amend it.

Mr. Cassels, proceeding, said these prosecutions were very rare nowadays, and perhaps rarer still to be undertaken by a member of the public, whom his learned friend would be quite entitled to describe as a common informer. But the Act must have contemplated proceedings such as these by a common informer, inasmuch as there was a section which provided for the distribution of the penalty. Moreover, the Act was for the protection to a certain extent of the public in regard to these theatre entertainments which were being given in unlicenced places, for the simple reason that a place which the Lord Chamberlain did not licence was a place over which he had no control. Therefore this gentleman was perfectly within his rights in taking these proceedings. There was another point which might be brought to his Worship's notice, and that was that these cases had, as a rule, been undertaken by the Theatrical Managers' Association. That body took out several summonses of this character against music hall managers, and as a result of somewhat prolonged litigation an arrangement was made between them, whereby these proceedings should not be taken if the sketches did not break through certain rules which the theatrical managers and the music hall proprietors agreed upon. These sketches had not broken that arrangement, but of course an Act of Parliament was not only to be observed by certain people who made arrangements, it was meant to be observed in the strict letter, and therefore this summons had been taken out against the lessee of the Surrey Vaudeville Theatre for the reason that he had undoubtedly broken this Act of Parliament, and continued to do so, and rendered himself liable to rather heavy fines.

Mr. Fredk. George, the complainant, was the only witness called. In reply to Mr. Cassels, he said he was by occupation a clerk, and at times an actor. He attended the Surrey Vaudeville Theatre on July 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, and 30. One of the items on the programme was called Perkins, M.P., the Labour Candidate and Suffragette Pet.

Mr. Cassels: What was the nature of that item?—The first scene was outside a works; one man was a candidate for Parliament. I think his name was Grubb. On came a gentleman who was called Perkins. He asked: "What's all this?" and they explained to him that the man was putting up for Parliament, and said it would be a good idea, as he was out of work, for him to put up for Parliament. Then we had comedy from other persons giving their views of Parliament, and a lady was introduced as a suffragette.

How long did that piece last?—About thirty minutes.

How many principals were there in it?—I should say seven.

Let us come to the next one—The King of the Road. Just tell us quite briefly what that was.—The King of the Road, otherwise Dick Turpin. Papers are stolen from a lady; Dick Turpin recovers them from the man who stole them, and they are handed back in the last scene to the rightful owner.

How many scenes are there in that piece?—Three.

And how many principal performers?—I should say about five.

The Magistrate: How long did that last?—About twenty-five minutes.

Mr. Cassels: Now we come to Ned the Devil. What is the nature of that?—Ned the Devil is in one scene. There is a sort of bar-parlour and a public-house. A gentleman is discovered sitting at a table, sort of semi-drunk I take it, and later on it is explained that this gentleman is a detective in search of a character called Ned the Devil. Ned the Devil's wife tries to get the detective, whom she does not know as a detective, out of the house before her husband returns. Eventually he comes and does the turning out himself.

How long did that last?—That lasted a matter of fifteen minutes.

And how many principal performers?—There were three only.

This is not the first summons you have taken out in this way?—I took one out last week against Sadler's Wells.

Mr. Blackwell: At what time of night were you there?—The first house.

I want to know the time, if you please?—About 6.30 to ten to nine.

You remained there during the whole of that time?—Certainly.

You swore last week that you were present at Sadler's Wells Theatre on the 25th, 26th, 27th and 28th days of July, didn't you?—Correct, sir.

What time were you at Sadler's Wells?—I got there about 9.15.

What part of the house were you in at Sadler's Wells?—I was in the pit and the circle.

And at the Surrey?—I was in the pit and the gallery.

You were at each of these theatres on the same nights?—Certainly.

I suppose your object in taking out this summons was the same as your object in taking out the summons in the case of Sadler's Wells?—Not quite, for the simple reason——

Mr. Blackwell: One minute.

Mr. Cassels: Let him explain.

Mr. Blackwell: He shall explain in a moment. Did not you tell me last week that your object in taking out the summons in connection with the Sadler's Wells was to bring the law into contempt?—Well?

Yes or no?—Yes.

Was your object in taking out the summons in connection with the Surrey Vaudeville the same?—No.

I understood you to say a little while ago it was partly the same?—That is correct.

It was partly to bring the law into contempt?—No. May I explain?

Certainly.—The opposing counsel last week put that question to me, and I said "Yes," although I did not fully understand. It got into print, and I will say I acquiesced in the remark, and therefore it must stand. I brought it to show the inconsistency of the Act under which music halls now work and with a view to bringing about an early repeal.

You remember I asked you what was your object in taking out the summons?—I think you did ask me something to that effect.

And was your answer to that "To bring the law into contempt"?—I do not remember the word "contempt" being used; I remember the word "ridicule" being used.

Substituted, if you please. Did not you volunteer the statement that your object was to bring the law into ridicule and contempt?—Those are the words, if I remember correctly, that you put to me.

No, no; you must be careful. And that is partly your object to-day in taking out this summons?—It is.

You are a clerk, are you, at the present time?—I have been a clerk.

Are you a clerk at the present time?—No, sir.

You were a clerk last week?—I was.

A clerk last week; and what are you now?—At the moment?

Yes.—Travelling for a wood firm.

You have been an actor, you were a clerk, and you are now traveller for a wood firm?—Yes.

You have been associated with Mr. Geo. Gray, haven't you?—I know Mr. George Gray.

Did he suggest to you taking out the summons?—Mr. George Gray has nothing to do with this summons.

That is not an answer.—Nor suggested it.

By the way, what is your name?—Frederick George.

Anything else?—I don't exactly know what you mean.

Is George your surname, or one of your Christian names?—George is the name I have been known by ever since I came to London.

And before you came to London what was your name?

Witness asked the magistrate if he was obliged to answer, and Mr. Blackwell, saying that if the witness did not wish to answer he would be satisfied, dropped the matter.

Mr. Blackwell next asked: Did you tell someone—I don't want to mention his name at present—did you tell him two or three weeks ago that you had been asked by George Gray to undertake this prosecution?—I did not.

You swear that?—I do.

I think you did say you did not want to press for any penalty in this matter?—Before I answer that, I ask your Worship if I am obliged to give conversations on this case.

Mr. Cassels: Answer the question.

Witness: I may have said I did not want to press the case.

Mr. Blackwell: None of these pieces lasted more than half an hour?—To my knowledge, no, sir.

None of them infringed the compromise between the Actors' and the Sketch Association?—I am not fully acquainted with the compromise, and that is why I do not stipulate any time. I do not think they played so long as half an hour.

You know there was an arrangement between the Theatrical Managers' Association and what is called the Sketch Association that the theatrical managers would not prosecute if certain conditions were observed?—I have heard something to that effect.

You knew it last week, didn't you, before Mr. Bros?—I think you asked me if I was aware that compromise existed between the two parties mentioned, and I said "Yes," which I certainly say now; but as to the exact workings of this compromise, I am not certain.

You know the Sketch Association and the Actors' and Managers' do not approve of this particular prosecution?—I have read reports that they do not.

Mr. Cassels: You took no part in this compromise yourself?—Certainly not.

Is "contempt" rather a stronger word than you would use yourself with regard to the object of these prosecutions?—It was my first appearance in Court, and my worthy opponent——

A little frightened you, perhaps?—He put those words forward, and before I exactly realised the full meaning of them I said "Yes."

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The Magistrate asked if the defendant was the responsible manager of the house.

Mr. Blackwell: No, as a matter of fact there are technical difficulties in the way if I wanted to put them. He is really the managing-director of a syndicate, and of course the syndicate, if anybody, is liable; but I will not take any objection on that ground.

The Magistrate: I must have an admission that he accepts responsibility.

Mr. Blackwell said he accepted responsibility on behalf of Mr. Macnaghten. His client was quite willing to admit that two of these things might be fairly described as stage plays. Those were The King of the Road and Ned the Devil; but if he thought the matter of any importance in this case he could call evidence to show that Perkins, M.P., was not a play but was really a harlequinade. There was no speaking in it, only patter and that sort of thing.

Mr. Cassels: That is speaking.

Mr. Blackwell, proceeding, said the others clearly were stage plays, and therefore it would perhaps be wasting his Worship's time if he called evidence to substantiate what he said with regard to Perkins, M.P. Tere was no doubt that these things were played at this music hall, which he dare say his Worship would remember was the old Surrey Theatre, Conquest's house, the theatrical licence of which had been allowed to lapse. It was licensed, of course, under the County Council for music and dancing, and therefore one part of the object of the Act was met. The preamble of the Act was amusing, with its reference to the Act of 12 Queen Anne for reducing the laws relating to rogues and vagabonds, sturdy beggars and vagrants, to one Act of Parliament, and for sending these rogues, vagabonds, sturdy beggars and vagrants whither they ought to be sent. For some time there was a great contest between theatrical managers and what was called the Sketch Association—that was a number of persons—artists they were called—who were in the habit of giving these entertainments at various theatres and also at music halls. The theatrical managers first of all complained that their proper business had been cut into by these sketch artists, and a number of prosecutions were brought. Certain of the learned magistrates, including Mr. Paul Taylor and Mr. Cecil Chapman, suggested a compromise between these parties, and accordingly an arrangement was entered into by which it was undertaken by the Theatrical Managers' Association that so long as the sketches in music halls did not contravene certain limits—that was to say there were not more than six performers and the thing did not last more than thirty minutes—the Theatrical Managers' Association would not intervene, would not set the strict law in motion. In this case Mr. Macnaghten was the managing-director of a syndicate having control of thirty music halls, and throughout the length and breadth of London these music hall sketches were played without any protest on the part of the police, without any interference by the theatrical managers, and without interference on behalf of the Lord Chamberlain.

The Magistrate: And without objection by the music hall licensing authority?

Mr. Blackwell said that was so. No objection took place on the part of people who were interested, but they had in this case a Mr. Fredk. George, actor, clerk, and wood traveller, whose only motive that he could avow that day was to bring the law into ridicule and contempt. He (counsel) did not know whether his Worship thought that was a matter that should be supported from the Magisterial Bench. The only way in which such action could be checked was by taking care that the cost of the prosecution fell upon the men who instituted it. He called attention to Section 21 of the Act, and ventured to say that that was really the object in bringing this prosecution in the first instance. Section 21 provided that penalties for any offence against this Act should be paid and applied in the first instance towards defraying the expenses incurred by the prosecution, and the residue, if any, paid to the use of His Majesty, his heirs, and successors. He could not contend that there had not been here a technical breach of the law, the parties relying upon the arrangement made by the persons directly interested? Knowing that the police might intervene, that the County Council might intervene, to set this law in motion if it was desired, the parties—Mr. Macnaghten and others for whom he accepted responsibility—undoubtedly did perform or allow to be performed two stage plays on some of these occasions, and therefore it was for his Worship to say what he thought would meet the justice of the case. He submitted that the smallest penalty would be adequate. He only wanted to say this, and perhaps his Worship would desire to have evidence upon that point. There were lot of persons employed as sketch artists not only in London but throughout the country, and on the faith of the arrangement that had been come to they had been earning their living and had been doing it in a way that of course showed that they were respectable, or they would have come within the law relating to improper entertainments. If his Worship should think it necessary to inflict any substantial punishment, anything that showed, he thought, the defendant in this case was doing anything morally wrong, then he (counsel) need hardly point out that the effect would be that the persons who were conducting these music halls would at once suspend their operations and all these people who were contributing to the innocent amusement of society would have their occupations stopped. Of course, if there were any substantial wrong done that would be a consideration he would not venture to suggest, but in a case of this sort where the breach was merely technical he thought it was not unbecoming of him to address it to his Worship. He could give his Worship evidence, if he thought it desirable, that there had been two Royal Commissions on this matter, one recommending a change in the law in the direction of the compromise into which these two associations entered. The other reported only last year and he understood that the recommendation of that Commission was that there should be one licence for all entertainment houses, and that the distinctions between houses licensed by the Lord Chamberlain and by the justices in certain cases, or by the County Council in London, should be assimilated. There was a Bill actually before Parliament at the present time for the purpose of carrying that into effect. In the meantime music hall proprietors were carrying their business on in a way that did not contravene the suggestion made by the learned magistrates, and in the whole circumstances he asked his Worship, looking at the fact that any substantial penalty would go towards the cost of a very unmeritorious prosecution, to impose a very small penalty.

The Magistrate: What did Mr. Bros. do?

Mr. Blackwell: He inflicted on one summons a penalty of 40s. and 2s. costs.

Mr. Cassels: There have been previous convictions against the defendant in this case. In November, 1907, he was fined £30.

Mr. Blackwell: That was a prosecution by the Association. This is by a common informer who is really doing it for the sake of putting part of the penalty in his pocket.

The Magistrate said there would be a fine of 20s.

Mr. Cassels: Will that be spread over the whole period or for each day.

The Magistrate: I doubt if there is power to inflict more than one penalty on one summons.

Mr. Cassels applied for costs.

Mr. Blackwell: The costs come out of the penalty.

Mr. Cassels: Other magistrates have generally allowed some costs.

Mr. Blackwell: Mr. Bros allowed 2s. costs.

The Magistrate: Twenty shillings and 2s. costs.

Mr. Cassels: Will your Worship make any order in case of default? The last fine has not been paid yet. I don't know whether this will have the same experience.

The Magistrate: A distress warrant can be issued if it is not paid.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—It is sincerely to be hoped that the action taken by a "common informer" will lead to the Metropolitan authorities (there are several, and all apparently muddle-headed) granting a double licence where reasonably applied for, as is already done in so many provincial towns.

Why it is withheld in London is no tribute to the good sense of those who hold control. The ridiculous position could in a great measure be relieved by a stroke of the pen. The first-class West End theatres do not want to put on varieties, but the time has come when those halls that need to mount a play or a playlet should not be hounded down. Legally, they can, and will be, until their fetters are struck off by a sleepy set of authorities.

It cannot be denied for a moment that the music-hall managements have not adhered to the compromise. Only this week a hall is prosecuted for giving three long sketches in one bill, whereas the compromise only allows one of thirty minutes and another of fifteen. Are there no sensible level-headed men on the Councils or at St. James's Palace who can do a public service by solving a problem that has got to be solved sooner or later? A little sense now exercised would help along the Act of Parliament so badly wanted.—Yours faithfully,

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

By Albert A. Strong, LL.B. (London). 5s. The Era Offices, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

Important changes in the law affecting the amusement professions have been made since the issue nine years ago of the second edition of Mr. Albert A. Strong's valuable book on Theatrical and Musical Law, and the third edition just published comes opportunely to hand. The work has been greatly enlarged, upwards of sixty additional pages being required to accommodate the mass of new information. The publication has been brought as nearly as possible up to date, and within its pages will be found analyses of important measures which have been adopted both in Parliament and out. There is, for instance, the full text of the recent Berlin Convention, and the New Copyright Act of the United States. The awards governing the relations between managers, artists, and agents are reproduced in their entirety, and a number of fresh cases illustrating the effect of the barring clauses is included.

The Musical Copyright Act, by which tardy justice was secured to song writers and publishers, is given in full, and a digest of the measure, bringing out its salient features, is also printed. A whole chapter is now devoted to the subject of children on the stage, and the important question of the Workmen's Compensation Act is exhaustively dealt with. All the decisions of the Courts affecting theatres and music halls are referred to, many notable cases being recalled. The law governing dramatic and musical copyright is defined as clearly as its intricacies will allow, and a reliable indication of the methods to be adopted in securing protection is afforded. The progress made in the question of licensing has been too slow to allow of more than a reproduction of the terms of agreement entered into between the representatives of theatres and music halls regarding sketches, but pronouncements under that heading are numerous.

Mr. Albert A. Strong's valuable work "Dramatic and Musical Law," published at The Era Offices, Tavistock-street, has reached its third edition. The author has made every effort to bring the book right up to date.—Referee, May 15, 1910.

"Dramatic and Musical Law," by Mr. A. A. Strong, LL.B., has reached a third edition, and gives in simple language such parts of the law as relate to subjects with which the profession is concerned.—The Financier.

Price 5s., post free 5s. 4d. Published at The Era Offices, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

The programme at the Empire Theatre is full of variety during the coming week. It includes, besides the dainty and beautiful ballet The Dancing Master, with Mr. Fred Farren in the leading rôle, Mr. George Mozart in a number of caricatures and satires of topics of the day, Clarke and Hamilton, another of the most popular performances to be found in a variety theatre bill, Asra—the billiard expert, Smite and Smote, the Three Oxford Boys, and besides these attractions, Sybil Arundale, in a series of new songs, will make her farewell appearance before her forthcoming visit to Australia.

"THE GOODRICH AVERAGE"

The following is the type of testimonial we like to publish. Occasionally kind friends send us reports of abnormal tyres which have done their 10,000 miles or over. We keep these for our personal satisfaction only. Now and then a man lives to be a hundred; now and then a golfer holes out in one. These things are interesting, but not important. They are of no value to the actuary. In making our tyre we aim at a high average. In advertising it, we quote only facts bearing on that average.

Dear Sirs, June 29, 1910.

We have pleasure in giving you, after two years' trial, our matured opinion on the qualities of your tyres. We have used them on our own cars under all conditions of wear and surface, both in town and country, and they have maintained a remarkably high average of service from the beginning. We have had an indifferent example or two, but striking an average we have not yet found equal results from any other tyres that have come within our personal experience, and this opinion is reflected by practically every customer to whom we have recommended them. Yours faithfully,

SEALE & DE BECKER, Ltd.

Mr. F. Cyril Leighton's company commenced its tour at the Hippodrome, Stoke-on-Trent with the pretty little nautical drama, Captain Jack. The company engaged is a well-balanced one. Mr. Ernest Owtrim is a natural and manly hero, and Miss Nina Blake-Adams as his wife plays in a charming manner; Mr. H. Ryeland-Leigh fills the part of Anthony Cliversedge, the suave and villainous ship-owner, to the life; Mr. F. C. Leighton as Bary Trent, the wastrel, is well placed Able support is given by other members of the company.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
By ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Copyright confusion is like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his textbook on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.
"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.
Published at "The Era" Buildings,
5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

WHO WROTE HENRY VIII?

The exact authorship of the play of Henry VIII. is one of those debateable questions on which the "curious" have expended a vast amount of investigation and argument, without any fixed conclusion having been arrived at. It is interesting, however, to enumerate the arguments which successive commentators have brought forward respecting the concoction of the play. The difference between good and bad blank verse is as perceptible to the literary ear as is the gulf between good and bad music to the musical epicure; and the manifest inferiority of some of the verse in Henry VIII. first created suspicion as to the play having been entirely written by SHAKESPEARE. In 1758 a Mr. RODERICK, Fellow of Magdalen College, noted the defects in some of the blank verse; and in 1850 EMERSON instinctively objected to the theory that this historical drama was entirely written by SHAKESPEARE. "The first play," said EMERSON, in his "Representative Men," referring to the supposed drama on which SHAKESPEARE worked, "was written by a superior, thoughtful man with a vicious ear. I can mark his lines, and know well their cadence. See Wolsey's soliloquy, and the following scene with Cromwell, where, instead of the metre of SHAKESPEARE, whose secret is that the thought constructs the tune, so that reading for the sense will best bring out the rhythm—here the lines are constructed on a given tune, and the verse has even a trace of pulpit eloquence. But the play contains, through all its length, unmistakable traits of SHAKESPEARE'S hand; and some passages, as the account of the Coronation, are like autographs." SPEDDING felt convinced that at least two different hands, if not three, had been employed in the construction of Henry VIII.; and Mr. ARTHUR SYMONS, whose opinion on any literary question has great weight, felt certain that neither SHAKESPEARE, nor any single writer, wrote the whole of the play.

In a question of this sort, surmise is open to all. We may imagine, if we please, the circumstances in which SHAKESPEARE'S connection with the work occurred. We may suppose, with Mr. SPEDDING, that he was called in to assist in the hurried concoction of the drama for presentation at the Princess ELIZABETH'S marriage in 1612; but it is also allowable to opine that SHAKESPEARE followed his instincts and impulses in the matter, and not the orders and instructions of others.

It detracts in some measure from his sovereignty to imagine him as a fallible dramatist, sometimes blundering in his choice of a theme; but the evidence supporting that idea is too strong to be overlooked. How otherwise could he have undertaken to make a satisfactory drama out of The Troublesome Raigne of John King of England? The difficulties in the way were too much even for SHAKESPEARE. In vain did he, with the instinct of a popular playwright, alter the political motive of the old piece, and, to a certain extent, "whitewash" King JOHN by making the quarrel between him and his subjects turn more upon the question of his defective title to the throne than, as it really did, on his own detestable character. The attempt to represent John as an anti-Papal patriot soon fails when he is shown submitting to the Pope in order at any cost to obtain an ally against the rebellious barons. It looks as if SHAKESPEARE had been so much struck with the possibilities of such characters as Philip Faulconbridge, Arthur, Hubert, and Constance, that he attempted the impossible task of retaining a hateful rascal as his principal character and yet making his play successful and popular. King John, it should be mentioned, was produced at some time between 1595 and 1597.

In the case of Henry VIII., SHAKESPEARE—and indeed any dramatist or playwright who attempted to deal with the subject—would be confronted with a similar difficulty, and the result, as in the case of King John, could only be a "compromise play," in which the sympathy, to use a common but expressive verb, would "wobble." In the case of Henry VIII. our sympathy is in a perpetual ebb and flow. In the Tudor time, the English had been so educated down to the idea of absolute rule that they did not think of questioning the right or wrong of royal actions. But most people nowadays, in spite of Mr. FROUDE'S ingenious apology for Henry, are convinced that he was a Royal Bluebeard, who added cant to the crime of wife-murder. The result is that we are not satisfied to see him represented without reprobation. If we are sorry for Queen KATHARINE, obviously we must hate the remorseless tyrant who divorced her that he might marry ANNE BOLEYN. It is certainly some satisfaction to see KATHARINE'S politic persecutor, WOLSEY, ruined; but the arch-criminal of the play is shown at the end of it happy and triumphant, and exulting with unctuous piety, over the birth of a child, the daughter of the wanton woman whom he was afterwards to behead for infidelity.

Of course, one sees SHAKESPEARE'S difficulty. That child was Queen ELIZABETH, and HENRY VIII. was her father. But one cannot believe that SHAKESPEARE had a sixteenth-century conscience or an absolute-monarchy intelligence. It is quite possible that he found himself, when required to collaborate in the authorship of Henry VIII., wiser and more cautious than he was when he wrote King John, and that, on consideration, he refused to do more than to write up the situations in the old play which appealed to him. When SHAKESPEARE found a story that really pleased him he took great pains with his treatment of it.

If we did not know better (says BRANDER MATTHEWS in his "Study of the Drama"), we might well believe that Shakspere had first conceived Hamlet, and then cast about him for a story in which that character might be revealed. But we do know better; we are aware that this was not the case and that the plot of Hamlet had been constructed by an earlier playwright, possibly Kyd, who had seen fit to make a mere melodrama of it, a violent tragedy-of-blood, full of broad theatricalism, certain to please the strong-nerved playgoing public of those tumultuous days. This tragedy-of-blood Shakespeare took for his own, and made it his own, partly by purging away some of its grosser effect and partly by elevating the character of Hamlet to his own loftiest level. Apparently, he did not accomplish this all at once; finding the theme congenial, he returned to it again and again, as though it were a labour of love. He gave Hamlet revision after revision until he had put himself into it amply, and until he had so ennobled it that it was the richest expression of his genius. What he found a coarse melodrama, he left the most intellectual of tragedies—the play in which he seemed most abundantly to have voiced himself. He took over another man's invention and transfigured it by his own superb imagination.

Is it not reasonable to suppose that when SHAKESPEARE realised the unsuitability of the HENRY VIII. history for dramatic treatment, he should have shrunk from doing more than executing some of his marvellous literary variations of certain passages, declining to take the responsibility of producing what was certain to be unsatisfactory as a whole? We may add that Henry VIII. is a play which absolutely demands elaborate mounting. It is a spectacle of history, not a sympathetic drama with good and bad characters distinctly opposed; and the detachment which we feel in contemplating its personages and in watching its incidents permits and necessitates splendid stage-pictures.

AT the Queen's Theatre, Manchester, this week, Mr. W. W. Kelly's company, with Miss Edith Cole as Josephine, are doing capital business.

MR. KELSON TRUEMAN, opera, concert, and dramatic agent, of Piccadilly-mansions, 17, Shaftesbury-avenue, wishes us to state that he represents Miss Marie Dainton solely and exclusively, and to him all matters re engagements should be addressed.

THE Grand Theatre, Oldham, reopens on Monday after being closed for some months. Mr. Harry Kilrow, acting-manager of the Royal Theatre, has been appointed to the same position at the Grand, Mr. Robert Leach filling the vacancy at the Royal.

MISS MAY YORK, who for the last few weeks has been engaged at one of the city restaurants of San Francisco to sing popular songs at lunch and dinner, was singing the pathetic song from The Arcadians "Bring me a rose" on Wednesday, and had reached the words "I'm so tired of violets; take them all away," when she stopped, and fell forward. It was found that she had been seized with partial paralysis. Her condition, however, is not dangerous.

MR. BASIL YOUNG writes:—"Will you permit me, without any desire to be ostentatious, to record in your columns that, being eighty-one years old to-day, I have lived in six reigns? My recollections date far back, as I saw Macready play Werner, and have a more distinct recollection of Virginius, probably because there was a murder in it, an incident that always appeals to the young. My contemporaries were Love, John Parry, and Woodin; while among my successors were Emma Stanley, Julia St. George, Valentine Vousden, Maccabe, and other platform celebrities.

THE staff of the Cambridge Theatre, Spenny moor, held their annual picnic on Sunday last, when a party of thirty journeyed by special saloon from Spennymoor to Redcar, a popular Yorkshire seaside resort. The dinner, which was partaken of at the North-Eastern Hotel, Redcar, was presided over by Mr. David Collins (resident-manager of the Cambridge), with Mr. Sidney Slade, of the North-Eastern Breweries, as vice-chairman. Mr. Collins proposed the health of Mr. Hugh Robertson, lessee and manager of the Spennymoor theatre. An enjoyable day was spent.

AT the Grand Opera House, Radcliffe, Mr. C. Watson Mill's company is presenting the new romantic play, For Love of the Princess. At the head of the company is Mr. F. Harvey, who acts effectively as Prince Conrad, and is ably assisted in the leading work by Mr. C. H. Matthews; Mr. JJohn Burton acts well as Josef. Princess Idalia, an interesting character, has a good impersonator in Miss May Beatrice; and Miss Josephine Lee is seen to advantage as Constantia, sister of mercy.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

PARIS, THURSDAY, AUG. 18.—Actors are supposed to live to a ripe old age, but few can hope to celebrate their 91st anniversary in a good condition of health like M. Hadingue, the father of the beautiful Madame Jane Hading. He was a good, painstaking actor, and during many years was a great favourite with the public. It is to be hoped that after his death his heirs will find his memoirs, which ought to be excellent reading, considering he knew Miles. Mars, Dorval, and Georges, that he acted with Mlle. Rachel, and was an intimate friend of Frédérick Lemaitre, of Melingue, and Genneval. His daughter holds him in great esteem, and I remember her telling me that whenever she is playing she always thinks of her father's advice to her the moment she has to come on: "Remember who you are, whence you come, whither you are supposed to go!" One of our colleagues reproduces an old photograph representing M. Hadingue in the rôle of Le Bossu, holding in his arms, instead of the traditional cardboard doll, his three-year-old little daughter Jeannette. This was Madame Hading's début on the stage.

MLLE. JANE FASER has made a brilliant entrée at the Comédie Française as Madelon in Les Précieuses Ridicules. The new young pensionnaire is a pupil of the Conservatoire, where she studied in the class of M. Le Bargy. Having obtained an honourable mention in La Mégère apprivoisée, she tried to secure a first prize in Le Malade imaginaire, but she had the jury against her. Whilst still a pupil at the Conservatoire, she had appeared in a vaudeville at the Palais-Royal, an offence which the gentlemen who distributed the awards would not forgive. At once engaged at the Porte Saint Martin, Mlle. Faber soon left M. Coquelin to join the Odéon, where she appeared in Le Légataire Universel, Tartuffe, Le Malade Imaginaire, Les Emigrants, and Petite Hollande. Very talented and very beautiful, Mlle. Faber is sure to make a brilliant career in the House of Molière.

ON October prox., M. Jacques Rouché will take over the management of the Théâtre des Arts. The list of plays this gentleman intends to produce there is a long one, and many of the works will prove very interesting. The list comprises:—Rameau's ballet Pygmaleon; Alfred de Musset's Fantasio; Le Sicilien, by Molière, music by Lulli; Anathema, by Andreief; Saint François d'Assise, by A. Suarez; Gluck's Hélène et Pâris; Le Carnaval des Enfants, by Georges de Bouhélier; Le Chagrin dans le Palais de Han, a famous Chinese tragedy of the thirteenth century; La Nave, by d'Annunzio; Les Frères Kramazov, by Copeau; La Lumière qui s' éteint (The Light that Failed), by Kipling; Le Pain, by Henri Ghein; and La Maternelle, by Frapré. M. Rouché has also specially engaged Mr. Gordon Craig to superintend the rehearsals of Hamlet.

THE Théâtre de l'Œuvre, under M. Lugné-Poé's able management, will inaugurate the new season with L'Amour de Késa, a Japanese play, adapted by M. d'Humières, with Mme. Suzanne Desprès in the leading rôle.

PASSING OF AN OLD CONCERT HALL.

An interesting relic of a past generation is about to pass away in Birmingham in the old Midland Counties Concert Hall, which still stands, hidden from passers-by in the Bull Ring and Spiceal-street by the licensed premises of the Spread Eagle Tavern, which cover the frontage. Thirty-eight years ago its last manager, Mr. Wm. Barnes, ceased his connection with it, and the hall has been used as a warehouse and factory, and forgotten by all save the surviving relics of the generation which patronised the place in its palmy days. At that time it was considered a splendid hall, and its character may be judged from the fact that Mr. Barnes, who is still living in Birmingham—a venerable white-haired old gentleman—recalls that at one period no man was allowed in the audience unless he was wearing a tall hat.

The history of the founding of the Midland Counties Concert Hall is very interesting. In 1852 a grand dramatic performance was given by command of Queen Victoria at Windsor Castle. It was her Majesty's idea to have a play written by the highest literary talent in the land, and staged by the most eminent artists. So for this occasion Thackeray, Chas. Dickens, and Mark Lemon collaborated for the play, and the stage was painted by the eminent Royal Academicians Telbin, Roberts, and Stansfield. After the play, which was presented for its very evanescent existence before a most brilliant assembly, Mr. Herbert Hudson went up from Birmingham to Windsor, and, with the view of carrying out his project of becoming a concert hall proprietor, bought the stage and all the scenic effects, &c., for £500, and brought them to Birmingham, where they were duly installed for service when the hall was built in the Bull Ring. Thus the Midland Counties Music Hall was equipped with some of the finest scenery in the kingdom. Mr. Hudson showed great enterprise in his conduct of the hall, the performers of which included such names as Mackney, Mr. and Mrs. George Fredericks, Harvey and Conolly, Fred French, Stead (The Cure), McDermott, Vance, Maclagan, and many other leading artists of the time, not forgetting Mr. Hudson himself, a highly-gifted vocal comedian.

In course of time the occupancy of the hall passed from Mr. Hudson to Mr. Wm. Barnes, his relative, a very gifted local amateur actor and a tenor singer, who was also a nephew of Sims Reeves. Mr. Barnes achieved his greatest successes in the hall with some very fine amateur dramatic performances, in the course of which he unearthed some exceptionally high-class talent, who afterwards made names for themselves on the professional stage. Among the names of such may be recalled Osmund and Edmund Tearle, John Carter Edwards (afterwards with Mr. Wilson Barrett); Joseph Rainbow, who built the Smethwick Theatre; Robt. Hall, who built the Aston Theatre; T. McNatty, J. McNatty, R. Tolly, Medlicott, J. Fox, R. Rowe, Pat Feeney, McDermott, &c.

Mr. Barnes also recalls that soon after the great fight between Tom Sayers and Heenan, a benefit performance was given at the hall for Bob Brettell, the Birmingham champion, at which two men—Jack Grant and Mike Madden—met twice, and fought for no less than eleven hours. Simon Finnety, Morris Roberts, Peter Roberts, Tom Lane, Tom Sayers, and Brettell himself also took part in the proceedings.

After thirty-eight years of ignoble usage, the old hall is now passing into the hands of the house-wreckers, to give place to modern business premises, and its passing will awaken a few sighs and some pleasant recollections among not a few of the older generation in Birmingham.

What's in a Name?

"I was staying in a certain town," says Mr. Reggie Bolton in the Bradford Daily Telegraph, "when one evening I took home a friend after the theatre. The landlady came in with the doleful news that there was nothing for supper but cold meat and cocoa.

"'Never mind,' I said; 'this is Bohemia, you know.'

"Then, to our utter astonishment and amusement, she turned to my friend and said, 'Pleased to meet you, Mr. Bohemia.'"

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, Aug. 18.—The Gura Opera season came to an end on Tuesday evening, after an eight weeks' triumph. For the closing performance the same opera was selected as for the opening one in June—Die Meistersinger. The house was crowded from floor to ceiling, and the New Royal Opera seats 1,600 persons. The audience came with the intention of expressing their goodwill towards the popular artist-manager in any case, and the excellent performance only increased the enthusiasm. Herr Soomer, from the Leipzig Opera, sang the rôle of Hans Sachs. He was new to Berlin, and created a tremendously favourable impression; his voice is not particularly powerful, but exceedingly sweet and sympathetic—a baritone such as was owned by a famous "Hans Sachs" now passed away, Herr Betz, of the Royal Berlin Opera. Herr Soomer was applauded with great warmth, and, contrary to all the rules, frequently by open stage. Another "guest" was the impersonator of Walter Stoltzing, Herr Urius, whose agreeable tenor was not quite adequate to the demands of the rôle. Frau Gura-Hummel sang the part of Eva, which does not suit her as well as many others; but she, too, came in for her share of applause. Other rôles were admirably taken by Frau Costa, Herren Wittekopf, Wiedemann, and Albert. The conductor was Kapellmeister Stransky, who was deserving of all praise, and the mounting, which had been arranged under the personal supervision of Herr Gura, left nothing to be desired. The company got an enthusiastic send-off, cries of "Auf Wiedersehen" resounding throughout the building. Many among the audience would have liked a speech from the manager; but Herr Gura did not come forward, and the crowd finally dispersed. The general wish is expressed in the Press and among the Berlin theatre-goers, that every year, during the holidays of the Royal Opera, the stage of the smaller house may be occupied by the very excellent company that Herr Gura understands so well to get together.

THE great musical event of the coming season will be the first production of Richard Strauss' new opera, Der Rosenkavalier, at the Royal Opera, Dresden. The composer is busy with the instrumentation of the last act in his villa at Garmisch, among the Bavarian Alps. It is, as has already been said, quite a new departure for Dr. Strauss, who says concerning the work: "I have followed this time the path of poetic yet wild merriment, which never oversteps the boundary of gracefulness. The second act closes with a genuine 'Vienna Waltz,' and the duet between 'maid' (Kämmerkätzchen) Oktaviane and the Baron Ochs in the 'chambre séparé' is entirely composed of waltz melodies." The plot of the new opera is briefly as follows:—In the dressing-room of the Princess Werdenberg—one of the ladies at the Court of Maria Theresa of Austria—a lovesick youth named Oktavian sighs at his mistress's eyebrow. Baron Ochs, an elderly, pompous cousin of the Princess, enters, and the youth, not to compromise his mistress, dresses up as a maid. The Baron informs his cousin in a lordly manner that he has betrothed himself, and asks her to procure him a "Rosenkavalier," that is, a youth who hands the future bride the "betrothal rose" in the name of the bridegroom—a custom of the period. Oktavian is selected for the mission, but the bride falls in love with the messenger, and has moreover, long sought to rid herself of Baron Ochs auf Lerchanau, which is his full title, whose impassioned love-making disgusts her. She and Oktavian plot together. The youth, in his becoming costume as Oktaviane the maid, begs the foolish old man to grant him a rendezvous; he, being ever a victim to a pretty face, agrees, is caught in the trap, and disgraced. Oktavian and the Baron's intended bride then form a happy pair. Herr Hugo von Hoffmannsthal, the author of the libretto of all Dr. Strauss' dramatic compositions, has this time written a delicate witty text, which the music exactly fits. Arrangements for the production of the opera at the Scala, Milan, in January, are completed. The Italian title is Il Cavaliere delle Rose.

A NEW one-act farce by Annie Neumann-Hofer met with a cordial reception at the Folies Caprice a day or two ago. The title is Das alte Lied (the old story); it is a risky story, told with some tact and a good deal of humour, but with little or no originality. A lady of "temperament" is discovered by her husband in circumstances that leave no doubt as to her relations to his best friend. Instead of losing his temper and turning the other man out of doors the injured spouse joins the hands of the lovers, and bids his friend arrange the divorce. The bright acting contributed to the favourable reception of the piece.

THE scheme of building a grand opera house in the West of Berlin has fallen through at the eleventh hour owing to technical and other difficulties. A number of first-rate artists had already been engaged, and will have to be compensated.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, Aug. 25.—The translator's name does not appear in the bill, but it is a commendable piece of work, evidently doing full justice to the eminent Danish author's latest play. There is more of tragedy than comedy in the plot, and although it is of somewhat sensational kind it created a profound impression upon the large audience. Peter Krumbak is a writer of plays. He has just finished a drama which treats in verse of the ancient theme of Samson and Delilah (Simson it is termed in German), and his wife Dagmar, an actress by profession, is to give the rôle of the fair siren. Peter adores his wife and trusts her implicitly, while infidelity is, in reality, no name for her naughty doings. She changes her lovers like her gloves, and the latest addition is a wealthy tradesman named Meyer, who is a revoltingly low character. The first act is full of bright humour; the second shows us a rehearsal of Krumbak's piece—a scene that always takes with the average theatre-goer—and the tragic element commences. The attitude of Dagmar and Meyer leaves no possible doubt as to their relations to each other. Krumbak—nervous and irritable as authors are supposed to be at the rehearsals of their plays—is roused to desperation, but he cannot bring himself to follow his first inclination and slay the lovers then and there. He wanders off alone with his thoughts and misery, returning only on the night of the production. He finds the guilty pair together at supper, perfectly oblivious of him and his wretchedness. He pulls a revolver from his pocket with deadly intent. But he cannot murder—it is not his nature; and so he turns the weapon against himself, and falls dead at the faithless woman's feet. The acting was capital, although Herr Biensfeldt is always better in comedy than in tragedy. The reception was so cordial that a lengthy run may safely be predicted. The author was not present, but arrives at Berlin to-day to look on at his play.

MESSAGER'S operetta Die kleinen Michus is being given at the Schiller Theatre O., the stage of which during the holidays of the company is occupied by the Gottscheid Opera Company. The amusing work is, of course, well known in Berlin, and it was well received, despite the fact that the interpretation left a good deal to be desired. Fräulein Mizzi Will and Fräulein Tilly Feiner as Anne-Marie and Marie-Anne were laudable exceptions. The clever young artists sang and acted delightfully; in fact, the amount of success the operetta achieved was due entirely to their combined efforts.

A SERIES of prizes,—the highest of which is 3,000 marks and the lowest 1,000—is being offered by the famous newspaper proprietor August Scherl for German waltzes in the style of "The Blue Danube." Anyone may compete. Among the judges are the kapellmeister of the Royal Opera, Dr. Beier, and Johann Strauss, Imperial kapellmeister at Vienna.

AT the Komische Oper on Wednesday Lehar's romantic operetta Zigeunerliebe reached its fiftieth performance. Notwithstanding the warm temperature the house was well filled, and the audience thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Applause was long and hearty, and the artists—who included Herr Mantler, who is leaving us all too soon for the Imperial Opera at Vienna—were deserving of every commendation. Herr Gregor had staged the pretty work himself, so that the best possible success in that respect was attained.

ON Sept. 1 Manfred, by Robert Schumann, will be given at the Royal Opera. It was in the bill some time ago on the occasion of the anniversary of the composer's birth, but, owing to the indisposition of more than one of the artists, was compelled to be postponed. Miss Geraldine Farrar will return to the Royal Opera next month for a season, giving a series of performances of well-known rôles. The charming American diva will have an enthusiastic welcome.

A SOUTH AFRICAN APPEAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—In your issue of July 9 you were good enough to publish an appeal I sent you on behalf of Mr. Fred Bartlett, formerly of the managerial firm of Roberts, Archer, and Bartlett. By the mail which arrived here on Aug. 2 I received a letter for Mr. Bartlett from Mr. Quinton McPherson, 13, Bonneville-gardens, Clapham, who enclosed a P.O.O. for £5. Mr. Bartlett is writing to thank Mr. McPherson. Should any further letters for Mr. Bartlett come addressed to my care I shall advise you of their receipt.—Yours faithfully,

WALTER BAXTER.

Burg-street, Capetown,
Aug. 3, 1910.

MR. ROBERT LORAINE, the actor-airman, who was projecting a flight across the Irish Channel from Holyhead to Dublin, had his aeroplane smashed during a flight on the Island of Anglesey on the 12th inst., and narrowly escaped with his life. He was in the air at Bryn Goelcerth when the tail of his aeroplane broke, and it was dashed to earth. For two days he had been waiting for favourable weather to cross to Dublin. Six tugs were strung across the Channel on the Friday in preparation for a start during the day, but the wind was too high to admit of a flight.

AN eloquent appreciation of the qualities possessed by Mr. Robert Loraine, who did his early aviation exploits under the name of "Mr. Jones," is given by a contributor to the Liverpool Daily Post. "I consider myself fortunate," says the writer, "in having met Mr. Loraine, actor and aviator. I do not write of him for the purpose of advertising him, but because I, like everybody else who has had to do with him, in however slight a degree, have been impressed by an exceptional personality. I met him first soon after his arrival through the air from Blackpool on the Rhos-on-Sea Golf Links. He remained cool, calm, without affectation, unflurried. I do not think he gave the impression of being a particularly daring man. Rather his manner conveyed the idea that he was a mere dilettante, doing an easy thing easily.

"In the evening of that day, after a ten hours' rest, I saw him walk briskly to his aeroplane in the midst of a line of five men. He was transformed in manner and speech. His speech was quick, crisp, decisive, and he set the pace in walking. He was going into action, and he looked it. His step was free, strong, and quick, his head was held high, and his eyes sparkled.

"The crowd, as eager to see him off, pressed too closely for their own safety, and for over half an hour his assistants begged, implored, and commanded the people to leave the aviator a clear course. During that period I caught a glimpse of yet another phase of the man's character—that of determined patience. He sat immovable on his throne. He must have been burning with the desire to get away for Holyhead, for the sea mist was gathering densely in the direction he must take, and he had promised to be at Holyhead at a certain time. There was not a trace of impatience visible in his features or in his manner. He sat as immobile as the Sphinx.

"My next glimpse of Loraine was at Bryn Goelcerth, in the wilds of northern Anglesey, ten miles from any railway station. He had landed there the night before after a sea trip of over eighty miles since leaving Rhos-on-Sea, and then driven in a farmer's cart to Holyhead, sixteen miles away. He had just returned by motor, and I met him at eleven o'clock—brisk, keen, alert, and eager to make a start on the penultimate stage of his flight to Ireland. His mechanics had been tuning the machine up in readiness for his flight, and shortly afterwards announced that everything was ready, but he could not start. So Loraine controlled himself, and spent nine hours chatting in French to his mechanics, or lying on the grass apart, as if he were a mere spectator, and indifferent as to whether the aviator flew or stayed, and not once did he display any sign of impatience. At 7.30, as the weather showed no signs of improvement, he walked down from the hillside to where his 'plane stood ready for flight, and, quietly remarking to an acquaintance that he was sorry for everybody, he gave orders to have the 'plane anchored down for the night, and actively helped in the work. Then he had a lot of bedding brought out and spread under the machine, intending to pass the night in the open in readiness to take advantage of the slightest chance should one come in the early hours of the morning.

"He did not start next day till 1.10 p.m., and as he sat in the car he looked eager, bright, and determined. The very accident which led to a temporary adjournment of his flight to Holyhead was the outcome of two of his characteristics. Though on Friday night the weather was just as, if not more, unfavourable than it was on Thursday, he wished to gratify the people who had patiently waited in the open fields two days to see him fly. He, better than anyone, knew the terrible risk he ran. His 'plane lay on the slope of a hill over which a twenty-five-mile wind was streaming. As it passed over the hill it naturally shot downwards in the open, and would play heavily on his upper planes once he left the shelter of the hillside. Yet, in order to do a kindly thing, he took the risk, and dared all, and was, for the moment, beaten."

VARIETY GOSSIP.

At the moment of going to press we are told over the telephone by Mr. Fred Baugh that he will not take any action regarding sketches being presented at the halls until he has conferred with the members of the Sketch Association on Tuesday next, at 11.30, at the Covent Garden Hotel.

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Violet Iles (the original Irish colleen of Carrie Laurie's Kindergarten) and Mr. Roderick Gray Stoll (nephew of Mr. Oswald Stoll) will take place on Sept. 17, at St. Mark's Church, North Audley-street, W.

Mr. J. L. Graydon has decided to join the Board of the new Middlesex Theatre of Varieties with Mr. Oswald Stoll and two of that gentleman's co-directors, Mr. Walter Battle and Mr. Henry J. Thomas.

The new Middlesex will be a thoroughly commodious building, and with every possible modern equipment, and with a plentiful supply of the best talent. Linked up with a large circuit, its future should be assured.

The doyen of proprietors has spent upon the old Middlesex from time to time in alterations and additions enough to have rebuilt it entirely, an experience gone through by Sir Henry Irving before he left the Lyceum.

The site of the new Middlesex, which is freehold, will include several adjoining shops and houses. Mr. Graydon is heartily glad to be associated again with a place where he spent so many happy years.

Mr. Maurice de Frece will to-day celebrate his seventieth birthday. He has been associated from his youth up with variety enterprise and variety agency, and has a rich store of reminiscences. He desires to be remembered to his old friends.

The directors of the Palace Theatre recommend the payment of a dividend of 20 per cent. It is also proposed to write £4,000 off the extraordinary expenditure in connection with the London County Council alterations and improvements, to place the sum of £30,000 to reserve, and to carry forward £8,600 to next year's account.

Mr. Fred Trussell is making his headquarters at Winterton during his restful life on the Norfolk Broads; Mr. Joe Wilson has returned very fit and energetic from his thatched cottage at the delightful village by the sea, Chideock, Dorset; Mr. Alfred Butt is enjoying a motoring tour among the Lakes; and Mr. Douglas Stuart is having a good time at St. Malo and experiencing splendid weather.

The annual general meeting of the Music Hall Home and presentation of The Era medal to Miss Vesta Tilley will take place at the Three Stags Hotel on Thursday next, at 2 p.m. The president, Mr. Walter de Frece, will preside. All committeemen, subscribers, and the Press are respectfully invited to attend. Many thanks are due to Mr. Bert Chapman, the Lava Skating Rink, Denmark Hill, for parcel of men's useful underwear sent for the inmates.

In spite of statements to the contrary, Mr. Martin Harvey has been secured by Mr. Walter Gibbons as the leading attraction at the Palladium on Dec. 26. Mr. Harvey proposes to produce plays in which he has already appeared, with the possible exception of one new piece. The repertory will include The Conspiracy and possibly The Tragedy of Truth. Both plays were seen at the Adelphi during Mr. Harvey's seasons there in 1907 and 1908. The latter play was originally produced at Manchester, under the title of The Spell.

Mr. Bransby Williams returns to the Coliseum once more in impersonations, having added some clever touches to his character sketches of Montague Tidd and Wilkins Micawber. He is well advised to give in contrast to these personalities of the great novelist excerpts from Hamlet (the Ghost scene) and The Merchant of Venice. The noble Dane is dignified and impressive, and Shylock, in his most malignant mood, is certainly powerful.

Mr. Henri Gros, of 1, Taviton-street, Gordon-square, W.C., and of 16, Mark-lane, E.C., chairman and managing-director of the Metropolitan Theatre of Varieties (Limited), managing-director of United Varieties (Limited), and joint managing-director of Variety Theatres Consolidated (Limited), founder of several suburban music-halls, aged sixty-one years, left estate valued at £8,195 gross, with net personalty £4,428. He bequeathed £10 to his coachman, Wm. Hill, and £10 to Leon Zeitlin, in appreciation of his kindly conduct and faithful service

Mr. Gus Elen, the artist sportsman, has had a glorious time with the rod and gun in the North, catching no less than 300 sea-trout in the first week of his holiday and 150 in the second week. Two large pike weighing close on 30lb. were also caught. He has also been fortunate in securing good bags of duck, snipe, golden plover, curlew, &c. Mr. Elen evidently believes in taking plenty of holiday to keep him fit for his work, which he recommences on Monday, Sept. 5, at the Empire, Glasgow, after which London will claim his services. He appears at the Oxford on Sept. 12.

Mr. W. L. Courtney's one-act play, A Woman's Revolt, which will be reproduced at the Palace Theatre on Monday night, is, as its title would seem to imply, a play with a purpose. It was produced, it will be remembered, at one of Miss Maud Allan's special matinées about a year ago, when the audience consisted of at least 80 per cent. ladies. Miss Amy Webster will again undertake the rôle of Gabrielle, and Mr. C. Croker King that of Colonel Routledge. Mr. Walter Pearce, who will play the impetuous Lancelot Rayne, is a young actor who has done excellent work at the Criterion and other West End houses.

The six hundred officers and men of the Queen's Own Rifles, of Canada, who are expected to arrive per the Megantic at Liverpool to-day (Saturday), and who are coming to England for a month's training at Aldershot, their Colonel, Sir Henry Pellatt, bearing personally the expense of the journey, have already received invitations from the Alhambra, the Empire, the Palace, the Tivoli, the London Pavilion, Messrs. Maskelyne and Devant, Mme. Tussaud's, and the Crystal Palace, Sept. 13 to 16 being set apart for the London holiday of these troops of the Dominion. The temporary offices of the regiment are at Walter House, Bedford-street, Strand.

Realising that the variety theatre is the realm of laughter, Mr. George Lestocq (son of Mr. W. Lestocq, Mr. Charles Frohman's London representative) has left the theatre for the time being in order to run merry musical comedies of a tabloid kind in the halls. On Monday next his Very Much Engaged, a miniature musical mélange, will be seen at the Tivoli, and with him will be four pretty girls, to dance with him and to help on the highly-amusing plot. In various plays, ranging from musical comedy to detective drama, Mr. Lestocq, the younger, has made his name both here and in America, but his experiences in the land of vaudeville make him strongly inclined to remain there.

The New Empire, Smethwick, will open on Monday, Sept. 5.

Miss Ella, with her lions, has left for the Continent on a six months' tour.

Communications from Port Said informs us that the Meymotts are having a right royal time on the good ship Osterley on this their second trip out to Melbourne.

Mr. Harry Bland, who is at the Bedford and the Hippodrome, Crouch End, this week, is making a success at both houses with his song "It never worries me."

Mr. Chas. A. White, who has been stage-manager at Coventry Hippodrome, Pavilion, Greenock, Rothesay, Edinburgh, and Sadler's Wells, has been appointed stage-manager at the Birmingham Hippodrome.

Lee and Arden, owing to their great success at the Beach Pavilion, Leven (N.B.) this season, have secured a lease of the place for five years. They have also acquired a site at Largo, three miles distant, which they will work in conjunction

The Italian Circus of the Bros. Volpi concludes a successful engagement at the Scottish Zoo and Circus, Glasgow, this week. The future bookings and arrangements for the Circus will be controlled by Mr. E. H. Bostock himself, and with his extensive knowledge of the business, the citizens of Glasgow may be assured of first-class fare.

Mr. Harry Burdette, who recently relinquished his position as manager of the Coliseum, Glasgow, to take up the general management of the Govan Cross Picture Palace Co., Ltd., is this week enjoying a well-earned holiday at breezy Blackpool, where his many friends in the profession are giving him a right royal time.

At the Tivoli on Monday Les Averinos, a Spanish turn, will be making their first appearance in England. Averino turns a complete somersault in the air from one foot, and what is quite as extraordinary, achieves the same from his knees. He is assisted by a charming lady partner. Averino in Spain is nicknamed "the band of steel."

Niblo's talking-birds Cuckoo and Laura, are once again the talk of the West End, where they are appearing nightly at the London Pavilion with a big success. Mr. Niblo, the trainer, has made a vast improvement in his show. He now presents an Australian bird—quite a comedian—who is called Kelly. Kelly causes roars of laughter with his cockney accent in his arguments with Mr. Niblo.

Mr. Herbert Darnley has made two important "captures." He has engaged a little dapper South American comedian, who combines knockabout business with clear enunciation in his songs and patter on the stage. Herbert's latest will shortly appear in a sketch on tour. Darnley's Dots will shortly be before the public again, the star Dot being a wonderful child dancer, who scored a big success at a leading West End theatre last winter.

It was a real Scotch night at the Grand Theatre, Birmingham, on Wednesday, when members and friends of the Birmingham Burns Club to the number of 350 visited the hall to give a hearty welcome to Harry Lauder. The famous Scotch comedian had an immense ovation when he stepped on to the stage.

After singing three numbers, Lauder, in the course of a short speech, said: "I must thank the Burns Society for their attendance to-night. I am pleased to be an hon. member of that society in Birmingham, and I always feel pleased when I come to your great city. I feel gratified when I meet my fellow-members, and I thank you for the compliment you have paid me." There were further demands for more songs, and Lauder sang "Auld lang syne," the audience joining in the refrain. He had to speak again, and finally concluded by singing "Bonnie, bonnie Scotland."

The many friends of Mr. Harry Stuart will regret to hear the news of his death at Edinburgh last week at the comparatively early age of fifty-two years. Harry Stuart was a well-known pantomimist as a younger man. He retired from the profession, and adopted a business career in Edinburgh, being subsequently stage-manager for some time at the Empire Palace Theatre there. He was attacked by that insidious trouble, cancer, and, after much suffering, passed away at the Royal Infirmary, into which beneficent institution he had entered in the hope of alleviating the pain of the disease. He was buried on Sunday, the 21st inst., in Echo Bank Cemetery, where several brother professionals sleep well after life's fitful fever.

British laws and British customs puzzle Mr. T. Elder Hearn, the famous juggler appearing this week at the Castle Theatre, Stockton-on-Tees, in plays written round himself and company. He writes: "I received a wire from Mr. J. C. Imeson, of the Castle Theatre, Stockton-on-Tees, asking me to travel after the show last Saturday from Bradford. As it was impossible to telegraph (there being no delivery in most provincial places after 9 p.m.), and I naturally thought that Mr. Imeson would never meet the 5 a.m. train on Sunday, I decided to take my own special, getting in at 8 p.m., but Mr. Imeson was up to meet the 5 a.m.

"Arriving at my hotel, I was surrounded by Mr. Imeson, a few detectives, lawyers, &c., to inform me that I should not be permitted to give a vaudeville performance at the Castle Theatre, Stockton. After about one hour I told them there was no need to worry. I would write a play and give it in on Monday. It was then about 10 p.m., and I had not had anything to eat all day (I never take breakfast). It is evidently a crime to eat in England on Sunday; not even in Leeds were the refreshment rooms open, and when they are few things are fit to eat.

"I was up till 3.30 a.m. on Monday, writing the play. It is no easy matter to write round half a dozen people. Round one or two it is perhaps simpler, but as I haven't reached the J. M. Barrie stage yet I found it a difficult task. But my thanks are due to the Three Sisters Sprightly, Wallace Galvin, Gwendoline Coates, Wilson Blackledge, Lady Gordon Stuart, Montague Alcorn, and May Lilian Levey, for the indefatigable way in which they stuck to their parts in order to get the thing through on Monday night.

"Now, sir, is it fair that one theatre should be permitted to play dramas, vaudeville, opera, musical comedy, &c., whereas the other is not allowed to play vaudeville, the only difference being that the former house is allowed smoking and the latter drinking? The latter could easily forgo the drinking when vaudeville is played if permitted to smoke. Let us have the one licence. Why can't the vaudeville artist invade the theatres as the actors do the vaudeville? There is a new field for us if the prices are reduced, and I see a sixteen weeks' summer tour looming in the near future at the best theatres in Great Britain."

Mr. Hermann E. Darewski is enjoying a holiday at Herne Bay, and obtaining inspiration for new melodies "on the silvery sands."

At the Empire, Camberwell, will be presented on Monday a new musical farcical comedy in three scenes, entitled The First Night; or, The Trials and Tribulations of a Poor Stage Manager, written by Tom E. Conover.

Mr. Herbert Shelley, who is making an exceptional success at the Tivoli this week in a series of Irish songs and characteristic stories of Hibernian life, is busy preparing a new protean comedy for production at the Hippodrome, Croydon, next week.

Mr. Charles Kitts and Miss Rhoda Windrum to-night conclude their London season at the Oxford and Metropolitan, where they have met with much success with their farcical absurdity, What a Night! They open with Mr. Stoll at the Grand, Birmingham, on Monday.

Miss Hetty King will play the title-rôle in Aladdin at the Kennington Theatre this Christmas, when Mr. Robert Arthur's production of the Oriental legend on extravaganza lines will challenge comparison with famous productions in former years at the same house.

At the funeral of the late Mr. Frank Postlethwaite on Friday (19th) at Nunhead Cemetery, his father, his wife, and his son were the mourners. The Terriers' Association was represented by Messrs. Jesse Sparrow, W. Nutt, and Walter Norman, and the Music Hall Home by Mr. Ben Woodger, the Secretary.

Miss Violet Lloyd has had to discontinue work for a fortnight through indisposition, but she returns with her husband (Mr. Horace Lane) to the Tivoli on Monday to play their new act, which has been so successful in the provinces and suburbs, Buskers, in which they introduce an amusing skit entitled "The Hobble Dance."

Miss Mildred Blanchard has achieved a great success with Nanon Lafarge, the strong sketch by George R. Sims, which she produced at the Metropolitan on Monday. Miss Blanchard has won warm praise for her performance of the title-rôle, and on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings was the recipient of baskets of beautiful roses, violets, and orchids.

Mr. Lawrence Brough, who is responsible for the presentation in the halls of No. 9, one of the funniest farcelets in variety, has produced this week at the Hulme Hippodrome another amusing piece, Confusion, of which we hear glowing accounts. It is a shortened version of Joseph Derrick's comedy produced in the 'eighties at the Vaudeville Theatre, Strand. We hope to see this piece in London shortly.

Mr. Bay Russell, who is Miss Lottie Bellman's partner on the variety stage in the act "Bits of Vaudeville," had the misfortune to damage his left eye last week. He was sharpening a pencil, when a splinter flew into the eye. Specialists say that Mr. Russell had a narrow escape from losing his sight, but, despite the great pain and inconvenience, he has continued to perform with his usual success.

Mr. Henry Kemble's The Gay Countess company of twenty-six artists scored an enormous success last week at Camden Hippodrome, and is acknowledged by managers and agents to be one of the finest and best-dressed sketches on the road. Miss Josie Farrington in the title-rôle made a decided hit, and Mr. Harry Buss, who caused roars of laughter as Marmaduke, proved himself to be a comedian of the first water.

Miss Millicent Le Hay, the clever daughter of John Le Hay, has scored a big success with Robert Cunningham in the latter's operatic burlesque, The Tenor and the Maid, at Walham Green. Her singing and comic acting caused quite a furore, and brought her many offers for immediate dates, which she is obliged to refuse, owing to her engagement to Mr. Geo. Edwardes for his Merry Widow tour, which opens at Blackpool next week and closes Dec. 3.

The action brought by T. P. Selbit, demonstrator of Dr. Wilmar's Spirit Paintings, against S. A. Mysticus to restrain the latter from presenting Dr. Metzler's Spirit Photographs was heard in the Supreme Court of Judicature before Vacation Judge the Hon. Sir Samuel Evans on Wednesday, the 17th, with the result that the injunction was dissolved. The plaintiff, T. P. Selbit, ultimately wholly discontinued his action, agreeing to pay all damages. The solicitors for the plaintiff were Messrs. Judge and Priestly, and for the defendant Mr. Alfred De Frece.

That beautiful and famous Parisienne, Mlle. Cleo de Merode, will appear for the first time at the London Hippodrome on Monday next. Mademoiselle, who is noted for her exquisite grace and for her Dresden china-like appearance, will submit a series of solo dances, including a Greek dance, a novel Gavotte, and a very effective dance of Normandy. On the Continent Mlle. Merode is recognised as a high authority on the art of the danseuse. At the age of seven she began to study at the Opera, Paris, and her natural abilities quickly marked her out for promotion, and for a long time the lovely girl was the rage of Europe.

Tom Woottwell writes:—"What a contrast! A few years ago we did three turns a night, with horse 'buses and underground railway; and most of the halls were within a mile or two of Charing Cross. Last week I did Watford and the Oxford—twenty miles apart—and Watford twice a night. This week Edmonton, the Oxford, and back to Edmonton! When John Gilpin went to Edmonton it was considered such a great feat that Cowper wrote a poem about it. The Palace is over a mile beyond 'The Bell,' and yet I hear of no poems being written about me! Oh, when will these flying machines be perfect?"

A number of music-hall artists who are appearing at the Opera House and Hippodrome, Scarborough, this week, have had a narrow escape from drowning. On Wednesday morning Mr. Albert Le Fre (comedian), Mr. Leonard of the Norman and Leonard Trio, instrumentalists), Mr. C. W. Walker (the blind coon vocalist, of Walker and May), and Mr. Bentinck (Mr. Walker's assistant), chartered a coble and set off on a fishing expedition.

Heedless of any danger, the party, which also included the boatman and a boy, were attending to their fishing lines, and failed to notice the approach of a steam trawler until it was too late to prevent a collision. The trawler, the Clyde, of Banff, struck the coble with great force, but not sufficiently to cause much damage. The little craft heeled over, however, to such an extent that she was practically full of water, and for a few minutes she was in imminent danger of sinking. The boatman and other occupants of the boat, however, showed great presence of mind, and by dint of rapid baling operations saved themselves from being precipitated into the sea. No member of the party was injured, but they were all wet to the waist. Why the accident happened is a mystery. The men on the trawler did not appear to notice the presence of the coble, and the occupants of the latter were entirely ignorant of the trawler being in the vicinity until the collision occurred.

Mr. William S. Hobbs (Billy Hobbs) has successfully passed the ballot as candidate for membership of the Terriers' Association.

Terrier W. E. Gillin was elected Y.B., and Terrier Arthur Gallimore W.D., upon Sunday last. Terriers Jesse Sparrow and Ben Woodger, Walter Norman, and W. Nutt represented the Association at the funeral of the late Terrier Frank Postlethwaite. The election of officers for September will be held upon Sunday next.

Miss Gertie Gitana has played twenty-two weeks in London this year. She concludes to-night at Walthamstow and Tottenham, where crowded houses nightly have given her enormous receptions. She commences her provincial tour at Glasgow on Monday next, returning to London at Christmas.

The famous Spanish chanteuse, Senorita Carmen Turia, will make her first public appearance in this country at the Alhambra on Monday. A clever songstress, with a voice of remarkable dramatic power, Senorita Carmen Turia will appear in a variety of Spanish songs in costume, and will follow with one or two English ballads.

The committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild beg gratefully to thank the following for donations and gifts:—Miss Lottie Albert, box of useful clothing; Miss Ruby Dahl, 2s. 6d.; Mr. O. H. Berwitz, 1s. As Miss Melinda May, the secretary, is absent on a well-earned holiday, the offices for the next week will be open to transact important business only.

Mr. Hermann Darewski, the composer of that charming coon impression "I used to sigh for the silvery moon," visited the Granville, Walham Green, last week, expressly to hear the Stavordale Quintette render his masterpiece. He afterwards described the famous quintette's performance as "perfect," while he and his wife, Madge Temple, "sat and listened absolutely spellbound."

Beatie and Babs have returned from the Continent after making one of the greatest successes ever known by any British or foreign artists. While away they have had offers for China, Japan, India, and America. They return to the Pavilion, Glasgow, on Monday.

At the Alhambra during the week Mr. Alfred Moul has provided well for his sport-loving patrons, who are being given one of the best wrestling shows it has been our good fortune to witness. The wrestlers are picked men from our Indian Empire, and Gama is the leading lutteur, who challenges the world. A study of Gama, who has entered for the great Stadium contest, has appeared in our up-to-date contemporary John Bull.

George Fuller Golden, the founder of the White Rats of America, is suffering from consumption, and is slowly dying in a sanatorium in California. His resources are exhausted; and his wife—of whom he wrote so poetically and with such touching affection as "the Little Gold Lady" in his book, "My Lady Vaudeville and Her White Rats"—is without means to support herself and her children. In these sad circumstances, Mr. Harry Mountford, secretary to the Board of Directors of the White Rats, has made an appeal on his behalf—an appeal which should be largely responded to in this country as well as the States.

It will be remembered that George Golden, when first seen on the English variety stage, had succeeded the late Mr. Sweeney as partner with Cliff Ryland. Then he sought histrionic fame, and went through a rough time, to find himself eventually a most successful jester at the Palace Theatre. Unfortunately, this great success could not be followed up. The illness from which the poor invalid cannot recover began to show itself, and the most favoured American comedian, as he was at the time, returned to his native land a stricken man.

In writing of himself in the book to which we have referred, Golden has told us that "his early environment moulded him into a vagabond. His youth was spent among bootblacks and newsboys, and before he was fourteen he knew every lure and trick of the nether world, and at this age he ran away from home and became a tramp, a mountebank. He joined circuses, became a circus clown, a leaper and tumbler, made the announcements in the ring; performed in the concerts; became a negro minstrel, an actor in plays, and before he was twenty years of age gained some reputation on the variety stage with a little partner named Quigg.

Golden deserves well of his fellows, and the most generous of professions will see to it that his last days are not beset with anxiety for those near and dear to him. The American colony of performers, headed by Mr. Claude Bartram, have already started subscriptions; and their English brothers and sisters will speedily follow suit, remembering the old motto, "He gives twice who gives quickly."

At the termination of the engagement of Mr. Charles Clifford, the favourite harpist and entertainer, at the Curzon Hall, Birmingham, on Saturday night last, after a triple encore, Mr. Waller Jeffs presented Mr. Clifford with a very rare volume on the history of the harp, with numerous engravings, in token of the great appreciation of Mr. Clifford's abilities and personal kindness during his several engagements at the Curzon Hall and other halls under his management. Mr. Clifford thanked the donor, amid tremendous cheering from the large audience present.

At the Coliseum Mr. Arthur Williams, Mr. Robert Whyte, jun., and Miss E. Nolan O'Connor have been winning applause and laughter during the week in a sketch full of quaint bucolic comedy so beloved of playgoers. It is called The Prize Winner, and is from the pen of Herbert C. Sargent, who has collaborated with W. W. Jacobs in The Changeling and other forepieces.

According to information obtained by the postmaster, a lady of severe maturity, unimpeachable respectability, plain of speech as well as of face, is thought to have won a prize of £200. As he is married "the man of letters" cannot woo, but he can urge his friend the farmer to do so. The latter agrees, also giving his word that the postmaster shall have for his commission a pig on the day of the betrothal and another on the day of the wedding. Everybody would be quite happy, but for the surprising news that after all it is the lady's niece who has won the prize. Such clever comedians as Mr. Arthur Williams and Mr. Robert Whyte, jun., make the most of a couple of character sketches, and the uncompromising female is admirably impersonated by Miss E. Nolan O'Connor.

Miss Millie Hylton made a sensational success at the Empire, Holloway, on Thursday with a new song called "For a woman's honour." The idea is very dramatic. Jim, a burglar's sweetheart, is threatened by a "swell" that he will inform the police of Jim's connection with a burglary unless the girl will sacrifice her honour. Jim enters, and, after a struggle, kills the "blackmailer." The trial which follows is very powerfully described by the girl in the second verse; and in the last she reads in the paper of Jim's reprieve. "The great Judge of all has judged between the slayer and the slain" are the concluding lines of the chorus. The full title of the song is "A woman's honour, a cry from the gutter, a tragedy of slum life." The author and composer are Messrs. Fred Thompson and Powell.

Miss Donna Morgan, handsome of face and figure, is captivating audiences at the Palace Theatre in her song "Little Blue Bird." Miss Morgan looks particularly well in doublet and hose, and should figure to advantage as a principal boy in pantomime.

Mr. Leonard Rosson, with his sketch An Indian Romance, has been a big attraction at the Camberwell Empire this week, both managers and agents being loud in praise. Several return dates have been booked.

The latest addition to the palatial houses of entertainment belonging to Moss' Empires, Ltd., is the new Finsbury Park Empire, which is to be opened to the public on Monday, Sept. 5. It is situated in a very prominent position at the junction of St. Thomas's-road and Prah-road, facing the Finsbury Park Great Northern Station and the Piccadilly and Brompton and City and Great Northern tube railways, and is also close to the trams for High Barnet, Finchley, Enfield, Wheistone, Edgware, Waltham Cross, Edmonton, and all outlying districts in the north of London.

This new home of variety in North London has taken nearly a year to erect, and everything that architectural skill and a lavish supply of money could secure has been employed to ensure the new theatre being not only one of the most luxuriant, but at the same time one of the largest and most comfortable first-class variety theatres in London. In fact, no less a sum than £45,000 has been expended on the construction and decoration of the house.

On entering the theatre there are two lobbies, one each side of the booking-office, which open into an Old English hall, carried out in quaint design. The walls are divided out in flat oak, half-timbered work, filled in with white plaster. The floors are covered with parquet flooring, and the staircases are all of oak. The box-office is designed to correspond with the rest of the work, and has the appearance of an old-fashioned shop front. The auditorium is divided into stalls, pit, grand circle or balcony, upper circle, and gallery. The fine, bold lines of the decorations with the rich gold introduced, and tier upon tier of luxurious tip-up seats, with wide, graceful sweeps, the tasteful red and pink draperies, the beautiful box facades, all combine to give an appearance of grandeur which would be difficult to surpass.

The building is entirely isolated, and, consequently, an exceptional number of exits have been provided. It is fireproof, and is erected on the cantilever system, giving everyone a clear and uninterrupted view of the stage. The house has been erected from the designs and under the supervision of Messrs. Frank Matcham and Co., the well-known architects.

The artists for the vaudeville entertainments at the Crystal Palace, which are given twice daily in the Centre Transept, include, for the week commencing 29th inst., Miss Kessanly's Dogs, La Dor Troupe, wonderful gymnasts and acrobats; the Aeriale, in their marvellous aerial flights; Mlle. Hortense, tight-wire artist; &c.

When Mme. Sarah Bernhardt appears at the Coliseum on Sept. 19, she will present the second act of Rostand's famous play, L'Aiglon, during the first week of her engagement. The cast will be:—Le Duc de Reichstadt, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt; Flambeau, M. Decoeur; Metternich, M. Denenbourg; Marmont, M. Piron; Prokech, M. Barry; and Therese, Mlle. Seylor. Mme. Bernhardt will bring her own scenery.

It is with much regret that we announce the death of Mr. Will Letters (song writer), which took place on Monday at 3.15 p.m., in his thirty-seventh year. The poor fellow collapsed in Alexandra-road, West Kirby, on Thursday, the 18th, owing to a bloodvessel bursting in the head. He lingered on until Monday, when he passed away at the Cottage Hospital at Hoylake. The local papers comment very severely on the fact that the stricken man was allowed to remain in the rain for almost an hour before the arrival of a doctor. It appears that the telephone was responsible for part of the delay: the number of the lodge where the ambulance is kept was unknown.

A Glasgow man, Will Letters was the possessor of a powerful voice, and formerly made descriptive songs his speciality, and speedily became a great favourite in the concert-rooms of the North of England, but subsequently he developed a latent gift of low comedy, and was successfully engaged in a number of pantomimes in England, Ireland, and Scotland. He for a time played Sergeant Lightning in Mr. Fred Karno's Dandy Thieves, and also appeared, in succession to Fred Kitchen, as John Willie Jaggs in Saturday to Monday. Following upon several years' approved appearances, he had been re-engaged as chief comedian in one of the Birmingham pantomimes next season.

As a song-writer he excelled, and a list of his ditties would be a very lengthy one. Mr. Wilkie Bard's enormous pantomime hit "Put me on an island where the girls are few" was from his pen, and at the time of his death he was at the very zenith of success, his song "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" written in conjunction with C. W. Murphy, having made his name almost a household word throughout Great Britain and America, and the present great song craze "Flanagan" completes the tale of deserved success. He was, in addition to a song commissioned by Eugene Stratton, engaged on other numbers at the time of his sudden and fatal indisposition.

He was buried at Yew Tree Cemetery, Knotty Ash, Liverpool, on Thursday. Among the mourners were Mrs. Will Letters (wife), Mr. and Mrs. Pugh (cousins), Mr. Arthur Pugh (cousin), Messrs. Will Hatton, Willie Burnett, Fred Curran (representing Variety Artists' Federation), Will Fisher, Lloyd Campkin, Ernest Price (Adeler and Sutton), Mr. and Mrs. De Silva, Mr. Will Kearns, Mrs. Perrin, Mrs. Thyer, Mrs. Alf. Birchall and daughter, Mr. C. W. Jones, Mr. J. McCarthy, and Mr. Dooley.

Wreaths were sent by Mrs. Will Letters and Little Irene (wife and daughter), Mr. and Mrs. Pugh (cousins), Mr. Arthur Pugh (cousin), Mr. Will Murphy, Miss Ella Retford, Mr. Will Hatton, Mr. Frank Dunbar, Mr. and Mrs. De Silva, Mr. Malcolm Scott, Mr. Fred Curran, and the New Macs, Girls of Will Letters company, Boys of Will Letters company, Artists and Staff, Pavilion, West Kirby, Artists and Staff, Pavilion, Douglas Head, Dare's Minstrel company, Douglas Head, and "Brother and Sister Artists in Douglas."

Mr. Walter de Frece has been confiding to the Referee some opinions on present-day variety entertainments. He says: "I thoroughly agree that owing to the number of turns or acts now packed into programmes, they have not sufficient time apiece, not only to give their full act, but even to show what they really can do." I have seen many an excellent programme robbed of fifty per cent. of its value by the insane and wasteful curtailment of acts. Many a good, acceptable turn has been murdered to supply room for a fifth-rate, thirty minutes' sketch. It is always the bright, brief and useful turns that are compelled to cut—the most lengthy and tedious of sketches are allowed to play as long as they wish. The public is yearning once more for real artists, but, under the present system, we are developing a never-ending list of living yet hopeless automatons.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

Various hollow-sounding "excursions and alarums" and "knockings at the gate" have already been ventured upon by the camp followers of pantomime, who yet struggle aimlessly in their last year's tracks, and as feebly as fitfully seek to cajole before the proper time the wary leaders and captains into cumbering themselves with munitions of war that will be obsolete and "scrap" long before Boxing Night. But just as the War Office knows where to find Kynoch's, so do the Kitcheners of the entertainment world know where Francis and Day's establishment is situate when pantomime songs are wanted, and so bide content awhile. As during the past quarter-century and prior, the songs that will be the telling factors in the forthcoming pantomime successes of 1910-11 will emanate from the house from which such have ever been expected, and always obtained.

Mr. Max Dreyfus, of the New York firm of T. B. Harms and Francis, Day, and Hunter, accompanied by Mrs. Dreyfus, is just now sojourning in London. The itinerary of their European visit will also include Paris, Berlin, and Vienna.

At the Holloway Empire Mr. G. H. Elliott has been evoking thunderous applause nightly for his magnificent renditions of "There's a little Black Cupid in the moon" and "Mister Owl." For both these numbers of Messrs. Francis and Day's a set scene and full stage is in evidence, which helps to set forth their superlative excellences in no small degree.

Mr. George Lashwood, at the Hackney Empire, has been reserving each evening to the last as a bonne bouche his great chorus song "O blow the scenery on the railway!" the chorus of which has been greatly to the liking of wonderful audiences. The special scenery and effects from the Coliseum, where the song was first produced, are the talk of North-East London, and the item, which is published by Messrs. Francis and Day, is in great request.

Miss Ella Retford's great chorus song "Hi! Hi! Mr. McKie!" with which the vivacious little lady is regaling the habitués of the Shepherd's Bush Empire this week, has caught on tremendously at the Isle of Man, and is, indeed, one of the rages of Douglas. It is published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

A song, entitled "Artful Alliterations," written and composed by that well-known humorous writer Alf Ellerton, has been secured by Mr. Ben Albert, whose "What's the use of sighing?" and "My inventive kiddy"—the latter also from Ellerton's pen—have been eulogised everywhere as real comic songs. Messrs. Francis and Day will issue this latest number, and have already placed the earlier two on the market.

Large editions of that superlatively fine ballad "If I had the world to give you" succeed one another with monotonous regularity, thanks largely to the fine singing of Mr. Dave Carter, who is rapturously applauded for his artistic rendering of it everywhere. Musical Silvo introduces it with splendid effect also in his refined and musicianly entertainment on the silver bells and musical glasses. It is published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

A new song of Miss Gertie Gitana's is ever an item to which importance attaches, and Messrs. Francis and Day, who recently issued her pretty number "Sweet Caroline," have just secured the talented little lady's newest ballad, a song entitled "Lola Lee." It is by Huntley Trevor, a writer who is fast making a name for himself, and T. W. Thurban, of "Brooklyn Cake Walk" fame, and for a number of years the leader of the Oxford orchestra, is responsible for the music. The twain have just written a ballad for Mr. Charles King (of King and Benson), which is entitled "You made me care."

Miss Maidie Scott, who has in study H. F. Greenfield's laughable song "Our Martha Jane can't read," has acquired from Charles Ridgwell and G. A. Stevens a humorous number entitled "Dear, kind Poppa." Messrs. Francis and Day have both in the press.

Miss Gladys Mavius's admired chorus number, "Go through Welcome Avenue," has been secured for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day. It is by Paul Pelham and J. P. Long.

Mr. Gordon Stretton, "the ideal coon," has in his latest number, "There's a little brown girl in Dahomey," a notable addition to his fast-growing répertoire, and it is an item worthy of the author and composer, Harry Gifford and Tom Mellor. At the Royal Standard Music Hall it has been greatly admired and applauded during the week now ending.

By arrangement with Miss Florrie Forde, Messrs. Francis and Day have transferred to Mr. Frank Cass the music hall rights of the song "'Tis a faded picture." Mr. Cass has been creating a furore with the number during the week both at the Camberwell Palace and the Clapham Grand.

MASONS AT WORK.

Chelsea Lodge 3098 held the regular meeting on Friday last at the Chelsea Town Hall, when a heavy agenda of business was presented to the members. In the absence of Mr. Harry Bawn (the Master), the meeting was presided over by Mr. W. H. Hitch, the I.P.M., who was supported by Mr. W. H. K. Walton, S.W., Mr. G. Dybal, J.W., Wolfe S. Lyon, L.R.A.G.P. (treasurer), Chas. J. Doughty (secretary), Monte Bayly, acting S.D., E. J. Lester, J.D., H. J. Nicklen, I.G., Angelo Asher, organist, and Felino, steward. The order of the business had to be varied in consequence of Mr. Will Johnson, who attended to complete the formalities of being made a Freemason, having to return to Nottingham in time to attend his professional engagements. The W.M., immediately after the minutes of the last meeting had been confirmed, performed the ceremony in due form. The chair was then occupied by Mr. Wolfe S. Lyon, who initiated Messrs. Thomas Finglass and Amandus Linden (Amandus) into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. Mr. Hitch delivered the address to the candidates connected therewith, and again resuming the Master's chair, advanced Messrs. Bert Marsden and Chas. Stirling. Mr. John Worth, P.A.G.P., being present as a visitor, was invited by the presiding Master to complete the ceremony with Messrs. Elvio, O'Malley, and Mackay, which he performed with masterly ability, making a very deep impression on the candidates. A vote of sympathy and condolence with the family of the late Mr. Henri Gros, who was a founder of the Lodge, was proposed by Mr. Lyon, seconded by Mr. Frank Hardie, and carried unanimously, and ordered to be recorded on the minutes. There was a large attendance of the members and their friends, who at the conclusion of the business adjourned to the Six Bells Hotel for refreshments, where opportunity was taken, amidst expressions of love and respect, to wish a very pleasant time to Mr. C. J. Doughty, the indefatigable secretary, who was leaving that evening for the Isle of Man to spend a well-earned holiday.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

LONDON PAVILION.

There has been considerable controversy in theatrical circles in America regarding the stage Jew—generally presented by the melodramatist as an avaricious and heartless rogue. The writer of the sketch The Silver Medal, which was produced on Monday at the London Pavilion, outlines a character much more human, and therefore much more natural. Abraham Cohen is his name, and when he enters the bare unfurnished room of a London lad, whose father is in "orsepital" with a broken arm, he is determined to have his rent. Ten weeks are owing, and there is not the slightest prospect of payment. The diminutive representative of the debtor deplores the fact, but cannot promise any certainty as to future instalments. Suddenly he thinks of his silver medal. That may fetch something. He brings it, and is induced to tell the story of how he won it. It was for conspicuous bravery in jumping in and saving from drowning a little Jew boy. "Vat's his name?" demands the now excited and interested Cohen. "Ikey," is the reply. It is his own son. There is no more talk of rent owing. The generous Jew gives the boy a bank-note for his father and a gold piece for himself. Mr. Martin Henry presents an interesting study of the Hebrew—presumably from the Czar's dominions; and Miss Irene Ross in the alternating pathos and humour of the boy makes every use of her opportunities. The sketch sounds a sympathetic note, and is cordially received.

The other turns on Mr. Frank Glenister's variety programme, presented during that gentleman's absence on his holiday by Mr. William Cobbett, are much the same as were recently noticed by us. A novelty is introduced, however, in Mr. Wal Pink's burlesque of tableau vivants under the title of Tableaux We Want, a number which is really a parody of the illustrated song. The jokes are occasionally far-fetched, as, for instance, when "The sailor standing on the quay" is represented by a man-of-war's man astride a gigantic doorkey; but there is some spontaneous humour, which is not spoiled by the vocalist attempting to be funny. The scene-painter assists the fun nobly.

The talking birds of Mr. Victor Niblo are particularly interesting as ornithological conversationalists. Both birds are of the parrot tribe, the parrakeet being the more erudite of the trio, being able to respond "Oui, oui" to the question "Parlez-vous français?" and also to speak just a little German. This is Coo-Coo. Laura, a gayer specimen of her kind, is equal to some smart answers and to a very hearty laugh. "The bird in the gilded cage" is also a satirist in speech, and the turn throughout excites considerable interest and curiosity, especially when one of the feathered talkers is brought down by its trainer to converse with some of the occupants of the stalls.

Miss Esme Culverdale chooses "Land of hope and glory" as one of her contributions, and displays culture in her singing. Mr. Arthur Aldridge is as popular as ever with tenor songs; and a warm reception awaits Mr. Fred Russell's ventriloquial humour, so cleverly and ingeniously presented. Mr. Arthur Leslie introduces a couple of clever imitations in his impressions of Wilkie Bard and Mark Sheridan; and the Three Dreadnoughts make a welcome return as expert rifle shots. Mr. Bond Sayers ably directs a fine orchestra.

THE BEDFORD.

Mr. B. P. Lucas is putting forward a capital programme for this week's bill, and excellent business is the result. The chief place is held by Mr. J. G. Brandon and company, who present The Dragon's Claw, a most dramatic sketch dealing with life in Chinatown, New York, and the lives led in the opium dens. The play is evidently based on a good knowledge of the dens, for it is most realistic and capitally played, notably by Mr. J. G. Brandon, whose picture of the leader of a rough gang is most telling; while Mr. G. A. Lloyd makes a hit as the old Chinese keeper of the den. A clever sketch of Mad Mag, an old opium slave, is given by Miss Mary Bronton.

Harry Bland, comedian, is diverting with "It never troubles me"; a dainty comedienne is Nellie Tone, who has a captivating manner, and sings a catchy song, "Go home," after which she gives a song illustrating the various ways of saying "Good-bye," which is cleverly done, and this bright little lady has a most rousing reception. The Flying Winskills give a fine display of flying trapeze work, and execute many clever feats. The small boy of the troupe especially is to be commended for his work, which is so neatly done. Comedy cycling is safe in the hands of Bert Woodward, whose feats are extremely clever, and also amusing.

The Half-Caste is as thrilling as the most fastidious could wish for, introducing, as it does, a live Indian python. The story of the devotion of a half-caste woman to an English officer and the rescue of the garrison is full of military detail, a success as usual, and the appreciation won by his efforts is fully deserved. The Eight Colonial Girls appear in song and dance, and their turn is decidedly pretty and effective. Their singing is tuneful, and their dancing performed with neatness and precision. Miss Kitty Clinton has a good song in "I wonder if you miss me," which she renders with skill, and is deservedly applauded. The great Bertisch performs many wonderful feats of strength with considerable ease. Heavy barbells he lifts with little apparent effort, and in addition he supports the weight of several men without any noticeable difficulty. His poses show beyond all doubt the highly-developed condition of the muscles all over his body.

Miss Clarice Mayne is accorded a most enthusiastic reception, and at the conclusion of her performance is called again and again. She has some excellent numbers, which she presents in fine style, and her impersonations of various music-hall artists are extremely lifelike and wonderfully good. She is assisted at the piano by Mr. J. W. Tate, who is quite a host in himself. Some highly pleasing music is provided by Olga, Elgar, and Eli Hudson. Their instruments are the piccolo and the flute, and the wonderful manner in which they play these in combination with the human voice is very tasteful, and is much appreciated. Mr. Harry Grey, a comedian with curious methods, makes a startling entrance in his flying machine, which collapses and lets him down. He is particularly amusing. Ferriss and May, a comedy couple, have a humorous duologue in Two's Company, Three's——, out of which they squeeze every atom of fun.

Nevill Graham and company appear with conspicuous success in the sketch Pride of Regiment. The piece was fully detailed in our columns a short time ago, and it is still going as strongly as ever. Mr. Nevill Graham plays the proud and indignant father with distinction, Mr. Arthur Leslie is well placed as the son, and the part of the mother receives capable handling from Miss Nellie Lauraine. The pictures shown by the Bioscope are of the best. The entertainment is brought to a happy conclusion by an amusing item in the shape of an amateur carnival. In this appear several amateur performers who fancy themselves adapted to the stage. Some are good, some indifferent, and others particularly funny.

RICHMOND HIPPODROME.

The enterprise of the management here in providing an all-round excellent bill is telling its own story; on the occasion of our visit the pretty Thames-side theatre was packed by an enthusiastic and delighted audience. There appears to be little in the equilibristic line that Carta and Mirtziana cannot do; nothing comes amiss to this clever couple, who balance tables, chairs, bicycles, and each other with particular smartness. For patter of the droll type Reg. Beauchamp wins favour. Attired in feminine costume, he sings with considerable energy, and is voted hugely funny from pit to gallery. Always welcome, Chrissie Lennard vocalises charmingly, and quite excellent is her dainty contribution "I wonder." "Are there any girls there?" is the puzzling query thrown out in her second song.

A Moving Picture, from the versatile pen of G. R. Sims, is admirably enacted by Henri de Vries and his clever company. As Jenny Hoffman Miss Dorothy Drake plays with much intelligence and pathos; Mr. Douglas Vigors displays dramatic force as Max Goldstein; Mr. F. Derek Powell does much with slender possibilities. With Henri de Vries' marvellous quick-change all playgoers are familiar. In this particular sketch the talented actor represents no less than five characters, and endows each rôle with some touch of his wonderful versatility. Always a favourite here, Sam Mayo's dismal joy finds immense appreciation; the audience shrieks with merriment at his recital of "Wallaperoo," and the applause is an indication of the amusement afforded by the efforts of the immobile one.

Liza's Wedding Day proves another incident in the annals of Cockaigne. It is splendidly played by Swan and Stanley; in a programme bristling with good things it is fair to add Liza's Wedding Day was easily among the winners of the evening. Banjo melody finds able exponents in Stanley and Greenop, whose selection of Suppé's "Poet and Peasant" is delightful throughout, and is excellently given by these two well-trained musicians.

A big reception is deservedly accorded to Clarice Mayne, who invests her contributions with artistic naïveté; she sang charmingly "Put on your hat, little girlie," and gives imitations of popular artists, including Marie Lloyd and Vesta Victoria. At the piano is Mr. J. W. Tate, who also enhances the performance by his clever facial business. The orchestra is under the bâton of Mr. E. W. Eyre, who did such good work at Walthamstow Palace. Mr. David C. James retains the managerial reins, and should be proud of his team.

COBORN AND LEADERSHIP.

To the Editor of The Era.

Sir,—With your permission I am about to commit myself to a public statement, of the serious nature of which I am well aware. It is my statement of claim to be regarded as the leading man of the music-hall business—from the performers' standpoint—if there be such an individual. If my claim be admitted, we will quickly get to business; but if any man be inclined to dispute it, let him do so. Let him do so boldly, frankly, and fearlessly, whether on his own behalf or on that of any other man. I can honestly say that I do not know of any man who could successfully dispute my position. My chief reason for writing this letter at all, after very long and full consideration, is that I feel that there never was a time in the history of the variety stage when a leader who is able and willing to act and lead was so greatly needed: there is so very much to be done, not talked, for the improvement and adjustment of our conditions of work and life. It is true that Mr. Clemart is the leader of the Variety Artists' Federation, and I know no man in our business so admirably fitted for the work he has to do. I wish every worthy member of our profession was also a member of the V.A.F., but there are many who, for various reasons, at present are not. However that may be, there is a clear necessity for, and a possibility of, a greater unity between all those who go to form our great and powerful community. It is serving no useful purpose to be content that we should be known simply as V.A.F. and non-V.A.F. There are plenty of matters upon which the majority are of one opinion, however much they may differ on certain subjects and points.

Let no man suppose that I want to throw any firebrands about or preach crusades or holy wars. I have lived and worked in the business quite long enough to know that managers, agents, and others have rights quite as true and insistent as those of any of my brother and sister performers, and there are many ways and means whereby they could all combine and work together for the general good.

I don't know how your readers feel about one matter in particular: I mean the fact that managers and artists both are being hindered and cramped in their work by the way the "sketch question" is treated by our legal authorities, pushed on by unscrupulous and interested rivals in trade. I know we are not all sketch artists—I am not one myself; but an enemy to one branch of our business would as readily attack any other if he had the chance and the power. Some time ago a very important manager wanted to give a music-hall entertainment at a theatre which he had acquired; but trade rivals succeeded in preventing him from doing so. Thus another door was, for a time at least, barred against variety artists. This kind of thing ought not to be allowed, and would not be allowed by a self-respecting body of men when by combination and action they could easily stop it. It is because they don't move to stop it that it is allowed to go on, and the magistrates seem powerless, except to convict. There are many other things which need attention and action.

I have not spent thirty-five years in this business with my eyes shut. If any of my younger confrères need any explanation as to my past record of work for the good of our business, the older ones can tell them that I started the first protection association we ever had over twenty-five years ago—the M.H.A.A.—after that the Music Halls Protection, and later the Music Hall League. Let me again, and finally, say that if there is another man deemed more worthy and fit for the leadership, let him be named and let him act. If none, then I shall ask to be supported in my claim.—Yours truly,

CHARLES COBORN.

"POOR AUNTIE."

A new Farcical Comedy Sketch by Victor Rolfe, Produced at the Peckham Hippodrome on Monday, Aug. 22.

Uncle Jim ..... Mr. Wilfrid E. Shine
John ..... Mr. Geoffery Guise
Marjorie Austin ..... Miss Aimee Procter
Auntie ..... Miss Lillie Forsythe

This is an amusing little sketch which agreeably fills up a quarter of an hour. John is a young painter who is eagerly expecting his fiancée, Marjorie Austin, to visit him in his studio. Marjorie has, however, told him she would on no account come unless he provided a chaperone. The young fellow is in despair until the fortunate arrival of his good-natured Uncle Tim furnishes a way out of the difficulty. After much persuasion Uncle Tim consents to impersonate Auntie, and play propriety for the young people. In order to do so he is obliged to don the necessary feminine garments, which belong to some model in the studio Uncle, however, naturally makes a somewhat masculine Auntie, and soon rouses his nephew's anger by his repeated requests to Marjorie to "Kiss your Auntie, dear!" Eventually Marjorie's aunt arrives, and, owing to a dispute between the real and the false the fun soon becomes fast and furious. At last, however, Uncle finds he has had enough of his awkward position, and, throwing off his female attire, he appears as Uncle Tim again. Everybody is finally satisfied except "poor Auntie," who is greatly scandalized by the whole proceedings. Mr. Wilfrid E. Shine brings his long experience as a comedian to bear with much effect upon the rôle of Uncle-Tim, and is completely successful in the part; Miss Aimée Procter is very bright and engaging as Marjorie; Mr. Geoffrey Guise acts excellently as John; and Miss Lillie Forsythe is very well suited to the part of Auntie. The piece was heartily received.

Mr. Horton, Sir.—In your notice of the variety show at the Theatre Royal, King's Lynn, last week, you state that the Two Kays were seen to advantage in Uncle. This is a mistake, as that turn was not there; and the act played was Uncle's Coat, by, yours truly, Mundell and Mayne.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

At the Empire, Hackney, this week Mr. George Lashwood is making a pronounced success with Benjamin Hapgood Burt's magnificent Irish comedy song "Mr Pat O'Hare," which may safely be earmarked as a big potential pantomime winner.

Miss Ada Reeve, at the Empire, Shepherd's Bush, is this week duplicating her phenomenal Coliseum success with Feldman's two big numbers, "Nobody knows, nobody cares," and "Foolish questions," which are nightly received with acclaim by her many delighted hearers.

Miss Ray Ford, who recently made such a hit at the Palace, Shaftesbury-avenue, with Mellor, Lawrence, and Gifford's dainty French laundress number "Marie Louise," is repeating the same popular song at all her other turns for some time to come. She also has several other Feldman numbers in study.

Miss May Lilian Levey is going "great guns" in the provinces just now with two Feldman numbers, "Rain, rain, go away," by Mellor, Lawrence, and Gifford, and "Oh, boys I've seen you there," by Harrington and Neat, both of which songs should stand this gifted comedienne in good stead when she appears in pantomime with Mr. Robert Arthur at Glasgow next Christmas.

Miss Irene May has been cheered to the echo at the Hippodrome, Margate, this week for her rendering of Feldman's ballad "Beautiful garden of roses," by Dempsey and Schmid.

At the Beach Pavilion, Aberdeen, Ray and Ross have been eminently successful with many of the Feldman publications, particularly "My sweet garden queen," "Put on your old plaid shawl," "D O U with G H spells dough," and "Have you seen Charley Digby?"

"THE ROBBERY OF THE MAIL."

A Dramatic Sketch, in Three Scenes, by Arthur Rose, Presented for the First Time at the Bow Palace on Monday, Aug. 22.

Joseph Lesurgues / Dubosc ..... Arthur Rose
Jerome Lesurques ..... J. H. Clyndes
Daubenton ..... Philip Calvey
Joliquet ..... Fred J. Lane
Jeanne ..... Violet Lytton

There have been other adaptations from the French Le Courrier de Lyon, most notably that of The Lyons Mail, but this is the first occasion on which the story in tabloid form has appeared on the music hall stage. It may be said that in the main the author has closely followed the various important incidents, as arranged in The Lyons Mail, with good effect. We see the exterior of Jerome Lesurque's inn at St. Mara and the robbery of the mail, the mistaken identification of Dubosc by the old innkeeper, the room at Joseph Lesurgues' house where the magisterial inquiry is made, the arrest of Joseph for the murder of the mail driver on the evidence of Joliquet, and finally a garret where Dubosc is waiting and watching for the execution of the man who has been wrongly condemned. This is a very strong scene, and splendidly enacted by Mr. Arthur Rose, who has a very heavy task in the dual rôle.

The material is certainly all that is required for a successful dramatic sketch, and, with the capable arrangement of incidents by the author, the story and plot run easily and are quickly discerned. It is certainly one of the best dramatic sketches seen on the variety stage for some time, and should certainly have a long and prosperous life. As already remarked, Mr. Arthur Rose has provided himself with a part which dominates the sketch and is well suited to his histrionic powers. He is intensely convincing in his portrayal of the reckless, abandoned criminal Dubosc; whilst into the rôle of Joseph Lesurgues he infused much pathos and strength. Mr. Philip Calvey's sketch of Daubenton was a humorous one; whilst the Jerome Lesurques of Mr. J. H. Clyndes was excellent in every respect; and good presentations of Joliquet and Jeanne were given by Mr. Fred J. Lane and Miss Violet Lytton respectively.

The latest quotations for music hall shares are as follows: Alhambra 1 7-16; Empire (15s. paid), 1½; Empire (10s. paid), 1½; London Pavilion (5), 2¼; London Pavilion Pref. (5), 4½; Metropolitan, ⅜; Moss' Empires (5), 3½; Oxford (5), 6¾; Palace Theatre (9s. paid), 20s.; Tivoli, New (5), 6xd.

Four Indian wrestlers, Gama, the Indian champion, who recently defeated Dr. Roller, the American, Imam Bux, champion of Lahore, Ahmud Bukeh, champion of Amritsar, and Gamu, champion of Jullundhur, gave exhibitions of wrestling in the catch-as-catch-can style at the Alhambra on Monday evening. Gama threw all his fellow Indians twice in a quarter of an hour, and succeeded in overturning Peter Bannon, an Englishman, in less than five minutes.

Now that the music pirates have been exterminated, another source of trouble has arisen for the publishers of popular songs, in the shape of a pirate of "words," against whom a crusade has been begun. It seems that the publishers grant rights of reproduction to certain firms to set out the words of popular songs in sheet form and sell them.

For this privilege the firms pay the publisher a large annual fee, and so the loss on sales is balanced. As soon as the "official" sheet is published, it is pounced upon by the pirate, who, with very slight alteration, reprints it. The hawkers buy these sheets for about 5d. a dozen, and, as they fetch a penny each, sellers are easily found.

Apart from the harm which is done to the firms who pay their fees, much injury is done to publisher, writer, and composer. If a song becomes popular the music is easily picked up, and when the words can be bought for a penny the sales of the published song are bound to diminish. Energetic steps are to be taken by the publishers to stamp out an evil which threatens to rival the "music piracy."

Beauty contests are popular events at New Brighton Tower. Winsome young ladies are not too timid to display their charms before a critical audience of three or four thousand persons, and visitors and residents alike are every ready to crowd the auditorium in order to pay homage to those who by the popular vote are enthroned as queens of beauty. The feature of the competition held last Saturday evening was the difficulty in selecting the first winner in the Blondes. Miss Jean Alexander and Miss Hettie Gale were equally warm favourites, and for each the applause of approval was loud and sustained.

Finally Miss Gale won the open contest, and her success was very popular, as she has become a warm favourite during the time she has been performing with Fred Alkin's Pom-Poms, and a large number of people visited the show on Monday for the purpose of seeing this Queen of Beauty. In the Brunette section of the competition the first prize was won by Miss Annie Martin, the well-known soprano vocalist. Early in the evening it was evident that Miss Martin was going to be a formidable opponent to any in the Brunette section, and her charming manner and sweet face fairly captivated the audience, who, in awarding her the first prize, cheered her to the echo.

"THE MODEL AND THE MAN."

A Musical Sketch, by Seymour Hicks, Music by Frank E. Tours, Lyrics by C. H. Bovill, Produced at the London Hippodrome on Monday, Aug. 22.

Miriam Vandeleur ..... Miss Zena Dare
Etienne de Rosenay ..... Mr. Frank Wilson
Marguerita ..... Miss Ivy St. Helier
A Model ..... Miss Fleming
Students
Misses Du Barry, Macintyre, Aufrere, and Bissett

The Model and the Man is for the most part pretty and amusing, and is only let down to a level of banality when Mr. Seymour Hicks, the librettist, descends to political references—entirely unfunny and without the least excuse for their introduction. He has founded the plot of his piece on the Pygmalion and Galatea legend. A beautiful and rich American heiress, Miriam Vandeleur, poses as a model for a statue of Galatea with which Etienne de Rosenay, a young English sculptor following his art in Rome, hopes to win a prize that for him means fame and fortune. He can then tell Miriam of his love; but for the present undistinguished namelessness and impecuniosity close his lips. The promptings of his heart lead him to sing to the beautiful creation of his own genius, which he also apostrophises in speech. But the goddess Artemis invoked by Pygmalion does not intervene in favour of Etienne, and the statue's lips do not speak, as Galatea did, until Miriam, who returns the ardent love of the young sculptor, is persuaded by an Italian serving-maid from Saffron Hill to take the place of the statue, carelessly broken in its removal. Hastily donning her classic garments, Miriam poses on the pedestal, from which she eventually descends. The situations remind one alternately of the old farce Chiselling and of Niobe (All Smiles). In the result Miriam falls into the arms of Etienne. Miss Zena Dare is quite bright in the scene as the statue, becoming natural and dropping her sing-song delivery. Mr. Frank Wilson sings with fine expression a pretty love lilt, with a waltz refrain, which will no doubt find popularity in our drawing-rooms, and is quite a pleasant representative of the sculptor Etienne; but the hit of the performance is made by Miss Ivy St. Heller, a clever delineator of low comedy, who plays the part of Marguerita, the faithful Italian maid from Saffron Hill, who nurses a hopeless passion for her master, the sculptor. The part is what may be called, in theatrical parlance, a Louie Freear part, and, like Mary Jane, immortalised by that favourite actress, Miss St. Helier has a top note, with a well-trained voice to support it. Miss Fleming makes a graceful model, and the students find charming interpreters in Misses Du Barry, Macintyre, Aufrere, and Bissett. With a liberal cutting of the political references and some puerile dialogue, the sketch, which is admirably mounted, should easily be worked into a conspicuous success.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

"NANON LAFARGE."

Jean Lafarge ..... Mr. Raymond Wood
Jacques Laramie ..... Mr. Geo. Lake-Grange
Sergeant Halkett ..... Mr. A. E. Mayne
Wa Gush ..... Mr. Henry Ainsworth
Nanon Lafarge ..... Miss Mildred Blanchard

A new sketch from the busy pen of Mr. George R. Sims was produced at the Metropolitan on Monday last—a thrilling and intense little melodramatic episode, directly told, that held the attention of the audience throughout. The scene is a log cabin near a trading post, Hudson's Bay, the home of Jean Lafarge, a French Canadian trapper. Jean is about to start off to dispose of a number of skins to a Scotch factor, when Sergeant Halkett, of the Royal North-West Mounted Police, arrives, in search of a trapper named Jacques Laramie, a half-caste. Laramie has committed robbery and murder, and Halkett thinks Jean's wife, Nanon, also a half-caste, with whom Laramie was known to have been in love before she married Lafarge, might know something of his whereabouts. Lafarge scorns the idea that Nanon ever loved Laramie and that she would be likely to shield him, and Halkett eventually leaves to search the woods for the murderer. When Nanon comes in, Lafarge bids her good-bye ere he starts on his journey, at the same time telling her of Laramie's crime and leaving his gun behind in case it is needed.

Nanon, left alone, laments that one of her race should have been guilty of such an outrage, the disclosure of which has left her nervous and distraught. Busying herself with household duties, she consoles herself with the thought that her husband will soon be back. In a brief absence from the cabin, Wa Gush, an Indian, and an accomplice of Laramie's, enters and takes the gun. Laramie also comes in, and tells Wa Gush to go outside and await the return of Lafarge, and when he is near give the signal. He himself means to stay in the cabin. Lafarge robbed him of Nanon, and he will now have his revenge, and also kill Lafarge. When Nanon returns, she is horrified at seeing Laramie in the hut, and also at his proposals. She pleads with the desperate man not to bring disgrace on their people, but he is obdurate, and in order to gain time and to save her husband's life she acknowledges that she did love him once, and agrees to go away with him. Plying him with drink, the worn-out, hunted man sinks down on the floor, and Nanon, after singing a love song, finds him asleep, and looks for means of escape. Laramie, however, is aroused by the signal that Lafarge is at hand, and he is soon inside the cabin, and led to believe that his wife is Laramie's lover. Jean is secured by Wa Gush, and hustled into an adjoining room, and the half-drunken Laramie, sinking on a couch, bids Nanon come to him. The distraught girl, seeing a knife on the table, plunges it into his heart, and draws the curtains, and when Sergeant Halkett arrives and Lafarge set free, also comes on the scene, reveals Jacques' dead body. Thus has she saved her husband's life and her own honour.

The sketch was admirably acted throughout by Miss Mildred Blanchard and her company, the head of the combination skilfully realising the anguish and terror of Nanon in the distressing situation in which she is placed, and acting effectively throughout. Mr. Raymond Wood gave a convincing and quite satisfactory portrayal of Jean Lafarge; and a powerful performance of the desperate Laramie was submitted by Mr. Geo. Lake-Grange, the scenes between Nanon and Jacques being skilfully handled. Mr. A. E. Mayne and Mr. Henry Ainsworth also contributed valuably to the success of the sketch by capital impersonations of a police sergeant and an Indian. The playlet was mounted and dressed with evident attention to detail, and, announced as being produced under the personal direction of the author, went very smoothly for a first performance.

Billie Bint, one of the boys, is going particularly strong this week at the Theatre Royal, Warrington. Next week he is at the Winter Gardens, Morecambe. Billie sends kind remembrances and best wishes to all good old pals.

Harry Leslie's seventh annual benefit at the Rusholme Pavilion, Manchester, on the 17th inst., was a record artistically and financially. Twenty stars, three hours' performance, and an audience of nearly 2,000, hundreds being turned away, made the evening a memorable one

After a long provincial tour the Milton Bros. will be playing in London for a short season with their well-known skating act, opening at the Hippodrome, Rotherhithe, next week. In conjunction with their turn they will be running a competition.

King and Benson were unfortunately unable to appear last Saturday at the Palace, Chelsea, owing to indisposition, but Mr. Berlin was fortunate in securing the services of the Stavordale Quintette, who were working Walham Green, to deputise. After the performance, the Chelsea management not only warmly congratulated the Stavordales on the excellence of their act, but also personally thanked Mr. R. Duce, of the Granville, for sending them such a first-rate deputy.

The audience at the Palace on Saturday evening were quite enthusiastic at the reproduction of the launch of H.M.S. Orion at Portsmouth, and followed with evident interest the swimming match which took place on the same afternoon in the Thames. Notwithstanding obvious difficulties, the operators have been able to photograph the various phases of Mr. Moisant's flight from Paris to England and to observe also the havoc caused by the conflagration at the Brussels Exhibition. Indeed, it might now be said that, owing to Mr. Butt's enterprise, the public will be almost enabled to view the current day's events by means of animated pictures.

RINKING GOSSIP.

The Great Monohan.

The Great Monohan, the accomplished roller-skater, whose exhibitions are always such an attractive feature wherever presented, is astonishing visitors to the Alexandra Rink, Derby, this week. The difficult steps and movements accomplished by Monohan are proving highly interesting, and his reception nightly is very gratifying. From Sept. 2 to 15 he will be performing at the American Roller Skate Palace, Hanover, Germany.

Olympia Rink, Brighton.

The Olympia Rink, Brighton, is open and doing nice business, the floor being well crowded with skaters three sessions a day. The rink is being managed by Mr. A. Hedges; while the general-manager of both the West-street Rink and the Olympia is Mr. F. Reed. The Olympia will close during the month of September and the West-street Rink will open. An exhibition has been booked for the Olympia during that month.

Brighton has Many Good Skaters.

Earle Reynolds, who is making Brighton his home for a few weeks, is loud in his praise of the fine skating to be seen at the Olympia Rink. About half of the patrons of the rink, he declares, are fine waltzers, and anyone that can't do the drop-three ice waltz isn't in it. Miss Marie Ratcliffe is the lady instructor at the Olympia, and a great many of the gentlemen skaters owe their pretty waltz movements to this clever lady, who has for the past two years been teaching the art here in Brighton, while the ladies owe their accomplishment in this particular line to Messrs. B. Seggie, the floor-manager, and his able staff, Messrs. Cooper and Hearst. The former gives promise of becoming a most expert figure-skator.

Earle Reynolds and His Wife at Brighton.

The well-known American skaters and dancers Earle Reynolds and Nellie Donegan are spending a few weeks at Brighton. Miss Donegan has been quite ill for the past seven weeks in London, and came to Brighton recently for a few weeks' rest before opening at the Palace Theatre about Sept. 12.

Gymrinka at Crosshaven.

Another large number of visitors were present at the Crosshaven Skating Rink on the 17th inst., and it is pleasing to note the success enjoyed by this sporting rink. The usual competitions were organised, and these in themselves provided any amount of enjoyment for the spectators as well as for the performers. The bladder fight created a good deal of fun, and after a fine effort Mr. Victor Johnson secured the prize. In the hockey match Crosshaven v. Rinking Club, the former, after a spirited tussle, were awarded the match, the score being Crosshaven, 1 goal; Rinking Club, nil.

Tug-of-War on Rollers.

A new feature was introduced at the Darlington Skating Rink on the 18th inst. in the shape of a tug-of-war on roller skates. Twenty rinkers entered the competition, and after a keen contest, Messrs. C. B. Coulson, W. Tose, Wilfred Young, T. White, and Syd. Collinson proved the victors. Afterwards the large number of skaters present, and the spectators, joined in a confetti battle, which afforded much amusement.

Miss Adelaide D'Vorak.

Miss Adelaide D'Vorak, the famous American lady skater, has been engaged by Mr. C. B. Cochran for the opening of the Velodrom, Hamburg, on Sept. 1. Leaving New York last Wednesday, the 24th inst., Miss D'Vorak is due to arrive at Bremen on the 30th, and will make her English début two days later.

Opening of the Hanover Rink.

The Great Monohan and Charlotte, the little queen of roller skaters, will appear at the opening of the Hanover (Germany) Rollschuh Palast on Friday next, Sept. 2. The managing-director, Mr. C. B. Cochran, has made a number of engagements with other artists to appear later in the season at this rink.

"THE YELLOW BIRDS."

A Further Episode in the Life of "Dare-Devil Dripping," Written by Fred Moule and E. D. Nicholls, and Presented for the First Time, at the Bow Palace, on Monday, Aug. 22.

Duchess Balmiceda ..... Miss Ada Frank
Queen Makihasti ..... Miss Julie Markham
Princess Kissieme ..... Miss Ada Lucelle
Doctor Macodie ..... Mr. Arthur Stratton
Brian the Brave ..... Mr. Harry Lewis
Dare-Devil Dripping ..... Mr. E. D. Nicholls

Of legitimate story there is but little in this potpourri of comedy, mock drama, pantomime, and broad farce, the idea of the joint authors evidently being to provide a genuine mirth-provoker for some thirty minutes or so. This has assuredly been duly accomplished, if the manner in which the sketch was received is to be any criterion. Many of the lines, and much of the business, is genuinely funny, and the audience literally rocked with laughter at the merry nonsense.

Dripping has just returned from his honeymoon, and, being tired of connubial bliss, gets the doctor to suggest illness, and an aeroplane trip as a recuperative, the wife and mother-in-law of course to be left behind. This suits the doctor, as, by bribing the captain of the aeroplane, he hopes to bring about an accident, the death of Dripping, and ultimately his marriage with the Duchess. However, the plans of the bold, bad doctor go astray, for our heroes, Dripping and Brian the Brave, alight at the first station. This proves to be Canary Land, where no man exists. They are soon discovered by some of the "canaries," and are in turn taken for birds, animals, and such-like. However, the Queen then arrives, and, knowing them to be men, informs her daughters that the unhappiness of the women of the isles can be appeased by the procuration of the happy shirt which a man visitor shall wear. Dripping only has a "dickey," but that has to do; he loses his "happy shirt," the women regain their happiness, they all eventually meet at Balmiceda's Reception Room, and everything ends happily.

As we have already mentioned, the sketch does not rely upon its story for success, but upon the clever lines and their droll presentation. Mr. E. D Nicholls was particularly good as Dripping, and, together with Miss Ada Frank as the Duchess Balmiceda, shared the honours of the production. The remainder of the cast lent ample aid.

A new use for the cinematograph film picture has been found by Miss Irene Fenwick, the actress. According to the New York Daily Express, in order to see whether her acting is as perfect as she can make it, Miss Fenwick has picture records made of her acting at rehearsals at home. The moving pictures, after being developed, are thrown on a screen, and Miss Fenwick is thus able to sit and watch a moving reproduction of her own acting, with every gesture and movement faithfully recorded.

A new picture theatre, making the third in the town, was opened at Kingtson-on-Thames on Monday by the Mayor (Councillor G. Huckle), who was presented with a suitably inscribed silver salver as a memento of the occasion. The new theatre, which is situated near the railway station, has been erected by the Surrey and Sussex Picture Palaces, Ltd., and is light and ornamental in appearance. Every precaution has been taken against fire, and eight emergency exits have been provided. Mr. Walter Phillip was the architect, and Mr. Cecil Frere is acting as manager.

STAR MUSIC CO.'S NEW PREMISES

A CHAT WITH BENNETT SCOTT.

The progress of the Star Music Company, Limited, has been sure but not slow, for 51, High-street, New Oxford-street, W.C., is their third address in less than four years. The firm started operations at 9, Charing Cross-road, in the autumn of 1906, moving from there to Cecil-court. So rapidly has their business advanced, however, that larger premises were necessary for the comfortable conduct thereof, and another shift had to be made.

An Era representative calling on Mr. Bennett Scott, the energetic and enterprising managing-director, on Wednesday, was shown over the comfortable and commodious quarters that will house the staff and many "winners." Extensive alterations have been carried out at 51, High-street, New Oxford-street, W.C., conducing greatly to the comfort of artists, managers, and others who will doubtless take advantage of the welcome extended by this enterprising firm. On the ground floor, beyond the shop and trade counter, a cosy reception-room has been arranged, comfortably furnished, with the walls adorned with photographs of many a prominent music hall and pantomime favourite. Passing through this room, a corridor leads to the professional department, presided over by Mr. Ernest Leigh, and to the clerks' and cashiers' offices. Below are large basements, where extensive racks contain the firm's many publications. Here busy hands are packing and despatching parcels to all parts of the United Kingdom and the Colonies.

Returning to the "upper regions," one ascends the staircase to the sanctum sanctorum, where Mr. Bennett Scott interviews the ever-increasing stream of clients who wish to be fitted with songs, &c. This is a handsome apartment, where the scheme of furnishing and decoration combines artistic elegance with business-like utility. Here Mr. A. J. Mills, Mr. Scott's well-known collaborator and co-director, will also be found; and doubtless in this inspiring retreat these arch-conspirators will devise many new ditties to haunt an unsuspecting public. On the floor above, a large room is available for rehearsals, &c., and here the musical editor and his assistant have ample room to carry out their important duties. The premises are, indeed, excellently appointed throughout.

"Yes; this is our third address in less than four years," replied Mr. Scott, in answer to a question as to the frequency of "moving days," "and I sincerely hope we shall not have another for a long time to come. When we removed from Charing Cross-road to Cecil-court I had no idea we should find it necessary to take other premises so soon; but man proposes, and—here we are.

MR. A. J. MILLS.

The business has grown by leaps and bounds, and it became practically impossible to do ourselves justice in our rather cramped quarters. I have a very loyal staff, but they want elbow-room, and they were simply pushing each other over at Cecil-court.

"Mr. Mills and I have written a large number of songs since Christmas, and I honestly believe we have the best aggregation of popular numbers we have ever had. First and foremost I must put 'I wonder if you miss me sometimes' (or, as we had it at first, 'I wonder if you care'). This song, which is only about three or four months old, seems to have got 'right home' from the start. Several well-known artists are singing it on various tours and circuits, and the report is practically the same all along the line—a certain winner. One and all are convinced that it is 'the' chorus ballad of the year. Judging by the number of managers and artists who have already asked permission to introduce it into pantomime, it looks like being the biggest hit we have ever had.

"But, as you say, pantomime is a good way off, and in the meantime we are congratulating ourselves on the splendid success of our summer songs. Our 'Ship Ahoy!' ('All the nice girls love a sailor,' a very catchy number) is to be heard at every seaside resort in the kingdom, and always goes big; and amongst other numbers popular with al-fresco entertainers I may mention 'Are you anybody's girlie in particular,' 'I met Mary Ellen at th' Isle of Man,' 'I can't reach that top note,' and 'I can picture Polly hanging up the holly.'" And there are others.

Amongst the songs recently written by this accomplished and happily associated pair for star artists are "The Moonlight Promenade," for George Lashwood; "Up she goes" (Whit Cunliffe); "Fall in and follow me," a particularly catchy number which is capitally given by the popular comedian, Mr. Charles Whittle, at all his engagements; "She was a Dollar Princess," which is admirably placed in the hands of that accomplished artist, Miss Millie Hylton; "Come under my big hat" (Miss Daisy Dormer), "Lou, Sue, Mary, Dinah" (G. H. Elliott), "Where, oh! where is my Mary Ellen" (Miss Maud Mortimer), "Mary, you don't come from Spain" (Miss Ella Retford), "The Sunday morning walk" (Miss Hetty King), and "Tha' comes fra' Lancashire" (Miss Florrie Gallimore).

"And I think we have a few more which we are keeping 'up our sleeve.' With regard to our policy as publishers, we by no means confine our efforts to our own numbers, but are open to buy anything suitable—and boom it! Altogether, we are looking to the future with every confidence, and for the benefit of those who are interested in the financial results, I may say the Star Music Co., Ltd., have paid dividends of 10% and 20%. Not so bad for a baby firm, eh?"

On Thursday an informal reception and "house warming" was held, and a number of friends entertained, amongst whom were the following:—Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Harrington, Mr. and Mrs. Squire, Mr. and Mrs. Will Goldston, Miss M. Scott, Miss Dorothy Gould, Miss Cora Casselli, Miss Ella Retford, Miss Cressie Leonard, Miss Ethel Ra Leslie, Messrs. R. P. Weston, James Tate, C. W. Murphy, Julien Wilson, Herbert Mocatta, Charles Warren, Fred Day, George Arthurs, Terry Sullivan, Worton David, Frank W. Carter, Fred Godfrey, Bert Feldman, G. H. Elliott, and Max Dreyfus.

"A BATH CURE."

Comedy Playlet, by Arthur Falkland, Produced at the Holborn Empire on Monday, Aug. 22.

A Bath Cure, an amusing "episode in a bathroom," contains many funny lines and situations, and, capitally presented by Mr. Henry J. Corner and company, kept the audience almost continually on the smile on the evening of our visit. A lady coming to an hotel after being out in a severe storm decides that a boiling-hot bath is necessary to prevent her taking a chill. After giving a few directions to a French maid, she retires to an adjoining apartment. Then enters a gentleman. He is soaked to the skin, and comes to the conclusion that he, too, must have a hot bath at once. He is in luck's way, for at the back of the room there it is, all in readiness for him. Calling in the "boots," he instructs him to bring his dress clothes in half an hour, tries to secure the door, but discovers something is wrong with the lock and then draws a screen before the bath ere he disrobes.

Then, of course, the fair damsel again comes on the scene, and, sitting down at a dressing-table, proceeds to unloose her tresses and make other preparations for her bath. She receives a severe shock when a pair of trousers, thrown from the other side of the screen, alight near her dainty self, and tries to leave the apartment. But the door has somehow locked itself, and she is a prisoner. And there is a man in the bath! He, of course, is equally embarrassed at the situation, and, unseen behind the screen, tries to think of some way out of the difficulty and to console the unknown charmer. He would willingly oblige her by vanishing down the waste-pipe, but his ample proportions make this quite out of the question.

"THE TENOR AND THE MAID."

Operatic Burlesque, by Robert Cunningham, Produced at the Granville Theatre of Varieties on Monday, Aug. 22.

The Signor .....MR. ROBERT CUNNINGHAM
Blossom .....MISS MILLICENT LE HAY

Grand opera and low comedy are effectively allied in the duologue above referred to, which has the added advantage of bringing a distinguished representative of the lyric stage to the variety theatre. Mr. Robert Cunningham, who graduated with honours in the Carl Rosa company, and has figured so prominently in Savoy opera and musical comedy, has the part of an Italian primo tenore of Covent Garden, who includes among his devotees Blossom, the servant-maid at the hotel where he is staying. That individual has spent all her earnings in visiting the opera especially to hear the tenor, and in fact knows the airs of the leading operas by heart. She has a particular contempt for the "prima donna absolutely," as she terms her, who resides in the flat below, and to whom the Signor pays court. To prove her vocal ability the "slavey" indulges in the "Miserere" excerpt from Il Trovatore, and an immediate response is heard from the Signor, who takes up his share of the duet in an adjoining room. Under the impression that it is the prima donna below who is singing, the tenor despatches his card to the lady, and again breaks into song, addressing her in the impassioned "Questa o quella" from Rigoletto. There is, however, no answer, and the servant comes back to say the Signora has not yet arrived, and to declare that it was she who had intoned the duet. The Signor laughs her to scorn, but when the maid has given further proof of her vocal accomplishments with the "Ah fors e lui" from Traviata, he is won over, and after predicting for her a brilliant career, joins her in a medley comprising flashes of melody, amid which are heard the Kermesse scene from Faust, a duet from Tannhäuser, the "Gipsy" duet from Il Trovatore, and the Prison Scene from Faust. The selections are the most melodious taken from the most popular works, and, sung as they are by such cultured vocalists, delight the ear and awaken a keen desire for more.

Mr. Cunningham represented the Italian primo tenore in typical fashion, affecting the foreign accent capitally, and rendered many funny lines with every possible effect. His voice retains all its accustomed power and purity, and his singing was listened to with rapture and enthusiastically applauded. Miss Millicent Le Hay, the daughter of an artist equally renowned in musical comedy, pluckily sacrificed her good looks to the demands of the part of the "slavey," and found her reward in much hearty laughter. She sang well, too, in the various excerpts which fell to her, surmounting the difficulties of the music in artistic style. The little piece is "just the thing wanted" for the variety stage, and presented by such talented interpreters, is fit to grace the bill at any hall. Its success at the Granville was complete.

THEO. S. LE GAR'S company in Music the Conqueror, introducing the famous violinist Angel Blanco, heads the bill at the Palace, Tynemouth, this week; Signor Arvi scores in his scientific and artistic mystery "The Metablescope"; Norman Telma is highly amusing; Mlle. de Rose is a phenomenal lady baritone vocalist; and Miss Hilda Claremont is a sweet and cultured soprano. Almasio and Yamina in a juggling and tumbling act, Fred Arthur, mimic, J. H. Hawtrey, vocalist, Hugo and Smit, in comedy bar act, and a good selection of animated pictures conclude.

LOOK OUT FOR THE "CORONATION LANCERS," TO BE ISSUED SHORTLY.

THE Olympia Music Hall, Paris, was opened for the autumn season a few nights ago, when there was a crowded audience. The grand ballet, in three scenes, Le Papillon d'Or, or Golden Butterfly, was an immediate success. In this ballet, in the guise of exquisite exotic insects of every hue, are to be seen some of the prettiest dancers in the capital. These include Yetta Rianza; Ettore Cansi, from La Scala of Milan; Adelina Fernando; Santini, from the London Alhambra; Lilian Graham, from the Casino, New York; and Farembach, of the Opéra Comique. Besides these stars are Bianca Aurora, the Italian singer; Kandella, the mystic dancer, who unwinds her veils over tongues of flame; Harry de Coë; the Four Harveys; and Gaudeschmidts, acrobats, gymnasts, and clowns; the famous troupe of Bob Ker Arabs; and Prince Charles.

THE Bournemouth Municipal Orchestra has in fifteen years developed out of a small pier band into a model provincial orchestra. Under the authority of the municipality a sixty-three page pamphlet has just been issued, giving the history and results of the undertaking. The full orchestra plays now about twice daily throughout the year, and in the course of each year gives sixty special symphony concerts.

THE British composer has, it is said, been more fully represented there than anywhere else. The Winter Gardens manager and conductor is Mr. Dan Godfrey, who bears a name well known to the musical and general public. The undertaking has been almost entirely self-supporting.

Eventually, by an ingenious manipulation of the screen by the couple, the male, attired in a bath towel—and little else—manages to open the door. His charming captive, after the screen has again been adroitly arranged, may now leave. She has not seen him, but she is sure he is a good sort. She must thank him for the clever way he has managed things and his treatment of the situation generally, and she hopes to see more of him—on some future occasion.

When she has departed enter "boots," who evidently "knows something," but the promise of a handsome tip will prevent it getting abroad that a lady visitor has been in the bath chamber. So much for the beauty, now for the bath, and the male prepares to enjoy his plunge once more. But the French maid, thinking the lady is in the room, comes on the scene, and the shock proves too much for her, for she collapses in a chair.

The names of the characters and their interpreters are not given on the programme, but the two principals acted cleverly together, skilfully managing the screen business and delivering their many amusing lines admirably. A charming picture of beauty in distress was given by the lady, and the gentleman secured applause for his expressive singing of "Two eyes of grey." The "boots" and the maid were also impersonations that contributed to the merriment of the trifle.

IT may be interesting to note that Mr. Harry Nicholls was on Wednesday obligated and invested at the Guildhall as Reuter Warden of the Worshipful Company of Joiners of the City of London.

A COPY of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

MR. A. J. MILLS, who is feeling "bright and breezy" after his holiday on the South Coast, could not escape one song no matter where he went. From Dover to Herne Bay everybody was whistling or humming "All the nice girls love a sailor (Ship ahoy!)." Still he had the consolation of knowing Bennett Scott, the composer, was suffering the same "torture" at the Isle of Man. The Star Music Co. are having a record sale for this fine nautical ditty.

THE Star Music Co. have issued some very fine songs during their brilliant career in the publishing world, but there is not a doubt "I wonder if you miss me sometimes" (I wonder if you care), A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott's pretty ballad, will be the most popular number they have ever published. Miss Kitty Clinton and Miss Maud Mortimer are both making a huge hit in town this week with this, while several of the pantomime producers who have secured it say it cannot help being the song of the year.

MR. FRED BARNES (that brilliant light comedy gentleman) informs the Star Music Co. "Tell 'em that I'm your uncle" (A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott's quaint chorus ditty) is a huge success everywhere he sings it, which is very gratifying to everybody concerned.

AT the Hippodrome, Dover, Mr. Frank Harwood is scoring heavily with Fred d'Albert and Maurice Scott's smart chorus ditty "Can't you make room for a little one," and he will make a special feature of this song in his forthcoming Australian tour. The Star Music Co. are the publishers.

EVER since A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott wrote "There's a girl wanted there" for George Lashwood they have been longing to fit him with another song that would be as popular. "The moonlight promenade," which "Uncle George" is warbling with wonderful success at the Empire, Hackney, this week, is by those famous writers, and, judging by the way the audience help Mr. Lashwood with the chorus, it looks like being the best song they have ever written for him.

"WHAT D'YER SAY, MOLLY MOLLOY?" which May Mars, Lloyd Morgan, and Ella Retford are producing immediately, is an Irish ditty by A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott, and with its catchy lilt and quaint words it is certain to be one of the biggest successes on the Star Music Co.'s catalogue.

MISS DOROTHY WARD, the dashing pantomime favourite, is delighting large audiences at the Hippodrome, Balham, and Empire, Croydon, this week with her splendid singing. Her principal item, "Cheer up, my Highland lassie" (where she has the assistance of two tiny mites at the finale), is enthusiastically recalled. A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott are the writers, and the Star Music Co. are to be congratulated upon this fine number.

ONE of the sweetest singers of Mills and Scott's beautiful ballad "I wonder if you miss me sometimes" is Miss Florrie Cooper, and it is proving her trump card everywhere. Miss Ethel Dunford is also making a hit with this on the Adeler and Sutton tour.

MISS ROSIE BARTLETT scored a success with her new number "Ninety in the shade" at the Bedford and Crouch End last week, and she is featuring it with gratifying results at the Norwich Hippodrome this week. The number is the work of Messrs. Wilfred Chandler and John McColl.

ALLEGED MUSICAL PIRACY.

At Guildhall, before Mr. Alderman Cooper, on Tuesday, Albert Bowden, a coffee-house keeper; Abraham Kinzett, a bookseller; and Phillip Fleming Bokenham, and John Wesley Puddefoot, printers, were further examined on a charge of conspiring to print and publish certain editions of the words of copyright songs, with intent to defraud.

Messrs. McGlennon and Co. (Ltd.), the well-known music publishers, were prosecutors. The piracy of these songs has involved them in an annual loss of about £500.

Detective-inspector Thompson said he had on several occasions kept observation on 11, Middlesex-street, Bowden's coffee-house (alleged by the prosecution to be the "distributing centre" for these pirated works), and had seen both Bowden and Kinzett serve out song sheets to hawkers. In a back room on the second floor of 8, Hutchison-street (rented by Kinzett), he found 2052 song sheets. At 70, Leather-lane, where Bokenham carried on the business of a printer as F. Wilson and Co., he found 15,000 song sheets, and two stereos for printing them. These latter were actually on the machine. There were also two stereos for printing other sheets. At the premises of the Milton Press, in the occupation of Puddefoot, he found fourteen stereos for printing songs that were the subject of this charge. In the basement of Bowden's coffee-house, 11, Middlesex-street, were found 3400 song sheets.

As to the alleged distribution of the pirated songs from Bowden's coffee-house, evidence was given by Mr. Arthur Preston, an agent employed by the Musical Publishers' Association, Queen's Hall. On June 25, he said, he saw Bowden himself "serve two hawkers" with song sheets and budgets. As far back as July 11, when he gave evidence in the previous case, he knew of this distribution of song sheets.

The hearing was brought to a conclusion by the defendants pleading not guilty and reserving their defence. Bail was fixed for each of them in the sum of £100. Bowden and Puddefoot were already on bail, but the sentences on Kinzett and Bokenham do not expire till Sept. 8 and 6 respectively, till which dates they remain in custody.

"HOW COTTLE FELL FROM GRACE."

A Comedietta, in One Act, by George J. Hamlen, Produced for the First Time on any Stage at the Royalty Theatre, Glasgow, on Monday, Aug. 22.

Amos Cottle .....MR. ARNOLD REYNOR
Mrs. Cottle .....MISS LOLA DUNCAN
Mrs. Fullalove .....MISS WINIFRED GUNN
Dr. Pringle .....MR. WALTER ROY

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

This is the latest original play given by the repertory company at Glasgow, and is by the author of their successful comedy Barbara Grows Up. The scene opens in the parlour of a workingman's home, with spring cleaning on, and we find that Cottle had "slept in" that morning, and did not go to work, with the result that his wife made full use of his services in laying carpets, &c. The unaccustomed toil has rather tired poor Cottle, and when the rector's wife, Mrs. Fullalove, drops in and discovers symptoms of half a dozen serious ailments in his appearance, he succumbs to the temptation to do a bit of malingering, and allows himself to be wrapped up on a couch, while the doctor is sent for. Dr. Pringle soon sees through the sham of Cottle's illness, and asks for a large basin so that he may bleed the patient. But the preparations prove too much for Cottle's nerves, and he jumps from the couch, and soon demonstrates that his troubles are purely imaginary. The little piece was cleverly played, and the fun heartily enjoyed by the audience. The four parts were well acted by the cast given above, and Miss Madge McIntosh was responsible for producing the play.

American Vaudeville Artists in England.

AMERICANS IN LONDON.

[By Americus.]

Winona Winter.

I have received a letter from Banks Winters, the man who wrote "White Wings," and the father of that very clever little American artist Winona Winters. Papa Winters says Winona will not come to England this season, as they had previously planned, but would remain in America and play the season for the Shuberts as leading lady in Sam Bernard's new musical show. Consequently English variety halls will not see the little golden girl this season. Winona Winters is about the daintiest little artist America has produced for some time. The American critics have christened her "the little cheer-up girl," and she has been most successful with her little musical comedy offering in the American vaudeville theatres the past season.

Gene Green Coming Next Season.

Upon my arrival in London this season I told Alfred Butt that I thought that Gene Green, if he could sell his theatres in Chicago, would come to England for a few months and appear in vaudeville. I received word from Gene that he would come over next season. His turn is rather a novelty in the single-man entertainment, and I want to go on record as saying I am sure the patrons of vaudeville on this side will like the clever Windy City coon singer and general entertainer, and that he will be a valuable addition to most any bill if he can be induced to come over.

Felix and Barry.

George Felix and Lyda Barry were to have come over this season, but the serious illness of Miss Barry put a damper on their European trip. The Palace offered this team of comedy four weeks for next season, and they will in all probability accept. If Felix comes over, we will have to get up a good baseball game, for George is some player in the States.

Six American Dancers.

I "called the turn" last season when I said that this sextette would put it over in good style. If you don't think they can dance some, visit the Palace and take a bird's-eye view of some of the stunts they pull off, and they are doing something on the stage, besides stalling every minute.

Stepp Messenger and King.

Stepp Messenger and King, of Casey Jones fame in the States, come to this side in the spring. The trio are now on the Orpheum circuit, and as soon as the time is played will come to London, where they are booked in one of the West End halls for six weeks.

Harry Fox and Millership Sisters.

I met Harry Fox just before I sailed, and he told me that he would come over next year for the summer season. I have always said that this act would be something of a novelty for the West End halls, and I still think that when they make their appearance here they will be greatly appreciated. Fox is one best bet when it comes to a clever comedian, and the two pretty girls, who are, by the way, formerly from Birmingham, England, assist him greatly in his peculiar style in putting the laughs over.

Jennie Jacobs Coming.

You all know Jennie, the little booker of the Pat Casey office, Long-acre Building, Times-square, New York. Well, Jennie has written me that she has engaged first-class passage over on the Mauretania next April, and is going to spend her vacation over on this side and the big part of the summer here in England. Hettie King has promised to take her to Brighton and show her the waves and the beach, while Alice Lloyd will see that her friends show Jennie Shepherd's Bush Exhibition, the Palace Theatre, and the Coliseum, while I have taken upon myself to escort her to the German Club and take her skating to Holland Park, so I guess Jennie will be well entertained during her stay here in London.

Organiser of the White Rats.

George Fuller Golden and family are living in Los Angeles, Cal. The first president of the White Rats and its organiser came to Los Angeles last April, during my engagement at the Orpheum, from El Paso, where he had been in search of health for some months. I am informed the climate at Los Angeles is quite agreeable to him, that he is on the mend, and that he looks better than he has for some time. The informant also advises me that Jeffries is back to his home, and is at his saloon every day, and seems to be very much downcast over his defeat, but smiles now and then when the big amount of money is mentioned. The American newspaper men and the public demanded that Jeff should come to life after being dead for so many years, and if that was their wish Jeff made it good and plain that he must be well paid for his trouble, and from the looks of the money he has invested in Los Angeles real estate, he must have got quite a lot more out of the fight than the Press have given him credit for getting. What's the diff? He got licked and got the money at the same time. Many a fellow has got a worse licking and got nothing for it, so it's not a bad business after all.

That Big Motor Again.

Nat Wills had Frank Damar out the other day in the big car, and when they came back Damar couldn't speak. All he could say was, "That big engine could climb a mountain?" It took Frank two hours to tell Chas. Cheeseman and Blake all about it. Nat tried to take Frank up the side of some big building with it.

Eugene Stratton.

Mike Shea told me on June 13, when I was going to leave Buffalo to sail for England, that if I saw Eugene Stratton to tell him that the old home place is just the same, and quietly tip Eugene off that he, Michael, would like very much to book the black-faced comedian for a few weeks in case he found time to pay the old home a visit.

Willie Pantzer and Co.

Willie Pantzer, who has been in America for so long, and who took out his citizenship papers a year ago, is going as good as ever at the Hippodrome, with his cleverest of clever equilibristic acts. There is plenty of comedy mingled in with some of the most sensational feats, which force the public to appreciate one thing in particular—that the trio are all artists of the highest degree. It is an acrobatic act which is a headliner on any bill.

Passpart's Golder's Green Home.

Willie Passpart will be back in London the latter part of next week, when he will open the new Orpheum offices at Randvoll House. Just before Mr. Passpart left for Berlin he leased a house at Golder's Green, and will make London his home for some time to come. Willie has ordered one of the rooms fitted up in loud colours for Martin Beck, so when the general manager of the Orpheum circuit comes to London he will have a cheerful place to hang his hat up.

"I Don't Care."

That is the name of a song that Eva Tanguay has made her name with in the States, and from the way one of the Doherty Sisters put it over at the Hippodrome last week it looks as though it was going to make a mighty big name for her. I am under the impression she sings it as good as the original. The audiences like it very much, and it leads me to think that Eva Tanguay will be some card in case she comes to this side. The Doherty Sisters have a nice little offering, and it seems like one of the Broadway houses to hear those familiar airs they hand over the footlights each evening.

The Great Lester.

The Hippodrome is seeing a really great ventriloquist the past few weeks, an American gentleman who passes through the audiences to give the public an opportunity of detecting his mode of throwing his voice without a quiver of the lips. When you consider the performance of the Great Lester, you must say that his work is something out of the ordinary in this line, and a show par excellence. He is making quite a name for himself in London, where he is engaged on the Stoll tour.

Ada Reeve for America.

Some weeks ago I mentioned that the clever English comedienne Miss Ada Reeve would go to America for a tour. I notice that some of the provincial critics have called me on this point, and seem to think I don't know what I am talking about. I also said I called her a find for the American halls, and that she would be one of the best successes, and please the American patrons of variety to a "T." I am informed by one who knows that Miss Reeve will go to America, and that her salary will be away up in four figures, and that she has been offered thirty weeks for musical comedy as soon as she completes her vaudeville tour, at a much larger salary than has ever been paid a foreign artist, with the probable exception of Melba or Calvé. See if I am not right!

Big Hit.

Blake and Amber, the clever American entertainers, who went to South Africa on the Hyman Circuit, have made a fine hit. The act will in all probability be rebooked next year for return engagement.

The Mysterious Skater.

Something outside of the ordinary has been advertised for the past year over in the States in the skating rinks, and the billing has always read "The Mysterious Skater." It seems that now we have the same idea in another form, known as "The Mysterious Dancer," and that she is a society woman of Boston, who refuses to give her name or be known on the stage. The American booking agents are evidently trying to have her open here in London. It looks like they are picking a hard place for her to fall. London has had the mysterious dancer before; Le Domino, La Rouge, and others have played the masked game off the boards; still, it may be rejuvenated.

Mitchell and Caine.

These clever cross-talking entertainers have been booked by Bert Howell for a South African tour, opening in December.

Walter Kelly on Boat for Australia.

I received a letter a few days ago from Walter Kelly dated some weeks ago, which said he was going to sail for Australia from Vancouver via Honolulu the middle of this month, and would play the Harry Rickards' Circuit and then break the jump back to England by spending some time on the Hyman Circuit in South Africa. Kelly is making a round-the-world trip.

Those Eyes for Africa.

Bert Howell tells me that Lillian Herlein goes to Johannesburg for Sidney Hyman. Miss Herlein is the artist with the Anna Held eyes who has met with splendid success everywhere.

Long Tour Next Year

Barnes and Crawford, who were at the Tivoli for a short time, and who had to return home to fulfil their American Orpheum engagements, have been booked for a long tour next season by Bert Howell. Their route will include England, South Africa, and Australia.

Brother Jesse Arrives Wednesday.

Jesse Freeman, who is a brother of the ever-popular Chuck, will arrive in England on Wednesday from America, and will take up his old post at the variety office in the Strand.

Jimmy Britt Studying Hard.

The famous little light-weight Jimmy Britt is studying his part in the new sketch which has been written for him. Jimmy has engaged the best actors to instruct him in all the different poses of real acting, and I believe that the knight of the boxing world will give the music halls an offering worth their while with his sketch.

Hetty King for America.

Manager Brown, of the Brighton Hippodrome, has a corking good show this week, with Hetty King at the top of the bill and Ernie Lotinga holding the star position at the bottom. Hetty King after this season will return to America for a trip over the Orpheum circuit booked by Jennie Jacobs, of the Pat Casey Agency.

The Pierrots on the Pier.

One of the best troupes of Merryfolks I have seen out in the open air are on the East-end Pier, at Brighton. There are six all told, and they offer an hour's entertainment which is greatly appreciated by the patrons. One comedian of the type of Geo. Robey is exceptionally clever, and one of the ladies has an excellent voice which she uses well in many pretty songs.

Off for Brussels.

The Harmony Four left yesterday for Brussels, where the boys are booked for fifteen days at the Palais d'Eté. After this they go to Copenhagen for another fortnight's stay, when they will commence their tour of the Continent in earnest.

Devlin and Elwood at Palace.

Although on early for an act of this kind, this American team has been doing exceptionally well the past week with their little comedy sketch, which we criticised in our variety notices last week.

Herman Finck Vacation.

This excellent composer and leader of the Palace orchestra has had at least a dozen invitations to go to America for his summer vacation with his expenses all paid. But somehow or other he doesn't like to get over a few hours away from London. Mr. Finck is quite a feature at the Palace, and his charming music has gained for him and his orchestra a prestige over the entire world.

The Stock Whip.

Mr. Fred Lindsay, the stockwhip expert, who a few weeks ago returned from the States where he has been for the past two years playing the United and Orpheum Circuits, is taking a week's holiday at Brighton with his wife and family. Mr. Lindsay will return to America next year under the Pat Casey management for another tour.

Toocarlyonthebill Disease.

One of the most serious cases of illness that often baffles some of our managers in America is the disease known as Toocarlyonthebill, and in nine out of ten cases the sick artist has a doctor's certificate which settles the matter. The source of the disease is generally traced to what is known in variety as early peck at the bill. I call it a disease, for I know of cases where artists after getting a glimpse of the programme which had them on first or second would simply collapse.

Nervous System Affected.

In fact, their nervous system would become so affected that they really made themselves ill. I was informed on Wednesday that one of the music halls in the West End had one of these cases on Monday, and that the artist, after getting a peck, worried over his position on the bill to such an extent that he became very ill. He had worked hard for the booking in the hall and had spent hours in getting his performance so finished that he was certain of a fine success provided he got a good position. He had figured this was the opportunity of his career to show his worth, but, unfortunately, the betting was against him, and the disease nailed him the moment he saw the programme. He started right in to fight the disease, and after consulting a doctor he was informed that the only cure would be a medical certificate. It's pretty tough to get an early position on your first appearance, but someone has to go there, and I have been the someone once or twice myself ,and know what it is.

At Brighton.

Mrs. E. B. Barnes, the talented American pianist, is spending a few days on Marine Parade, Brighton, the guest of Nellie Donegan.

"CONFUSION."

A Farce, by Joseph Derrick, produced at the Hulme Hippodrome, Manchester, on Monday, Aug. 22.

Harry Mortimer .....Mr. Lawrence Brough
Christopher Blizzard ....Mr. Alfred Hemming
James .....Mr. Douglas Payne
Miss Lucretia Mortimer..Miss Bessie Harrison
Maria .....Miss Rosa Bennett
Rose .....Miss Olga Esme

The task of boiling down Confusion, which enjoyed such a long run on its production at the Vaudeville in 1883, into a one-act farce, has been successfully accomplished, and proved on its production at the Hulme Hippodrome, Manchester, on Monday last, by Mr. Lawrence Brough, to be one of the smartest and most entertaining playlets. The dialogue is absolutely apt throughout, every exchange helping on and elaborating the fun. We may refresh our readers' memory by giving a resumé of the plot. The scene is the drawing-room at Jersey Lodge, Richmond, late on a September afternoon. The action begins with the appearance of James, the butler, and Maria, the housekeeper, who have a secret, namely, that they are married; and the trouble is that their baby, which is out to nurse somewhere, is ill, and must be sent to them. How to keep their secret in these circumstances is the problem. Their young master, Harry Mortimer, catches them canoodling, and the duplicity that is going on naturally takes a comic aspect in James's endeavours to cover up the indiscretion. But for the persent all ends well. Now it happens that Harry's wife (only three months married) has a desire for a bull pup; but Harry has no desire at all that his house should be turned into a menagerie, nor that there should be any danger of hydrophobia in the family; and therefore he declines to entertain her request. Unfortunately, however, Rose has gone too far in the matter, having already arranged, with her uncle's connivance, for the dog to be sent. This she does not tell her husband. Christopher Blizzard, the uncle, is amorously attracted to Harry's aunt, Lucretia, which, considering their years, and the eaves-dropping interpolations of Harry, is a comic episode in itself. Then comes a telegram, announcing that the dog is to arrive at a certain time. Immediately another telegram comes to James and Maria, informing them that the baby is worse and may be expected at any hour. The latter James accidentally drops on the floor; and Aunt Lucretia, who has observed a telegram in Christopher's hand, picks it up, thinking it is his. Her curiosity prompts her to read it, and of course she is horrified when she learns, apparently, that her lover has a baby, which is being sent to him. When the elderly couple meet next, Lucretia announces that she knows all. Christopher, thinking that she refers to the smuggling in of the dog, is pleased; but he begins to think that she is mad when she raves about his profligacy, and indignantly refuses to look at "the little beauty." The dog has meanwhile been hidden in a cabinet. After this the baby arrives, snugly laid (like the dog) in a basket; and the frightened and perplexed parents, being disturbed in their confidences over it, are obliged for the present to deposit the child in another cabinet. The baby cries while James is covering up the act from his master's observation, but the incident passes, and then Harry picks up a written confession from his wife. The confession, which refers quite appropriately to the dog, reads exactly like the confession of an erring wife. She tells him of "its" existence, of her uncle's complicity, of how he (Harry) will get used to it and love it as if it were his own, and so on; and a pretty state of mind the deluded husband gets into, as may be supposed. He discovers the baby (where he is told to look) in the cabinet, going of course to the cabinet at which he had observed the curious actions of James. The latter entering, Harry and he engage upon a discussion of the matter, the former supposing that James knows all about it, while James thinks that he and his wife are found out, and is full of pleading that it may be looked over. Christopher Blizzard comes in for wild treatment at the hands of Harry, and from this point the aspect of affairs becomes more and more lunatic in the eyes of the bewildered uncle. Not a possible variation of the theme is unexploited, in fact, and at length there is nothing for it, to ameliorate the state of affairs and to induce order in the home, but the secret drowning of the dog. The suggestion to do this, made by Christopher to Rose, is, however, overheard by Harry, who thereupon makes frantic preparations to prevent the projected murder and catch the guilty parties in the act. A policeman is called in, and after some comic fiascos the arrest is made, Christopher being seized and bound with the tell-tale basket in his possession. At this point Maria enters with the baby in her arms, having previously regained possession of it; and the parents confess that they can no longer keep their secret, having nowhere to put the child. Light begins to dawn after a few words more, and the dog is then produced from the basket. Even the explanation is made humorous, and to the very last laughter hangs upon every word.

Mr. Lawrence Brough is quite at home in the rôle of Harry, and he is capitally supported by Mr. Alfred Hemming as the amorous and victimised Uncle Christopher. Mr. Douglas Payne adds a very smart delineation of James; Miss Bessie Harrison as Aunt Lucretia assists the fun considerably; a nice impersonation of Rose is given by Miss Olga Esme; and Miss Rosa Bennett as Maria, capably completes an excellent cast. The piece is undoubtedly a success.

Alec Payne, the "doyen" of skaters, has only nine nights free this year. Proprietors of rinks requiring a sterling attraction on Sept. 2 or 6 should please note. He concludes these months at Blackpool.

The Showmen's Guild in Suffolk.

In pursuance of the Guild chaplain's plan to open out new centres of work, and to interest the local showmen in the advantages of trade combination, the chaplain will visit Aldeburgh-on-Sea for the Regatta Fair this week-end. The Guild has already obtained recognition in the town, through the excellent work of Miss Anita Welton, of Farlingay Hall, Woodbridge, hon. secretary for the Diocese of Norwich. The Vicar of Aldeburgh, the Rev. G. D. Goldsmith, is an hon. local chaplain, and at the last fair endeared himself to his showmen parishioners by his earnest care for their spiritual and material welfare. The Rev. T. Horne, invited by the Vicar of Aldeburgh, will preach in the parish church at Evensong, and also at the Guild service in Charles Thurston's vaudeville theatre on the Fairground on Sunday (to-morrow), Aug. 28. The Guild chaplain will also address the showpeople in the same show at 3.30 in the afternoon. Subject, "The New Moveable Dwellings Bill."

Alf. Ball Subscription Fund.

We shall be glad to receive all outstanding subscriptions to this truly deserving fund. New subscribers' names will be duly acknowledged in our columns. The treasurer, Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, is anxious that the help given shall not only be generous, but that it shall be immediately available.

Amount acknowledged in The Era up to date: £145 8s. 6d.

CAUTION.

Certain Arc Lamps, purporting to be EXCELLO LAMPS, and emanating from Manchester or Nottingham, have recently been offered for sale.

In order to protect purchasers from misrepresentation, we give notice that all genuine EXCELLO ARC LAMPS can be distinguished by:—

(a) The individual lamp number, stamped on the plate above the patent economiser.

(b) The series test-room number, on a nickelled plate, close to one cable inlet.

(c) The black-and-brass license plate close to the opposite cable inlet.

All lamps which do not carry these, as originally attached, should be refused, as they are probably fraudulent imitations which may involve buyers and sellers in heavy penalties.

THE MITCHAM FAIR DISPUTE.

It is no exaggeration to state that, in the light of recent events, this question has reached a most serious point. We have numerous letters and suggestions from showmen and others interested in the dispute. In the interest of all parties concerned in the dispute and its possible settlement on permanent and peaceful lines we beg our numerous correspondents to refrain at present from making statements in the Press that might embitter the amicable terms on which the Rev. T. Horne and Mr. F. H. Pedgrift are being met by the Board of Conservators. Some of our correspondents, naturally indignant at the refusal to set out the fair and to accept the tolls, attribute the blame for the whole of the resultant evils to the Board of Conservators. This is both a hasty and an unjust conclusion. The Board of Conservators are not to blame for the mistaken policy of the past four years. The blame rests with the abolitionists, who used the power of the purse to get rid of the fair by unconstitutional means. Up to a certain point in 1906 to 1908 the authority of the Board was used in the interests of the abolitionists. We have to acknowledge, and we do it gladly, that the present Chairman of the Board, Mr. Mallaby Deeley, M.P., since he came upon the Board has done all that was possible to set right the admittedly irregular action of the Board in taking joint action with Franchise owners against the showmen before it actually became possessed of the Fair Rights. As the chairman of a public body, Mr. Mallaby Deeley took the highest view of his individual responsibilities, and rightly advised the Board not to continue to seek injunction, or to really consider, or to formulate any policy of action, until the owners of the franchise transferred an admitted public trust to the Board. Whether a mistaken policy or not had marked the action of his predecessor in office, he, as chairman, refused to do anything against the fair until the Board became trustees of the Fair Rights. We are extremely anxious to set out the matter clearly, for there is a great amount of anxiety and doubt concerning the real facts of the dispute.

The Board and the Guild Worked for the Same Object.

The executive officials of the Guild have known all along that no real progress was possible so long as the Board of Conservators were not the actual holders of the Fair Rights. All their public work at Mitcham—the return of two candidates at the last Parish Council election, the persistent keeping of the showmen's rights and the people's rights to the front by legitimate means, all the slow and difficult negotiations of the past four years—all this, and more, of time and patient toil has been given to bring the dispute to the stage it reached a week before the fair.

Every scheme for a peaceful settlement, no matter from what quarter it came, was blocked by the cruel fact that the then owners of the franchise (persistent in their scheme to abolish the fair) were holding out for guarantees that their will would prevail over the will of the people. The road was open again, when at last the franchise owners surrendered their trust to the Board. Only a few days before the fair both the Guild chaplain and Mr. Pedgrift approached the clerk to the Board of Conservators, and at once, in the interests of peace and public order, opened up negotiations. As the Board will not meet for the next two months, nothing material could be attempted. As far as possible all was done to put matters in train for a wise and full consideration, and possible settlement. Beyond that neither side could go, with the fair actually upon them.

The Action of the Board Wise and Conciliatory.

A great deal of misapprehension has arisen in the public mind over the action of the Board in issuing each year the official notice that no sites would be let to showmen to hold the fair on the Fairgreen. To understand this action it must be borne in mind that injunctions were obtained against certain showmen, and a policy of exclusion by injunction was inherited by the present Board from its predecessor. Whilst the present Board refused to continue the policy of killing the fair by injunctions, it would not lose whatever advantage in arriving at a full settlement of the question the series of injunctions against the old tenants of the fair gave it. Here, again, we must acknowledge the wisdom of the present chairman's advice to the Board—"not to take action until the Fair Rights were in their possession." This wise decision of necessity meant the automatic repetition each fair of the previous year's notice. We quite realise the legal soundness of this attitude. We therefore agree that right up to the surrender of the Fair Rights to the Board we have been actually working for (along our own lines) the same object—the peaceful and just conclusion of the dispute.

Such a settlement is now possible. The Board of Conservators possess all the necessary legal powers to approach the Home Office and the Board of Agriculture, and to submit a scheme for sanction that will meet all the necessities of the situation. We ask all our showmen readers to still leave the negotiations with those who, for four years past, have endeavoured by all lawful means to save the fair for both people and showmen.

Some Serious Considerations.

It will be asked us how far do we think the deeply-regrettable incidents of crime and lawlessness that marked the past fair prejudice the hope for a peaceful settlement? We admit at once that many half-hearted friends of the fair may now become enemies, and that the enemies who have been working in secret will now come out into the open. Our work for peace will be more difficult on that account. Having carried on with great success our crusade to save the fair for Mitcham, we do not mean now to relinquish our efforts, but, rather, we feel that our work must be pursued with increased vigour.

We see now—alas, too realistically—that in the interests of peace and order it is imperatively necessary to remove and to control the fair. We see, in actual fact, the danger we have always dreaded of public agitation for popular rights. Our perfectly justifiable resistance to the assumed authority of the late franchise owners to deny us access to the Fairgreen on the lawful days of the fair has opened the gate to lawlessness on the part of others in rushing the Green and seizing pitches before the customary time. We have also witnessed how greed of gain will incite brutal passions and crime of murderous intention. All this only confirms us in our crusade to save the fair from its enemies—the people who would if they could, abolish it, and the lawless gang who, heedless of the future, rush to Mitcham to seize a present advantage by force and fraud.

What the Men of Peace Aim at.

First of all to save the fair for the people of Mitcham; to see that lawlessness and anarchy are put down and punished; and to secure the full and complete local control of the fair. This is the object before us. The first stage has been reached after several years of hard work. The policy of drift pursued by the late franchise owners in their controversy with the Board has had lamentable results. Delay has bred danger. It is now possible to move forward.

In accordance with the request of the Mitcham showmen's meeting held on Aug. 15, the Rev. T. Horne has left at the Home Office a copy of the resolution denouncing the crime. The Chaplain was most courteously received, and his statements concerning the dangers arising from rushing the green for pitches received particular attention.

THE NEW MOVEABLE DWELLINGS BILL.

The Era was the first paper to place before the public the provisions of the Moveable Dwellings Bill, 1910, as amended by the Select Committee of the House of Lords. Naturally The Era, as the age-long friend and champion of the travelling showman (as well as the champion of all sorts and conditions of showmen) brought its expert knowledge and experience to bear on the new Bill. With the text of the Bill we gave a comparison of it with the earlier measure of 1910. We indicated clearly that even in its amended shape Clause 5 of the old bill still remained a menace and a danger to the show business. We recognised and fully praised the painstaking labours of the Select Committee, and we were the first in the field to acknowledge the enormous debt of gratitude the showman owed the Select Committee. The amendments of the Bill, all manifestly in the interests of justice and liberty, were conceived and carried out in the very best form of constructive statesmanship. We said so at the time, and we still adhere to our judgment.

The Grounds for Our Opinion.

Let it be remembered we praised and welcomed the amended Bill a week before the Final Report of the Select Committee appeared. When the report was hailed with a chorus of approval by the Press of the country it was to us but the long-expected confirmation of views we have advocated for many years past. We expected that the Committee, in its final report, would exonerate the daily work and the domestic life of the showpeople. We knew, from the weight of expert evidence tendered by the Showmen's Guild, that at last justice would be done to the showman's claim for equal treatment as a citizen of the commonwealth and a loyal son of the Empire. We demanded this, and nothing less than this, for showpeople as a class. The report of the Select Committee admits the justice of the claim when it says:—

"Apart from a small number of persons who use moveable dwellings as a pastime, vandwellers are divided into two classes—the showman class and the gipsy class. As regards the showman class no legislation appears to be required. Mr. Horne, the Chaplain of their Guild, told the Committee that there were some 4,000 showmen's vans travelling the country ,and carrying a population of something like 12,000 souls.

"The trade is perfectly honest and respectable, and its members are well-to-do, and in some cases even thriving. No grievances arise against them, and it was represented to us that not only is no legislation necessary, but that existing legal restrictions occasionally involve a grievance upon their side."

Press Opinions on the Final Report.

The "Manchester Guardian" said:—"The showmen are fighting all along the line for their respectability. What galls them is that "the landed gentry" in many parts still regard them with traditional hostility as wanderers on the face of the earth. That they are, but they remind you that they are often very well-to-do wanderers. The old notion of a showman's caravan is quite out of date. "A millionaire could not caravan in more style," a friend of showmen said, and he described the vans upholstered by a West End firm, with gilt-edged mirrors all round and settees with crimson cushions. One famous showman is said to have a piano in his six-foot square 'parlour.' Another recent victory of showmen has to do with the Moveable Dwellings Bill. As at first framed, the Bill came down very severely on showmen, who found themselves classed with altogether unrespectable vagabonds. Their spokesmen at the Committee of the House of Lords have redressed their grievance, and the Act as amended is, says the showmen's organ in the Press, a 'complete vindication' against the 'slanderous charges of fanatics and faddists.'"

The "Sheffield Independent," in an appreciative leader, had the following reference:—"Our reference to the report of the Select Committee of the House of Lords on the Moveable Dwellings Bill in yesterday's edition had a special interest for the people of Rotherham and the miners of South Yorkshire. The Rev. Thomas Horne, chaplain of the Showman's Guild, was formerly curate at Whiston, and during the time of what is known as the "great strike" he said some plain words in advocacy of the miners. He has since almost regularly visited the Rotherham Fair Ground. His evidence seems to have had great weght with the Select Committee, who reported that as regards the showman class no legislation appears to be required. It is rather remarkable, nevertheless, that the House of Lords should have shown such breadth of sympathy for a nomad class which pitches its tents in the open. For the Lords, as a class, are land lords, and the bias of the landlord is in favour of the enclosure of common lands and the exclusion of common people."

The "Glasgow Evening Times" dealt very kindly with the van-dwellers in the following terms:—"Showmen and gipsies, the two classes most particularly interested in the Moveable Dwellings Bill, both receive favourable testimonials to their good conduct in the report just issued by the Special Committee of the House of Lords on that measure. Not that such testimonials were needed. The modern showman is quite as respectable nowadays as anyone else, though the authorities of villages may still meet them with the traditional hostility as wanderers on the face of the earth. The present Bill, to a certain extent, is a notable victory for those whose caravans are welcome visitants all over the country. As at first framed the Bill classed showmen among altogether unrespectable vagabondage, those responsible apparently failing to recognise that the modern showmen are quite a new class from many of those who in former days were regarded as merely akin to 'gangrel buddies.'"

All the London and the great provincial papers gave the report of the Select Committee in a slightly condensed form, and with one voice praised the Committee for its manifest care and impartiality. Its chief value to showmen lies in the fact that a tribunal that carries Parliamentary sanction and powers has settled once and for all time the real status of the travelling showman. The showman has come into his own at last. The tribunal created by the mistaken energy of the zealots red-hot to reform the van-dweller off the face of the earth has, by the overwhelming force of the case for the showman's life and character, pronounced utterly in his favour. His trade and mode of life is declared to be "Honest and respectable," and that, "as regards the showman class no legislation appears to be required."

The Triumph of the Guild Work.

Twenty-one years of hard work have resulted in clearing the ground of the great mass of prejudice, based upon ignorance chiefly, against show life. The status of the travelling showman is now admitted beyond all cavil and dispute. The proof is found in a Parliamentary report of the greatest value—a report that exonerates the showman from the cruel allegations formerly brought against his moral and domestic life, and the equally fallacious charges against his avocation as catering for the amusement of the people. For that vindication, for that immense stride forward, we have to thank primarily the noble band of workers who for over twenty years past have devoted time, talent, and means to uplift show life. It has been our pride and joy to have a share in that work. We rejoice in it to the full. We have now one, and only one, clear issue before us, and that is to obtain amendments in the Bill when it comes before Parliament that will prevent it being used as an instrument of oppression by local authorities against show life. With those amendments the Showmen's Guild will now proceed, confident of success. Having cleared away all the moral and hygienic misapprehensions, it will be comparatively easy work to obtain from Parliament security against interference with a business admittedly lawful and honest. We shall deal in future articles with the necessary amendments to secure this object.

Important Point for Showmen.

A summons was heard on Aug. 19, at High Wycombe, which was issued under Section 90 of the Patents and Designs Act, 1907, at the instance of the Superintendent of Police against Mr. W. Wilson for using the Royal Arms in connection with his business.

Mr. Arthur Bolden (Messrs. Strong, Buckmaster and Bolden) defended.

It appeared from the evidence that Mr. Wilson had eighteen Coats of Arms on his roundabout, each about 18in. in diameter. Sixteen of the Arms were those of various countries, and two were the Royal Arms.

The Act says:—

"If any person without the authority of His Majesty uses in connection with any business, trade calling, or profession the Royal Arms (or Arms so nearly resembling them as to be calculated to deceive) in such manner as to be calculated to lead to the belief that he is duly authorised to use the Royal Arms, he shall be liable on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Act to a fine not exceeding £20."

It was admitted by the witnesses for the prosecution that the Royal Arms being on the roundabout did not lead them to believe that the roundabout proprietor was a Royal Warrant holder. It was submitted for the defence that merely using the Royal Arms without authority was not prohibited by the section; that what was prohibited was pretending that he had authority; that there was nothing to suggest that the Arms were used by authority of His Majesty, also that the Royal Warrant was only granted to shopkeepers and tradesmen for supplying goods, and that in no event could a proprietor of a roundabout, as such, obtain a Royal Warrant; that therefore there could be no suggestion in any way that the Royal Arms were used under the authority of His Majesty, or that the defendant was a Royal Warrant holder. It was also pointed out that in the case of Cameron v. Kennedy (64 J.P. 41) it was held that it was a mere question of fact whether the Royal Arms had been used in such manner as to be calculated to lead other persons to believe that the trader was carrying on his trade by or under the authority of His Majesty.

The Bench, however, took the view that the mere fact of putting the Royal Arms on the roundabout constituted an offence, but after some argument dismissed the summons upon payment of costs.

Beeston Feast, Leeds.

Here for the feast were Farrar and Tyler's picture palace, Redfern's roundabouts, Mme. Ali's side-show, and numerous throwing games, hooplas, football nets, cokers, and variety stalls.

Barnsley Feast.

The chief attractions were Tuby and Son's coliseum of light and illustration, Farrar and Tyler's similar concern, Tuby's motors and the four-abreast gallopers, Farrar and Tyler's gigantic set, the scenic railway, Amos's steam swings, variety frames, hoop-la circles, throwing games, &c., by Messrs. Doubtfire, Spooner, Norman, Barraclough, Hepworth, Davies, Sedgwick, Hellier, Nolan, Curran, Bradley, Gledhill, Wilburn, Posty, Marshall, Hobson, and Halstead.

Hospital Fête at Llanelly.

Mr. Henry Studt, on Friday and Saturday of last week, held his annual fête and gala on Stradey Park, Llanelly, in aid of the Llanelly Hospital. After the formal opening, Mr. Studt and a distinguished company were entertained in a pavilion by Mr. David John, of Felinfoel. Mr. Studt had on the ground his two gigantic machines, the four-abreast zoo, and the Venetian gondolas. Messrs. David Boswell, George Roberts, Prof. Lloyd, and numerous others had shooters, hoop-las, and other games.

The variety artists who performed on a large stage were the Five Sisters Warwick, very clever and charming trick cyclists; the Olracs, marvellous acrobats, who added unadulterated comedy to their clever business; the Sylvanas, graceful and clever trapezists, one of these young ladies being exceptionally clever in the work; and Mlle. Hengleur, with her wonderful troupe of performing dogs. All drew hearty plaudits from the large crowd present.

Important Showman Meetings at Oldham.

We direct our readers' attention to the important meeting of the British Roundabout Proprietors and Showmen's Union, to be held at Oldham on Tuesday next, Aug. 30. Advantage will also be taken of this gathering of showmen to hold a joint committee of the Union and the Showmen's Guild (and it is hoped of the executive of the Lancashire and Cheshire Stallholders' Federation) to consider the amendments to the new Moveable Dwellings Bill. This joint committee will follow after the Union meeting. The Rev. T. Horne will attend and explain the new Bill and discuss amendments.

White City, Manchester.

The well-known Band of H.M. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers commenced a fortnight's engagement on Monday, and are giving much pleasure by their programmes. The firework displays on Saturdays are very much appreciated. The annual feasts (or wakes as they are called in Lancashire) are bringing large numbers of people to Manchester, who find their way to the White City, and keep the various amusing devices in constant working every day.

New Electric Theatre at Falkirk.

The opening ceremony of the Electric Theatre, Falkirk, was performed on Monday evening by Bailie Dillon in presence of a large and representative gathering. The building, which was formerly a church, has been internally reconstructed and converted into a beautiful and compact theatre, in which the special attraction will be pictures, with an occasional variety turn. After the opening ceremony an attractive programme of pictures was shown, the audience being highly delighted. Illustrated songs were also given by Mr. J. C. Powell. The building is lighted throughout with electricity, and above the stage are a couple of electric fans, which keep the atmosphere cool. The front seats are plush tip-up chairs, the second seats are also well upholstered, and in all the other parts of the house the comfort of the patrons has been well considered.

National Service League.

The National Service League has inaugurated a series of Bioscope lectures, with the object of awakening public interest in the question of National Service. The lectures are to be given in various parts of the country, and the pictures will illustrate National Service and Defence.

Mr. Gunn, of Bombay.

Mr. J. A. Gunn, the manager of the Novelty Theatre for the Excelsior Kinematograph Company, Bombay, who has been making a holiday in England for the past six months, returned to Bombay per s.s. Persia on Thursday last via Marseilles. During his holiday Mrs. Gunn has presented her husband with a bouncing boy.

FILM GOSSIP.

Fresh-Air Fund Film.

At the Holloway Town Hall, Holloway-road, N., Mr. F. R. Griffiths is this week having shown a film specially taken on the occasion of the F.A.F. outing on the proceeds of his recent performances in aid of that most deserving cause. The film is a delightful picture of happy children, transferred for a few hours from the slums of London to the wooded glades of Epping Forest. The audience is given an opportunity of subscribing to the Fresh-Air Fund. Mr. Griffiths intends sending this film to his other London halls, and will then hand it over to the Daily Express, which will be prepared to lend it to picture theatre proprietors.

Brussels Exhibition Fire.

A particularly interesting film in the always attractive series screened at the luxurious Kensington Picture Theatre last week was the Brussels Exhibition Fire (Gaumont), some finely photographed and wonderful pictures depicting the terrible destruction wrought by the fire demon. In the programme also were the amusing Giles's First Trip to London (Wrench), Wild Animals (Cricks and Martin), The Planter's Wife (A. B.), Poor Luck's Dream (Hepworth), Tide of Fortune (Imp.), a beautiful travel film, Trip through Sweden (Urban), Betty Goes from Bad to Worse (Pathé), and The Bandit's Wife (Essanay). There is a complete change of programme here every Monday and Thursday.

Adventures of "Mr. Pictures."

The missing "Mr. Pictures, of Pringle's Picture Palace, Edinburgh," had some narrow escapes in the course of his wanderings. On Prince's-street he was accosted by a man with an impediment in his speech, who addressed him thus:—"Are y-y-y-you Mi-Mi-Mi-Mister——" but the rest of the sentence was lost in air as the missing man went on his way. Another man asked him if he was "Mr. Pringle," to which of course he replied, denying the honour. He was ultimately run to earth by a newsboy at the top of the Waverley steps, who was presented with the £4 10s. offered in the Picture Palace, Grove-street.

Church Door for Cinematograph Screen.

A large crowd assembled in the churchyard of Shoreditch Parish Church recently to watch a novel experiment on the part of the Rev. Mr. Hardy, one of the curates. For over an hour he held the attention of the gathering by means of a series of pictures of the drinking habits of England from early days, illustrated by cinematograph views. An interesting feature was the utilisation of the ancient church door, on which was placed the screen for the showing of the pictures.

Picture Palace Fire.

An outbreak of fire occurred during a performance at Vint's Picture Palace, Kettering, last Saturday evening. While an acrobatic display was in progress a screen composed of wood and felt at the back of the gallery suddenly burst into flames. The presence of mind of the pianist, who continued to play, and a reassuring shout from the manager to the audience to keep their seats prevented a serious panic. Some women fainted and were carried through the dense smoke into safety.

Operator's Narrow Escape.

The operator, Horace Nicholson, ensconced in the iron cinematograph box, had a narrow escape. After switching off the current he gathered together his films and, rushing through the flames, carried them into safety by clinging to the balcony in front of the building, from which position he was safely rescued. Many members of the audience constituted themselves into a fire brigade and passed up buckets of water. The flames had been got under when the Fire Brigade arrived. The outbreak is supposed to have been caused by a lighted cigarette dropped near the screen, which was a temporary erection during alterations to the seating accommodation.

Not Caused by Cinematograph.

The machinery connected with the cinematograph pictures and the electrical connections for the same had nothing whatever to do with the outbreak, and were found intact after the fire was subdued. By a quarter to eight the last spark had been extinguished, and the damage done, apart from the ravages of smoke and water, was not extensive.

Curzon Hall, Birmingham.

The provision of afternoon tea to patrons in the stalls and grand circle at the Curzon Hall, Birmingham, has added greatly to the popularity of the matinée performances at this popular picture house. Mr. Waller Jeffs, the exhibitor of the New Century Pictures, is to be congratulated upon successfully carrying out an enterprising idea.

Presentation to Mr. W. S. Redfern.

An interesting ceremony took place at the Forest Gate Electric Theatre on Wednesday of last week, the event being a presentation to Mr. W. S. Redfern, resident-manager to the London and Provincial Electric Theatres, Ltd., prior to his departure to Birmingham as acting-manager at the new electric palace recently erected there. The presentation, which consisted of a handsome wallet subscribed for by the members of the staff, was made by Mr. Chas. Levick, seconded by Mr. J. B. Stephenson, each wishing the recipient every success in his new appointment.

Good Business at the Forest Gate House.

During the past few weeks exceptionally bright business has been done, and the programmes submitted have merited the unstinted praise of appreciative audiences. The theatre is now under the joint managership of Mr. Chas. Levick and Mr. J. B. Stephenson, whose particular care is to see to the comfort of their patrons and the maintenance of the high standard of entertainment provided.

Dublin and the Johnson-Jeffries Films.

Dublin is the first city in Europe in which pictures of the Johnson-Jeffries fight have been exhibited. Films of the contest were shown at the Rotunda, Dublin, on Saturday night, and, despite warnings from the police authorities and protests from the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin

WANTED.

A MIDGET

From 32in. to 36in. high.

A long and comfortable engagement.

Apply, with full particulars—letter only—to:
"MIDGET," c/o Will Collins,
Broadmead House,
Panton Street, Haymarket, S.W.

(Dr. Walsh) and others, three exhibitions were given, and drew crowded houses.

Mr. Jameson and the Police.

During Saturday afternoon, at the instance of the Lord Mayor, a warning was conveyed by the police to the manager of the show, Mr. J. T. Jameson, that he would be acting illegally in exhibiting the pictures without a licence. He replied that he had no licence as yet, but that in that respect he was in the same position as the proprietors of other cinematograph exhibitions. Moreover, he added, a licence was not necessary, as he was using non-inflammatory materials. He invited the police to test the films themselves, which, he says, they did, and found that his statement was correct.

Licence Granted.

A licence has since been granted to the proprietor of the pictures on behalf of the Dublin Corporation, all the necessary regulations having been complied with. The pictures are said to be of excellent quality, and give a comprehensive view of the fight and the scenes both before and after.

Cinematograph and Caravan Health Crusade.

Miss Lena Ashwell (Mrs. H. J. F. Simson), the well-known actress, on Saturday last, at the Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, inaugurated the first caravan of the Women's Imperial Health Association for Great Britain. "To make the homes of England bright, the mothers, wives, and children happy, I name thee 'Aurora,'" said Miss Ashwell, in christening the caravan by breaking a flagon of clear water over the wheel. The caravaners will visit various towns and villages in the South-West, and hope to educate the people on the necessity for healthy homes and the best way to secure them. This will be done by means of cinematograph and lantern displays, lectures, and leaflets. Non-inflammable films will be used.

Empire Electric Theatre, Exeter.

The Empire Electric Theatre, situate in High-street, Exeter, and in the centre of the city, was opened on Thursday, when a delightful series of cinematograph pictures were shown. The building is admirably adapted for the purpose, and, judging by the large attendances, it seems as though the new venture will meet with success. The intention of the management is to present the latest pictures of public events, with an entire change of programme on Mondays and Thursdays.

Panic at a Cinematograph Show.

A panic occurred at a cinematograph entertainment at Newport (I.W.) on Monday night, the audience erroneously believing that an explosion had taken place. There were shouts of "Fire!" and the hall was quickly cleared of its occupants, none of whom was hurt.

Paisley's Third Picture Theatre.

Paisley has this week opened its third picture theatre. The latest is organised by the Scottish Moving Picture Co., who have transformed a large church into a veritable luxurious place of entertainment. The area is seated with an eye to the comfort of patrons, whilst the balcony and dress circle provide first-class accommodation, the latter especially being handsomely seated. The management aim at a high-class show, and this week's opening series of pictures is a most interesting one. A local picture—one of the great thread works ceasing work—naturally takes precedence. Undoubtedly the pictures have made a good start. Mr. Arthur Vivian is the managing-director, and Mr. George Parnell is undertaking the duties of acting-manager. To mark the occasion of the opening, the proceeds of the first house on Monday night were devoted to the Royal Alexandra Infirmary, in the town, the directors of that institution being well represented at the initial performance.

Limerick Electric Picture Palace.

The electric picture palace attached to the roller skating rink continues to draw crowded and appreciative audiences. This week Pathé's Animated Gazette is the pièce de résistance for all patrons of sport, fashion, and spectacle; whilst the humorous advocates have The Old Maid's Valentine, A Day in the Country, and Hot Pickles. The double turns of the well-known mimic Mr. Willie Lee are very entertaining, and his recitals give much satisfaction. Director Kidd personally superintends the film section, so as to cater for his many well-wishers, and, with the assistnce of a first-class operator in Mr. Potts, of Walturdaw fame, a clever pianist in Miss May O'Connor, and a most energetic secretary in Mr. Ledger, the continued success of the Palace is not to be wondered at.

Bath Electric Theatre

The crowds that daily attend the Bath Electric Theatre grow larger and larger as the evenings draw in, and the management is to be congratulated upon the way it supplies the very latest films placed upon the market.

Wide World Pictures at Aldershot.

An excellent selection of films is being shown twice nightly this week at Messrs. Golder and Sloman's establishment in Station-road, Aldershot, where full houses continue to be the order. The special subject is Drink, taken from the sensational play of that title, in which the late Charles Warner made so great a name. It is interesting to note that the film is 2,500ft. long, and takes three-quarters of an hour to show. Another good picture is that representing some of the experiences of the famous detective Nick Carter; whilst amongst other dramatic, humorous, and instructive films is A Tramp's Daughter, which is proving a great favourite.

"The Way of the World."

During the week the programme at Poole's Picture Palace, Ipswich, will be headed by The Way of the World, a lesson in Christian charity, in which a young priest leaves the mission house to see the ways of mankind in the outer world. He obtains work in the fields, goes to dance assemblies, but his entreaties to the multitude to seek righteousness are of no avail. He rescues an unfortunate young woman from a howling mob, and tries to find a place of healthy safety for her, but again the world shows its un-Christian spirit by refusing to receive her. Hopeless, the young man makes his way back to the mission. He has hardly arrived when the young woman appears and prostrates herself before the Father and the young priest to ask prayers for God's grace. The old Father turns to the young priest and exclaims, "Not in vain if one soul is saved." The pictures were taken at the actual spot, the historic San Gabriel Mission, California.

Kensington Picture Theatre.

This week's programme here has included the following interesting films:—Jones Buys a Bird Cage (Urban), The Bridal Dress (Eclair), The Light that Failed (Clarendon), A Difficult Capture (Eclair), The Purgation (A. B.), The Byeways of Byron, Funeral of Miss Florence Nightingale, Scenes in Devon, and The Warwick Animated Chronicle, with all the latest news.

Dublin Horse Show Pictures.

Animated photographers have been particularly busy at the Dublin Horse Show during the past few days, and corps of operators organised by Mr. Alfred Butt have been particularly fortunate in being the first to submit a full and comprehensive series of pictures showing every scene and incident of the fixture up-to-date. These pictures were presented for the first time at the Palace on Thursday evening.

METROPOLE, GLASGOW, LTD.

WANTED, Plays for the People, various Autumn 1911 (few only), and Spring, 1912.

IS THE DRAMA DECLINING?

THE MET.'S ANSWER TO ITS PESSIMISTIC CRITICS.

July and August, 1910.

Mr. F. B. Woulfe Répertoire (return), end of July, £450 in two weeks (summer prices).
George A. De Gray, "Angel of His Dreams" (very fine weather), £200 (Aug.).
Miss Millais and Henry Herne's "No Man's Land," Aug. (return), £230, finishing to eighty-odd pounds (Saturday last) (summer prices); Morton Powell's "Brought to Ruin" (return), £100 in two nights, Monday and Tuesday last.
The Drama is the "oak" in the forest of the "people's" lives, deeply rooted and entwined in their hearts, and, properly tended—i.e., intelligently written—evidencing a keen compassionate knowledge of their domestic conditions, hopes, ambitions, joys, and sorrows, coupled with artistic portrayal, close attention to realism in mounting, dressing, and detail—of which there are many notable examples—and the virile, sympathetic co-operation of theatre management, will thrive and justify its ancient title, "Monarch of the Forest," years after the ephemeral bloom has fallen from the branches of its deciduous rivals.

No finer list of Autumn and Spring Attractions ever presented in the City.

28, Park-circus,

PLEASE NOTE.—NO DEPUTIES WILL BE ACCEPTED AT REHEARSALS.

Special provision has been made at each theatre for the exhibition of loose photographs. Artistes are requested to supply these to the Manager on reaching the theatre, and they will be returned in good condition at the end of the week.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.—All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier. Artists employing agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents. New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our Districts Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, and DISTRICT.—MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.
LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, and DISTRICT.—MR. PERCIVAL CRAIG, Empire Theatre, Bradford.
BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.
LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HORACE COLE, The Empire, Liverpool.
SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.—MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.
LONDON DISTRICT.—MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.
TOURS COMMITTEE.—LLEWELLYN JOHNS and DISTRICT MANAGERS.

EMPIRE THEATRE, SOUTH SHIELDS.—Artists and Agents wishing to submit TRIALS for their Acts in the North, should apply to the Manager, as Matinées are held every Wednesday for that purpose.

N.B.—MR. OSWALD STOLL or MR. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously. Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.—Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill matter, blocks, pictorials, &c., for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices. IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities. ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

THEATRICAL ACCOUNTS FOR BUSINESS MANAGERS.
How the Affairs of a Theatre can be most Efficiently Controlled by the Adoption of Systems of Internal Check.
By CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY, Chartered Accountant.
Price, 3/6. Post free, 3/9.
All concerned with the business side of a theatre will find much useful information and many valuable hints in "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Mr. Cuthbert E. Smedley, published at The Era office.—Referee, Jan. 31, 1909.
"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers." By Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. 3s. 6d. The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.
"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers" by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (The Era, Ltd., London, 3s. 6d.), is a most concise and comprehensive little work, calculated to prove of assistance to the theatre-manager. It shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given, and the chapters treating of receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts and audit will be found to contain much useful information. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Feb. 3, 1909.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.
Being a digest of the Law relating to Theatres and Music Halls, and containing chapters on Theatrical Contracts, Theatrical, Music and Dancing, and Excise Licences, Dramatic and Musical Copyright, &c., with an Appendix containing the Acts of Parliament relating thereto, and the regulations of the London County Council and the Lord Chamberlain, by ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (London), Solicitor,

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS—

THE ERA, July 30, 1910.
Important changes in the law affecting the amusement professions have been made since the issue, nine years ago, of the second edition of Mr. Albert A. Strong's valuable book on Theatrical and Musical Law, and the third edition, just published, comes opportunely to hand. The work has been greatly enlarged, upwards of sixty additional pages being required to accommodate the mass of new information. The publication has been brought as nearly as possible up to date, and within its pages will be found analyses of important measures which have been adopted both in Parliament and out. There is, for instance, the full text of the recent Berlin Convention, and the new Copyright Act of the United States. The awards governing the relations between managers, artists, and agents are reproduced in their entirety, and a number of fresh cases illustrating the effect of the barring clauses is included.
The Musical Copyright Act, by which tardy justice was secured to song-writers and publishers, is given in full, and a digest of the measure, bringing out its salient features is also printed. A whole chapter is now devoted to the subject of children on the stage, and the important question of the Workmen's Compensation Act is exhaustively dealt with. All the decisions of the Courts affecting theatres and music-halls are referred to, many notable cases being recalled. The law governing dramatic and musical copyright is defined as clearly as its intricacies will allow, and a reliable indication of the methods to be adopted in securing protection is afforded. The progress made in the question of licensing has been too slow to allow of more than a reproduction of the terms of agreement entered into between the representatives of theatres and music-halls regarding sketches, but pronouncements under that heading are numerous.

THE ENCORE, May 26, 1910.
We have just received the third edition of Mr. Albert A. Strong's book on Theatrical and Musical Law, which is published at "The Era" Office, 5, Tavistock Street, Strand. Since the second edition of this work was published—nine years—many changes have taken place in the laws relating to entertainments, and these have necessitated a considerable enlargement of the volume. Full texts of the recent Berlin Convention and the United States Copyright Law are included in this edition, in which is also published the awards governing the relations between artists, agents, and managers. A number of new cases are also cited illustrating the effects of the barring clause. The Musical Copyright Act, children on the stage, the sketch question, and the Workmen's Compensation Act are all fully dealt with and in a readable and easy style, as free as possible from legal phraseology and technicalities. It is a legal axiom that ignorance of the law is no excuse for breaking it, and, therefore, it behoves everyone connected with the entertainment world to make himself acquainted with the law as it stands in relation to the profession or business in which he may be engaged. To every one connected with the Drama or Variety Mr. Strong's book is a necessity, and this last edition is so comprehensive that anyone who consults it can have no possible excuse for infringing the law on the ground of ignorance. The work will, no doubt, have a ready and rapid sale, for all artists, managers, and agents should have it at hand.

THE FINANCIAL NEWS, June 13, 1910.
In view of the frequent litigation concerning theatrical matters there can be no doubt as to the usefulness of this little book to those whom it concerns, and, apart from its usefulness, it is really quite an interesting little volume, in saying which we are paying tribute to Mr. Strong's lucid methods of explaining the intricacies of the law. He has avoided legal terms as far as possible, and theatrical cases exemplifying legal principles he has given in full. To make this, the third, edition as complete and useful as possible, Acts of Parliament relating to theatrical matters and the regulations of the Lord Chamberlain and London County Council are set out in full in the appendix, with the text of the recent Berlin Convention and the new Copyright Act of the United States.

THE PERFORMER, May 12, 1910.
THE ARTIST'S LEGAL HANDBOOK.
We welcome a third edition of Mr. Albert A. Strong's "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" Offices), as it is nine years since the second appeared, and much has happened since then, not least the foundation of the V.A.F. and the resultant Award of 1907. This will be found incorporated in the now greatly-improved and extended Appendix of Statutes, ranging from the Disorderly Houses Act of 1751, to last year's L.C.C. Cinematograph regulations. As far as is possible with further developments in daily progress, this invaluable work of legal reference for all interested in the entertainment profession has been brought up-to-date. Sixty pages have been added, and the whole revised and rendered easier of reference by the re-arrangements that have been made, and the numerous marginal headings that have been introduced. Strong, on "Dramatic and Musical Law," may be regarded as the layman's complete authority on the subject, whether he be PROPRIETOR, MANAGER, or ARTIST, and with a lucid explanation of the law so readily available, the artist will be wise to consult its pages before venturing on new contracts and agreements, whether as employed or—in these days of "combinations," sketches, troupes, and what not—as employer.

To the Publisher.
1, Renfrew-road, Lambeth, S.E.
15th June, 1910.
My Dear Sir,—
I have had an opportunity of looking into the third edition of Mr. Albert Strong's "Dramatic and Musical Law," published from your office recently, and I have pleasure in testifying to the great value I have found the previous editions in my practice among ladies and gentlemen connected with the profession for which your valuable paper caters so admirably.
That Mr. Strong has had a wide experience in the matters with which he deals so ably in his book is evidenced by the lucid yet exhaustive manner in which he has treated the various subjects therein, and this last edition is eloquent testimony of the care and ability which he bestows upon his work.
Brought thoroughly up to date it will without doubt find a wide circle of usefulness among the profession whose contracts, Mr. Strong aptly remarks, are so fruitful a source of litigation.
Believe me,
Yours very faithfully,
W. H. ARMSTRONG.

DEAN'S FURNISHING CO., LTD.,
Are at the present time by far the largest Theatre Decorators and Furnishers in the World. A proof of this is that at the present time they have Contracts in hand ten to every one of their competitors. These are plain solid facts.
Why do DEAN'S FURNISHING CO., LTD., get nine out of every ten Contracts they estimate for? Simply because they know their business, complete to time, give best workmanship, only employ men who thoroughly understand this class of work.

DEAN'S FURNISHING CO., LTD.,
Are prepared to give three years' guarantee with all Chairs, Seating, &c., whether a Tip-up Chair is purchased at 4/11, including carriage and fixing, or 75/-. This should be a sufficient proof of the class of work we are executing.
Proprietors, Architects, Lessees, Managers, &c., have only to telephone, wire, or write, and Dean's Furnishing Co., Ltd., will at once send one of their Managers—either Mr. Windibank or Mr. Bardell—to wait on them next day. Distance no object—five or five hundred miles, one and all receive their promptest attention.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS

ABERAMAN.—POOLE'S PICTURE PALACE.—Lessee, Mr. John R. Poole; Manager, Mr. R. Tebbitt.—Williams and Warden, Irish comedians, in their latest success, Mr. Dooley, top the bill; Tom Clifford, ventriloquist, gains favour; the Le Bruns, eccentric jugglers, introducing Little Edie, the child artist, have a hearty reception. The pictures are new and good.

ABERDARE.—NEW THEATRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Z. Andrews; Acting-Manager, Mr. B. Richards.—A Country Girl in London is being ably interpreted by Mr. W. V. Garrod's company. Miss Maude Merrick is successful in the rôle of Marjorie Hamilton, which she depicts in an effective and earnest manner; Mr. Chas. Halling sustains the part of Frank Gordon with power; Mr. Fred Wilberforce is good as Mr. John Hamilton; Mr. Scott Leighton displays ability as Godfrey Clinton; Miss Elsie Marriott-Watson plays Gwendoline Gordon in a convincing manner; Mr. Frank Dallas is to be credited with a capital impersonation of Henrich Oppenheim; Job Smithers has a good representative in Mr. Sutton Pateman; whilst Mr. Seymour Perry as Wilberforce Puddyphat and Miss Alice Clarke as Adelaide Puddyphat cause much laughter.

NEW EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Victor W. Rowe; Resident-Manager, Arthur Norton.—Keppel and Williams, crosstalk comedians and dancers, are a good turn; Nellie Deil is a dainty comedienne and dancer; Kytye has a unique speciality act; and Ada Tilley and Harold Wagner and company, in their farcical sketch, entitled The Lodger, supported by Mr. Jack White as Bill Grunley, create roars of laughter. The high standard of the pictures is maintained.

ABERDEEN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Robert Arthur Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Mr. James Millard and his talented company of players occupy the boards this week with the inspiring drama, Paying the Price. The play centres around the stirring events of the South African War. Mr. Millard makes a favourable impression as Lord Delemere; Mr. Jackson Wilcox as Captain Dick Clinton is the typical high-spirited British officer; Miss Margaret Damer represents well the part of the scheming adventuress Lady Delemere; Miss Gem Lloyd as Doris Delemere is winsome and vivacious; Mr. H. Vyvian Thomas is an impressive journalist of the aristocratic type, and plays the Hon. Cecil Dalrymple to perfection; and Mr. Frank Medhurst gives a good representation of the Boer farmer.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Percy H. Gallagher.—The Five Faludys are acrobats of more than ordinary agility and grace; Captain Kettle manipulates cards and other things with amazing dexterity; Nine Dainty Dots dance and sing with charming childish abandon; Randolph King proves himself to be an actor of resource; H. O. Wills, "the water rat," gives a highly original display; and Miss Dora Lyric proves herself to be possessed of musical abilities of an attractive nature.

THE TIVOLI.—Proprietors, The Tivoli (Aberdeen), Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—Happy Holland is portrayed in the Tivoli this week in a most engaging manner; Jack Friedmann takes the leading part in a company of thirty, all of whom contribute to the enjoyable features of the presentation; the Royal Tokio Troupe display their well-known acrobatic dexterity; Curtis Leo and Little Noblesse give a mystifying display of juggling; Dan Daly is a burlesque singer of accomplished parts; Mildred Parr sings and acts with attractive grace; Goodall and Knox are comedians of a rich versatile character; and Miss Millie Howard sings with rare spirit and success.

ABERTILLERY.—PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; Manager, E. Price.—The star turns this week are Six Brothers Luck in Lift 'Ems, Ltd., and The Demon of the Cellar, both of which cause roars of laughter. Included in the bill are Walter Stanley, a novel comedian; Hazel Ellis, novel lady conjurer; Gordon Stretton, coloured comedian and dancer; and Leon Dixon, comedian.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Mr. John F. Preston's company is the attraction here in Secrets. Mr. Ernest R. Allen gives a manly and convincing performance as Lieut. Herbert Markham; as the villainous Noureddin Ali Mr. John Richter is effective; Mr. Dan F. Roe is seen to advantage as the Hon. Cecil Cholmondeley; Mr. F. Churchill is capable as Alma Meleda; Mr. Arthur Hartley ably depicts the character of the slave dealer; and Mr. William Macready is very successful as Kara. Miss Marie Barrett acquits herself with distinction as Ismalia; Miss Maud Kynnersley makes the most of her opportunities as Zulieka; Miss A. Churchill makes a capital Thyrza; Miss Lucie Glenville merits praise as Kassi; Miss Jenny Hackett is a delightful exponent of Winnie Wilkins, and receives capital support in creating laughter from Mr. George Scully as Peter.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—The lively Dan Whitley is a big favourite here; Coverdale's and Huxley's Bijou Juveniles present a refined musical scena; Perrier introduces a novel ventriloquial turn; Bromley and Fontein, comedy duo, are very entertaining; the Sisters Hall are a pair of charming vocalists; the Beckett-ow Bros. provide a clever comedy acrobatic act; Moon and Morris sing and dance themselves into favour; Edith Chantler is a dainty comedienne; and the Bioscope proves interesting.

ALDERSHOT.—ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Gladwin.—An acceptable change from the variety programme is that of Mr. J. W. Cordiner's company in Dare-Devil Dorothy. Mr. Fred W. Graham's continual run of humorous sayings and doings as Silas makes him most popular, and he is ably seconded by Miss Florence Corri as Judith. Miss May Otto uses a well-trained voice to great advantage as Dorothy; whilst a dashing Ruth is contributed by Miss Margaret Forbes. Mr. Walter Ashley looks the typical soldier as Captain George Fielding; Mr. James Morath sustains the necessary villainy of the plot with vigour, and as an accomplice he has Mr. Edward Aldworth as Hawkins. Amusing situations are introduced by Messrs. Geoffrey Berwick (Featherstone), and Wm. H. Troutbeck (Smith); whilst the Sisters Iris and Lillie Elvido, with several cleverly executed dances, help materially to the success.

WIDE WORLD PICTURES.—A good selection of pictures is presented by Messrs. Golder and Sloman this week. A dramatic picture is entitled The Brave Action of a Girl. The chief comic film is Pulling Dad's Leg.

ASHINGTON.—BUFFALO PALACE.—Proprietors, Messrs. J. and E. Lamb; Manager, Mr. W. P. Carr.—Mr. J. H. Milburn, vocal comedian, is highly appreciated; Miss Fanny Humber contributes largely to the success with her singing, dancing, &c.; and the pictures are of the usual high order.

PAVILION PALACE.—Proprietors, Hirst Pavilion, Ltd.; Business-Manager, Mr. Arthur Stoker; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joe Curry.—Mr. Gus Hindell, character comedian, is a great success; Sim Maree, the indiarubber Mohammedan, is a marvellous contortionist; and Mr. Tom Bassett, Shakespearean comedy artist, is also good.

MINERS' THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. A. C. Moody; Resident-Manager, Mr. T. Campbell Browne.—Mr. H. Armitage's company, in Leah Kleschna, reopened the above theatre on Monday. Mr. William Clayton made a powerful Kleschna; as Paul Sylvaine, Mr. Cyril Austen Lee displayed ability; Mr. Henry Nunn as Raoul Berton was excellent; Mr. Graham Pockett did well as Schram; in the parts of General Burton and Valentine Faure Mr. Henry Wren was particularly good; and in the title-rôle Miss Marguerite Cellier played in a natural and charming manner.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—Mr. and Mrs. Maclaren's company is visiting Ashton this week with Proof, the romantic costume play. Mr. Francis Roberts enacts the French soldier, Pierre Lorance, investing the rôle with the requisite passion and pathos; Mr. George Roberts invests the scoundrel Lazare with the needful vindictive ferocity and cunning; Mr. T. E. Marshall as Chamboran introduces an element of humour that relieves the sombreness of the story; Mr. Alfred Wiltshire is a dignified and soldierly Count D'Aubterre; Mr. Hubert B. Hine as Victor plays the lover with tenderness and ardour; Miss Hero Hathaway, in the dual rôles of Madeline and Adrienne, shows grace and power; Miss Elsie Goulding as Valentine is vigorous and passionate; Miss Millicent James as Mme. D'Aubterre reflects a motherly nature and kindly disposition.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jesse Bursiem.—The bill for the week at the Empire is variety. Several of the artists are old favourites. Morny Cash, the Lancashire lad, for example, sings some new ditties and introduces some new "business," which adds to his popularity; the cat king, Leoni Clarke, is also here again with his educated cats, canaries, monkeys, rabbits, &c. A very pleasing show is afforded by Mr. Clarke's pets. The Broadway Boys combine good vocalism with expert dancing; Sydney Brandon gives an original turn in character portrayal; the Sisters Brooklands are very dainty artists in dance and song; a nice, novel act of the musical order is given by Eric and Nora; Philip Levard scores as a society illusionist and a conjurer, assisted by Miss Lily Gene; two favourites of the halls—Edie Veno, eccentric comedienne, and Ada Fawn, comedy and burlesque actress—are prominent in their specialities of song and patter and pretty posing and eccentric diversion.

ATTERCLIFFE.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manageress, Miss Ethel J. Hope.—A fine selection of pictures, embracing drama, travel, and comedy, is being given here, and full houses are the rule. Interested and appreciated turns are given by Miss Elva O'Neill, burlesque comedienne; and Mr. Will Peplow, vocalist and trick instrumentalist.

PICTURE PALACE. — Lessee, Mr. Matt Raymond; Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward King.—The Ironworkers' Strike is the headliner here, and proves to be a thrilling and highly dramatic picture. Mr. Henri Albano, expert concertinist, gives enjoyable selections.

AYR.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—Her Love Against the World has been presented here by Messrs. W. H. Hallatt and Walter Howard's company. Mr. Fred Emery and Miss Ellen Snow, in the respective parts of Earl Strathmere and Princess Iris, act with excellent effect; Mr. Roy Fortescue is a great success as the villain, and his portrayal of the part of Prince Ulric is a feature of the performance. Others worthy of mention are Mr. W. H. Hallatt as Prince Othmar, Mr. Arthur Chisholm as Prince Maurice, Mr. C. R. Hann as General Gessler, Mr. Fred Acton, and Mr. John Mill; Miss Blanche Stelle as Shula and Miss Rossie St. John as Nello.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Messrs. Walter Paumier and Walter Howard's No. 1 company in The Prince and the Beggar Maid is here. Miss Viola Holland as Monico is both dignified and humorous, and Mr. Henry Hallett is a manly Prince Olaf. Mr. Victor Ray is a pathetic Prince Michael, and Mr. Leonard Booker a malignant Prince Hildred. Mr. W. S. Hardy does well as Colonel Wellenberg, and Mr. H. Burton is seen to advantage as Captain Hector; while Mr. S. Dickens is a humorous Lieutenant Stromberg. Miss Violet May is a sweet Camiola, and Miss Mona Hall an effective Viola.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—The Blue Myths are still here with a highly-varied entertainment.

TIVOLI.—Lessee, Signor R. Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Wood.—The chief item here this week is "Les Milabies," a series of living models of well-known pictures and statues introduced by Signor Arvi. Mrs. Victor's Juveniles submit a pleasing turn in songs, choruses, and dances; Johnson and Hart are smart and clever in a hoop-manipulating and juggling entertainment; Andre Romanoff gives appreciated violin selections; Baby Vi Davis; Dolly Ross, comedienne; and Bert Bowden, comedian, also appear.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Fred Newman's British Empire Picture and Variety Company are giving an excellent entertainment this week.

BARRY DOCK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Manager, Mr. Hamilton Warden; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Frank Dure.—Miss Florence Baines is appearing in the musical farce Miss Lancashire, Ltd. Miss Baines as Mary Ellen Thompson is a remarkably clever and versatile artist, keeping the house in roars from start to finish: Miss Mollie Shine acts delightfully as Eva Lancashire; Miss Francis Ferina makes a stately Bertha; John Higgins is cleverly portrayed by Mr. David Donaldson; Mr. Charles Swinburne does well as Harry; Messrs. Henry Lloyd and Joseph Burley as Grant and Herbert Fox respectively are very amusing; Mr. Payne Fletcher (John Thompson) and Miss Maud Locker (Mrs. Thompson) both do well; and Mr. W. E. Passmore gives an excellent character-study of Moses Goldberg. The piece is prettily staged.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint; General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. W. Minto.—The Celestas are a quartette of comedy singers with exceptionally good voices; the Sisters Henderson give an excellent display of their skill as musicians and dancers; while Dennis and Morris are a pair of clever comedians and dancers; and the pictures are of the usual popular kind.

BATH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—The regular autumn season commenced on Monday, when Mr. Bannister Howard's excellent company began a return visit in The Earl and the Girl, and which served to introduce Bath's own musical comedy actress, Miss Lillie Gullick, to the local boards, after her severe illness, in the character of Elphin Haye. The popular little lady has met with a splendid reception nightly. She is capitally supported by Mr. Herbert St. John as Dick Wargrave and Miss Blanche Astley as Daisy Fallowfield. "Chantecler" dresses by Clarkson create much interest and amusement. The star of the company is that sound comedian, Mr. Edward Lewis, who fairly revels in the character of Jim Cheese; 'Liza Shoddam being once again impersonated by Mr. Lina Hicks. In several ways Miss Edith Blande is strong in ability and presence as Mrs. Shimmering Black, her three companions in pursuit of Wargrave finding good representations in Mr. D. Fisher, jun. (Downham), Mr. Harry Courtin (Bliss), and Mr. Jos. R. Tate (Talk). Mr. Lionel Scott does well as the Hon. Crewe Boodle.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Friend and Downing, the American cross-talk comedians, score a legitimate success here by their refinement and wit; Gene Morelle, the ragged virtuoso, is another turn to the liking of the audience; the Caines are two ladies who juggle the Indian clubs well, but the tit-bit is the wonderful ball-punching of the elder partner. Tod Lowen is recalled again and again for his rendering of old melodies with new words; and others who win favour by their smart work are the Four Rosebuds, vocalists and dancers, Dene and Dixon, comedy duo, and Jessie Wilton, comedienne.

BEDFORD.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—Thomas Bentley celebrated Dickensian character actor, comes in for rounds of applause for his clever impersonations. He is assisted by little Doris Walker, who undertakes the part of Little Nell; Paul Cavalli performs some marvellous feats of strength, at one time supporting a full-sized piano and a pianist on his chest; some clever instrumental work is done by Parks and Price; Maud Esmond sings with much gusto "Ship ahoy!" and her other song is well rendered; Grace Lester and company present a short drama A Ruined Life; and other turns are those of the Sisters Robertson, duettists and dancers; and Charles Moore, comedian. The Bioscope concludes.

BELFAST.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company opened here on Monday with The Arcadians. The cast is a powerful one, and includes Mr. Walter Passmore, who as James Smith achieved a pronounced success, being irresistibly funny. Mr. Oliver J. Round was inimitable as Peter Doody, his songs, especially "Always Merry and Bright," affording great pleasure. Miss Ethel Erskine was delightful as Sombra, her fine voice being heard to advantage in several songs; and Miss Billie Sinclair was a fascinating Eileen Cavanagh. Mr. Harold E. Pearce was excellent as Jack Meadows, and Miss Veronica Brady deserved a special word of praise for her droll impersonation of Mrs. Smith. Mr. Ivan Cleveland was very good as Sir George Paddock, and Mr. Louis Victor rendered able assistance as Bobby. Miss Florence Ivy as Chrysea was in every sense capable; and other rôles were ably sustained by Miss I. Powell, Miss B. Craigie, Miss L. Clarke, Miss M. Powell, Miss E. Drayson, and Messrs. Dalton Murray, Ivan Leslie, H. Percival, and G. H. Adams. The chorus and augmented orchestra were under the skilful direction of Mr. Edwin Thornton.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—What a Man Made Her is being presented here by Miss Renee Glendower and company. Miss Glendower fills the leading rôle of Janet McAllister in a clever manner, her speeches being loudly acclaimed; Mr. Charles K. Franks was admirable as Sir Ernest Cavendish, and Mr. W. J. Butler furnished a powerful impersonation of Rupert Danescombe. The rôle of Doctor Mark Haven was cleverly interpreted by Mr. Frederick W. Freeman; and humour was infused into the performance of that of Lewis Emmanuel Gunnerstein by Mr. Harry Ugar. Miss Dorothy Dewhurst was charming as Deborah; and Miss Nora Kingsley and Miss Beatrice Shirley were equal to the requirements of the rôles of Elfrida and Lady Thora Danescombe. Other parts were adequately presented by Miss K. Murgatroyd, Miss V. Thomas, and Messrs. Pat Erson and J. Lindsay.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Willmott; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—The star here is the droll clown Cruickshank, whose patter and musical selections have been received with enthusiasm. Lauri and Beatty and company appear to advantage in their sketch entitled The Lady Bandits, and Grant and Grant please all with their negro songs and dances. The Four Vagabonds are an exceedingly talented vocal quartette, and gain deserved encores; Leick and Keith's cornet solos are an agreeable feature of the entertainment; Mr. Charles Santon, male soprano, has a wonderful voice; and also engaged are Miss Lila Vesta, comedienne; Dacey and Lewes, a speciality comedy couple, and the Hipposcope, with "film" dogs of all nations.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. C. Laidler.—Miss Daisy Jerome tops the bill here, and has achieved a pronounced success; Mr. Tom Bryce appears in a musical comedy sketch The Dudes' Wooing; and Mlle. De Shara presents Little Sunbeam, a good comedienne and dancer. Fielding and Hull appear in their tabloid musical comedy entitled Mixed Bathing; and Rauschle faithfully impersonates celebrities, past and present, including Salisbury, Gladstone, Roosevelt, John Burns, and many others. Athlone and Sinclair produce their speciality act entitled Mary's Ideal Man; and also engaged is Miss Lillie Farrar, who appears in her attractive scena "Bubbles." The Bioscope completes.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr. Will White.—Some attractive films have been produced here, including Hague v. Langford, Johnson v. Ketchell, The Special Agent, The Tragic Hour, &c. The vaudeville element is sustained by the Godfreys in their clever musical act and the Ives in their ball-punching performance.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Rogers.—Among many beautiful pictures exhibited here may be mentioned Ramona, The Princess and the Peasant, Two Sides to a Story, Are You John Brown? &c. The Maynards Comedy Duo appear at each performance with decided success, also Mr. Fred Buckley, eccentric comedian.

PRINCESS PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Captain T. A. Blake.—A fine series of pictures is being exhibited here this week, including The Marked Time Table, The Indiscretions of Betty, The Worker's Wife. Mr. Dan Derry, ventriloquist, appears, and creates roars of laughter.

BILSTON.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Edwin C. Jazon; Resident-Manager, W. J. Tunstall.—Jadoo Wallah, the Egyptian wonder-worker, occupies a prominent place in the programme this week; Ariel and Astarte appear in a gymnastic potpourri; and Ernest Montefiore and company present a dramatic sketch, entitled The Little Colonel.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hebert M. King.—Mr. C. Watson Mills and his capable company, in For Love and the King, are delighting large audiences. Mr. C. Watson Mills gives a finished and incisive rendering of Gerald Meredith, and is ably seconded by Miss Joan Ellis, who enacts the rôle of Natila with conspicuous ability; Mr. Alfred Morris gives a good character-sketch of Michael Obrenovic; and Mr. John C. Carlyle, Mr. Beckett Bould, Mr. Geoffrey Chate, and Mr. Oscar Power are also prominent in the cast, which is most efficient throughout. The staging of the play is really excellent.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Keating.—Mr. Mark Sheridan, the popular comedian, is on a welcome return visit, and is scoring his accustomed success; Mr. Albert Whelan, the talented Australian entertainer, is an established favourite here; and Olga, Elga, and Eli Hudson, expert instrumentalists and vocalists, have made a decided hit: the Bensons, in their musical comedy act The Page and the Maid; Tony Black, a good Scotch comedian; Miss Elsie Roby, musical comedienne; Rich and Rich, comedians and patterers; the Brothers Miller, comedy gymnasts; Miss Jennie Hartley, a pleasing soubrette; and Brown's Royal Bioscope accord valuable assistance, and business is simply enormous.

HIPPODROME.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston.—Mr. Stephen Pritt's company, in a condensed version of East Lynne, give every satisfaction twice nightly. Miss Lydia Donovan presents a careful and effective study of Lady Isabel; Mr. Morris Maud is a fine Archibald Carlyle; Captain Levison is well embodied by Mr. C. Quinton Fulford; Miss Kathleen Stewart is well placed as Barbara Hare; and remaining characters are in able hands.

WINTER GARDENS, ROCK FERRY.—General-Manager, Messrs. B. Allandale and L. Blattner; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry A. Dooley.—A strong company comprises Mr. Alex. Chentrens (Anglo-French chanteur), Mr. McDougal (Scotch comedian), Mr. Bernard Davies, Miss Miri De Freece, Billy Moran, Mr. Douglas Campbell, Mr. Davis Jenkins, and Miss Mabel Warwick.

BIRMINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davies; General-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—Mr. Lewis Waller, supported by his company from the Lyric Theatre, is producing the new play Bardelys the Magnificent before crowded houses. A special report of the production will be found on another page.

PRINCE OF WALES.—Lessees, Rodgers, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Johnston.—Good houses are being delighted with the production by Mr. Robert Courtneidge and Mr. H. M. Thompson's company of The Dairymaids. Miss Ethel Colaman as Peggy displays excellence in every department, and Miss Marjorie Manners makes a dainty Winifred and sings with artistic feeling. The comedy element is in the hands of a capable party of comedians, conspicuous amongst whom are Mr. William Spray and Mr. Edwin Dodds. There is a full and powerful chorus, and the dances are effectively executed.

ALEXANDRA.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest.—From Convent to Throne is creating a very favourable impression, the romantic love-story never flagging in interest. Mr. J. A. Campbell presents a very capable company, at the head of which is Mr. Aidan Levett as Lieutenant von Hapsburg, and Miss Valerie Crespin as the Princess—afterwards the Queen—Maritza. They make an admirable pair. Mr. William J. Miller is clever in the character of a scheming Minister, and Mr. A. F. Stuart is also good in a prominent part. The humour is well sustained, and the drama moves with refreshing briskness.

BORDESLEY PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Mark Lorne.—Her Path of Sorrow is presented by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Draycott's company. The piece is cleverly treated, and it holds the attention of the audience securely throughout. The cast is a strong one, Miss Fay Garnet-Vayne being a conspicuous figure as Nellie Rayne, the betrayed and deserted girl. Other clever artists are Mr. John Davidson, Mr. Frank Etheridge, Mr. Horatio Sinclair, Mr. H. Harrald, Miss Florence Melrose, Millett, and Miss Daisy Carlton. The dramatic situations are well balanced by pleasing light comedy, and the production is meeting with deserved success.

METROPOLE.—Proprietor, Mr. Andrew Melville; Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—Mr. and Mrs. Percy Brown's company is achieving marked success in a revival of A Life's Revenge. The cast has been carefully selected, and the play is very cleverly handled, auguring well for a successful future. A sensational situation is the duel between Princess Vanda Ivylia (Miss Millie Ford) and Marcia Vittoria (Miss Amy Ellam). Mr. Wilton J. Richards ably undertakes the heavy rôle as Prince Boris Strogoroff, and Mr. Edward E. Louis as Paul Starovitch is fully equal to his part. Miss Nellie Hook fills a comedy part with vivacity, and the remaining characters are very capably represented.

ASTON THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis Chapman.—Miss Nannie Goldman's company presents with great success The Stepmother. Miss Goldman in the character of Danny has many opportunities to display her emotional powers, and she is never found wanting. Mr. William Holles as Captain Bristow is conspicuous in a very capable company, and Miss Patricia Bostock plays the title-rôle convincingly. The comedy parts are ably sustained by Miss Edith Bruce (Johanna Jones) and Mr. Teddy Myles (Timothy Yapp).

CARLTON THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—A revival of The New Magdalen is ably undertaken by Mr. James Alexander's company. The cast includes two or three names that were very prominent in the stock company playing here during the summer, and the production is thus an increased attraction. Miss Yoxa Summer, who scored many triumphs here a short time ago, distinguishes herself in the character of Mercy Merrick, and displays a wonderful power of expression. She is well supported by Mr. Norman Tracy in the part of Julian Gray, and Miss Margaret Thorne is well chosen as Lady Janet Roy. Other prominent artists are Miss Ethel Matthews and Mr. Frederick Harker. The play is evidently destined for a long and successful run.

EMPIRE. — Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Williams.—There have been many regrets over the non-appearance of the popular comedian Phil Ray, which, we learn, is due to indisposition. His place, however, is taken by Kitts and Windrum, from the Grand Theatre, and the mirth which they provoke in a farcical sketch, The Cuckoo, provides good compensation. Barton and Ashley, the American comedy couple, introduce plenty of humour in their farcical creation, Adam the Second; Winifred Ward is appropriately termed "the Immaculate Boy"; Herman Melot is a skilful conjurer; Harry Conlin receives a warm welcome; Signor and Mme. Corelli provoke laughter by their amusing duets; the Cavalotti Brothers are talented musicians; Shirley and Ransome appear in a good sketch; and Aida Martine is a pleasing comedienne.

THE GRAND.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. E. Foster; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Lucas.—Miss Ada Reeve, a warm favourite in Birmingham, has ample scope for displaying her great talents in a number of very popular songs, each of which is an entertainment in itself. Severus Schaffer, a clever juggler, occupies a conspicuous place in the programme, his performance concluding with some remarkable feats of strength. Kitts and Windrum present a very amusing sketch, entitled The Cuckoo, and Drew and Alders, two smart burlesque comedians, have a great reception. Harry Brown is a quaint coloured comedian; Rhoda Paul a talented male impersonator; Conan and Doyle are appreciated in patter and song; the Violas mystify audiences in a thought-reading performance; and Georgina Leno is popular.

GAIETY.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—A hearty reception is accorded to Carl Junor, whose pianoforte playing in a sketch entitled The Spirit of Music excites admiration. The ever-popular Ferguson and Mac keep audiences laughing with their quaint comedy business; and the miniature circus, comprising ponies, monkeys, and dogs, presented by Carl and Mary Ohm, is also an attractive feature. The Four Maisanos appear in an eccentric musical act; Bert Brantford is a clever comedian; Dunn and Reano are well received in a comedy act; Bert Beecham is an up-to-date light comedian; and Rosa Tilley is a bright burlesque actress.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasfords, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—With Fred Karno's latest creation, Perkins, M.P., at the head of the bill it is not surprising that the theatre is crowded each evening. Tom Nelson makes a great hit as the entertaining Perkins, and he is well supported. Ernie Myers keeps the ball rolling with his funny patter and new songs; Keen and Waller are an amusing pair of comedy acrobats; Harry Levaine is a comedian of considerable ability; a pleasing sketch, The Suffragettes, is provided by the Menzies; Webb and Branston are pleasing operatic duettists; Lily Lonsdale scores a great success in a popular song; and Roma Raie is a comedienne with a taking style.

ASTON HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Aston Hippodrome, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. T. H. Middleton.—Fasola, the mysterious Indian fakir, is responsible for the chief turn in an excellent bill. His tricks apparently baffle detection, and they are very highly appreciated. A jumping speciality is provided by the Hartley Wonders, whose agility is displayed to good effect; Clare and Pastor in a Dutch song and dance earn warm applause; L. W. Harris is a light comedian with a pleasing style; Frank Maura is correctly described as "the Mexican Wonder"; Patty Yole sings and dances well; Regan and Ryan are clever eccentrics; and Miss Maggie Walsh, the singing mill girl, is deservedly popular. The Hipposcope pictures are a good feature.

CURZON HALL.—Lessee, Mr. Waller Jeffs.—The pictures illustrating beauty spots in Europe appear very much to the liking of audiences. Scenes on the Rhine at Heidelberg and Berne, are of a very interesting character, and they are quite seasonable. The classical story of Pygmalion and Galatea is cleverly reproduced in picture form, and there are numerous other films. The Sisters Sligo are applauded in a pleasing musical turn.

KING'S HALL.—Proprietors, Messrs. J. P. Moore and B. Kennedy. — There are many up-to-date features in an enjoyable programme of animated pictures, chief amongst which is a film illustrating the story of "Jane Eyre." Belle Laurier, a talented comedienne, provides an acceptable turn. Wrestling matches are proving popular.

QUEEN'S HALL.—Proprietors, Messrs. B. Kennedy and J. P. Moore. — The picture programme is proving a very effective draw. The variety turns add interest to the entertainment.

BISHOP AUCKLAND. — EDEN THEATRE. — Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Business-Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—Mr. and Mrs. Percy Brown's company is presenting Geoffrey Langdon's Wife here. Mr. Wilson Coleman gives a thrilling portrayal of Felix Beverley; Mr. Edward F. Louis is fine as Jack Stirling; and Mr. Cyril Grier is a clever Colonel Mills; Miss Kathleen Magee charmingly depicts the title-part; and Miss Lelia Drummond handles with masterly effect the Hon. Mrs. Sands; Miss Minnie Goepel is a winning Sweet Nancy; and Mr. W. Annesley (Arthur Bellairs), Mr. Reginald Brown (Geoffrey Langdon), Mr. Joe Redfern (Thomas), Mr. Alfred G. T. Raymond (Charles) play their respective rôles splendidly.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Hippodrome (Bishop Auckland) Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Pepi.—Another capital bill is being provided here, at the top of which appears Dick Tubb. He is a masterly comedian, and his songs are sung in fine style. Kioto and Esa are wonderful equilibrists, and their turn is most thrilling; Sira, one-legged acrobat, is very good; and Maudie Ford is a clever song and dance artist; Jessie Buckle, vocalist comedienne, does well; Tate and Tate, in their novel comedy act, are good; and David Poole is a pleasing ventriloquist. The Hipposcope pictures show interesting films.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. Harry P. Tower's company is here this week with The Mountaineers. Mr. Fred Eastman as Pierre scores a complete success, and laughter reigns supreme whenever he is on the stage; as the rival lovers, Fritz and Conrad, Messrs. Claude Flemming and Edgar Marsden respectively act and sing with excellent effect; whilst Mr. Frank Lawton has in Gustave a part that gives him opportunities for the display of his wonderful talent as a whistler; and Mr. Leo Sheffield is well suited to the character of Sergeant Frederico; Miss Marie Dainton makes the most delightful Clarice, and her singing is a rich treat; Miss Ida Stratham as Annette and Miss Aida Jenoure as Miss Spinifex also play their parts with credit and distinction. Mr. Reginald Somerville, the composer is in charge of a very fine orchestra.

GRAND THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Harrop.—The Merry Widow is again drawing huge audiences here this week. The personnel is little changed since the last visit, and the old favourites receive the most cordial reception nightly. Mr. Eric Thorne carries all before him as Baron Popoff; Mr. W. Talleur Andrews is fine as Vicomte Camille; Mr. George Grundy possesses all the attributes necessary for a correct portrayal of Prince Danilo; and Miss Gertrude Lester is the fascinating Sonia; Mr. Robert Nainby as Nisch, Mr. Albert Kavanagh as Marquis de Cascada, Mr. Stratton Mills as General Novokovitch, and Miss Daphne Hope as Natalie also lend excellent assistance and prove their fitness to be members of a George Edwardes's company.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Fragson tops the bill here this week, and is favourably received; Alexandra Dagmar is also a fine turn; and Coram is one of the best of ventriloquists; George S. Melvin is a smart comedian; the Millwards are diverting comedy gymnasts; Harry Nelson provides a humorous turn; the Four Athos are marvellous ball manipulators; Bertha Winder dances remarkably well; and the Jackley Trio of vaudeville entertainers are very amusing.

BOLTON. — THEATRE ROYAL, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Moncur.—Mr. Bulmer's company is here with When Woman Hates. Mr. B. H. Davis is dignified as General Rokeby; Mr. Richard Ferris is dashing as Lieutenant Fred Rokeby, R.N.; Mr. Austin Mortimer acts well as Godfrey Lawton; Mr. Evan Roland is very humorous as Patrick O'Brien; Mr. Reg. Oldroyd is good as Alphonse Picolet; Miss Doris Brookes displays skill as Cora Daintry; Miss Ada Rokeby is a pleasing Marie Rokeby; and Miss Marie Dalby displays much humour as Mrs. Sally Potts.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—Mr. Laurence Brough, comedian, heads the bill here with No. 9. Other turns on the programme are the Eight College Girls, in their vocal and dancing act, Schoolgirls at Play; Barney Murphy, comedian; Bert and Dora, comedy artists; Arthur Woodville, versatile comedian; May Fairclough, in selections from Shakespeare, &c.; Siems, card and coin manipulator; Sterling and Love, in Discord and Harmony; Eileen Douglas, musical comedy gir

The chief attraction here is Bert Byrne, who keeps the audience in a continual roar of laughter; Miss Rene Retford and Miss Celia Retford are successful; Miss Ennis Parkes creates an excellent impression; Mr. Charles Calvert and Mr. Victor Crawford are very amusing; and a whistling solo by Mr. J. Walker is well received.

BOSCOMBE.—Hippodrome, Ltd.—Joint-Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Gerald Spencer.—Arthur Lennard, vocal comedian, receives rounds of applause here; the Boisset Troupe, in The Bricklayers, are successful; Victor Newman, character actor, is much appreciated; the Soho Trio are clever in song and dance; Little Sophie, phenomenal juvenile artist, receives applause; the Forrest Combination, in My Friend the Enemy, and Chas. Sloman, comedian, also contribute.

BRADFORD.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—Mr. George Edwardes presented Our Miss Gibbs to a packed house on Monday. Miss Carrie Moore was charming in the title-rôle, and scored heavily with her songs, "Mary" and "We don't do that in Yorkshire." Laughter was very hearty during the time Mr. George Gregory was on the stage as the quaint Yorkshireman Timothy Gibbs; Mr. Frank Hector was very funny as the Hon. Pierpoint; Miss Nancy Hervyn was chic and charming as Mme. Jeanne; Miss Olive Moore as Lady Elizabeth Thanet, Miss Grace Weston as the stately Duchess of Minster, and Miss Kitty Cavendish as Mrs. Farquhar submitted admirable impersonations; and Mr. H. V. Cropton's Lord Eynsford, Mr. Myles Clifton's Earl of St. Ives, Mr. Leslie Gaze's Slithers, and Mr. Ernest Mahar's Mr. Topiady were respectively excellent efforts. Miss Florence Phillips won applause for a charming solo dance.

Prince's Theatre.—Lessee, Councillor F. Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. M. Hamilton.—The Broken Melody is staged here this week, with Auguste Van Biene in his well-known impersonation of Paul Borinski, and the fine 'cello solos are, as usual, loudly applauded. Mr. Van Biene is admirably supported by Miss Peggy Tighe as Mabel, Miss Rose Ralph as the Duchess, Mr. T. P. Hayes as Mortimer, and Mr. G. Child as Dr. McGrath.

The Empire.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. J. Kelly.—The Fred Karno combination of comedians are here in The Boy 'Ero, and as Jimmy the Fearless Mr. Karno elicits roars of laughter. He is capitally supported. The Miles-Stavordale Quintette, with banjos and harp, give a delightful performance; as comedy jugglers Mons. and Mme. Alf. Agoust are smart and entertaining; Phillips and Merritt dance cleverly in their bright turn as society entertainers; and the Three Sisters Kilner are dainty in their dancing. Mike S. Whallen is as amusing as ever as a comedian and raconteur; Helene Donald's songs are well rendered and prettily illustrated; and amusing pictures are shown by the Bioscope.

The Palace.—Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—Well-blended music and comedy are leading features in a capital songscena by the Four Garricks; much originality is shown by the Three Van Dammes in their acrobatic display; Colbert is a clever club juggler; some exceedingly smart dancing is given by the Four Sidney Girls, and by the Crisps in their comedy scena; the Hulls, in a musical act and burlesque opera, are entertaining; Julia Reeve, with daintily rendered humorous songs, wins much applause; and the Perfection Pictures are appreciated.

BRIDLINGTON.—Spa Opera House.—Manager, Mr. R. C. Luxton.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's London company opened here on Monday in Don. Mrs. Hutchison played the part of Mrs. Bonington with charming effect; Miss Dorothy Gordon as Mrs. Sinclair, and Miss Viola Garland as the daughter, were excellently fitted to their characters; and Miss Violet Harley as Mrs. Thompsett and Miss Mamie Mathers as Fanny rendered valuable aid to the play. Mr. Gordon Bailey gave good effect to the character of Stephen Bonington; Mr. Arthur Willoughby was a fine Canon Bonington; Mr. Charles Tyrel presented the part of General Sinclair with the requisite "fire"; and Mr. Charles Harley was wonderfully realistic as the fanatic Thompsett.

Royal Prince's Parade.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—The great event of this week was the benefit accorded to the popular manager on Monday evening in the Grand Pavilion. Mr. Palmer was rewarded for his great and successful catering for the entertainment of the visitors to this popular resort, by a crowded audience, and a big programme was provided. Miss Mary Palmer, soprano; Mr. Robert Charlesworth, baritone; Mr. Charles Beanland, the favourite humorist of the "Waterloo's"; and Mr. Walter Curtis, the Yorkshire humorist, were all heartily received. Miss Dolly Palmer, the clever little daughter of the manager, excelled all previous performances by her vocalism and dancing; and she also contributed to the success of the new fairy fantasy performed by the "Smart Set," entitled The Dream. The municipal orchestra, under Mr. Norfolk Megone's conductorship, gave some of their choice selections.

New Spa and Gardens.—Manager, Mr. R. C. Luxton.—The popularity of Herr Julian Kandt and his combination of talented musicians is testified by the crowded audiences which assemble nightly under the glass dome.

Summer Gardens.—Lessees, Messrs. Beanland, Bath, and Danton; Manager, Mr. Charles Beanland.—The chief item here this week, in addition to the finely rendered variety programme, is that most amusing absurdity, Fun at the Baths, specially produced by that talented member of the company, Mr. H. B. Casla. Mr. George Hyam, whose work as a comedian is always highly appreciated, was accorded a full house at his benefit concert, when a special programme was contributed to by a host of talent.

BRIGHTON. — Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Gates; General-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—Messrs. Matthew H. Glenville and Fred Osmond's company is here this week with For Wife and Kingdom. Mr. Reginald T. Fox gives a very fine portrayal of Captain Max Lubeck; Miss Hettie Zillwood is graceful and refined as the Grand Duchess Marie of Gotsberg; the villainous Baron Breslaw has a powerful exponent in Mr. Albert Guyon; Miss Margaret Frame is admirably suited as Camillie von Nestolde. The remaining characters are ably sustained, and the drama is splendidly staged.

Alhambra. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Alfred Smith; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Smith.—Mr. Henry Kemble's company achieves great success in the comedy sketch The Gay Countess. Miss Josie Farrington in the title-rôle, Mr. Gus Danby as Charlie Chappell, and Mr. Harry Buss as Marmaduke being especially effective; Coverdale, comedian, is delightfully entertaining; Margo is clever in legerdemain; Marie Blythe is a pleasing contralto vocalist; Ford and Ford are well received in a musical speciality act; the Sisters Oswald appear in a new and novel act; Vi Laurie is a dainty comedienne; Harry Waldon is a capital comedian; and the Alhambra Picturegraph is interesting and amusing.

Barrasford's Hippodrome.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Bertram J. Brown.—Miss Evie Green wins enthusiastic applause for her charmingly rendered songs; Dutch Daly's concertina solos and patter are, as usual, warmly appreciated; Walter and Bailey are distinctly effective in an acrobatic turn; E. Merian's troupe of dogs display splendid training in the tragic comedy A Faithless Wife; Harry and Fanny Dent appear with great success in their novel mélange The Indian Bottle; Lottie Bellman, assisted by Bay Russell, is seen to marked advantage in Bits of Vaudeville; Tom Woottwell is a very quaint comedian; and admirable turns are submitted by the Hesseys, in a musical act; the Bartholomew Sisters, duettists and dancers; and the Three Orleans, vocalists and dancers.

West Pier.—Secretary, Mr. A. W. Scholey.—The Moody-Manners Opera company are attracting crowded houses here this week. On Monday evening Gounod's Faust was performed. Miss Rosa O'Farrell sang and acted charmingly as Marguerite; Mr. Frank Christian was thoroughly artistic as Faust; Mr. Graham Marr's Valentine merits high praise; Mr. Harry H. Brindle as Mephistopheles achieved great success; Miss Bessie Weir was an excellent Siebel; and Miss Alexander was admirably suited as Martha. The choruses were well sung, and the duties of conductor were in the able hands of Mr. Harrison Frewin. The week's programme also included Tannhäuser, Carmen, Samson and Delilah, and Lohengrin.

Palace Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Jay and Mann; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wilfred H. Kent.—Mr. Alexander Leighton's company is doing excellent business here this week with Havana. Mr. Reg. Edwards as Reginald Brown and Mr. John R. Val as Nix make a capital couple of British tars; Mr. Oliver Rogers as Jackson Villers, and Mr. Cyril K. Percival as Don Adolpho are well placed; and Miss Hebe Bliss is a charming Consuelo. The musical comedy is admirably staged and mounted, and the singing and dancing excellent.

Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Maud Barrasford.—An excellent series of animated pictures is exhibited here this week. A very stirring drama is conveyed by The Conspirators; The Forest Ranger's Daughter is a charming love story; and Burly Bill is dramatic; Flowers that Bloom in the Spring depicts the flower trade from garden to market; and the amusing films include Tilly Plays Truant, Calino Takes New Lodgings, and Shine, Sir.

Theatre de Luxe.—Proprietors, Electric Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. H. Cousens.—Good houses continue to patronise this exhibition of animated pictures here. Very interesting stories are presented by A Sailor's Sacrifice, Through the Darkness, Cart Building in Sicily is instructive, Trebizonde is a picturesque film, and much amusement afforded by The Big Drum, Henpeck's Goodbye, Corn Doctor, and Tanglefoot Family.

BRISTOL.—Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Macready Chute.—The amusing comedy Smith is being well played here by Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company. Miss Cicely Stuckey is in every respect charming in the title-rôle, her pleasing, unaffected style making the little parlourmaid most attractive; Mr. Robert Minster acts cleverly as Tom Freeman, his manly, straightforward style being very convincing; Miss Ethel Hodgkins does excellently as Mrs. Dallas-Baker; Mr. F. G. Thurstan plays Mr. Dallas-Baker, K.C., in a typical, easy-going manner; Mr. H. Douglas Greet presents a fine study of Algy Peppercorn; Miss Pauline Straus is really effective, with a touch of pathos, as Emily Chapman; Miss Ethel Wellesley does well as Mrs. Otto Rosenberg; and Mr. George Child avails himself of his opportunities as Fletcher. The comedy is nicely staged, and the ladies' dresses are stylish.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mrs. Emma Carpenter; Manager, Mr. Henry C. Alty.—Mr. Herbert Sleath's company is here with A White Man. Mr. Frank Petley acts in a manly and effective style as Captain James Wynnegate; Mr. Charles Maunsell does excellently as the Earl of Kerhill; Miss Enid Sass is in every way pleasing as the Countess of Kerhill; Miss Gertrude Price makes a stately Dowager Lady Kerhill; Mr. Lewis Sealy is a business-like solicitor; Mr. Charles A. Forster is a typical cleric as the Dean of Trantham; Mr. John East acts admirably as Big Bill; Mr. Frank Mayo is sufficiently rough and uncompromising as Cash Hawkins; Mr. Oswald Lingard makes a stately and impressive Tab-y-wena; Mr. James Jolly is effective as the interpreter; the county sheriff, Bud Hardy, has an imposing representative in Mr. J. E. Page; Mr. Henry Du Val makes a good part of the barkeeper; Miss Nora Nagle acts prettily as Little Hal; Miss Dorothy Edwards presents a good study of Nat-u-Rich; and Miss Elsie Buller is pleasing as Lady Mabel Wynnegate. The play is staged in picturesque style, is appropriately dressed, and is acted admirably throughout.

Palace.—District-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Treasurer and Assistant-Manager, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—"George the First," a very cleverly trained chimpanzee, is introduced by Dandy George, and does some remarkable acts. The Four Royal Scots present a charming musical act; Werds Brothers perform some smart acrobatics; Rose and Challoner amuse with song and patter; Cash and Clair excel as American singers and dancers; Harry Cooke, comedian, is appreciated; Wood, Wells, and Wilkins please with their vocal comedy sketch The Piano Tuner; and interesting animated pictures are projected by Jury's Bioscope.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry; Assistant and Advertising-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—Frank Elliston and company are successfully presenting a fine dramatic sketch, entitled Long Live the King, an episode in the life of Charles II., which is appropriately staged and capitally acted. Athas and Collins score with their comedy duologue and dancing; Baker and Balfe, xylophonists, present a pleasing musical act; Will Smythe excels as an acrobatic buck dancer; Everard Denton has some good magical illusions, and does sleight-of-hand tricks neatly; the Whitworth Trio are expert trick cyclists; Elsie Athas is pleasing in song and dance; Harry Bland, eccentric comedian, is appreciated; and interesting animated pictures conclude.

BURNLEY.—Victoria Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—The Village Blacksmith is presented here to enthusiastic audiences. Mr. Sam Livesey cleverly interprets the rôle of John Strong; and Captain Leo is acted with intensity by Mr. Joseph Carter. Miss Maggie Edwards is sympathetic as Kate Strong; and Miss Gladys Britain is a delightful little Harry. Great excitement prevails at the wrestling match which concludes the play.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—Big audiences here are thoroughly enjoying the programme submitted, which includes the Dayton troupe of Risley acrobats, whose remarkable performance is executed with precision and neatness. The Three Spanish Armadas are very interesting in a performance on the tight-rope; and the Adams, comedy cyclists, present a turn both skilful and funny. T. Hulbert is a clever ventriloquist; Sophie Knight has a sweet soprano voice; Louise Dott and Jack Williams are good in song and dance; Mons. de Lil is a smart illusionist; Harry Head, comedian, does well; and the Empire Theatrescope is extremely interesting.

Palace Theatre and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. R. Badcoe.—A pleasant and interesting playlet, Compensations, is presented here by Mr. Richard Flanagan's well-chosen company, in which Mr. W. H. Perette makes a success. The Egbert Brothers are again delighting everyone with their boisterous humour and clever tumbling; and Richard Taylor is a ventriloquist with a fund of humour. Giovanni Daruso, violinist, gives a novel entertainment; and the Westwoods are clever cyclists. Danvers and Rosslyn are funny in a burlesque; and Gladys and Alber are very good with patter and acrobatics. Nellie Neil, comedienne, and the pictures complete the bill.

BURTON-ON-TRENT. — Opera House.—Proprietors, Messrs. Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. de Hague Body.—Vera De Astra heads the programme here this week in her sensational and artistic poses; Mlle. Wanda Barandoff and M'lave Fritchott add lustre to the various scenes depicted in their cleverly-executed dances. Other artists are Violet Beatrice, a dainty and pleasing boy impersonator; and Aldro Lukos, a Japanese mimic, who wins hearty applause; the Matt Wilkinson Trio, in an absurdity, entitled What Every Woman Wants; Kitty Corri, who sings and dances in good style; and Topaz, Oriental juggler, whose clever tricks are well worth seeing. The Operascope still gives pleasure.

BURY (Lancs.). — Royal. — General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. J. McPherson.—Mr. Charles Goff presents the world-famed Leopolds in The New Frivolity. Prominent in the cast are Mr. Harry Douglas as Oliver Buckwheat, Mr. John Leopold, jun., as Daniel Teething; Mr. Tom Leopold as Jules Vermiglio, Mr. Willie Leopold as Samuel Vermiglio, Miss Amy Hall as Lucy Buckwheat, Miss Rosie Claire as Vinnie Moore, Miss Winnie Leopold as Maud, and Miss Kathleen Kavanagh as Mme. Cobweb.

Circus of Varieties.—Pictures are still the main attraction here, and two excellent turns are given by Bessie Hardman, Yorkshire vocalist, and Stuart and Evans, comedians.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Sons; Resident-Manager, Mr. Thomas Baker.—Principal place in the bill is occupied by James A. and Herbert B. Jewel's spectacular production, entitled Change, introducing clever trick scenery and properties. Mr. James A. Jewel as the Miser and Herbert B. Jewel as Joe Dunn give excellent impersonations; Michael Madden is a dame with some clever and original patter; Colley and Scott provide a smart comedy turn; Martin Conway is a popular comedian; Alice Edwards is a sparkling male impersonator, and is deservedly encored; a dramatic sketch, entitled The Airship, is submitted under the direction of the Pollard Bros.; and the Warsaw Bros. are a diverting and clever couple of musical comedians.

BUXTON.—Opera House.—Proprietors, The Buxton Gardens Company, Ltd.; Secretary and Manager, Mr. Arthur Willoughby.—For the first three nights of this week we had Mr. Frank Curzon's company, in The King of Cadonia. The piece was enthusiastically received, and was played by an excellent company. Mr. Bertram Wallis scored a great success in the title-rôle, and received a call each evening; whilst Mr. Arthur Staples was very funny as the Duke of Alasia, the heir to the Cadonian throne; and Mr. Alfred Clark as Braw was most humorous. Capital work was done by Mr. Robert Selby as General Bonski and Mr. Lawrence Robbins as Captain Laski. Miss Joan Penrose was a very dainty Militza; and Miss Alice Venning was successful as Princess Marie. The setting and dressing were exceptionally fine, and the chorus was good. For the end of the week Mr. Martin Harvey occupied the boards with The Cigarette-Maker's Romance, The Breed of the Treshams, and The Only Way.

Palace and Hippodrome. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Adam Milton.—Included in a heavy programme at this popular house this week are Leonard and Leslie, singers and dancers; Harry Vardon, a ventriloquist; and The Cyclinis, two clever cyclists; and a host of pleasing pictures.

CARDIFF.—New Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Robert Redford.—The House of Temperley drew a packed house on Monday. Mr. Stratton Rodney gives a natural impersonation of Sir Charles Temperley, handling the character with infinite skill, and Mr. Rodney well deserved the great ovation accorded him. The forcible rendition of Sir John Hawker by Mr. Murray Carson also gained unstinted praise. Mr. Claude King as Captain Jack Temperley gave a careful impersonation, appearing to particular effect in the Ring scene. The Jakes of Mr. Leon M. Lion could not have been improved upon, and Mr. Blake Adams did well as Ginger Stubbs, his fight also being realistically carried through. Miss Ana Venning pleased everyone with her graceful interpretation of Ethel Morley; Miss Claire Pauncefort in the small rôle of Lady Temperley left nothing to be desired; and the comedy of Miss Pollie Emery as Lucy was good. Mention should also be made of Mr. Douglas Munro (Tom Cribb), Mr. Reg. Davis (Gloster Dick), and Mr. A. S. Homewood (Duke of Broadwater and Joe Berks).

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Taylor.—Large audiences have been attracted by the popular comedienne Kate Carney, who appears with a large company in her latest success Fun of the Fair. Miss Carney as Carmen, the Gipsy Queen, makes a great hit, while her prominent supporters are Mr. Geo. Marriott as the Witch, Mr. Willie Phillips as the Lawyer, Mr. Albert Mason as the Dude, and Mr. Fred Malcolm as the Romany. Another decided success is Maidie Scott, a captivating comedienne. The De Wynne Bros., the sang-froid athletes, with their canine comedians, also gain hearty applause. Binns and Binns, the musical vagabonds, are always acceptable; Miss Alcide Capitaine, the graceful gymnast, renews her popularity; and Hans and Lux, two argumentative college chums, Frank H. Fox, comedian, and Mike Nono, Irish comedian, are others on the bill.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr Arthur Burton.—Mr. Harry P. Selwyn's company heads the bill in a military and dramatic episode from the Drury Lane drama, The Flood Tide, which arouses much excitement and interest. Leonard Charburn's Young Stars, under the direction of Mr. R. L. Griffiths, do remarkably well in a pretty vocal scena entitled A Picnic up the River; Barrie and Wood are a pleasing duo, who certainly know how to step dance; Mollie Doon is another skilful dancer; Alfred Guest and Dorothy Newlyn, the Hebrew and the soubrette; Alice Craven in a bit o' Lancashire; and Silly Billy Elliott, a quaint comedian, are the remaining contributors to the programme.

CARLISLE.—Her Majesty's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—Consul, the wonderful performing ape, is the star attraction, and his intelligence and ability is really amazing; the sketch The Sun Bath is brightly played by Charles Sewell and Sara Dudley, the pretty staging adding much to its attractiveness; a novel turn is contributed by Amandus, who, with very little aid, impersonates celebrities; Vanbert does some smart work as an illusionist and painter; Miss Ray Randall, a charming serio with excellent songs; Benn's Dutch Boys and Girls, in song and dance; and Sylvesto and Rumbo, in a pleasing act, complete.

The Palace.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. D. Askew.—The Cumberlands, big favourites here, met with a most enthusiastic reception on Monday; a weird and wonderful act is given by Juno Salmo, described as "the Devil Dandy"; Allsopp and Beckwith give a smart little comedy sketch; and John Macauley is a character ballad vocalist of ability. One of the best tenor vocalists heard here is Julius Walthers; Sinclair's Three Diamonds, clever juvenile singers, skaters, and dancers, are favourites; and Wat Tyler, character vocalist, meets with success.

CASTLEFORD.—Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Hy. Masterman, J.P.—The attraction for the current week is Mrs. E. H. Knight's company in The Lighthouse Robbery. Mrs. H. Gordon Ingham is a consistent and natural Tom Manly; Miss Hilda Baynton, with a charming manner, secures sympathy as Rosa Prescott; James Hammond has a capital exponent in Mr. F. H. Fortescue; Mr. J. T. Lawton undertakes the rôle of James Farren with success; Mr. Rupert Talbot is an amusing Sam Kidder; and Miss Louis Carlton keeps the fun going merrily as Ruth Manly; Baby Freda acts intelligently as Little Nellie; and Miss Alice Dent handles the part of Mrs. Manly with discretion.

Queen's Theatre of Varieties. — Proprietors, the Castleford Queen's Theatre of Varieties Co., Ltd.; Managing Directors, Messrs. Chas. Beanland and Will H. Emerson.—The management here, ever on the alert for novelty, has secured Raymond, with his latest creations, The Witches' Cabinet and The Boy Scout's Dream, clever conjuring effect and mystical surprises. All the better seats are booked, and hundreds are being turned away. Fred Dunstone creates considerable laughter; Little Sunbeam gives a very charming dancing act; Luella Croes, with lovely frocks, wins genuine approval; Ryde and Beeman, as eccentric acrobats, are a couple on whom praise may be well bestowed; Les Grossi, in La Danse des Apaches, make a decided hit; and Morris and Moore contribute clever singing and dancing.

CHATHAM.—Barnard's Palace of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Here we have Laurie and Elsy, harmonising vocalists and dancers; Donovan and Arnold, a couple of quaint American comedy artists; Kitty Leon, soubrette; Bert Errol, a smart female impersonator; Cromo and Hamilton, who are great favourites here; Clifford Marle and Josephine Colonna present with great success the naval phantasy Nelson; while Lacy's Erascope has an amusing film entitled High Game.

Gaiety Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Captain H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. George Humphries.—G. W. Blyth's vocal scena The Follers is giving every satisfaction here. The Sisters Herbert have a flattering reception; Tom and Neil create plenty of fun; the Corcoran Brothers give a musical scena with a neatly-worked quick change; Barney Armstrong and Kelly make the hit of the evening. The remaining turns are the Brothers Erard, acrobatic musical comedians, and Cissie Thompson, comedienne.

CHESTER. — Royalty Theatre. — Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton.—Sutton Vane's excellent company, in Two Lancashire Lasses in London, occupies the boards this week. The title-rôles are powerfully portrayed by Miss Mabel Coleman as Nell and Miss Florence Zillwood as Constance. Mr. Robert Gilbert plays John Edmunds to perfection; and Mr. Caspar Middleton does full justice to the exacting part of Jonas Dean; the Rev. Frank Selby of Mr. T. Dennis Byron is a capable performance; and Mr. Tom Newell gives a typical character sketch of the lad from Lancashire. The remaining parts are all admirably sustained, and the drama throughout is well staged.

CHORLTON-CUM-HARDY. — Theatre and Winter Gardens.—On Monday, the Mercury Animated Picture Company opened their season here. The films, The Little Cripple, Mr. Stubborn, and Life of a Chick, were vigorously applauded. Mr. Fred E. Storer sang coon songs; Miss Jennie Elsinore danced prettily; and Messrs. Hughes and Allen kept up a brisk fire of cross-talk.

CLACTON-ON-SEA. — Palace of Varieties. — Managing-Director, Mr. H. R. D. Hooper; Secretary, Mr. Thomas Butt.—The bill here this week is headed by the Ten Loonies, who present their screaming sketch Dotty; Tom Stuart makes a hit with his dramatic and burlesque impressions; Ivy Proudfoote is a clever and graceful comedienne; and Florence Venning has a magnificent contralto voice, and is heard to advantage. E. B. Ford as the President of the Face Trust creates much laughter; Rose Hamilton and company are great in the sketch Woman versus Man; Sam Spira is an entertaining artist; and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope shows some excellent films.

Operetta House.—Lessee, Mr. W. F. Jury; Manager, Mr. Chas. F. Meadows.—This popular picture show is attracting full houses nightly. The dramatic items, Daddy and Mammy, His Chum, Stolen Heir, and Miner's Child, are splendid; and the humorous films, Calino Plays Billiards, Rosanna's Stratagem, and The Telegraph Boy's Revenge, keep the audiences in roars of laughter. Mr. J. W. Hortin, vocalist, renders the two illustrated songs, "Down where the yellow corn" and "Daylight," very effectively.

West Cliff Gardens. — Proprietors, Messrs. Graham, Russell, and Bentley. At this popular place of entertainment record business is being done. The following artists supply an excellent entertainment:—Fred Vallance, conjurer and ventriloquist; Lilian Barnes, soprano; Lloyd Shakespeare, boy cornet soloist; Bert Graham, humorist and monologist; Bernard Russell, comedian; and Will Bentley, comedian.

COLCHESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Chas. Macdona; Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Graham-Macdona.—Mr. George Edwardes's Merry Widow company opened to an enormous house on Monday, and repeated its former triumphs. In the title-rôle Miss Phyllis le Grand played and sang with delightful pathos and gaiety alternately; whilst as Danilo Mr. J. Warren Forster was characteristically true. The pleasing tenor voice of Mr. Ripley Evans as De Jolidon was much admired; a similar tribute being paid Miss Ada Thomas as Natalie. Mr. Edward D'Arcy as Popoff and Mr. Fred Fowler as Nisch again stood out as really high-class comedians, their antics causing unbounded merriment; Miss Katie May danced with a delightful abandon as Frou-Frou, and was encored vociferously. The chorus scored throughout, and the dresses were greatly admired.

Hippodrome.—Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Leslie.—Oswald Williams, who is topping here, has a marvellous act; Miss Irene May, the Lancashire nightingale, scores a triumph, her deeper notes being melodious in the extreme; Benson and Rose, in the duologue Elizabeth and the Baby present a smartly-written act; Cadwall and Verne in Early Closing Day, and Drum and Major in A Broker's Man, entertain ably; Cavalli, ventriloquist, makes a big hit; Chas. Dillon ("the lamb") repeats his former success; and the pictures conclude.

CONSETT.—New Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance.—At the head of an attractive programme are the Royal Diamonds, who receive much approbation for their novel pot-pourri act, Gentlemen at Practice. Rappo and Ella, gymnasts, deserve praise, as do also the Bros. Freeman, in a capital musical turn. Royal Togo, in his sensational "Slide for Life," is a favourite. Electra and The Grocer's Assistant are two good pictures.

New Town Hall.—Proprietors, Town Hall Co., Ltd.; Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Campbell. Capt. Permane and performing bears top the bill here. Stelfane, lady magician, is smart; J. H. Greener, singing pit lad, scores a success; excellent pictures are shown, among the best being His Last Game and Buffalo Hunting.

Daly's Hall.—Lessee, Mr. John Cottrell; General-Manager, Mr. W. D. Murray.—Smit and Smit are smart comedy bar performers; a good exhibition of club-swinging is given by Gus Gauntlett; Walter and Eva Grey's singing, dancing, &c., is received with applause. Up-to-date pictures are shown, including Tongue of Scandal and Love's Stratagem.

CORK.—Opera House.—Manager, Mr. R. J. Bell.—The Abbey Theatre company opened a week's engagement here this week, and on Monday night presented the late Mr. Synge's play The Playboy of the Western World and Deirdre, by Mr. W. B. Yeats. In the first-named piece, which was well received, Miss Maire O'Neill as Pegeen Mike was captivating; Miss Sarah Allgood as Widow Quin was a great favourite; Fred O'Donovan took the part of Christopher Maher; Mr. Arthur Sinclair was capital as Michael Flaherty; Sara Tansey was filled by Miss Eileen O'Doherty; and Susan Brady by Miss Sheila O'Sullivan. In Deirdre Miss Sara Allgood, in the title-rôle, filled the part admirably; Miss O'Neill was first musician, Miss Eithne Magee second musician, and Miss Sheila O'Sullivan third musician; Mr. J. M. Kerrigan was good as Fergus; Mr. Sydney J. Morgan made a fine messenger; and Mr. Arthur Sinclair was good as Concobar.

Palace Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Thomas F. O'Brien.—Holden's Original Mannikins succeed in pleasing here; Merrie Maie Dillon rendered a few good songs; Harrison Brothers are a smart pair of patter artists; Frank Hartley is a juggler of merit; Miss Elsie Kerry, comedienne, is accorded an excellent reception; the Rawsons, two juvenile performers in singing, whistling, and piano, were entertaining; the Four Ascotts are clever dancers. The Palascope pictures are capital.

COVENTRY.—Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—The Still Alarm is commanding excellent support. The company is under the direction of Matthew H. Glenville and Fred Osmond. Mr. Glenville as Jack Manley, the fireman, is all that could be wished for; Mr. Wilton Reed is very successful as the unscrupulous John Bird; Mr. Henry C. Gilpin does exceedingly well as Doc Wilber; and Mr. Gerald Shirley is very amusing as Joe Jones; Miss Minnie Willett is a charming Elinor Fordham, and makes a great success; Miss Lydia Andre is a very lively Carrie Wilber.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. S. T. Newsome; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. E. Wright.—Heading the bill is May Moore Duprez, the jolly little Dutch girl, who delighted the audience with her quaint singing and dancing; Grassy Bros., musicians and acrobats, give a very good turn, including an illusionary mirror; the Alberto troupe, lady equilibrists, execute many difficult feats; Pepper's comedy company have a very novel sketch, entitled Ghostland; Gilbert Girard is a clever imitator of animals of every kind. Other artists include Arthur Ferrier, character comedian; Roze and Calvert, in a laughable sketch as Captain Kettle and his mate; and Iva Voyce, contralto singer.

CROYDON. — Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Charles Wood; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Archer.—The attraction here this week is Messrs. Davey and Gordon's company, in The Importance of Being Earnest. Mr. Douglas Gordon gives a consistent performance as John Worthing; Mr. Hugh Ardale exactly fits the part of Algernon Moncrieff; Mr. Fred Cremlin does full justice to the rôle of the Rev. Canon Chasuble; Mr. James West is effective as Merriman; and Mr. Buckstone Clair is capable as Lane; Miss Phyllis Relph gives an accomplished performance of the Hon. Gwendolen Fairfax; Mrs. Peter Davey ably sustains the character of Lady Bracknell; Miss Barbara Hannay is seen to advantage as Cecily Cardew; and Miss Mildred Gilbert gives a sound rendering of Miss Prism. This is followed by the up-to-date burlesque on Chantecler, entitled Cock-a-doodle-do. The feathered parts are free-and-easily enacted by Mr. Lazard as Roosterfeldt; Miss M. Sadie as Christabel, the Hen; and Miss Cissie Clarke as Arabella, the Duck; Miss Nellie Lomas gracefully sings and dances through the part of Daisy.

Empire Palace of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—Marie Lloyd is the star turn here, with her latest up-to-date songs, sung in her usual taking style; Mr. Cecil Gray powerfully plays the mad and drunken husband in the drama To-Morrow's Dawn, the other characters being well depicted by John Manners, Frank Dale, Eric Norman, and Miss Dora Eastlake; Geo. Newburn does some well-studied mimicry of popular stars; Henry J. Corner is extremely funny in the scena, A Bath Cure; Estelle Collette is pleasing with her violin; Bains and company enact their absurdity, Humpsti Bumsti with the assistance of Miss Wearda, a graceful Russian dancer; the Wedburns are untiring comedians and instrumentalists; Bessie Knight is a refined comedienne; Alix Lukos is a talented character vocalist; the Brennons do a refined dancing act; Angus Strong is an expressive baritone; Burt Shepard is very droll with his piano; and the bioscope concludes the entertainment.

New Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley Hope.—Bellew and Stock's company head the bill here this week in Mortimer Magnus, M.P., the name-part being skilfully played by Master Edward Garratt, ably backed up by Mr. Harry Norton, Miss Vere Gerald, and Miss Olivia Glynn; Fred Lindsay, the stock-whip wonder, gives a skilful exhibition; Helen Trix is a smart American comedienne and sifleuse; Lotto, Lilo, and Otto are remarkably daring in their trick cycling act; Frank Lynne is a capable comedian; Gwennie Llewellyn renders numbers from her répertoire expressively; Larola is a really quaint comedy acrobat; and the American bioscope completes.

DARLINGTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Bell.—Mr. T. Elder Hearn tops here, and as a vaudeville artist is hard to beat. In his quick-change act, The Romance of a Studio, he is marvellous, and as the lazy juggler he fills the house with laughter with his quaint humour. In the sketch The Rat he is again seen to great advantage, assisted by Miss Fisie Le Noir. The rest of the bill is filled by Wallace Galvin, clever with his hands; Wilson Blackledge, with a piano; Lady Gordon Stuart, recitations; and the Three Sisters Sprightly.

Palace.—East Coast Variety Halls, Limited; Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert E. Nicholls.—Another excellent programme fills the houses nightly, headed by Everhart, the hoop expert. Minola Hurst and her miniature marvels are a great treat; Witty Wattie Walton keeps the audience in a good humour with his comedy; Stanley and Vandyke give a laughable comedy act; the Great Four, glee vocalists; Torti, Italian tenor; the Shaffers, four comedy musicians; Hal and Lal, ventriloquists; and the Bioscope conclude.

DERBY.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley.—The premier attraction here this week is Mary Rayfren's company, in a thrilling sketch, entitled The Yellow Fang. The acting is of all-round excellence, and the playlet is watched with interest throughout. Leroux's cleverly-trained bicycle monkeys occupy the bottom turn, and their performance meets with every approval; Albas is responsible for a clever and sensational wire act, for which he receives loud recognition; Ted Karno and company prove themselves capital mirth-provokers in the absurdity, Hotel de Quick; Kitty Kearns is a dainty singer and dancer; Rolando Martin, comedian, creates much merriment; Len Hale is an amusing comedian and clever ragtime dancer; and the Sisters Florencie are entertaining duettists and dancers. The bioscope adds a good film of the Brussels Exhibition fire.

DEVONPORT. — Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. G. Prance.—M

entertainment that goes with a swing. The Picturedrome is also a sure draw, enhanced as it is by varieties. Another attraction is the skating rink.

CONNOR'S GRAND CIRCUS.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Fred J. Connor.—A novel item here is a performing Welsh pony, trained and introduced by Mr. George Madigan, which gives a very pretty exhibition. Brown, the Butcher, also new, is a quaint sketch, played by the full strength of the company; Antonio, another fresh comer, presents a clever equestrian travesty act, which possesses humour; Miss Mona Connor and her young brother, Master Douglas Connor, maintain their high reputation as exponents of real circus riding; and the final and most popular number on the programme, "Football on Wheels Competition," has money prizes. The clowns also are "keeping their ends up."

THE EMPIRE THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Charles Dare; Resident-Manager, Mr. James Carr.—Phenomenal attendances are being secured at the little Empire Theatre. In addition to the cinematograph Mr. Bert Rolfe, a broadly humorous comedian, appears; Miss Florence Nightingale, a juvenile soprano, has a remarkable voice, and secures great applause.

MR. CHARLES DARE'S White Minstrels on the head attract enormous audiences with a fine show.

THE ONCHANS.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. W. Collier Cubbin.—The attendance here has been quite remarkable for weeks in spite of dire weather. The comedians, Mr. Charley Harvey and Mr. Maynall, have the artistic quality in the direction which makes for laughter; Mr. J. H. Scotland scores both in his operatic renditions and his dialect ballads of rustic England; Miss Elsie Steadman is an accomplished comedienne; Mr. Alex. Webster is a delightful tenor; and Miss Jean Grace Crocker, an elocutionist who sways her audience both in humorous and serious selections; Miss Edna Lyall, a charming soprano known as the Yorkshire nightingale, made her first appearance in Douglas at the Onchans on Monday evening, and secured success.

DUBLIN.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Hyland.—Mr. T. C. Wray and Mr. Austen Hurgon's excellent company is here in Two Merry Monarchs, which was heartily enjoyed by a crowded house on Monday. Mr. C. Hayden Coffin is the principal throughout, and his part, Prince Charmis, suits him admirably. He sang in highly finished manner. Miss Marjorie Moore made a prepossessing and attractive Princess Cynthia, and sang and danced artistically. Mr. Hugh Weybrance was quite at home as Helvanoise, and his capital voice was heard to great advantage; Miss Gladys Beach gave a very pleasing and effective rendition of the rôle of Iris; the Rolandyl of Mr. E. Statham Staples was highly amusing; and another humorous character, King Paul, was exceedingly well presented by Mr. Mark Lester; Mr. Tom Shelford played cleverly in the part of King Utops; the choruses were admirably sung, and the dresses, costumes, and scenery very artistic.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Marriott-Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Wright.—Miss Hilda Beverley and company opened here on Monday with A Woman of Two Lives. Miss Beverley gave a skilful interpretation of the dual rôle of Ogarita and Angela Fenton, and Captain the Hon. Travers West was presented in good style by Mr. Herbert Pearson. Miss Mary Brammer as Drampardi Lares gave a capital rendering; and Mr. James Jarrett made the most of the part of Garda Khan. Mr. Jack Armitage was successful as Lieut. Lord Billy Tremaine; and Miss Louis Gilmore was excellent as Lady Arabella Mountphayton. Mr. E. Hal Eldon as Dick Smarter, and Miss Dorothy Hildebrande as Lottie London supplied the humour; and Mr. Arthur Swaine gave a good performance of Colonel St. Aubrey Fenton.

THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. Frederick Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Terry.—Mr. Geo. Edwardes' company, with The Dollar Princess, entered on its second week on Monday before a very large audience. Mr. W. Louis Bradfield presented a really clever impersonation of Harry Q. Conder; and as his sister, Miss Norah Barry gave a charming and graceful performance. Miss Mabel Russell was a pleasing and artistic Daisy; Mr. Leonard Mackay was most efficient as Freddy Fairfax; and Mr. W. H. Rawlins acted Mr. Bulger in a clever and humorous manner. Miss Emmy Wehlen being unavoidably absent, Miss Winifred Vyvyan filled the part of Olga with great satisfaction. The remaining rôles were excellently sustained.

EMPIRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—The Carmos, described as Australia's greatest Herculean jugglers, give a performance of exceptional merit; Miss Bella White's songs and dances are warmly applauded; Mr. James Stewart gives a clever and entertaining turn as the Tramp at the Piano; Devereux's troupe of dogs are amusing, and execute some smart tricks; the Great Vincent does several astonishing acrobatic feats; Walter Wade, in his monologue Sandy McGregor, is very successful; the Smarte Brothers and Miss Annie Braddon also appear; and the Empire Pictures prove enjoyable.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M Jones; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—Messrs. Alan Holt and company, in their dramatic episode, A Society Woman, are applauded; the Bouncing Peps do a smart comedy gymnastic act; Monahan and Sheehan are a pair of highly accomplished musicians; the Floradoras accomplish a pleasing and effective singing and dancing performance, Annie Martin, comedienne; Bros. Sefton, eccentric comedians; Billy French, champion wooden shoe dancer; Monty Walker, Lancashire comedian; Millie and Arthur, the light comedy couple; and the bioscope, are also on the programme.

ROUND ROOM ROTUNDA.—The Irish Animated Picture Company continue to score; and the Johnson and Jeffries Fight is attracting large houses.

WORLD'S FAIR.—Proprietors, Messrs. Sprengel Bros.—The Two Melfords are a capital pair of comedy duettists; Miss Amy Bayne sings descriptive songs in a pleasing manner; Henri Harty does some novel and clever conjuring tricks; Harry Dunn scores as an eccentric comedian; Jolly Jack Murray is a good character comedian; and the cinematograph displays up-to-date pictures.

THE PAVILION, KINGSTOWN.—Herr Fericeson's Viennese Band concluded a successful engagement here. The programme this week is varied by the appearance of Miss Elise Kahn, whose vocalism evoked tremendous applause. The pictures are very interesting.

ARCADIA, BRAY.—Proprietor, Mr. Jack MacDermott.—This popular place of amusement is enjoying a very successful run, an excellent and attractive programme being provided.

DUDLEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr. John W. Tilley.—Mr. Douglas Bruce's company is here in The Girl Who Lost Her Character. Mr. Charles Ashwell acts forcibly as the Rev. Robert Everton; Mr. Charles Sparrow as Jack England (Private Johnson) is powerful, and has a smart military bearing; as Captain Geoffrey Caversham Mr. Herbert Morgan gives a good rendering; and Mr. Walter Kelleon as James Sutton supplies a smart study. In the title-part, Miss Lorraine Stevens as Molly Vernon acts charmingly and with abandon and pathos; Miss Dorothy Thayer is a ladylike Rose Seymour; and Miss Letitia Rushforth is thoroughly successful as Maria Franklyn. The comedy portion is well supplied by Mr. Allan Carruthers as Dick Punch and Miss Millie Whyatt as Lucy Vere.

DUNDEE.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—The Grotesques are creating quite a furore here this week with their refined and brilliant entertainment. The company includes Misses Dorothy Doria, Elsie English, Kathleen Severn, and Messrs. James Watts, Hugh Bayly, Harry Harmer, Maurice Besly, and Cecil Cook, each artist being a thorough musician. Their singing is really excellent, while the enjoyment is much enhanced by their perfect articulation. The leading items on the programme are "Some Impressions of a Ballad Concert" and "A Village Concert, usually known as Our Annual Entertainment," at which Mr. Cecil Cook presides in most diverting fashion as the Vicar.

KING'S THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—The go-ahead management of this beautiful house have a trump card here in the feathered farmyard phantasy, Chantecler, or Hi-Cockalorum, Ernest Sefton and James Learmouth creating much diversion as the Boosy Rooster and Cat respectively, while Madoline Rees is exceedingly graceful as the wayward Hen Pheasant, and Jack Martin plays well as Chanteclair; Viviana and company win much favour with their novel dancing act, The Toy Shop; Gladys Revell sings several catchy songs in taking style and good voice; Buzer, the soldier juggler, gives a remarkably clever show, while his lady partner Clarice gives an interesting display of ju-jitsu; Reichen's Dogs display unusual intelligence; Fatmah Diard's contributions afford a treat to lovers of good music; and The Corsican Bandit is shown by Jury's Bioscope.

DURHAM.—THE PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes.—Alice Hoodless, in tableaux of beautiful pictures, is greatly admired; Sebbo gives a remarkable show of club and plate juggling; and the music and eccentricities of Gus Barra are hugely enjoyed; Harry Harvey, in Tyneside song and patter, creates merriment; Henry Hylton mystifies the audience with clever tricks; and Massona, comedy juggler, is popular. The Cathedoscope shows The Awakening of Bess and A Hero in Spite of Himself.

DURRINGTON (Yorks.).—LYRIC THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. James England.—The Man of Her Choice (Mr. E. R. Abbott's company) occupied the boards here on Monday. It is a pretty little play by Miss Ada Abbott, who, with the greatest vivacity, fills the principal part—Babs; Mr. John Lester makes a good Squire Hilderson, whose three sons were portrayed in true and original fashion by Mr. E. R. Abbott, Mr. Stephen Crossley, and Mr. Edward Custon; Mr. Abbott's portrayal of the whisky drinker and his ultimate reform for love of Babs being very fine indeed; Miss Marjorie Tennant made a typical housekeeper, and her love-passages with the butler (Mr. Edwin Keene) were very quaint indeed; Miss Florrie North was excellent as the "slavey"; Miss Ethel Tinsley played her part well as the mistress of the house. Sapho was played to a crowded house on Wednesday.

EASTBOURNE.—DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray, King, and Clark.—Mr. George Dance's company is attracting crowded houses here with Our Miss Gibbs. Mr. Theodore Leonard is an ever-flowing fountain of fun, for as Timothy Gibbs he sings, dances, and acts in true comedy style; Mr. Eustace Burnaby cleverly extracts much hilarity from the part of Hughie Pierpoint; Mr. Ernest Darrell is a polished and refined Earl of St. Ives; Mr. John Leopold, quick, smart, and energetic, does full justice to the rôle of Slithers; Mr. Campbell Brown is a sleek and well-groomed Mr. Toplady; Mr. Montague Syrett is an easy, natural Lord Eynsford; Mr. Albert Cavendish is a realistic cockney cabby; Mr. Reginald Weighill is a satisfactory Mr. Beavis; Miss Jessie Lonnen, frank and unaffected, is an attractive and charming Mary Gibbs; Miss Nellie Cozens plays with delightful breeziness as Mrs. Farquhar; Miss Lilian Birtles ably sings and acts as the romantic Lady Elizabeth; Miss Ellaline Thorne in voice, appearance, and gesture is a perfect Madame Jeanne; Miss Helen Langton is a dignified and emphatic Duchess of Minster. Miss Hook of Holland is staged for the last part of the week.

PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company is appearing here in Brewster's Millions. Mr. Percy Hutchison carries on his shoulders the main responsibility of the great success of this play, and as Monty Brewster he works hard and very cleverly; Mr. Henry Hampson is a cheery and natural Archie Golding; Mr. Aubery Mather displays irresistible humour and ability as McLeod; Mr. Gordon Ash is an earnest, effective Charlie Harrison; Mr. Robert Forsyth plays the part of Mr. Grant with distinction and refinement; Mr. A. Andrews does good work as Colonel Drew; Mr. Arthur Bell as Frank, Mr. Andrew Wight as Horace, and Mr. Otto Hazlewood as Tommy Smith all help with eminent satisfaction; while Mr. Frank Hill has a fund of sly humour as Rawles. Miss Dorothy Whitaker is a delightfully girlish and animated Margaret Grey; Miss Lilias Earle repeats a pleasing performance as Mrs. Dan; Miss Marion Ripley plays with ability and judgment as Miss Armstrong; Miss Phyllis Stucky is a bright, attractive Barbara Drew; Miss May Seton is a distinct and individual Trixie Clayton, and Miss Florence Hillder a capable Miss Beynton. Mr. Walter Maxwell's company is billed to appear in Mr. Preedy and the Countess for the last three evenings of the week.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. F. Woodward.—At the head of the bill here this week is Miss Daisy James, in new songs and handsome dresses; the Three Cape Girls are a trio of clever and agile dancers; Miss Nita Crystal and Mr. Geoffrey Saville return with their dainty dancing and clever work in the sketch Jack's Jacket; Mr. Frank Harwood quickly becomes popular as a smart bright comedian; Mr. Arthur Pier is an actor-vocalist of ability; Miss Adelaide Waldorf sings with taste; Miss Madge Price is a successful comedienne; and Mr. Fred Hallam a funny comedian.

EDINBURGH. — ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Managing-Directors, Mr. F. W. Wyndham and Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—Mr. Eugene C. Stafford's company is here this week with The Private Secretary, which seems to go with unabated freshness and vigour. Mr. W. Hargreaves in the part of Mr. Cattermole, from India, gives a specimen of sound humorous acting. Mr. Hargreaves gains his effects without any suggestion of effort, and the impersonation must rank as a notable example of broad comedy. Mr. Jas. Hussey is admirable on conventional lines as the Rev. Robert Spalding; and Mr. Kendal Chalmers as Mr. Sidney Gibson makes the most of his opportunities, his drunken scene being admirably worked out; Mr. Arthur Claremont made an excellent Douglas Cattermole; Mr. Horace George is good as Henry Marsland; and Mr. William Corriden played with much success the character of Mr. Marsland. Miss Estelle Despa acts cleverly and effectively as Miss Ashford, with a leaning towards spiritualism; and the girls Eva Webster and Edith Marsland are brightly and buoyantly played by Miss Elsie Blythe and Miss Mary Mallalieu; while a capital character sketch is contributed by Miss Cicely Wade as the elderly landlady. The Captain's Wife was the curtain-raiser.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Directors, Mr. F. W. Wyndham and Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—A revival of The Sign of the Cross, by Mr. William Greet's company, has brought large audiences to the Royal during the current week. Mr. Lawson Butt's Marcus Superbus was a vigorous and convincing study; and Miss Evelyn Hope gave a notable performance as Mercia. Nero found adequate characterisation at the hands of Mr. Bernard Elliott; Miss Mabel Cooke made a sufficiently imperious Poppæa; and Glabrio was portrayed on sound traditional lines by Mr. Frank Wood. An acceptable performance was given by Miss Winifred Deleventi, who played Stephanus. The remaining rôles were suitably filled; and the piece was effectively mounted.

KING'S THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Amand Mascard.—Darracq and his sensational motor-car evolutions formed the leading attraction this week; Richard Corbin and his dogs gave a very smart and pleasing exhibition of what can be accomplished in the way of animal training; and Sergeant Mumford, assisted by Mlle. Florence, contributed a clever speciality in a military wire act, entitled The Soldier in the Air. The Columbia Comedy Trio of grotesquely-dressed singers with good voices produced an amusing burlesque of the Prison scene from Faust; Estcourt introduced into his interesting entertainment some humoristic conjuring and some novel feats of dexterity; and Joe O'Gorman pleased all with selections from his repertory of popular songs. Other acceptable vocal turns were supplied by Miss Cecilia Maude, who sang very sweetly, and by Miss Rose Elliott; and eccentric comedy was well exploited by the Hyde and Cody Trio; the King's Bioscope pictures concluding a good bill. Two houses nightly were tried this week, with gratifying success.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—Mr. Wilkie Bard brings several new songs here, all exceedingly funny, and the droll rendering of his selections, the inimitable quaintness of his patter, and the peculiar yet effectively quiet method of the comedian creates uproarious laughter; Mr. Tom Costello, happy alike in grave and gay selections, evokes loud applause; and Mr. Ferry Corwey, musical clown, gives proof of great ability both as a humorist and a player of musical instruments. Miss May Mars, a gifted comedienne, wins her way at once to the favour of her audiences by her charming rendering of two ballads; and Miss Kitty Wager contributes an excellent turn. Lilian, a prepossessing cyclist, is seen in a dainty, daring act, which seems easy only because of the art and grace of the performer; the Goltz Trio present a dashing globe and wire performance, which is received with vehement expressions of approval; and Bioscope pictures conclude a most excellent programme.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. J. H. Sanders.—A remarkably effective picture, entitled The Way of the Word, forms the chief feature in an excellent programme here; and A Case of Identity is another dramatic subject admirably displayed. The humorous films are varied and good.

PRINGLE'S PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. Edmunds.—A liberal bill of fare at this house includes three strong subjects—The Cowboy's Devotion, The Detective's Dog, and Wings of Love—which are capital specimens of the amount of care and the expense which are lavished upon the production of Bioscope films. The musical programme comprises capital turns of illustrated songs by Miss Daisy Ryll, and other items.

MARINE GARDENS.—Manager, Mr. G. B. Smith.—This place of entertainment has had hard luck lately from the clerk of the weather, but the management has never swerved from the effort to provide a programme of an excellent kind. Herr Many's Orchestra, an admirable body of players, gives delightful selections in the concert hall; performances of a high-class character are contributed by Mr. Chas. Parker's Æolians, a party of musicians whose work is received with gratifying applause; and Mr. Nelson Hardy, ventriloquist, is a remarkably clever artist. The band of the Royal Piedmont Hussars remains to cheer visitors to the grounds; and the daring performance of the Oranniuses attracts admiring crowds. The Merry Mascots' programmes are capitally rendered; and the rink and other shows are well attended.

EXETER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford.—Miss Olga Audre's company in The Great Awakening opened here on Monday. As Lola Selby Miss Audre proved herself an actress of talent; and Mr. Herbert Barne as James Selby gave a realistic portrayal of the escaped convict. Mr. Tom Arkenstall was well adapted to the rôle of Guy Logan; Mr. Edwin Kersh was clever and amusing as Billy Brass; and Miss Dorothy Oswald did exceedingly well as Selina Worts.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Resident- and Acting-Manager, Mr. Frederick Sandy; Musical Director, Mr. Dudley Powell.—Mahatma, who is assisted by Professor C. N. Steen, is a lady of much wit, and makes her clever turn very entertaining. The other items are attractive, particularly the performance of R. Cardigan and company, in the musical and humorous sketch The Distinguished Visitor; Mabel Sinclair, lady ventriloquist, who deservedly enjoys an enviable reputation; Ruth Lyton, Scotch comedienne, sings well; and Cissie Lupino is a dainty character dancer and most popular. There is some clever step-dancing in the act, Jerks the Butler, by Vasey and Ramsey.

FALKIRK.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. W. Ebbutt.—Miss Winifred Chalmers's company, in the musical comedy Miss Plaster of Paris, has occupied the boards during the whole week. Mr. Harry Ed. Ray works a tremendous amount of fun into the part of Alexander, the melancholy waiter. In conjunction with Mr. Johnny McElroy as Numskull Nubs and Mr. Sid Dean as Mrs. Nubbs he keeps the audience on the grin throughout. Miss Nellie Harcourt as Eliza Plaster is a host in herself, her dancing being especially clever. Miss Winifred Chalmers in the part of Medea Hamilton contributes no small share to that success.

FELIXSTOWE.—FELIX HALL.—Mr. Frederick Mantell's Bric-à-Brac Entertainers are drawing good houses here. Mr. Mantell and Miss E. Maynard's laughable sketch The New Domestic causes continuous applause; Miss Sylvia Mortlake is a pleasing and efficient pianiste, and her choice of music to illustrate the London Bioscope Co.'s A B C Pictures is very judicious. The films shown this week include The Gipsy's Model (dramatic), How they made a Man of Billy Brown, Yachting on the Solent, Italian Cavalry in Mountain Drill, Our Uncle from America, Involuntary Hurry, Professional Skaters, Two College Chums, A Dramatic Carnival, Kelly is Curious, and An Old Chorister (with singing and organ effects).

FERNDALE.—NEW WORKMEN'S HALL AND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. David Williams; Secretary, Mr. William James.—When Knights Were Bold was presented to the Ferndale public for the first time on the last three nights of last week by Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company. On Monday week Mr. Carr Loates presented his musical drama, entitled At the World's Mercy. As Jabez Barber, the solicitor, Mr. Loates is deserving the highest recommendation; Captain Manley is ably acted by Mr. Fred Muntz; Miss Cissie Milford scores a success both as Skittles and Kitty Knott, with Mr. Will H. Irving as Charley Smart; Miss May White is a winsome Dot and Miss Maggie Hobart a successful Alice Lloyd.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Mr. George Dance's principal company, in Miss Hook of Holland, played to crowded houses for three nights and matinée. Mr. Alfred Wellesley's Mr. Hook was a veritable triumph, and fully merited the hearty applause given; as also did the clever performance of Mr. Harry Brayne as Slinks. The little-rôle was gracefully portrayed by Miss Dorothy Southgate, whose sweet voice was heard to advantage. Mr. M. Stringer, an ideal bandmaster, sang in approved style; Miss Clarie Hardy made a hit as Gretchen; Mr. A. Wood Mansey and Mr. Lacey Mills acted well and looked manly as officers of the Garrison Artillery; and the minor parts were well filled. The Fires of Fate is billed for remainder of week.

THE LEAS PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—The Gipsies and their Jester, who occupy the boards at this unique place of entertainment, are keeping up a high standard of excellence, and their stock of humour is as fresh as ever.

GAINSBOROUGH.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. W. Payne Seddon and E. Pope; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fredk. J. Reece. — The dramatic season opened on Monday with two excellent houses, the attraction being Mr. Hubert Helliwell's company in The Wrongs of Woman. The drama was effectively staged and the characters well played. Miss Ada Hender was powerful as Mrs. Helmstone; Miss Cicely Cardon a charming Miriam Cronshaw; Mr. Chas. F. Johnson excellent as the Colonel; and the comedy element was well represented by Mr. Fred Luard and Miss Lilian Bates. The other characters were capably played by Messrs. F. Garrett, Hubert Helliwell, L. Calthorpe, &c., and Misses Eva Brashier and Alice Redmond. Mr. and Mrs. Levy and J. E. Cordwell's Sleeping Beauty company is billed for the latter part of the week.

GATESHEAD. — KING'S THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatre, Ltd.; Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Local Manager and Licensee, Mr. Sidney B. Stringer.—An excellent dramatic sketch, When Swords are Drawn, depicting a naval episode, is being played here this week with much success by Mr. James Willard's company, including Miss Margaret Tueski as Alice Chetwyn; the Brothers O'Brien present a horizontal-bar act, the equal of which has not been seen here; a delightful turn is that of Messrs. Ferguson and Ellen's Four Quaint Q's, comedians and vocalists; Harry Lowther, Hulo Hodgson, and company have a most laughable farce, named Barmaids, which is well received; Lily Esplin is an accomplished comedienne; Jack McNeil, Scotch comedian, the Sisters Du Cane, and the Kingscope are other excellent items.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Sole Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. F. Douthwaite.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company is presenting a refreshing drama, named Mother, at this house. Mr. J. O. Stewart makes an admirable Duncan Fairweather; Mr. Alex. J. Haviland ably fills the rôle of Frank Rodney; the part of Tommy Noblets gives Mr. Cecil H. Raymond an opportunity of showing his excellent humorous qualities; Miss N. Thorne Haslam in the part of Nellie Fairweather merits all the prise lavished upon her; and an amusing Polly Crumpet is done by Miss Phillis Vaughan.

GLASGOW.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. W. Wyndham and Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy O. Humphrys.—A version of East Lynne is being given here this week by Mr. Edmund Tearle and company, the part of Archibald Carlyle being played with convincing effect by Mr. Tearle. Miss Kate Clinton makes a dramatic Lady Isabel; as Levison Mr. Edmund Grogan is duly insidious and wily; Miss Constantia Brooks acts well as Barbara Hare; Miss Nancy Blackwood gives clever effect to the eccentricities of the good-hearted Cornelia Carlyle; Mr. Ernest Lodge as Justice Hare, Mr. Horace Price as Lawyer Dill, and Mr. Fawcett Lomax as Lord Mountsevern respectively all supply excellent renderings of their parts; Miss Frances Trevalyon makes a pathetic Little Willie; the humour of Mr. Bernhardt Turner as Carrots adds a touch of relief to the play. On Friday Three Musketeers was given, with Mr. Tearle as D'Artagnan.

KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. W. Wyndham and Geo. T. Minshull; Business-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane.—Are You a Mason? is here. The company is exceptionally strong, Mr. William Lockhart fills the part of Amos Bloodgood, and his conception of it leaves nothing to be desired. Supporting him is Mr. Howard L. Tracy as the son-in-law, another good character excellently acted. Other notable parts are taken by Miss Grace Denbeigh-Russell as Mrs. Perry, Mr. Archie Selwyn, Mr. Edward J. Hinge, Mr. Andrews Buck, Mr. Stanley Arthur, and Miss Agnes Maude as Mrs. Bloodgood. The production is preceded by a one-act farce, My Wife's Friend, in which Miss Grace Denbeigh-Russell and Mr. Stanley Arthur are the principals. Mr. Thos. F. Dunn has painted the scenery.

ROYALTY.—Sub-Lessees, the Scottish Playgoers, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Wareing; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Chas. Humphrys.—On Monday the Repertory Company gave an excellent performance of Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace. Mr. Norman McKeown as Captain Mowbray was well suited, and acted with notable effect; Miss Muriel Pope made a charming Mrs. Gorringe, and her impersonation of the frivolous society lady was a finished study; Mr. P. Perceval Clark as the weak and vacillating David Cairns and Miss Jean Cadell as Isabel gave clever renderings of their parts; Mr. Campbell Gullan as old Colonel Jardine and Miss Elspeth Dudgeon as the shrewish wife imparted the necessary humorous touch with clever effect; Mr. Walter Roy as a detective, Miss Lola Duncan as Miss Potts, and Miss Eve Titheradge as Vicky Jardine ably completed the cast. The play was produced by Miss Madge McIntosh, and was well received.

GRAND.—District-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Christie Grant.—This is the second week of the Grand's new form of entertainment, and the venture promises well. There was a large audience on the opening night of this week. The pictures displayed are well chosen, Convict 796 being a particularly good specimen, and quite above the ordinary run in this class. Francesca di Rimini, a beautifully coloured film, is another dramatic success, dealing with a scene in Dante's "Divine Comedy"; the Bridal Dress is also worthy of mention. In the humorous class, Two Cowards, How Billy got Promotion, and Music Hath Charms are productive of much merriment. Perhaps the most interesting film of the evening was The Regatta on the Mekong in colours. Variety is added by the Grand Stock Company, who appear in the farce The Area Belle, and meet with a most cordial reception. Mr. Alex Keith, who is responsible for this production, makes a capital Pitcher; and Mr. J. Wyngate as the milkman and Mr. Byron Douglas as the soldier are capable representatives of their respective rôles; Miss Elsa Brettingham makes a gay Penelope, and the other parts are in good hands. Annette Hayward, a Glasgow favourite vocalist, has a cordial reception for her rendering of a couple of illustrated songs.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—Mr. Stanley Carlton and his company are appearing here with much success in Night and Morning. The rôle of Richard Sefton provides Mr. Carlton with a fine romantic part well suited to his talents, Alice Wyiford being played with considerable charm by Miss Rubie Maude; Mr. Bertram Damer gives a forcible rendering of the part of Mildmay, the secondary villains, Gilmour and Hardshore, having efficient exponents in Mr. David Curtis and Mr. John Croudace; good character work is seen in Showman of Mr. Willie H. Vernon; the Captain Shark of Mr. James Fielding and the Muggins of Mr. James Hart are clever sketches; as Selina Miss Marion Holly is comic and pathetic by turns; Little Gertie Lenaud is promising as Charlie; the Mrs. Barleycorn of Miss Jenny Bostock is a pleasing performance; and Miss Nora Bond is good as Mary.

METROPOLE.—General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Alone in London is again drawing large and enthusiastic audiences here. The company on this occasion is under the direction of Mr. Charles Gibbon. All the members work well together, and the drama has the advantage of being very well staged. Mr. Charles Gibbon's impersonation of Richard Redcliffe displays an amount of observation and careful study that merits much praise; Miss Nellie Clyde acts with feeling as Nan, and quickly gains the sympathy of her hearers; Mr. W. S. Stevenson's John Biddlecombe is a fine character study; Mr. J. W. Wilkinson is very powerful in his treatment of Old Jenkinson; and Mr. Wallace Dunlop is equal to the demands made upon him as Spriggins; Miss Ethel F. Greene as Tom Chickweed gives a performance that is able and skilful; Liza Jenkinson has an able representative in Miss Carrie Young; and Miss Hetty Hornsby plays effectively as Little Paul; Mr. Bruce Lindley makes the part of Charlie Johnson amusing.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Waldon; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—The Heathen and the Christian is here. As Marie Simpson Miss Louie Adair showed strong histrionic power; Miss Stanley Burt as Mary Barresford acquitted herself with great credit; and Miss Conny Meadow as Reeky Fittim was very clever with her songs and dances, and provided the comical element. Mr. Frank Adair, who figured as the vengeful Chinaman, gave a realistic study of the part.

EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Reynolds.—Ever popular is Herbert Lloyd, the King of Diamonds, and this week the crowds have been further bestowing their patronage on him. His work is at all times funny, and his many burlesque impersonations never fail to produce genuine mirth. The Two Anartos are responsible for the good humour of the audience—their cross talk is smart, and the general eccentricities of "The Talkative Postman," combined with a capital musical turn, supply exactly what is required; in an original acro-pantomimic sketch Willy Pantzer and company appear with much acceptance—their tumbling leaves little to be desired, and their juvenile member is an exceedingly smart youngster; Miss Hilda Jacobson sings a couple of good songs in her own fascinating style, and, being in good voice, these are thoroughly enjoyed; the Sisters Doherty are clever in all they do, and meet with a most cordial reception; the Arthur Lloyd Trio present a playlet, entitled Little Charlie, in which scope is given the artists to appear at their best; Marjorie Lawrence, in a Dutch song and dance, makes herself a favourite; and Little Keeno, in Highland garb, gets through his turn in a business-like fashion; Bert Weston, comedian, is responsible for a lengthy turn, which might considerably benefit by an application of the "blue pencil." The Bioscope films, as usual, are up to date, and form an enjoyable ending to a good all-round programme.

PAVILION, LTD. — General-Manager, Mr. Evan Good; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest R. Foster.—The Wolkowsky Troupe of Russian singers, dancers, and musicians have proved a big success here, the playing of the Balalaika Band in particular arousing much enthusiasm; that clever little couple, Beatie and Babs, again make a hit with their smart comedy, &c., in A Pavement Rehearsal; Foreman and Fannan are very amusing in their patter and cross-talk, and take well; a most enjoyable ventriloquial turn is given by Johnson Clark, with a lot of new business; J. P. Ling is a marvellous imitator of the sounds of various instruments, and is heartily applauded; Barclay Gammon (at the piano) is a clever comedian-musician, and his jokes and playing are equally well received; Haley's Juveniles contribute an enjoyable turn with costume and maypole dances and clever songs; Farr and Farrland are amusing in their comedy turn.

PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry M'Kelvie.—Gertie Gitana has won many encores here, and her reception is very flattering; another popular artist is Dave Samuels; Spry and Austin are old favourites, and have been heartily welcomed on a return visit; Cullen and Carthy are likewise revisiting, and the introduction of Little Cluley in their latest creation causes a considerable amount of jollity; in a most original and funny cycling act Henry and Tyler are capitally received, their many new tricks bringing forth the applause of the audience; a dainty little turn is that put forward by Dolly and Elsie, whose singing and dancing are good; and the Crown Trio of speciality vocalists perform splendidly; J. W. Gallacher and Julian Ross are comedians who get through their work smartly, and are well received. The Palacescope pictures are a fitting termination to a capital show.

COLISEUM. — District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. John M. Hay.—Eugene Stratton is delighting large audiences here with his coon songs, especially as he is reviving several of the old favourites, in addition to giving his latest ditties; Loenwirth and Cohan, Hebrew comedians, are as great favourites as before in their tuneful songs and eccentric talk; Peggy Pryde, in several clever examples of low comedy, fairly carries the audience with her, and is given a great reception; Chass Lewis is a smart and ingenious ventriloquist; Burley and Burley, for their very clever acrobatic work and the originality of their comedy business, well deserve the hearty applause they receive; Luis Alvarez, Spanish tenor, sings several operatic solos in good style; the Satanella Trio contribute some acrobatic dances which take well; Lily Shaw, juvenile comedian, completes a good programme.

PANOPTICON.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickard; Manager, Mr. W. Sinclair.—The Brothers Aitch's amusing patter causes much mirth, and they gain an ovation; George Westland sings two very humorous dance songs; Violet Ellesmere, a ballad singer, is much admired; and Kitty Lavigne shows talent as a comedienne and dancer; Dudley Dale proves popular, evoking much laughter. The Bioscope is again to the front with a series of fine pictures.

GAIETY.—General Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dickinson.—The picture programme arranged here for the week is up to the usual high standard, and attracted large audiences on the opening night. The special subjects depicted include an interesting scene of the military romance Bootles' Baby, Scenes in London, A Central American Romance, Dottynob at it Again, Wings of Love, A Window to Let, and numerous other interesting and amusing films. There is, in addition, a vaudeville entertainment, which is well supplied by Hector Donald, comedian, and Winnie Retford, comedienne and dancer.

HENGLER'S.—Proprietor, Mr. Albert Hengler; Manager, Mr. Harry Milne.—Clever variety items are done here by George Rapley, comedian; Little Dolly Marney, a smart young male impersonator; and by Cecilia Vernon, in illustrated songs. The pictures comprise a wide range of subjects, grave and gay.

STAR.—General-Manager, Mr. Gus Lazenberg; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Chandos.—This week, in addition to an attractive selection of films (outstanding among which is the aquatic spectacle, entitled The Regatta on the Mekong"), the Angelina Trio contribute a fine comedy and abrobatic juggling act, which fully merits the favour bestowed; Francis Halon, comedian and dancer, is well received; and Joe Humphreys, who sings some rare songs; variety is introduced by Polo and Florence with a great show of weight-balancing.

SCOTTISH ZOO AND CIRCUS.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—Mr. Bostock this week has introduced an entirely new company in the Zoo Circus to fill the place of the Royal Italian Circus. The D'Vorak Family's work is clever and daring, and they are capitally received; an attractive acrobatic performance is that given by the Brothers Renz, who are making their début in this country—their tur and John Irvin, in a foot-balancing speciality act, is well received; while the clowns keep the fun going throughout. The zoological collection is still proving an attraction.

GLOSSOP.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sydney Spenser.—Messrs. Sidney C. Cranston and Archie Helsby are presenting The Drama of Life to good houses. Mr. Graham Woods is excellent in the character of Harry Beech; Miss Patti Hastings ably portrays that of Sylvia Beech; Miss Dolly Bogue is a favourite as Master Robert Beech; Mr. Sydney C. Cranston capitally plays the part of Sir Dobson Wilde; Mr. Marshall Meade scores as Jack Lawton; and Miss Alice Oliver is a humorous Lady Jane Wilde. The piece is well mounted, and calls forth great praise.

GLOUCESTER.—Palace Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Will Smithson; Manager, Mr. R. T. Rea. — The evergreen East Lynne is played by Mr. Tom Watt's company. Mr. Frank Beresford is a very able Archibald Carlyle; and Miss Ida Heron is powerful as Lady Isabel. Mr. John J. Hooker as Francis Levison displays great ability; Mr. Tom Watt is good as Lord Mountesevern; and Justice Hare is well played by Mr. Jerrold Manville. Miss Isabel Singleton as Cornelia Carlyle gives a really capital impersonation; Mr. Joe Rowland, a comedian of repute, plays P.C. Bullock capitally; and Lawyer Dill is prominent in the hands of Mr. Clifford Clifford. The children, Little Willie and Isabel, are entrusted to Misses May Courtenay and Ethel Ray; Richard Hare has a good exponent in Mr. Eric Lugg; as has Barbara Hare in Miss Georgie Hall. Miss Alice Mosley as Susanne, Miss Laura A. Pardy as Joyce are noticeable, and the remainder of the cast is efficient.

King's Hall.—Lessees, Messrs. Pooles' Theatres Ltd.; Manager, Mr. T. Stewart.—An entertaining list of dramatic, comic, and travel pictures are supported by Esmann, a clever juggler; Montague Biggs, female impersonator; Miss Kitty Woodford, song illustrator; the Vocaphone, &c.

Theatre de Luxe.—Proprietors, Electric Theatres (1908), Ltd.—The principal picture is an excellent demonstration of colour anima-photography, entitled The Ruins of Old Delhi. Comedy films, with interesting drama pictures, assist in keeping the numerous patrons well entertained.

GRAVESEND.—Grand Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. G. Leslie.—Deservedly popular are J. Wright Aitken and company, in their sketch Beneath a Mask, which tops the bill here. The same combination also produces a comedy sketch, entitled How to be Happy though Married. Both productions are thoroughly well enacted, and give conclusive proof of the quality and versatility of the combination, Mr. Aitken himself being voted particularly talented. Alice Maple, comedienne and dancer, is an old favourite here; Howard and Jess Thorn, in their comedy sketch Mary Anne, evoke much applause; Carney Bros., vocal comedians, are a good turn; Madge O'Neill proves herself a capital songstress; and the Sisters Brenton, dancing experts, are particularly clever with the skipping-rope. The Erascope is well worth seeing.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — Royal Aquarium. — Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Nightingale. —One of the best attractions of the season is provided in Sir Walter Ralegh by Mr. Cyril Maude's company. Miss Winifred Emery as Queen Elizabeth scores a great triumph, her acting captivating the audience; Mr. Lyn Harding finds full scope for his great histrionic abilities in the part of Sir Walter Ralegh; Mr. Percy Rhodes makes an excellent Don Rimardino de Mendoza; Mr. W. H. Garbois plays well as Jeremiah Lightfoot; Miss Nell Carter is a winsome Elizabeth Throgmorton; Mr. Fred Benton ably portrays the Governor of the Tower; and Mr. Powis Pinder is amusing as James Longbowe. The play is beautifully mounted.

Theatre Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Nightingale. — Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's excellent company, in Somerset Maugham's delightful comedy Smith is the attraction here. Miss Jessica Thorne displays great ability as Smith; Mr. Montagu Love gives a clever rendering of the part of Tom Freeman; Miss Eleanor Dilaporte is a delightful Mrs. Dallas Baker and Mr. Cecil Brooking an excellent Mr. Dallas Baker. The stage-management of Mr. Lancelot Lowder is praiseworthy.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. George Gilbert; Manager, Mr. George Zalva.—The Tally-ho spectacle now in its fifth week is still very popular; the Geni family of acrobats are creating quite a furore with their remarkable feats; Almero is a clever gymnast; Marie Racho gives a graceful athletic performance; Mr. Leicester Cooke's horsemanship is much admired; and Doodles, with new drolleries, causes much merriment.

The Gem.—Managing-Directors, E. V. Barr.—In addition to a series of first-class pictures Mr. Tom Taylor's song scenas are very popular; Master Harry Clarke is a clever juvenile comedian; Mr. Billy Moss is an amusing comedian; and the Sisters Kersley give a pleasing musical turn.

Britannia Pier Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—Mr. Charles Bignell is immensely popular, having to sing several songs; Mr. Frank and Millie Forsyth score with their sketch The Doll and the College Boy; Mr. Gus Blake and Miss Maud Granby cause a lot of merriment with their duologue; Mr. Kenney Kay is a first-rate ventriloquist; the Three Krakes are very amusing in their sketch, The Electric Car Conductor; Mr. Henri Bekker mystifies his audience with some clever card tricks; and Mr. Harry Helmsley is a capital mimic.

Wellington Pier Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. Arthur Cash.—"The Tatlers" are paying their second visit this season. Mr. Burney and Miss Dora Dolaro receive well merited applause for their coster sketch; Miss Christine Roy's ballad singing is an attractive feature. In addition to "The Tatlers," the Misses E. and M. Williams render some excellent songs; and Mr. Ernest Hastings is a first-rate entertainer.

GREENOCK.—King's Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. A. B. and J. J. Wright.—After the usual summer vacation, this premier theatre reopened its doors on Monday evening, when a really first-rate performance of Caste was given by Miss Cora Anson's company. Mr. G. W. Anson appears in the all-important part of Eccles and a finer portrayal of the rôle could not be imagined; Mr. Douglas Vigors was praiseworthy as the Hon. George D'Alroy; Mr. Fred Annerley ably represents Captain Hawtree; and Mr. Spencer Peach causes much merriment as Sam Gerridge. Miss Ida Phillips was particularly well suited with her part of Esther Eccles; Polly Eccles had a capital representative in Miss Lydia Busch; and Miss Helen Vicary was a dignified Marquise. A Quiet Evening formed the curtain-raiser.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. L. Skivington.—Miss Frances Letty, ably assisted by Mr. James Sutton at the piano, occupies a prominent position here this week, and meets with an enthusiastic reception; in a musical absurdity Bob Selvidge figures prominently; Albert Rees, in a drawing-room act, is deservedly applauded; and other good turns are Arthur F. Wood, hoop manipulator; the Marzelos, horizontal-bar performers; Mabel Moss, chorus vocalist; Maisie Dene, comedienne; and the Lamons, pedestal dancers.

GRIMSBY.—Prince of Wales' Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—Mr. Frank Bertram's company is presenting The Sailor's Wedding. Mr. Stanley Harrison is an imposing figure as the British naval officer, Gordon Drake; Miss Madge Monte nicely presents the girlish charm of Mary; Mr. J. H. Darnley infuses suitable fire into his portrayal of Giovanni Ferici; Miss Olive Warne acts with intensity as the adventuress, Lenore de Gresac; Miss Daisy Gwynne is excellent as the Countess Bellini; Mr. Cecil Klein gives a polished rendering of Sir Victor Lascelles; Mr. Frank Betram is responsible for genuinely quaint humour as Jack Hawkins, a man-o'-war's man; and others responsible for good work are Mr. Alfred Fisher as Count Bellini, Mr. Frank Kidger as Bill Burns, Mr. Alfred Holles as Giacomo Ferrara, Miss Celestine Bertram as Ninette, and Miss Denny Fitz-Herbert as Polly Clarke.

The Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. F. Verner Walford.—Charles R. Whittle is making a welcome reappearance in Grimsby, and his budget of new songs, effectively presented, is highly popular; Ike and Will Scott are also scoring another success with new comedy specialties; Harry Claff and Miss Alice Tremayne present a diverting pantomime burlesque; Agnes Molteno and company are very pleasing in the vocal scena A Dolly and a Coach; Clifton and Bingham have some capital comedy business; Dot Hardy is a comedienne with plenty of dash, and her dancing is good; and Jules Kiaro gives an expert equilibristic exhibition.

GUERNSEY.—Theatre St. Julian's.—Joint Lessees, Messrs. Ed. Marris and Albany Ward; Manager, Mr. George A. Deighton.—Messrs. Bennett and Wray's company are here with Miss Hook of Holland. Sally is brightly impersonated by Miss Kathleen Starling; Mr. E. Russell dispenses an abundant supply of humour as Mr. Hook; while the drollery of Simon is well sustained by Mr. R. Hunter. Mr. Sam Lockeridge capitally enacts Van Vuyt; and Mr. Cuthbert Hardy as Captain Adrian and Mr. Wilson Blake as Schnapps are quite satisfactory. Miss Muff Carew is admirably suited as Mina. The week is filled in with Albany Ward's electric pictures and varieties.

St. George's Hall.—Secretary, Mr. E. O. Cohn.—A pleasing programme is being presented here this week by Les Vivandieres under the direction of Mr. Carl Fredericks.

Candie Gardens.—A clever and entertaining concert party, The Georgians, are doing good business here.

HALIFAX.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—Mr. Edward Compton has been playing to packed houses this week in Dary Garrick, The Rivals, The Road to Ruin, She Stoops to Conquer, and The School for Scandal. In Dary Garrick Mr. Compton gave his usual brilliant rendering of the name-part, Miss Rita Sponti playing sympathetically as Violet. The artists include Messrs. Henry Crocker, Frank Royde, Chas. Stone, J. W. Austin, Clifford Marquand, Edward Hoile, Keith Graham, and R. St. John, Misses Marie Hassall, Agnes Williams, Vivien Marriott, and Nell Compton. In The Rivals Mr. Compton again gave a fine portrayal of Bob Acres.

Grand Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—The Sisters Page have beautiful voices; Edward Seigel and Will Fields give an entertaining turn.

Palace and Hippodrome, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—Williams' Jubilee Singers are a talented octette of lady and gentlemen vocalists; Tom Taylor and company provide an excellent entertainment in The Plumbers; Rose and Stevens have a smartly-written and humorous sketch, Married or Photographed? The Birthday Teddy Bear gives the Lomas Duo an excellent opportunity to display their talents; Hermann and Arthur, comedy jugglers, won the audience at once; Chris Baker, character comedian, is a good turn; Rose and Jeanette, soubrette and girl baritone, and some good pictures complete.

HAMILTON (N.B.).—Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; General-Manager, Mr. René Clayton; Musical-Director, Mr. G. Millar.—Mr. Graham Moffat and company are appearing here in one of the most amusing of Scotch sketches, The Concealed Bed, and are awarded a hearty and deserved welcome. Katie Butler is a big favourite, her Lancashire dialect songs going extremely well; Park's Eton Boys and Girton Girls are excellent in their scena, Speech Day at Eton; Josh Dixon is a quaint and amusing little chap; Baby Wolff sings a couple of songs and dances; the Mantialo Trio do some smart juggling; Clara Reid and John Power are amusing in their comedy sketch The Chambermaid; and Alfonzo, upside down feet equilibrist, and the bioscope conclude.

HANLEY. — Royal. — Proprietors, Hanley Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone. — Messrs. Milton Bode's and John Hart's opera company is presenting Les Cloches de Corneville. There is an augmented orchestra and a powerful chorus conducted by Mr. Knight Pearce. Mr. Cyril Thompson as the Marquis sings and acts brilliantly; Mr. Arthur Geary as Grenicheux is admirable; Miss Kitty Dale as Germaine is highly successful; Miss Dolly Castles as Serpolette is most fascinating; Mr. Fred Dark as the Bailie is good; and the Gobo of Mr. Alfred Selby is quaint. Mr. E. St. Albans as Gaspard is powerful, and Miss Lucy Kipling as Christophe is commendable.

Grand.—Proprietors, Hanley Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.—This week's bill is headed by Alexandre and Hughes, whose patter is smart; The Ghost of Jerry Bundler, a clever sketch, is well played by Mr. Harold Nuttall's company; Ted E. Box, eccentric comedian and whistler, is recalled; Percy Walton sings and dances cleverly; the Three Grovini Sisters present a fine acrobatic performance; Barrett and Knowles are irresistibly funny; the Gilberts are a smart couple; and Jean Wallace is a charming comedienne.

King's.—Lessee, Mr. J. P. Moore; Manager, Captain F. Shaw; Acting-Manager, Mr. Colin Hazlewood.—The show this week is headed by a fine film entitled The Clay Baker, which is wonderfully thrilling. The Victims of Fate is also fine. Denny Monaghan, the boy tenor, supplies the vaudeville item.

HARROGATE.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding Smith.—This week Castellano's Italian Grand Opera company has been here. On Monday Cavalleria Rusticana and I Pagliacci were in the bill. Signora Deferal was prima donna in each play and sang beautifully. The orchestra was under the bâton of Signor Wehils. Faust, Lucia di Lammermoor, La Traviata, Rigoletto, Il Troratore, and Carmen were also performed.

The Kursaal.—Manager, Mr. J. E. Wilshire; Musical-Director, Mr. Julian Clifford.—Miss Celia Claud was in the bill here for the first two nights of the week, and her classical dances were a great feature of the entertainment. For the rest of the week Mr. R. A. Roberts, the wonderful Protean actor, appeared in his clever sketches, Dick Turpin and Cruel Coppinger.

HARTLEPOOL.—Empress.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Albert Maxsted.—After undergoing considerable structural alterations which add considerably to the comfort of the audience and the holding capacity of the building, this comfortable place was reopened on Monday, with a programme consisting of capital variety. Elmo and Rego, knockabout comedians, give a clever performance; Daisy and Dot, duettists and dancers, provide an exceptionally clever turn; Beattie St. Clair is a dainty soubrette; and pictures are shown by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope.

HASTINGS.—Gaiety Theatre.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. E. Scutt.—Messrs. Glenister and Ingram, Ltd., have organised a capable company, which on Monday opened a three-days' visit in The Fires of Fate. Mr. Lewis Fielder as Colonel Egerton entirely won sympathy; Miss Aimee de Burgh made an excellent impression by her clever impersonation of Miss Sadie Adams; the Rev. Samuel Roden was impressively played by Mr. Gilbert Yorke, the doctor being well presented by Mr. George F. Ide. Mr. A. C. Holmes, who stage-managed, gave a breezy presentment as Captain Jack Archer; Miss Marie Darbyshire as Miss Adams made an excellent chaperone. On Thursday Mr. George Dance's company paid a return visit in Our Miss Gibbs.

Pier Pavilion.—General-Manager, Mr. Walter Maxwell.—For the first half of the week Mr. Walter Maxwell's company played the amusing farce Mr. Preedy and the Countess to large audiences. Mr. A. W. Baskcomb as Preedy thoroughly realised the modest, chivalrous, kindly-natured little man; Miss Nelia Powys was a graceful and well-bred Countess; Mr. John Nesbitt was well placed as John Bounsall; Mr. Shirley Lea supplied an excellent farcical sketch of Bilson; and the many humorous situations were well supported respectively by Mr. Cecil Humphreys as the Earl, Mr. J. D. Geddes as Lord Kinslow, Mr. Hamilton Deane as the Hon. Robert, Mr. J. McClintock Clive as Reginald Saunders, and Miss Ninon Dudley as Harriet Budgen. Miss Mary O'Farrell acted with much charm as Emma Sidgrave. Mr. Haldane Crichton's company was billed for Thursday in The Cingalee.

American Palace Pier.—Manager, Mr. Leopold.—Mr. J. D. Hunter, supported by his company, has revived for this week's entertainment the famous old comedy Betsy. Dick Talbot is finely impersonated by Mr. Frank Growcott; Miss Blanche Bayley plays with all her accustomed success in the name-rôle; Mr. J. D. Hunter as Mr. Dawson endows the character with many whimsical and humorous mannerisms; Mr. and Mrs. Birkett are finely presented by Mr. Entwistle; and Miss Eva Bayley has a good exponent in Mr. Herbert Moule. Miss Vera Dudley acts capably as Madame Polenta, and Mr. C. Herman Pullen is well placed as Captain McMenus. On Tuesday, at a matinée, a men's beauty show was held.

Alexandra Park.—The Wallis Arthur Concert Party continue the daily al-fresco concerts here. On Wednesday a grand fête was organised by Messrs. Keith Prowse. Among the attractions were performances by the D'Amato Neapolitan Singers; Verlini, the Japanese juggler; Joe Fuller and his living marionettes; Herr Simon Wurm's Viennese band; maypole and fancy dances by children trained by Miss Muriel Jukes; followed by dancing on the lawn and a special firework display.

HEREFORD.—Drill Hall.—Mr. J. Bannister-Howard's Silver King company has been here. The Wilfred Denver of Mr. Horace E. Herbert was a very clever rendering; Mr. Oswald Cray as the Spider was capital; and credit must be given to Mr. Ralph Leo as Corict. Elijah Coombe was ably played by Mr. Wm. Dempsey; and the Geoffrey Ware of Mr. Laurie Hunter was equally meritorious. The pathos of Percy Foster as Jaikes went home to the audience; and as Baxter Mr. Alex Begbie was excellent. As Nellie Denver Miss B. Doyle won all hearts by her sympathetic touches; and frequent applause greeted Miss Dorothea Blake as Olive Skinner.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING. — Gaiety. — Following an enjoyable visit from Mr. Ernest Doddridge's vaudeville company, Miss Grace Warner, supported by Mr. George Gordon, appeared with much success on Monday night in the drama, Wages of Sin. In the character of Ruth Hope, Miss Warner gave a realistic reading; and Mr. George Jordon, in the portrayal of Michael Stanton, secured approval. The Scarlet Cloth is being played during the remainder of the week, Miss Grace Warner undertaking the part of Sal Scarlet.

Picture Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood.—This week the reproduction of Durham Miners' Demonstration is meeting with approval. Other interesting films are The White Squaw, The Awakening of Bess, The Princess and the Peasant.

HOYLAND. — Hippodrome. — Owner, Mr. Scott Alexander; Acting- and Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Firth.—The above theatre opened on Monday night with Mr. John Levy and company in The Scapegrace. Mr. A. T. Cresswell is a manly Jack Fanshaw; and as Captain Harry Fanshaw Mr. W. A. Buckstone is all that can be desired. Mr. John Levy gives a characteristic rendering of Bill Burke; and Mr. F. Dudley is an aristocratic Sir John Fanshaw. The humorous element is well sustained by Mr. Harry Ives as Larry McGehan, ably assisted by Miss Maudie Lambert as Mary. In the rôle of Margaret Marsden Miss Beatrice Western is excellent; Miss Nellie Lambert is a sympathetic Nellie Burke; and Miss Maude Western as Dick is very good.

HUDDERSFIELD.—Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Northern Theatres Company, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. William Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—Miss Florrie Gallimore is starring here, singing her latest chorus songs with much success; also in the bill are Sisters Allen, duettists and dancers; the Lukushimas troupe of real Japanese equilibrists; G. C. Doughty and Miss Molly Laney, in a brightly-played duologue; Hall and Earle, entertainers; the Elite Harmony Boys, in songs, concerted numbers, and dancing; and Jackson and Marte, comedians. The pictures include a fine representation of Logging in Canada.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Herbert Garside.—Excellent fare is provided by the McLallen-Carson Duo, who present their graceful and clever act on roller skates; Haines and Borthwick, in a funny sketch, Half-a-Dollar; Jack Hamilton, a refined and versatile comedian; Brothers Redmond, a pair of nimble acrobatic comedians; the Six Lancashire Lasses, in some well-arranged songs and dances; Frank Boyce, character vocalist; Miss Kitty Upton, comedienne; Sid Doody and Miss Edie Wright, burlesque artists. The Palace pictures complete the show.

HULL.—Grand Theatre.—Morton's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—The house has been crowded every night, the reason being the visit of Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry. The opening play was the ever-welcome Scarlet Pimpernel. Mr. Terry was seen at his best in the title-rôle; Miss Neilson was heartily welcomed as Lady Blakeney; and with Mr. Horace Hodges as the French Envoy, we had a trio par excellence. Amongst the company are to be found such well-known names as those of Mr. Carter Edwards and Mr. Malcolm Cherry. On Wednesday and Thursday Henry of Navarre gave the opportunity to both Miss Neilson as Margaret de Valois and Mr. Terry as the King.

Alexandra Theatre.—Morton's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—The Prodigal Parson is enjoying a big success. Mr. W. V. Garrod directs the fortunes of the company, and at the same time takes the rôle of the parson. Miss Bertha Kingston plays the parson's wife to perfection, and wins the approbation of the house. Miss Celia Barnard is a very commendable Myrtle Godley; Miss Amy Shaw provides a very good picture of Fräulein Korale, the Biergarten dancer; and the rest of the company work hard.

Palace Theatre.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. John S. Barnett.—George Formby, the eccentric comedian, is responsible for roars of laughter; and Dan Crawley, the "glad-eyed dame," is irresistible with a collection of new songs; Andos, happy little Japs, a talented troupe, excel as equilibrists and jugglers; Jock Whiteford, Scotch comedian, has an abundance of good humour; Phil Rees' Stable Lads win approbation for their novel racing act; an item much enjoyed is the turn provided by Orpheus, the melodist, and as an operatic vocalist Miss Sybil St. Elmo gained distinction. Other enjoyable turns include the Maples, in a smart comedy act, who are also responsible for some clever knockabout business; Amy Marsden, the low comedy girl; and an interesting series of Bioscope pictures.

The Empire.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hy. Slingsby.—A number of exceptionally good turns are exploited here, among which are the Claymore Trio, who excel as jugglers, vocalists, and humorists; Irene and Morton please immensely with their comedy; Reg. Bolton, in his comedy scena, is very droll; Miss Flossie Elliston, versatile vocalist; Three Coopers, in song and dance; Hunter and Bob, acrobats and jugglers; and May Knight, comedienne, all win approbation.

The Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. Walter Bentley.—An excellent programme here is headed by Monsieur E. La Vigne and company, who present the Eight Daughters of Eve in a charming series of tableaux vivants, each item being loudly applauded; Rowland Hill, comedian, wins admiration; Keene and Adams, refined singers and dancers; and Bert Woodward, the cycling coon, were much appreciated. Other interesting items include Jack Evans and Tich Pike in duet, "Sing, sweet bird"; Lace and Leno, patterers and eccentric dancers; Ina Lorimer, charming comedienne; and Tom Banny, comedian, completes.

IPSWICH.—Lyceum Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Murray King, Clarke, and W. H. Savery. — Mr. Ernest Leicester's company occupies the house this week with East Lynne, with Miss Kathleen Russell in the difficult part of Lady Isabel, of which she gave a very clever interpretation. Miss Dora Heritage was a spirited Cornelia Carlyle; Miss Gwen Stewart was a graceful Barbara Hare; and Miss Hermione Lester played William Carlyle. Mr. Ernest Leicester gave a fine rendering of Archibald Carlyle, and the Francis Levison of Mr. Herbert Hewetson was to the point. The comic village postman was capably represented by Mr. Herbert Willis.

Hippodrome —Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Mr. Harry Tate's No. 1 company is here this week, and his latest success—a burlesque on aviation entitled Flying—creates roars of laughter throughout; Diamond and Beatrice with the harp and saxophone are old favourites here, and had a good welcome back; Miss Venie Clements s a clever and vivacious comedienne; Ross and Lewis, the so-called "laughter looseners," are well named; Little Pam is a clever child-actor; Cedar and Elgar have a funny turn entitled "Days of Olde"; Dorris and Francis are agile dancers; and the Bioscope concludes a strong bill.

JERSEY.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Edward Marris; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lesley Edwards.—Messrs. T. C. Wray and Austin Hurgon's company is presenting The Girls of Gottenberg here this week. "Smith," who is a great favourite here, keeps the audience convulsed with merriment as Max Modelkopf; Mr. Jack Douglas creditably impersonates the dandified Prince Otto; Mr. Eddie Foy is a quaintly eccentric Brittlbottl; and Mr. Tom Squires is good as Adolf. Miss Grace Desmond is a delightfully buxom Clementine; Miss Dora Langham is charming as the mischievous Mitzi; and Miss Beryl Vaudrey is a fascinating Elsa. The orchestra is under the able bâton of Mr. Edmund Peterson, a former director of the Worthing Theatre orchestra.

Alhambra.—Proprietors, Messrs. L. C. Langlois and L. Poulain.—Crowded houses are the order here, and the new variety turn, Mr. J. A. Maurice, gets a flattering reception.

Olympia.—Proprietor, Mr. Louis Marks; Manager, Mr. Percy Leopold.—The turns here include La Valti, in electric dances; Edward Mortimer in sketches; whilst Dan Christie gives several amusing songs.

Triangle Park.—Mr. George Robins's Gay Gondoliers are the attraction here this week.

Royal Hall.—Lessee, Mr. J. T. West; Manager, Mr. George Francis.—One of the new films here this week is a sensational Mexican drama, entitled The Mule Drivers.

Royal Hall.—Mr. Charles W. Poole's popular Myriorama to-day concludes a very successful visit here.

KEIGHLEY. — The Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Keighley Hippodrome Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. T. Barrasford.—Walter Ellis and company are on a return visit in the humorous sketch, The Sleepwalker; the Arthur Gallimore Trio provide a very clever and amusing turn; La Vie, poseuse, presents a charming and artistic act; the Quality Quartette receive a hearty reception; Tom Burton scores heavily, his Yorkshire patter being to the liking of the audience; Ernest Clifford dances well; and Maudie Morris sings nicely.

KETTERING.—Victoria Theatre.—Managers, Messrs. Alf. Bailey and Co.—The Walturdaw picture and variety company are still here. The specialities this week include Will and Roze in a comedy act, and Dale and Vale, who contribute an enjoyable turn.

KIDDERMINSTER.—New Opera House.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. C. Gudgeon.—Mr. J. W. Lindsay-Ellis's company is presenting the military play Lights Out. The company is good all round, and includes Miss Francis J. Bithell, Alfred C. Clark, Reginald Weston, Herbert Lugg, Frank Cariello, and Robert Noble. Miss Pauline Emeric as Kiara Volkhardt gives a clever and powerful performance. The dresses and mounting generally are first class.

KING'S LYNN.—New Royal Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. Reginald Pareezer.—For the latter three nights of last week Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company presented Don here with great success. As Canon Bonington Mr. Arthur Willoughby was excellent; Mr. Gordon Bailey was quite at ease as Stephen Bonington; Mr. Charles Tyrel made a typical General Sinclair, and as Albert Thomsett Mr. Charles Harley was very natural. Miss Emma Hutchison made a most matronly Mrs. Bonington; Miss Viola Garland was charming as Ann Sinclair; and the pathos of the part of Elizabeth Thomsett was well interpreted by Miss Violet Harley.

New Royal Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. Reginald Pareezer.—For the first three nights this week excellent variety shows have been given here, some clever jugglery being presented by the Zados. Gene Grant is a good comedian; Lewis and Waller present speciality dancing act; Gladys Wilton has a fine contralto, which is heard to advantage in her songs; Jess is an excellent coon comedienne; Dora Martini is a daring gymnast; and Avis and Desbarre are clever wizards.

LANCASTER.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. C. Howitt.—Temptation, played by Miss Nora Carton's company, is proving a big attraction this week. Mr. Charles H. Mortimer does full justice to the part of Sir Charles Tremaine; as Mr. Bright, the lawyer, Mr. Clifton Roystell is successful; and Mr. Norman A. Overton as the villain, Hubert Thorne, gives a clever study. Miss Nora Carton is an excellent Hilda Dundonald; Miss Madge Seymour also scores as an adventuress; and Messrs. Frank Ayrton and George Wallace appear to advantage as Bob Saunders and Stephen Rowe respectively.

LEAMINGTON. — Theatre Royal. — Lessees, Messrs. Dottridge and Longden; Manager, Mr. John H. Longden; Assistant-Manager, Mr. John Halifax.—The theatre has re-opened after the summer vacation, and Miss Lena Ashwell's company is having a hearty reception in Diana of Dobson's. Miss Eva Leonard Boyne plays Diana with great skill and power; Mr. Brisco Owen is commendable as the impecunious Captain Bretherton; whilst Mr. Thomas Pauncefort's Sir Jabez Grimlay is a clever study; Miss Hilda Francks is a typical match-making aunt in the rôle of Mrs. Cantelupe; and Miss Marie Lake is successful as the detestable forewoman at Dobson's; Mr. Leslie Crowther makes an admirable policeman; whilst other characters calling for much praise are undertaken by Miss Nanny Hume, Miss Edith Robey, Miss Cicely Oates, Miss Winifred Trevor Lowe, and Miss Mary Crewe. The piece is preceded by a clever one-act play Out West, in which Mr. W. Crowther, Mr. T. Pauncefort, Mr. Brisco Owens, and Miss Mary Crewe appear with distinction.

LEEDS.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Wynn Miller.—When Knights were Bold, with Mr. James Welch, is drawing good houses. Miss Audrey Ford gives a clever impersonation of Lady Rowena, and Mr. Henry J. Ford is amusing in the character of the fop.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. Francis Laidler; Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—Way Out West is the attraction here this week, the author, Junius Booth, playing the leading part of Jack Hamlin admirably.

Empire.—District Manager, Mr. Percival Craig; Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—Harry Tate makes a welcome reappearance here in his new sketch Flying; Lily Burnand is a big favourite, and has several new songs; the Findons, in their clever sketch The Other Man, are highly successful; Harry Jolson is a comedian of ability; the Mezzettes are very smart as horizontal-bar performers; and Bugler Carr, Arthur Slater, Pat Rafferty, and the Marconis complete a capital company.

Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. Harry Dunford.—Herbert Darnley's company in the Brigands of Tarragona, which includes that very funny comedian, Charles H. Bell, and a host of clever artists, are well received here; a rich musical treat is provided by Elsie Southgate on the violin; Robins and Collier are excellent in a new act; Stacey and Williams are very funny comedians; Mason and Bart, in a comedy gymnastic act, give a good show; Dollie and Rosie, in a dancing act, are favourites;; the Sylvester Trio, in a drawing-room entertainment, and Victor Courtney, at the piano, also do good turns.

Queen's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Bush.—The Achmed Ibrahim Troupe top the bill here; Tennyson and Wallis are clever comedians; excellent singing turns are done by Mdlle. De Rose and Hilda Claremont; Curwen and Belle, J. H. Hawtry, and the Three Comedy Chanters, and the Two Lees, in a musical act, and Charlie Carr, comedian and dancer, are also talented artists.

Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Booking-Manager, Mr. Johnny Whiteman.—Fred Maitland and company appear here in a screaming absurdity, Roots, Rash Chemists; the Three Royal Temples give a fine singing act; Tom Spott is a favourite here; and the O'Gorman Brothers are successful; Gaertner and May and Bertha De Pas also contribute satisfactorily.

LEEK.—Grand Theatre and Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Leek Theatre Co., Ltd.; Licensee and General-Manager, Mr. Barry Bond.—An excellent variety entertainment is proving a big attraction. At the top of the bill are the Milsted-Bell Trio, in their comedy sketch Three Sharps in A Flat, who are highly appreciated; Godfrey, society illusionist and necromancer, gives a clever performance; the marvellous gymnastic feats of the Voltoens are received with great enthusiasm. The company also includes Carmen Barrie, dainty comedienne and dancer; Watson and McQue, comedy couple and dancers; Bob King, the man who talks; and Willie Allan, Scotch comedian and amusing eccentric dancer. Latest pictures conclude.

LEICESTER.—Royal Opera House.—Business-Manager, Mr. Trueman Towers.—Miss Mary Austin and Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds's company is here this week in the romantic drama The King's Romance. Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds, the author-manager, distinguishes himself in a conspicuous manner as Prince Andreas; and Miss Haidee Gunn as Vera Navairre is deserving of the highest commendation. Others who render good service are Mr. Arthur Estcourt, Mr. Cecil Calmere, Miss Ethel Vinroy, and Miss Bella Power.

Theatre Royal.—Acting-Manager, Mr. P. Allerton Turner.—The boards are occupied this week by Mr. Lewis Gilbert's company in the interesting play A Daughter of the Sea, in which Miss Florrie Green as Sunshine and Mr. Lewis Gilbert as Mark Glenside enact the two principal parts in a commendable manner.

Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. G. L. Seally.—The leading feature in another first-class programme this week is Loring Fernie and company in Tom Gallon's dramatic sketch Devil's World. Mr. Loring Fernie is very good as the wastrel Paul Harman; and as the roué, Blake Latimer, Mr. Cyril Vernon is also excellent. Mr. Douglas Imbert as Ashley Vernon and Mr. Cecil Calvert as a waiter are deserving of praise. Harry Ford, an amusing comedian, gives a popular turn; a remarkable cycle performance by the Jackson Family arouses unstinted approbation; Nellie Wallace is a comedy artist with methods entirely her own; the Du Gros Trio of comedy acrobats and bar-performers are prominent; Sylvia Du Barry renders a couple of songs in excellent style; Walter King creates continuous merriment; Jock Mills is an excellent Scotch character comedian and dancer; Carl Howard's concoction of comedy and magic is also entertaining. The Bioscope is still a feature.

Pavilion Theatre.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joseph Lawrence.—Leading here this week is Mlle. Suzanne de Verneuil and her posing ladies, in a series of reproductions of studies from the world's greatest picture galleries; Miss Daisy Colenzo, vocalist, accompanies the turn. Another excellent feature is Cameron Matthews and company, including Miss Jessamine Newcombe, in the thrilling dramatic incident No Other Way; Dick and Dorothy Trio are good in harmony, music, and dance; Johnny Cecil is a capital comedian; Mary Rowe sings in good style. Pictures play a prominent part here, and this week a fine programme is given, including Robinson Crusoe, Betty Goes from Bad to Worse, The Winning Punch, Wanted, a Bath Chair Attendant, and A Trip to Laos, Indo-China.

Empire.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. F. R. Griffiths; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. R. Craig.—The reputation of this picture house is well maintained, and Mr. F. R. Griffiths continues to give his patrons at this popular hall programmes of sterling merit and variety. The two big pictures this week are The Sm

Way, Mr. Harvey impersonated The Rat in his usual impressive and finished style, and his reception was most cordial; Mr. Charles Glenney as the Hon. Clement Hungerford was excellent throughout; Mr. Edward Combermere as Captain Stanhope faithfully portrayed a villainous part; Mr. Cowley Wright as the Hon. Francis Tresham was throughout admirable; Miss Brenda Gibson as the Hon. Margaret performed in a most captivating manner; whilst Miss N. de Silva as Batty added to her already long list of successes as a typical supporter of the roughly-used Rat. The King of Cadonia was announced for the remainder of the week.

PIER HEAD PAVILION.—Messrs. Adeler, Sutton, and Allandale's Vaudeville Entertainers appeared here for the week in The Gay River. Mr. Bobbie Allendale as the Hon. Bobbie causes much mirth; and Mr. Horace Jones as Bienkinsop largely added to the fun; Miss Harrie Fawn sings excellently; and Miss Marie Wilson's dancing is greatly admired.

LIVERPOOL.—SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wentworth Croke; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—Large audiences have gathered to witness The Whip and admire its effective setting, while Mr. George Dance's able company have afforded every satisfaction. As Captain Sartoris Mr. James Lindsay plays with judgment and tact; Mr. Eric Hudson stands out prominently with his excellent character study of Joe Kelly; Mr. Dallas Cairn proves a convincing Earl of Brancaster; a humorous Tom Lambert is submitted in able style by Mr. Edwin Brett; Mr. Horace Kenney acquits himself creditably as the honest little jockey Harry Anson; Miss Gwenda Wren pleases as Lady Diana; Miss Stella Campbell gives a neat character study of Myrtle Anson; Miss Simeta Marsden is effective as Mrs. Beamish; Miss Vera Beringer plays well as Mrs. D'Aquilla; and worthy supporters are Messrs. Ernest Douglas (Marquis of Beverley) and Fred Leister (Rev. Haslam).

Rolfe capably holds the part of Farmer Blackburn; Mr. Millar Wilson creates great fun as Tinker, along with Miss Dinah Wright in the character of Euphemia Pattacake; Mr. Edward McLean finds a deal of favour as Roger Blackburn; Mr. Sydney Barner plays Simon Faggas in excellent manner; Miss Elizabeth Watkins makes a sweet Marjorie Lovell; Miss Lydia Mannington arouses laughter as the eccentric Philadelphia Kate; and others who help greatly are Mr. A. J. Harding (Squire Lovell), Mr. Paul Barry Lewers (Randolph Lovell), and Miss Alice Jameson (A. Homeless Woman).

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—Top here this week is Horace Goldin, the able illusionist and conjurer, assisted by Mlle. Jeanne Fransioli and company; his work is mystifying large audiences. The popular Ernest Shand is having a hearty welcome, and delights everybody with his latest songs and sayings; Dennis Creedon and Jessie Broughton present an excellent vocal and musical act; Doris Trevelyan is a vocal comedienne of ability; Charles Norton repeats his smart monologue Pros At the Races; Gwennie Hasto sings and dances neatly; and also in the list are Tom E. Hughes (comedian) and Azella Wilson (graceful lady gymnast).

LYRIC.—Lessees, Liverpool Lyric Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Drama twice nightly continues to find favour here. Captain Jack is nicely put on and well presented. The well-known and popular actress, Miss Nina Blake-Adams, affords the utmost satisfaction with her able portrait of Mary Lee; Mr. Ernest Owtrim proves a breezy Captain Jack, into which character he infuses a deal of spirit; Mr. F. C. Leighton makes a powerful Barry Trent; and good work also comes from Messrs. Herbert Bentone (Andrew Lee), H. Ryeland-Leigh (Anthony Cliversedge), Harry Creamer (Billy Bowster), Miss Ada Arnott (Ginge), and Miss Betty Manners (Winnie Trent).

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—A second edition of Fred Karno's Mumming Birds is top of the bill here, and finds general favour; some particularly smart work as acrobats and hand balancers is performed by Avalys and Freydo; the Twelve Kennedy Girls earn considerable applause for their vocal and dancing act, including the ju-jitsu dance; Walter Emmerson proves immensely droll; Herbert Clifton sings songs in capital style; Mary Law is an accomplished young violinist; Josie Delaine shows herself to be a most versatile lady; Karr and Kooney are a counle of smart patterers; the Three Pirmans go through a taking pot-pourri entertainment; and Hilda Light is an appreciated speciality dancer.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—A departure from the customary style of dramatic fare is being made here this week with a well-arranged production of Hamlet. To condense the Bard's work for a two-houses-a-night performance requires a deal of care, but Mr. E. D. Allen, the stage manager, has certainly succeeded in knitting together all the strong points so as to make an effective and continuous narrative. Mr. R. Seath Innes is to be congratulated upon his able handling of the title part; Mr. Harry Tresham is excellent as Laertes; Mr. Sidney Grant plays powerfully in the character of the King; as Horatio Mr. Leo Montgomery deserves every praise; Miss Gertrude Entwistle presents Ophelia in a sweet and sympathetic manner; and other principals are Messrs. Cecil Ravenswood (Polonius and the Ghost), E. D. Allen and Tom H. Solly (grave diggers), and Miss Lina Nazeby (Queen). Large audiences are giving the experiment cordial recognition.

OLYMPIA.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. M. Slater.—George Carney and company are causing endless fun with their sketch The Fool of the Force, Mr. Carney having the part of Officer Mudd. LONDONDERRY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Payne Seddon; Manager, Mr. J. Mitchell.—Mr. Horace Stanley's company is here with A Female Detective. Mr. T. Brabazon impersonated the retired army colonel in a manner which won admiration; and Mr. Ernest J. Fare as the son was very good; Mr. Chas. Burden was an effective villain; and Mr. Stanley was masterly in the humorous rôle of Tubby Philpotts; Little Minnie Halstan infused pathos into her impersonation of a street arab; and the other parts were successfully filled by Miss Kate Kilpack, Miss Violet Agnew, and Miss Bernice Fielding.

ST. COLUMB'S HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. R. A. P. Williams.—The winter season was most successfully opened on Monday with The Plumber, the parts being sustained by such well-known artists as Tim Bond, John Maxwell, Charles Magilton, Miss Maddie Magilton, Mrs. Lillie Williams, Miss Lena Weir, and Miss Nellie Clifford. Mr. Williams scored a splendid success with his opening programme.

LOUGHBOROUGH.—VINT'S ELECTRIC HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint; General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. H. Bowmaker.—Excellent pictures are exhibited here, and crowded houses are still being obtained. Rohde and Roche appear in an original "pot-pourri" act, introducing some clever contortions and patter; Tom Hayton and his Six Manchester Lads give a good exposition of dancing.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Lessees, Messrs. Weisker Bros.; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Evanson.—This is the anniversary week of the World in Motion entertainments, which have had a continuous year's run. Variety is provided by Ena Correlli (the Mighty Atom), in a good dancing and quick-change turn, and Cliff Dacre (baritone). A fine range of dramatic, travel, and comic pictures completes the programme.

LOWESTOFT.—MARINA.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer.—The Flag Lieutenant is proving a strong attraction for the annual regatta week. The piece is carefully staged, every novel detail being given with wonderful correctness. In the name-part Mr. Edgar Kent gives a clever performance, for which he is deservedly applauded. Others equally noteworthy are Messrs. Edward Harrison (in the rôle of the Admiral) and H. A. V. Bramble (William Thesiger), and the Misses Dorothy Ripley (Lady Hermoine) and Clarissa Selwynne (Mrs. Cameron).

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. W. Alvar.—The current bill includes Wallace Selkirk's Boy Scouts; Speedwell, a clever painter; and Alpe Barbour, in characters from Dickens' works. The pictures are thoroughly enjoyable.

MACCLESFIELD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. K. Gatley.—Mr. Bruce Warwick's company is here in In the Shadow of Night. Mr. R. Degarge undertakes the rôle of Gordon Allington, and adapts himself admirably to it; Clifford Yorke is well depicted by Mr. R. F. Stacey; Mr. F. Carrington is well suited to the part of John Allington; Mr. Jack Whitehouse is an excellent Tom Nainby; Mr. W. Hayward is a capable exponent of Jake Grudgewell; Mr. H. Greaves as Joe Jackson, Mr. H. Emmerson as James Woodstock, and Mr. C. Parry as Inspector Manners are responsible for clever impersonations; Miss Lily Prescot gives a clever rendering of Violet Kingston; Miss Kittie Roze's Mollie Woodstock is a good portrayal; and Miss Kittie Johnstone is successful as Bob.

MAESTEG.—PICTURE PALACE.—Lessees, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. F. G. Knowles.—Notable new films presented this week are:—Brooklyn Naval Dockyard, Oliver Twist, A Child's Forgiveness, Young Redskins and the Unexpected Shower Bath. Varieties are supplied by Allan McAskall, comedy conjurer, and the Bros. Weyman, wooden shoe dancers.

MAIDSTONE.—PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Ewart C. Potter.—My Lady Bellamy, presented by Mr. Alex. Maclean's talented company, has drawn large and enthusiastic houses. Mr. Maclean in the leading rôle is a striking personality, and his able delineation of the part gives great pleasure; Mr. G. Lyttleton Holyoake is a stately King William III., and deserves the hearty reception accorded him; Mr. A. Layland submits a clever study of the part of Lord Crawford; Mr. Eric Snowdon is good as the villain, Robert Tarfax; Mr. F. H. De Quincey is a capital Captain Van Hesler; Miss Laura Leigh makes a delightful Lady Bellamy, playing the exacting rôle of the child wife of Sir Gervase Bellamy with great effect; and Miss Mary Palmer is creditable as Queen Mary II.

MANCHESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edmondstone Shirra.—Mr. Fred Mouillot's principal company are occupying the stage here in A Message from Mars. The popularity of this well-known comedy drama has been long established, and its entertaining quality is unimpaired. Mr. Harry St. Barbe-West submits a capital impersonation of Horace Parker; Mr. William H. Brougham is remarkably effective as the Messenger from Mars; the Tramp is played well by Mr. Norman Clark; and Mr. Alfred Lugg's sketch of the American, Arthur Dicey, is cleverly drawn. Miss Aubrey Ashton fills the rôle of Miss Parker with distinction; Miss Josephine Middleton is very pleasing as Minnie Templar; and other parts are well handled by the remaining members of the cast. The staging is a feature of the production.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—Capital entertainment is here in the shape of The New Lady Bantock, Jerome's popular comedy, which is presented by Mr. Horace Lingard's strong company. Nothing more exhilarating and delightful could be desired than the Fanny of Miss Beatrice Moreau, whose talents and unaffected personality are greatly to the liking of the audience; Mr. Horace Lingard's depiction of the prim old butler, Martin Bennet, is also a sterling and effective piece of work; Dr. Freemantle is well impersonated by Mr. Edward Ray; a good depiction of George Newte is added by Mr. Wilfrid Compton; and the Misses Wetherell have able exponents in Miss Marie Saville and Miss Denise Dirome; while as Lord Bantock Mr. Rayson-Cousens acquits himself in admirable style. The week's programme includes Is Marriage a Failure? and Divorcons.

ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—Facing the World Alone, played by Mr. J. Edward Whitty and Miss Ethel van Praagh's company, is doing good business here. The proprietors of the company have the chief parts in hand, and they are well supported, the play being an established favourite.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hearn.—Ida Barr is the leading turn here this week, and is very well received; the Cromwells, in their juggling act, are also a popular item; and Milner and Storey add a clever comedy entertainment. Other enjoyable acts are Beattie Foster, comedienne; Harry Hutin, legmania comedian; Phillips and Bristow, expert dancers; Wallace Whitney, a smart character comedian; and Harry Russon, actor comedian.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brearley.—The Eve of Her Wedding, played by Mr. Wilson Benge and his talented company, is the fare here.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietor, Miss A. E. F. Horniman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edwin T. Heys.—Dealing in Futures, by Harold Brighouse, was played here on Monday for the first time in Manchester, the occasion being the opening of the autumn season. The play was worthily chosen, for it has extraordinary virility, beside its value as the embodiment of an industrial problem, while the characters are well conceived and pointedly contrasted. Miss Horniman's company can rise to great heights with good material in their hands, and this play, despite inevitable comparison with Mr. Galsworthy's Strife, furnished excellent entertainment. Mr. Charles Bibby figured very prominently as the soulless Jabez Thompson, overpowering the timid and dependent Bunting, J.P., who was well impersonated by Mr. Henry Austin; Mr. Milton Rosmer demonstrated his sound ability in the rôle of the young agitator Charlie Bunting; and another newcomer, Miss Irene Rooke, played Rosie Thompson in excellent style. Mr. J. V. Bryant's Dr. Clavering was a clean and well-cut piece of work, and other subsidiary rôles were correspondingly well handled by the remainder of the cast. The play, which was very well received, was preceded by a new one-act piece called Effie, by Basil Dean, a notice of which appears elsewhere.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—The big attraction here is Harry Lauder, who entertained a packed house on Monday with a répertoire of new and amusing songs. Supplementing him are the Permane Bros. in their unique entertainment "The Nightingale's Courtship"; Spalding and Reno, in acrobatic novelties; Maud Courtney, the American comedienne; the Heriot Trio in Father's Footsteps; Mr. C., who sings and talks; the Denaro Bros., very clever juvenile head and hand balancers; and Ling and Long, in a juggling entertainment.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—Mr. J. A. Campbell's company, who have been doing good business at local theatres in Mr. Campbell's latest success, The Hand that Rocks the Cradle, are adding to their laurels here this week.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—A finely varied programme is headed by Will Evans, the popular comedian, who makes a big success in his Chantecler burlesque, and Lamberti, a wonderfully clever and entertaining musician and impersonator; while at the bottom of the bill Arden and Abel furnish a most amusing turn in their playlet Town Hall To-night. Smart items are added by the Great Northern Troupe of speciality dancers; the Lumars, acrobats; George D'Albert, comedian; Ethel Newman in Her Wedding Day; and Mary Ambrose, vocalist and violinist.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Miss Margaret Halstan and company, now including Mr. Harcourt Williams, remain a second week in A Supreme Moment. Jack Pleasants, the "shy" comedian, is highly amusing; Jackson and McLaren, of tree-felling fame, provide an interesting turn; the Three Merrills are smart trick cyclists; Phil Percival, comedian at the piano, made a decided hit with clever business; whilst other good turns are offered by Bertie Horron, the minstrel miss; Fred Curran, parody comedian; Nina Wood, in songs at the piano; and the New Macs, capital in patter and dance. Pictures complete.

TIVOLI.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Alice Raymond and her players in A Night in Egypt, a novel spectacular musical act of great merit, appear with usual success; Margo, the lady of mystery, is seen in a surprising series of illusions; May Fayre, vocal soubrette, sings taking songs; Barbara Evangeline scores as a chorus comedienne; Niagara and Falls are smart acrobats and tumblers; the Sisters Harcourt dance neatly; and enjoyable turns are also contributed by Lola Milton, vocalist, and Albert Hall, comedian. Ruffell's Bioscope pictures complete.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. Flanagan; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert Jones.—The attraction here is Hush Money, a Sexton Blake drama. Mr. S. Leigh-Courtney sustains the rôle of the detective in good style, and he is capably assisted by Mr. Harry Hartley as Tinker, supplemented by the bloodhound Pedro. The remainder of the cast is efficient, and the drama is enjoyed by large audiences.

KING'S, LONGSIGHT.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James R. Trippett.—In The Strange Adventures of Miss Brown Mr. Leigh Lovel and Miss Octavia Kenmore have a capital medium for their talents. As Captain Charles Courtney Mr. Lovel is admirably suited, and Miss Kenmore is quite at home as the runaway Angela. The company supporting them is in every way adequate, and pleased houses are the rule.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Day.—The first appearance of the All-British Empire Band is to be recorded here. The band is under the able conductorship of Vincent, and the selections are all well rendered. Billy Watson and company are deservedly well received in a funny sporting sketch, A Losing Winner; Edwin Garth, comedian, makes a hit; Adeline Yohle and company, including James Kurry, are good in a musical interlude entitled Difficulties; Forbes Guilbert, the great character portrayer, is very clever; and other smart turns are contributed by Merton and Rydon, musical comedy duo; the Lowells in a neat speciality act; and the Bros. Curran in an uproariously funny boxing act.

RUSHOLME PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Phillips.—Mr. Alexander Lee's Gay Birds are the attraction here, and include, besides Mr. Lee himself, Doris Langdon, comedienne and dancer; Rose Alderman, soprano vocalist; Frederick Park, comedian; Jessy Cliffe, contralto vocalist; Vivian Munro, light comedian; and Harry Taylor, solo pianist.

MANSFIELD.—GRAND.—Managing-Director, Capt. Clayton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Fred Clayton.—The Sign of the Cross is presented here by Mr. G. W. Bowes's company. The part of Marcus is in the capable keeping of Mr. Leonard Yorke; Mr. Aubrey Fitzmaurice is a powerful Nero; Mr. G. Osmond Tearle portrays Tigellinus excellently; Mr. Duncan Gilmour is exceedingly good as Licinius, as is Mr. W. Facer in the part of Viturius; Mr. Donald McAdam as Glabrio and Mr. Austin Dean as Philodemus are amusing in those parts; Miss Effie Dane is interesting as Stephanus; and Miss Perla Gardner plays Mercia with pathos.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. E. Michael; General-Manager, Mr. F. Weathersby; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Lake.—Mr. Gaston Mayer's company presented Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch the first half of the week. Miss Lucy Beaumont was all that could be wished in the title-rôle; Miss Armine Grace made a quaint Miss Hazy; Miss Winifred Murray sweetly enacted the rôle of Lovey Mary; and the Misses Doris Murray, Molly Shiells, and Doris Boeton were lively and bright as Asia, Europena, and Australia. Miss Ethene O'Brien made a charming Miss Lucy; and Miss Sybil Brooke and Miss Violet Vivian as Mrs. Eichorn and Mrs. Schultz were excellent; Mr. Fred Forrest gave a whimsical sketch of Mr. Stubbins; Mr. Ernest Gray did remarkably well as Mr. Wiggs; Mr. Alfred Fisher scored as Deacon Bagsby; and Mr. Harry G. Wright and Mr. Robin Shiells were very good as H. Hunkerdunkus Jones and the Sheriff. For Thursday and the remainder of the week Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company was booked in The Naked Truth.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the South of England Hippodromes, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Mayall.—Packed audiences are the rule. Queenie Leighton is accorded a very flattering reception, her contributions being vociferously encored; Daisy Wood's vivacious and piquant style has made her a great favourite, her songs, with their taking choruses, being applauded to the echo; Haley's Girls, in a vocal and dancing scena, have a pretty and effective production; the Two Butterflies give a clever and daring aerial gymnastic act; and Hilda de Grey, versatile vocalist and the Phœnix Trio, harmonising vocalists and dancers, also contribute good turns. Herbert Sleath's company present with great success The Third Degree, which is stated to represent police methods in America. The sketch is well staged and well acted, the three principal characters being played by Mr. Chas. A. East, Mr. Gerald Valentine, and Miss East Robertson.

HALL-BY-THE-SEA.—Under the sole direction of Mr. Charles Evans.—The programme here includes Horace White, in a refined ventriloquial and musical act; Cliff Ryland, talking and singing comedian; Mr. George Belrose, bass, and Miss Maude De Velin, soprano, duettists; Emmie Ames, in her latest success, "Emmie's Christmas tree"; Harry Bancroft, actor and chorus vocalist; and Ruby Emmerson, comedienne. Bioscope pictures and illustrated vocal specialities are also interesting items. The afternoon and evening entertainments have been remarkably well attended, and the ball each evening attracts a large number of dancers.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, the South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson-Withers.—The Truants is presented by Messrs. Jay and Mann's company. Miss Molly Tremaine as Freda, and Mr. T. A. Shannon as Bill, are highly successful in the leading rôles. Excellent support is rendered by Misses Elmie Kemp, Marie Scharning, Dorothy

DEAN'S FURNISHING CO., LTD.,

Invite all who are interested in Picture Theatres to see their work just finished at the Electric Theatre, Marble Arch.

Will be pleased for their artists to get out schemes for Decorations free of Booth, Mildred Orme, Kita Trekelle, and Messrs. Frank Danby, Mackenzie Kogan, C. B. Benjamin, O. Powis Griffiths, and H. Thomas.

Temperance Hall.—Lessees, the Merthyr Entertainment Co.—George Prince, the crazy comedian, on a return visit; the Brothers Hannaway are a quaint pair of humorists; John Beech and Norman Aveling, supported by Miss Emma Keekie, furnish a well-acted sketch entitled Money's Power; and Knoto, contortionist; Miss Lily Hill, soprano; Pearce and Ward; and Fred Tenby, also successfully contribute.

METHIL.—Gaiety Theatre.—Proprietors, the Methil Theatre Co., Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. John C. Burnett.—The season was opened here on Monday by Mr. Frank M. Thorne's company with Little Phil's Mother. The part of Frank Towers was ably taken by Mr. Herbert Evelyn; Mr. Frank M. Thorne as Sam Perkels was successful; Mr. David McFarlane gave a good study of Oscar Titherton; Phil (a cripple boy) was well performed by Little Daisy Rochefort; Miss Maud Russell was seen to advantage as Ruth Towers; and Miss Katie Blair as Elspeth contributed largely to the success.

MEXBOROUGH.—Prince of Wales's Theatre.—Assistant-Manager, Mr. Goodison.—Messrs. Mr. Harry Aynsleigh gives a powerful portrayal this week presenting The King of Diamonds here. Mr. Harry Aynsleigh gives a powerful portrayal of Sir Philip Garth; Richard Fenton is played with quiet dignity by Mr. George Keene; Mr. Walter Warren is capable as Herbert Selby; Mr. Bert Sharp submits a clever character study as Reginald Garth. Mr. Wilson Lowther does well as Sir Charles Lockwood; Miss Camille Treherne plays with striking dramatic force as Olive Vandell; and Miss Peggy Ross is graceful and pleasing as Muriel Lockwood.

Picture Hall.—Proprietor, Mr. W. H. Melton.—The star pictures here this week are:—Ramona, Blind Man and His Dog, Sheriff's Sacrifice, Fashoda, and Redman's Way.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. K. Chatto.—Mr. Harold V. Neilson's company is presenting The House Opposite. Miss Amy Sangster cleverly portrays the Hon. Mrs. Rivers; as Mrs. Calthorpe Miss Effie Leigh Hunt is successful; Miss Elizabeth Rosslyn capably delineates Lady Muriel Wentworth; and Miss Dorothy Blackader is worthy of praise as Marie. In the part of Richard Cordyne Mr. Neilson is seen to distinct advantage; and the other rôles are in competent hands.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager Mr. Geo. Imeson.—Mr. Tom Morton Powell's company, in A Girl's Temptation, is the attraction at the Royal. Miss Lalla Stanhope is entrusted with the part of Kate Stirling, and she does full justice to it; Mr. Frank V. Fenn plays Guy Warren well; and the numerous other characters have been placed with care. The piece is well staged.

Empire.—General-Manager, Mr. Chas. G. Rembges.—Mephisto prevents his illusions with success; the Norman and Leonard Trio, in addition to Ye Squire's Dance, give a very enjoyable musical enterainment; Lennie and Hast, in The Maid of Polaria, give satisfaction; Miss Ethel Bourne, contralto; Miss Gertie Martini, comedienne; Will McIvor, vocalist; Ted Curtis and pigs, in a novel show; and the Empire pictures all meet with approval.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. S. T. Smurthwaite.—A capital programme of pictures, which include one depicting the Funeral of Miss Florence Nightingale and a capital coloured film, entitled The Defeat of Satan, is much appreciated. The Vaudevilles, in a sketch, and Frank Stanert, musical comedian, are well received.

MORLEY.—Alexandra Palace.—Proprietor, Tom Diacoff; Manager, Arthur Izon.—An all-star company this week is headed by the Sisters Terry, clever vocalists, dancers, and baby mimics; Violet Gerald is a charming comedienne; Brook and Bond, in a burlesque military act, A Raw Recruit, introduce a capital display of boxing, fencing, &c.; and Carlton and Hill, comedy acrobats, do well as tumbling specialists.

MOTHERWELL.—New Century Theatre.—Business-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wright.—Mrs. F. Wybert Clive's company is here this week in The Outcast of the Family. Mr. Jack McCaig is good in the name-part; Mr. Bert Oates plays the villainous nephew in a manner that earns for him the hearty hisses of the gallery, his companion in villainy being ably impersonated by Miss Maud Leslie Cudd, who appears as Grace Redburn. Mr. Edward W. Cudd is an amusing Wosper, and Mr. Tom Roydan certainly looks the part of the Blacksmith. Ruth finds a sympathetic exponent in Miss Elsie Shelton, Nancy Bray being prettily played by Miss Freda Beckett.

NEATH.—New Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint; Manager, Mr. Arthur Noice; Musical Directors, Mr. G. T. Hutchins and Mr. A. T. Robinson.—Mr. Dickie Clare's musical comedy company in Lucky 'Liza is drawing good houses this week. Miss Vesta Brownie as Lucky 'Liza is a success; Mr. Dickie Clare as Silas Slim, the Judge and the French Waiter, keeps the house in roars of laughter; Messrs. T. W. Benson and Mr. Harry George are excellent in their respective parts as barristers; Miss Rosie Coyne admirably sustains Verginia Blatherwick; Miss Helen Douglas delightfully represents Mary Pettitoe; and the fine singing of Miss Evelyn Wood in the character of Sadie Potts is loudly applauded. The Jesmond Trio give a clever display in acrobatic dancing.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint; Manager, Mr. Arthur Noice.—An interesting picture, Italian Cavalry, wins applause, and an exciting subject, The Eagle and Eaglette, is well received, followed by an amusing series—Dr. Growquick's Powders, The Deputy Barber, Soap, and Bubbles of Truth. Field and Lewis are popular comedians, and the Australian Bush Boys are smart singers and dancers. Mr. Chas. Thorne is responsible for musical selections.

NELSON.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. W. C. Horner; Manager, Mr. Parker.—Mr. C. H. Lester's Life for a Life company is here this week. The company includes Mr. Paul Neville as Kit Oswald, and Mr. Hugh Travers in the rôle of Pedro Li Colei, both of whom give convincing impersonations. Miss Dorothy Riddell makes a charming Kate Evelyn, and Miss Beatrice Anderson faithfully portrays the sufferings of Eulalie. Wee Winnie Warden is exceedingly smart as Venette. Some powerful acting is done by Mr. Lester as Don Leon Fernandez, and the humour of the play is admirably sustained by Mr. Sam Roberts and Miss Marie Ault.

Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Benson; Manager, Mr. J. S. Livesey.—The programme here is headed by Roxbury's musical mélange in three scenes, The Prince of Monte Carlo. There is a full comic opera chorus, and in the rôle of P.C. Longfellow Mr. Tubby Edlin causes constant hilarity. The one-act play Olga's Oath is presented by a powerful company, which includes the talented actress Miss Zerlina Harrington. In Maurin's marvellous fountains 20,000 gallons of water pour on the stage under powerful electric lights, and some beautiful effects are produced. Molly Watson is a comedienne with a good voice; Ambrose Barker, in his sketch, "Impressions of a Piano," sings and plays with ability; and McBride and Logie, as Canadian lumbermen, do some clever acrobatic work.

NEW BRIGHTON.—Winter Gardens.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Jones and Douglass.—This week the theatre is packed to witness the production of The Walls of Jericho, played by Mr. Silvanus Dauncey and Mr. Hanworth Browning's No. 1 company, which includes Mr. Ethelbert Edwards, Mr. Russell Barry, Mr. F. Stoney, Mr. H. Browning, Miss Gwendoline Hay, Miss Florence Steventon, and Miss Hilda Barita in the principal parts.

Tower.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. R. H. Davy.—There was a large audience at the Sunday concert, when Cavalier Rabottini and his band appeared. This week animated pictures and some variety turns are submitted. Lyn and Leslie are funny in a sketch, The Insurance Agent. Vic. Land and the Lawsons also appear each afternoon and evening and give every satisfaction.

Pier Pavilion.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Adeler, Sutton, and Allandale.—Variety is submitted and the artists include Mr. Jack Hylton, Mr. Frank Weaver, the Lysando Brothers, Mr. Barney Stuart, Messrs. Lytton and De Sylva, Messrs. Kendrick and Laura, and others.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Resident-Manager, Mr. Teale Lingham.—Miss Horniman's company is here this week, and on Monday Bernard Shaw's Candida was staged. Mr. Ian Maclaren gives a particularly strong rendition of the difficult rôle of the Rev. James Mavor Morell; Miss Rosalind Ivan in the title-rôle has a captivating and graceful style; Marchbanks is in the capable hands of Mr. Leonard Mudie; Mr. Ernest C. Cassel makes the most of his opportunities as the Rev. Alexander Hill; and Mr. Whitford Kane is well placed as Burgess. Miss Louise Holbrook is amusing in her capital study of Proserpine Garnett. The piece is preceded by a one-act play, entitled The Troth. Mr. Arnold Bennett's play, Cupid and Commonsense, was staged on Tuesday before a crowded house.

Tyne Theatre and Opera House.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred C. Sutcliffe.—The Best People, by Mr. Frederick Lonsdale, is paying its first visit to Tyneside, and, judging by its reception, seems to have met with public approval. Lord Emsworth is cleverly impersonated by Mr. Henry Renouf; Mr. Frederick Meads is vigorous as the Hon. Gerald Bayle; Miss Evelyn Summers is an interesting Mrs. Bayle; Miss Irene Lavington makes a refined and charming Lady Emsworth. Mr. Claude Haviland makes the most of his opportunities as Lord Wynlea, and Messrs. E. J. Trollope and Edward Nimmo capably depict their respective parts. The piece is preceded by an amusing sketch entitled Some Showers, by Pett Ridge.

Palace Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. W. Rowe; Business-Manager, Mr. Edwin B. Clark.—Will Glaze's company, No Mother to Guide Her, is the attraction here. Mr. William Heilbron is a capable Rev. Tom Pelham; Mr. Bernard J. Lieli infuses considerable power into the rôle of Felix Campbell; Mr. Frederick Biron gives a capital character study as Bill Bunce; the Bob Coleman of Mr. Will Glaze could scarcely be improved upon; Mr. George Gormley is a pleasing William Saxby; and Mr. Charles Addison plays effectively as John Smart. Miss Roma Pendrous is a refined Millicent Saxby; Miss Betty Seymour an excellent Nan; and Miss Georgette Thierry acts the difficult part of Julia Patterson in capital style.

Empire Theatre.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Parham Wells; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. W. Kilgour.—A prominent position here is allotted to the popular comedienne, Ella Shields, whose appearance on the stage is the signal for a storm of applause. Charles his Friend is the title of a capital sketch, presented by Courtice Pounds and company; the Poluskis, comedians, cause much mirth; Campbell and Barber are clever acrobatic comedy cyclists; Ricardo and Salving score in a novelty acrobatic act; Rosa Loader is responsible for an amusing musical sketch (written by herself); Daisy Martell, comedienne, is a dainty singer of dainty songs; Harry Weldon, comedian, has some good songs; and Will Johnson, comedian, and the Bioscope conclude.

Pavilion.—Proprietors The Pavilion (Newcastle), Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Frank D. Todd.—The place of honour is this week held by Dr. Wilmar's Spirit Paintings, which, as presented by Mr. P. T. Selbit, are quite an uncanny attraction; Chas. Preile's Bijou Circus is an original performing dog act; the Three Dixons prove themselves to be vocalists and dancers of exceptional ability; Herbert Sheath's company is seen to advantage in an entertaining sketch, entitled Her Ladyship's Guest; Burns and Bentley are capital comedians and dancers; Hanid Alexander, an entertainer at the piano, receives a cordial welcome; Carlotta Levey is appearing in her latest successes, including "Dear Old Pals"; the Friscos, musical mimics, are amusing; Gwilym T. Evans is a tenor of considerable ability; and Julian Mack, the talkative dame, and pictures complete.

Grand Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Linney.—The management have this week adopted the two-shows-a-night system, and the entertainment provided appears to be much appreciated. Rozel gives a sensational rope-walking act; George Sheldon's company is seen to advantage in a sketch entitled Before the Dawn. The pictures, as usual, form an important part of the programme.

Olympia.—Lessee, Mr. Sydney Bacon; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—This hall now ranks as one of the best picture theatres in the North of England, and excellent programmes are being submitted weekly.

Brinkburn Electric Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. T. McHary; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. T. Edminson.—The Leonas are appearing here in their gorgeous electrical musical act. There are also the usual up-to-date pictures.

NORTHAMPTON.—The Palace Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Samson and McNeil, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. H. G. Griffin.—Lily Belle is applauded for her clever and pretty barefoot dancing, and the Six Spanish Juanitos return with their smart and novel acrobatic feats. Other items are furnished by Amy Lloyd, a smart young serio; Nash and Nash, comedians; Bert Elmore and Amy Evans in a comedy duo; Will Penn, a comedian with a good style; the Saxones in a musical act; Lardan and Iris, vocalists and smart dancers; the Palace pictures; and Mr. H. G. Brandon and company in the dramatic episode Thrown on the World.

Temperance Hall.—Andrews's Pictures, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Lyndon.—The Pathe Journal shadows forth a good idea, The Folkestone Beauty Show, and the rest of the pictures are good. Miss Leslie Moyser sings sweetly songs illustrated with appropriate slides.

The County Electric Pavilion.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Lyle Edwards.—This theatre is keeping up its reputation for good films.—The Forest Rangers and The Gold Rose are first among the dramatics whilst Pearl Fishing and Harvesting in Canada are highly instructive.

Picture Palace.—Proprietors, Messrs. J. F. Bentley.—The programme here includes The Boss of Bar Z Ranch, The Lust of Gold, and Love's Stratagem, which are well received. There are also some good comics.

NORTH SHIELDS.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—Miss Ida Millais's company with No Man's Land has been heartily greeted here this week. As Harry Oaklands Mr. Phil Harper presents an excellent study of the character; Mr. Edwin Bennett gives a clever performance of Silas Moore; Mat Marsden finds a capital exponent in Mr. Villiers Stanley; Mr. Fred Lillywhite is seen to advantage in the dual rôle of Gilbert and Norman Bathurst; Mr. W. Mallanieu is well suited as Dr. Buxton; Mr. Edward Adams ably impersonates Owen Rushton; and Mr. Reginald J. Hamer makes the most of the part of Thompson Poodle. As Mary Bathurst Miss Marie Kildare wins general approval; Mrs. William Mallanieu is good as Mrs. Poodle; and Mr. Sammy Foster as Solomon Jacobs and Miss Lottie Pearce as Bessie Poodle are responsible for much hearty laughter.

Central Palace.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. William Mould.—Nellie Coleman, the female comedian, tops the bill here, and comes in for a hearty reception; the Craggs present a smart gymnastic act; Les Napiers are clever Continental entertainers; Clive and Vera in their speciality act, The Squire and the Dairymaid, receive quite an ovation; May Simmonds is a pleasing comedienne; Sassy and Wally, duettists and dancers, are much enjoyed; Fagan and Mahone are loudly applauded for their novelty act; and the Bioscope, with some interesting pictures, complete the programme.

NORTHWICH.—Central Theatre.—Manageress Miss S. Golden.—The attraction this week is Mr. Graham Arthur's company in The Mockery of Marriage. Dick Kenyon, in the hands of Mr. Ernest Wingfield, is an interesting performance; Jack Stanley as presented by Mr. G. Porteous is a manly presentation; Mr. Lowe Mackenzie does full justice to the villainies of Seth Pearse; and Mr. Joe Barker is a typical nigger as Old Pete. The characters of Mary Ann Barnicot and Toby Jones are the essence of humour as depicted by Miss Jennie Clare and Mr. Dal Phillips respectively; Miss Violet Wingfield is a natural and fascinating Rose Verham; and the Alva Kenyon of Miss Lilian Beaumont is pre-eminent.

NORWICH.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Manager, Mr. Fred Morgan.—Mr. George Edwardes's company, playing The Merry Widow, with Miss Phyllys le Grand in the title-rôle, is billed for the latter half of the week.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—Jan Rudenyi, the famous actor-violinist, supported by Mr. Drew Mackintosh and Miss Hilda Stewart, in a one-act play entitled A Storm, heads the bill and is much appreciated; Miss Kitty Collier, clever comedienne and expert dancer, is well received; Mlle. Sarema and her wonderful trained troupe of monkeys, dogs, and cats give a pleasing performance; Florence Esdaile is heartily greeted for her excellent singing; Stevens and Brett are capital burlesque entertainers; Austen Temple, assisted by Irene Vincent, present some mystifying tricks; Stella Austral, in a refined drawing-room entertainment, is well received; Don Wade, as a droll comedian and mimic, creates much fun; and the pictures complete an excellent programme.

The Nest, Rosary Road.—On Friday last Miss Cissie Scott took her benefit, and received hearty support from numerous friends. Messrs. Goodman's Premier Pierrots have established themselves in favour.

NOTTINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—Mr. Charles Harrington's combination in Uncle Tom's Cabin is here. Mr. J. H. Boem plays Uncle Tom in quiet style; Mr. Harrington acts the kindly Phineas Fletcher with good effect; as Legree Mr. Tom Bowron is amply cruel and vindictive; Mr. Frank Lynne interprets St. Clair with taste; and Eric Williams makes an energetic George Harris. A sympathetic embodiment of Eva is supplied by Miss Norah Bretton; Miss Annie Watson is vastly amusing as Topsy; and good work is done by Miss Sylvia Harrington (Eliza Harris), Miss Ethel Vernon (Aunt Ophelia), and Miss Hetty Johnson (Cassy).

Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Harry J. Crane.—An excellent company, under the auspices of Mr. Tom H. Taylor, presents here A Criminal's Bride. Mr. Frank Robertson submits a charming picture of an English gentleman as Sir Harry Felstead, and Miss Maud Tremaine is a winsome Kitty Felstead; Mr. Annesley Hely is thoroughly villainous as Austin Deepdale, and Mr. Harry T. Butler puts in good work as Archie Ravenscourt; Mr. Grayson Bancroft possesses histrionic gifts which he uses to the full extent as David Loseby, and the study of a Scotland Yard detective by Mr. J. Templar Ellis is commendable. Miss Emmie Barton is seen to advantage as Lavinia Loseby, and Miss Ella Willmer is to be congratulated on her representation of an Italian girl. Mr. Herbert Belmore is also happy in his conception of an Italian; while Mr. George Brentwood and Mr. Harvey Walton both deserve the success they achieve.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—Mr. Raymond Phillips's airship is the centre of interest here, the marvellous invention keeping audiences deeply interested. A screamingly funny sketch, The First of April, is presented by Tom Foy and his company; the versatile talent of Cull Pitt brings him hearty applause; Mitchell and Cain patter themselves into favour; the comedy specialty of the Brothers Durant is highly amusing; the vivacity of Ella Retford makes her many friends; Kathleen Gray sings pleasantly; and the comicalities of George Wilson are rewarded.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—Mysticus presents a really mysterious performance of conjuring, spirit photography, &c., which is distinctly novel and interesting; a capital musical entertainment by the Seven Bramusas is received with marked approval; the fooling of Syd Walker creates spontaneous laughter; Robb Gilmore's acrobatic feats deserve warm praise; an amusing playlet, Next Please, is given by the Brothers Ashley; Maxwell and Frances, in a vocal scena, are keenly appreciated; and items are also introduced by Lily Palmer, dancer; The Unites, trampoline performers; and Marguerite Ismay and girls in a vocal and dancing interlude.

King's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Edgar O. Waller.—The animated pictures retain their popularity here, and songs are brightly rendered by Little Doris Druce and Mr. F. L. Hearnshaw.

NUNEATON.—Prince of Wales's.—Proprietors, Theatre and Entertainments Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brown.—Mr. C. Watson Mills's company is presenting The Lore of a Princess. Mr. Frank Harvey makes a dashing Prince Conrad; Mr. Cyprian H. Matthews is a powerful Count Danilo; Mr. John Burton gives a clever portrayal of King Josef; Mr. Oscar Power acquits himself well as Prince Regent of Narava; Mr. Francis Searle as Duke Scarfe creates plenty of amusement; Mr. Edgar Morgan is good as Boris; Miss May Beatrice plays in the title-rôle with great success; Miss Maud Steeple is charming as Lady Irene; and Miss Josephine Lee effectively portrays Constantia.

OLDHAM.—Grand Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Kilrow.—This theatre has reopened after being closed for a long vacation, the holiday attraction being Messrs. Wentworth Croke, Milton Bode, and Edward Compton's company in The Bishop's Son. Mr. Derwent Hall Caine as Daniel Mylrea had a capital reception; Mr. Julian Cross as Deemster Mylrea acted forcibly; and Mr. W. F. Grant as Gilchrist Mylrea, the Bishop, gave a fine portrayal. Mr. Matthew Boulton as the passionate Ewan did well; Miss Verita Vivien played Mona in a charming manner; and Miss Agnes Knights as Kerry was excellent. Mr. George Mudie, jun., acted cleverly as Davy Fayle; and Mr. E. W. Thomas as Hommy-beg was amusing.

Colosseum Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—A fine holiday attraction has been provided this week by Messrs. Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's company in The Prince and the Beggar Maid. Miss Miriam Prichett plays Monica in a charming manner; Mr. G. Mayor-Cooke is an interesting Prince Hildred; Mr. Lionel Gadsden a satisfactory Prince Michael; and Mr. Ernest Cox an excellent Prince Olaf. Mr. F. D. Davies made a manly Captain Hector; Miss Jessica Black was a fascinating Viola; Miss F. Hale-Daviss a good Camolia; Mr. Adam Alexander acted well as the Bishop; and Mr. C. V. Sandford was smart as Lieut. Carl Stromberg. Mr. Fred Upton being effective as the dumb servant Nathan.

Empire Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—The Midnight Mail, played by Messrs. Dottridge and Longden's company, has been much enjoyed. Mr. George Harvard made the most of his part of Harry Steyne; and Mary Steyne was played in a capital manner by Miss Trissie Humphreys. Mr. Henry W. Hatchman as Leonard Royle was satisfactory; Mr. Frank S. Strickland made a good Hassan Padisha; Mr. Fred G. Evison as Billy Brewer was highly amusing; and Miss Mildred Carr did well as Nancy Brewer. Miss Jennie Weston made an effective Lady Phyllis.

Royal Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. Leach.—A capital bill is shown here, The Secret of the Glaciers being a fine dramatic picture. Bootle's Baby is a charming love story, and is much enjoyed. Scenes and Sights of London are depicted most realistic, and are well worth seeing. Not to be Hoodwinked and Oh! That Tonic are most amusing. Other pictures are shown. Mr. R. Leach sings "Anchored."

Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. L. King.—Another Wild West is the top-liner, The Range Riders, and is full of dramatic episodes. A Child's Impulse is also very good. Pathé's Journal is very interesting. The comedy films include Foolshead as a Chauffeur and A Quiet Boarding House. Mr. King contributes an illustrated song.

OXFORD.—New Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. C. C. Dorrill; Assistant-Manager, Mr. G. T. Lucas.—This is the fifth week of Milton Bode's variety season here, and so successful has it been that on Monday night hundreds were unable to gain admission. The programme again is first-class, with not a weak turn in it. Harry Tate's company, in the screaming absurdity Motoring, heads the bill, and other most successful turns are contributed by Belle Gorton, a most charming American comedienne; Happy Attwood, very droll and amusing in songs and stories; the Emsons, a pair of fascinating comediennes and dancers; Bennett and Martell, very funny in their eccentricity Shipwrecked Mariners; Johnny Fuller, in his clever cat act on the wire; and Bert Davis, a capital ballad vocalist. The Premier Imperial Bioscope Pictures conclude a programme that meets with universal approval. Mr. W. L. Murray is very popular here as Mr. Bode's manager.

East Oxford Theatre.—Lessees, East Oxford Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Messrs. Glenville and Elliston's company is fulfilling a week's engagement here with The Wicked City. Mr. Harwood Cooper enacts the rôle of Harold Vereker with considerable verve; while Mr. Fellows Bassett is a typical villain as Paul Desmond, and is ably assisted by Mr. J. H. Manley as Silas Sefton. Mr. Tait does well as Dr. Strangways; and Mr. Clements is very quaint and amusing as Charlie Chance. Miss E. Wallace sustains Cora Despard most creditably; and Miss Lorna Treherne is sympathetic as Doris Grant. Miss Katie Norris is a very sprightly Clementina Spikes, and in conjunction with Silas keeps the audience in merry mood; while Miss F. Halton is a decided acquisition as Victoria McCleary.

PAISLEY.—Paisley Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—The ever-popular Charley's Aunt is proving a great draw, being well presented by Mr. Brandon Thomas's company. Mr. Hugh Wakefield as Lord Fancourt Babberley is extremely funny, especially in his interpretation of the "aunt." Mr. Francis Drake makes a breezy Jack Cheesney; as Charles Wykeham Mr. Robert Burnett affords the utmost satisfaction; Mr. Theo McCausland Stewart gains deserved favour as Col. Sir Francis Chesney; Stephen Spettigue is admirably portrayed by Mr. Henry Hare; and Mr. Sydney Compton gives a distinctive rendering of Brassett; Miss Ruth Henton as Kitty Verdun plays sweetly; as does also Miss Phyllis Back as Amy Spettigue. Miss Audrey Stafford makes an excellent Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez; and Miss Janet Gillette successfully fills the part of Ela Delahay. The comedy is preceded by The Lancashire Sailor.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jack R. Bostock.—The management here have made a decided hit by securing Cavalier Rabottini, the renowned Italian composer and conductor, with his international band of thirty skilled musicians, who furnish an exceedingly attractive turn. A comedy skit, Dick Whittington, by The Whittakers, is one of the best things in the programme; F. W. Nash and T. H. Noel, versatile comedians, meet with instantaneous approval; Amy Anderson and company submit their hilarious comedy scena, Black and White; Edwards and Edwards give a smart dancing and musical entertainment; R. C. Note scores as a light comedian and chorus singer; an up-to-date comedian, with good songs, Charles Rothwell provides merriment; and the Hippodrome Bioscope, with a series of new pictures, completes the bill.

PEMBROKE DOCK.—Queen's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Tom Barger; Business-Manager, Mr. Norman Barger.—Scottie and his variety combine are here this week. The programme includes the military episode Napoleon at Waterloo, in which Mr. Scott-Alexander makes up well as the Man of Destiny. Freda and Frank give a good exhibition of acrobatic dancing and club swinging; Miss Lena Lewis sings well, and is a great favourite; Sandy and Ramsay are successful with their patter and dancing; Jean Kram, comic juggler, proves a capital fun-maker; the sporting novelty, Whizzing the Whirl, is a great attraction; Will Warren, the soldier vocalist, is the possessor of a good voice; and an excellent programme is much enhanced by the summer pantomime, Androcles and the Lion, and Scottie's operatic ballet troupe in The Cry of the Children.

PENTRE.—Tivoli.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Will Stone; Resident-Manager, Mr. James Gunn.—An attractive picture programme is given, which results in good business.

Workmen's Hall.—Manager, Mr. H. Salway.—Crowded audiences attended here on Monday, to celebrate the reopening of this popular house of entertainment. The handsome sum of £676 has been handed over to local charities by the management since the first opening.

PENZANCE.—St. John's Hall.—A large and appreciative audience awaited a fine programme here on Friday, the 26th ult., the particular attraction being Mr. Albert Chevalier, who is renewing a popularity already well established in this neighbourhood. In addition to some of his well-known songs and sketches, Mr. Chevalier sang two new numbers, "Right as ninepence" and "The Mile End-road," in his inimitable style, both being enthusiastically applauded. Mr. Chevalier was assisted by Miss Tresilian Davy, who has a charming voice, and Mr. J. C. Holliday, an excellent accompanist, who also played several of his own clever compositions. On Monday evening Mr. Joseph Poole's myriorama and entertainers opened a fortnight's engagement here before a crowded house, and it is quite customary for packed houses to extend over the fortnight. The entertainment is one of the best of its kind ever seen here, and the house on Monday applauded from start to finish. In addition to the splendid pictorial representations Wun-Hi-Lung, the wizard of the Orient, gave a marvellous display; the Victas were clever in their barrel jumping feats; Les Wartanas are good lady jugglers; the Bros. Graham are responsible for some excellent hand-balancing; Eileen, May, and Little Francesca appear in their musical and dancing speciality, for which they are applauded; Johnny O'Rourke is amusing; Miss Fredrica's terriers and cake-walking pony are well trained; Bert Danson sings funny songs, which are appreciated. A number of splendid films show discretion and good taste on the part of the management. Mr. H. G. Berry makes a capital guide, and the orchestra is ably conducted by Mr. W. A. Abbey.

Alexandra Grounds.—The Queer Quakers are doing good business here. On Tuesday evening Mr. McCall Chambers, their humorist, took his benefit and a capital programme was gone through. He is a great favourite here. Miss Lily Pritchard was most successful, especially so in her number "Julia."

PETERBOROUGH.—Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Manager, Mr. Percy Hart.—The principal attraction here this week is R. V. Webb's septette of soloists in "Notions," in which a musical treat is accompanied by most elaborate electrical effects and setting. The Two Dandies are clever dancers; Verona Phillis, vocalist and dancer, is warmly greeted; the Sisters Lawler, duettists and dancers, are loudly applauded; Tanten Hall, comedian, scores well; Arno, the humorist chimpanzee, does a clever turn; and the Haydons, in their screaming success, Bertie and the Barmaid, create much laughter. The Karnoscope completes the programme.

PLYMOUTH.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—Tantalizing Tommy is here this week. In the title-rôle Miss Nellie Lonnen is the life and soul of the piece, and adds considerably to her reputation by her captivating performance; as James Cottenham Mr. Hastings Lynn is responsible for a realistic representation of a Government official; Mr. Ambrose Flower gives a clever version of the part of the self-satisfied and egotistical artist, Harry Killick; Mr. Roy Byford is genuinely amusing as the hale and hearty Thomas H. Pepper; and Mr. E. R. Hollway correctly delineates the reserved "chief." Eustace Jathem. Miss Eva Brickwell is admirable as the servant, Bertha. The curtain-raiser is Collaborators, in which the honours are shared by Miss Margaret Stuart and Mr. Olaf Hytten.

Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—The Harvey Boys are on a return visit here, and their patter and general business are very amusing; Mr. Wilson Hallett is realistic in some character-sketches; Miss Amelie de l'Enclos provides a high-class vocal number; the Three Warmingtons showed wonderful agility in a turn brimful of smartness; the Rangers entertain with some clever trick cycling; Mr. Fred Hastings provides a diverting matrimonial number; and the Darntons are a couple of pleasing vocalists. Jury's Bioscope films are as good as ever.

PONTEFRACT.—Alexandra Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee, Mr. George Tankard.—The patrons here are delighted with Joan Deering, the Gainsborough Girl, a speciality vocalist and violinist; Mr. A. de Bessel is an excellent clay modeller; Tom Herman presents a naval and military spectacle, For King and Country, in which fifty local children appear; Alice Gill, contralto and Tyrolean vocalist, finds favour with her selections; J. H. McCann, acrobatic roller-skate dancer, pays a return visit; Wee Madge is a charming Scotch comedienne and dancer; Mons. Eugeneo is a clever trapeze equilibrist and balancer; and other turns are the Whimsical Warners, in a musical entertainment; Vi Maylott, comedienne; and the Alexscope.

PORTH.—Palace Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. W. Smithson; Manager, Mr. J. W. Bynorth.—Greater Love is presented by Mr. H. Armitage; Mr. Campbell Goldsmid plays Paul Penfold, the martyr; Mr. Stanley Bedwell gives an able study of Jack May; and Mr. Dennis Bryan is responsible for good work as Andrew Isted. Mr. Algernon J. Hicks in the rôle of the Rev. A. Warren proves himself a sterling actor; and Mr. Wentworth Lawson puts in good work as Constable Drayton. Mr. Albert Campbell as Ned Stubbs deserves special mention; Mrs. May is carefully delineated by Miss Marion Fawcett; and Mary May finds an excellent exponent in Miss Francesca Strickland. Miss Ethel Russell as Sarah Higgs is very funny.

PORTSMOUTH.—Royal.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur A. Horner.—The Dawn of a To-morrow, presented by Messrs. Wentworth Croke, Milton Bode, and Edward Compton's company, is on its first visit here. The cheery Glad is a conspicuous success as impersonated by Miss Marie Polini; Bet is ably characterised by Miss Alice Dorie; and the fallen Polly has a capable exponent in Miss Dora Clements. Mr. Fred Victor successfully realises the nerve-stricken capitalist, Sir Oliver Holt; his debased nephew Oliver being well played by Mr. Charles King. Mr. W. Kershaw displays ability as Dandy; a likely Jem is seen in Mr. Henry Compton; Mr. George West does well as the butler Powell; and the three specialists are portrayed by Messrs. Chas. Dering, Murray Hathorn, and James Williams with skill. Mr. Paul Wynter is an effective Lord Tommy Dartmore.

Prince's.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Agate.—When London Sleeps is being produced this week by Lester Collingwood's company. Mr. Geo. B. Dalper makes a suitable David Engleheart, and is well aided by Miss Mabel Scudamore as Queenie Carruthers. Miss Cissie St. Elmo is an impressive Hilda Carode, and an excellent Mrs. Joncsio is Miss Lottie Lonsdale. The part of Captain Rodney Haynes is well taken by Mr. Kenneth Norbury; and much humour is provided by Mr. Harry Cooke as Sammy Blythe.

Barrasford, Sley, and Wilmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Leo Weisker.—Tom Davies' Trio are creating much excitement by their daring motoring in mid-air; the sketch Wrong 'Uns is effectively acted by James Hare and company; Carmen and Redwin are very entertaining in their musical efforts; and Francis and Alfred are smart and amusing jugglers. Richard Fineberg is excellent in character study; Bert Rayburn is funny and much applauded; and the Zelorss' acrobatic feats are much appreciated.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—Married to the Wrong Man has been played here this week. Mr. Henry Lonsdale makes a manly Jack Gladwin; in the character of Captain Deering Mr. George Arthur acts effectively; Sergeant Manners has a capable representative in Mr. W. Pemberton; and Jasper Skinner is ably portrayed by Mr. Leonard Thackeray. Miss Mary Pemberton acts with marked ability and power as Ruth and Miss Clara Milrain is most successful as Rose O'Connor.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.—Mr. Raynor and his excellent company have had a gratifying welcome upon their first visit here, their capital representations of Jim the Penman being followed with interest by large audiences. Mr. Milton C. Curtis impersonates James Ralston with much skill; Mr. Joseph B. Montague displays merit as Baron Hartzfeldt; Louis Percival is admirably portrayed by Mr. Charles Brandon; and Captain Redwood is ably presented by Mr. Raynor. Miss Cecilia Dare acts with grace and charm as Nina Ralston, and Miss Dora Dench makes a charming Agnes Ralston.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—CASTLE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Imeson.—Mr. Leedham Bantock and Mr. Frederick Mouillot's company is here with the amusing farce These Terrible Twins. Mr. Bantock is capital in his original part, William, and is well supported. The farce is preceded each evening by The Lady Burglar.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton.—The Kellinos head the bill here with their rieley production, entitled On the Road. The Keebles give a pretty novelty act; Harry Leybourne is a capital study in feminine foibles; De Vere and Ward have a good comedy act; Dixie Dee is a dainty comedienne; Smith and Gibbs are fine equilibrists; and Jack Warman, comedian, also contributes.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—Mr. M. Montgomery starts his second week here with the drama The Lion's Heart. Mr. Stanley S. Gordon makes an excellent Rizardo; Mr. Geoff Sutherland plays the part of Dick Lorimore to advantage; and Miss Nina Vaughton is a charming Marian.

STOKE.—THE HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will. A. Jackson.—A Woman's Past, presented by Messrs. Clifford Hamilton and Chas. Locke's company is proving a popular attraction. The acting of Mr. Chas. Locke as Frank Delaunoy is a feature of the production; Miss Dora Pass is pleasing as Bessie; and all in the cast work hard to make the piece a success.

STOURBRIDGE.—ALHAMBRA.—General-Manager, Mr. Douglas C. Phelps.—Dnoe, or the Mysterious Bedroom, a mystifying illusion, heads the bill. Les Wambas are quite smart; Clarence Turner is a comedian of great merit; Venturini does some clever conjuring tricks; the Mosaics, in a capital sketch called Wallpaper, keep the audience in roars of laughter; La Belle Lily and Albert are experts on the trapeze. The pictures are well chosen and clearly projected.

SUNDERLAND.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. S. F. Davidson; General-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Townrow.—The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company is here, and the house is crowded each evening. On Monday night The Mikado was played with great success. Mr. Fred Billington surpassed himself as Poo-Bah, and his quaint humour was keenly enjoyed. Mr. Henry Herbert was excellent as Nanki-Poo, and Ko-Ko was ably done by Mr. Henry A. Lytton. A capital portrayal of the Mikado was given by Mr. Leicester Tunks; Miss Marjorie Stone was a charming and captivating Yum-Yum; and Miss Beatrice Boarer gave a pretty rendering of Pitti-Sing. Miss Myfanwy was a capable Peep-Bo; Miss Louie Rene gave a fitting portrayal of Katisha; and Messrs. Fred Drawater and Sydney Granville did meritorious work as Go-to and Pish-Tush respectively. Patience was played on Tuesday night. The opera with its charming music is still a delightful and attractive work. Miss Marjorie Stour was an ideal representative of the title-rôle, acting with much charm and excelling in vocalism. Miss Beatrice Boarer as Lady Angela and Miss Anna Bethel as Lady Saphir both acted well and sang with feeling; and Miss Louie Reene played Lady Jane to the life. Mr. Hy. A. Lytton made an amusing Bunthorne, and Mr. Leicester Tunks as Grosvenor sang well. The three cavalry officers were ably represented by Messrs. Sydney Granville, Alan Morris, and Stratford Moss; and Miss Hilda Cross was excellent as Lady Ella. The members of the chorus acquitted themselves admirably. The Gondoliers, H.M.S. Pinafore, Trial by Jury, and Yeomen of the Guard are also in the bill.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dunn.—Mr. G. Carlton Wallan's company is playing here this week in A Thief in the Night. Miss Florence Dalton gives a finished rendering of the exacting rôle of Joan Escombe; Little Doris shows much promise as Little Joan; and Miss Edith Watkins is good as Susan. Mr. Alfred Goddard gives a masterly performance of Alan Escombe. Villainy is capably portrayed by Miss Beatrice Nomer (Sonia Cleeve), Messrs. Leyton Cancellor (Michael Pagani) and C. Alan Nineson (Crake), all of whom do justice to their parts. The humour is in the excellent hands of Mr. Bert Atherton and Miss Jennie Hallworth, who create considerable amusement.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Hy. Esden.—The Brothers Diavolezz are making a huge hit here with some clever trick cycling; Bob King, comedian and whistler, is also popular. The principal film is a fine dramatic item entitled Apache Gold.

PALACE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Archer Hamilton.—Yamamoti and Koyoshi are giving a brilliant equilibristic act here with much success. Manda presents "Bute," the sagacious canine wonder; and another excellent item is that of Geo. Payne's Wanderers in a pretty caravan scena. The pictures are up to the usual high standard.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—The Gothams, humorous quartette, are giving great pleasure here with their ever-popular harmonious item; the stud of ponies of Miss Marquis give evidence of much careful training; Bert Harrow's humour suits the public taste, and earns for him enthusiastic applause; My Fancy makes a tremendous hit in her original dancing scena; the Seven Perezoffs are popular with their comic juggling pantomime; Harry Marte wins favour with his song and dance; and Lena Verdi scores in song and mimicry.

SWINDON.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wiltshire Entertainments Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Manners.—The fantastic comedy Niobe is successfully staged here by Mr. C. Macdona's company. Mr. Macdona is humorous to a degree as Peter Dunn; Mr. C. Steuart gives a natural performance of Cornelius Griffin; Mr. C. T. Chapman well represents Phillip Innings; Hamilton Tompkins is capably portrayed by Mr. C. L. Delph; Miss R. Beresford is a satisfactory Caroline Dunn; Miss C. Fenton enacts Helen Griffin to prefection; Hattie is pleasingly rendered by Miss J. Southern; Miss G. Hardinge is admirably suited to the part of Beatrice Sillocks; and Niobe is cleverly depicted by Miss K. Connaught.

COUNTY ELECTRIC PAVILION.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur E. Melborne.—The programme includes films of Industries of Cochin China, The Bandit's Wife, The Range Riders, The Soap Bubbles of Truth, Secret of the Glacier, in addition to the song-pictures.

TODMORDEN.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Richard Dewhirst.—Miss Augusta Tullock's company opened here on Monday with Judith. Miss Tullock played the title-part with consummate skill; Mr. Alec Young appeared to advantage as Jack Carrington; Mr. Ed. Vivian was an effective Eugene Darville; Mr. L. Hugh handled the rôle of Silas Norris creditably; Mr. Wm. De Lacy was an amusing Percy Hogg; Miss Rose Watson a good Bill Scamp; Miss Dorothea Vivian an interesting Hester Norris; and Maudie Green was ably enacted by Miss Amy Osbourne.

OLYMPIA PICTURE PALACE.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs. A. and H. Andrews; Manager, Mr. Chas. Tyers.—The bill here includes Indian Blood and a fine detective story, entitled A Scarlet Clue. Paymaster is another drama, and Champion Wrestlers appeals to the sporting fraternity. Mr. Chas. Tyers's illustrated songs command success.

TONYPANDY.—ROYAL.—General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth.—Mr. Arthur Leigh's company is here in Lucky Durham. Mr. E. Kennedy is capitally suited as John Durham; the Lord Mountfallon of Mr. W. Calvert is a convincing study; Mr. A. Leigh is exquisitely droll as the Hon. Reggie Steighton; the Mrs. Durham of Miss Nellie Bonser merits high praise; Miss Florence Tresillian acts with great sympathy, and makes a winsome Helen Vallerton.

HIPPODROME.—Lessees, the Tonypandy Hippodrome Co.; General-Manager, Mr. D. Taylor.—Heading a strong bill here is G. de Relwyskow, light-weight champion wrestler; the Four Mayos are clever comedy skaters; the Carlo Maie Trio provide great fun on the lawn; Bu Val, the happy Dutchman, is well received; Albert Silverstone, Connie Isca, Foy and Staples, and Clarice Sefton all contribute successful items. The leading picture is The Two Brothers.

EMPIRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Jno. Young.—Easily first here comes Percy Honri, in his colossal combine "Concordia," which proves an excellent attraction; Armand Penston, assisted by Miss San Go, is a master of mysteries; the Five Olracs are quaint yet clever acrobats; the Five May Girls, Lytton and Bland, the Sisters McFrey, and Harry Tomps meet with pleasing receptions.

TORQUAY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Alderman W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Mr. Ernest E. Norris is this week presenting The Education of Elizabeth, which is drawing large houses. Miss May Norris as Elizabeth portrays considerable charm in her handling of the part; Miss Emily Stevens does excellently as Blanche; and Miss Una Earle is also acceptable as Lucy Middleton. Mr. Herbert Garthorne appears as Harry Fairfax with success; whilst Mr. Fred Castleman makes a sinister Mr. Whitby. Mr. Ernest E. Norris is very amusing as Reggie Hankey.

PRINCESS PIER CONCERT HALL.—Proprietors, the Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—Mr. Wilson James's company, "The Euterpeans," are the attraction here this week, under the direction of Mr. Percy Watson. Miss Edith Payne possesses considerable charm as a soprano; Miss Margery Barrass, in giving some light songs at the piano, is also a favourite; Mr. Alfred Wood is a ventriloquist of ability; Mr. Herbert Spalding is decidedly funny; and Mr. Percy Watson is a delightful tenor.

TYLDESLEY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. W. Brierley.—Mr. F. G. Kimberley's company, in Two Little Drummer Boys, is a popular attraction here. Mr. Edward Bikker gives an excellent portrayal of General Kingsley; a finished study of Captain Frank Carsdale is submitted by Mr. T. Arthur Ellis; Mr. Polson Turner as Captain George Darrell provides a realistic piece of acting; Mr. Alfred Edwards shows ability in the part of Lieut. Allen Kingsley; Mr. Will Percy and Mr. A. Selwood as privates in the Warwicks are responsible for a great deal of merriment; Miss Maudie Douglas and Miss Maggie are worthy of praise as the Little Drummer Boys; Miss Violet Langley wins favour by her rendering of Alma Kingsley; Margaret Rivers is interpreted in a powerful manner by Miss Ada Champion; and Miss Patricia Connaughton is a lively Molly Meadows.

TYNEMOUTH.—PALACE.—Proprietors, Tynemouth Palace Co., Ltd.; General-Manager, Councillor Harold Arnold.—Ethel Arden and George Abel's comedy company is here this week in Three of a Kind. A novel and entertaining turn is contributed by Paul Vandy; Dora Barrington, assisted by Lesley Gray, presents an operatic song scena; Henriette and Selina are talented instrumentalists; W. G. Webber proves himself to be a bass of exceptional ability; Marco Duo, acrobats, perform some clever feats; and Frank White, coon singer, and the Pictures conclude.

VENTNOR.—PIER PAVILION.—This week The Queen's Courtiers are here. Miss Isabel Oliver gives some fine renderings of choice songs; and Mr. Hugh Stanhope has a sweet tenor voice which he uses with ability. Mr. Herbert Dickson and Miss Violet Lytton delighted the audience with their duets; and Mr. H. Heath is heartily applauded for his humorous items. Mr. Joe Cuningham officiates ably at the piano, and sings some clever songs.

WAKEFIELD.—OPERA HOUSE

company headed by Miss Kate Graham-Beck, who undertakes the parts of Juno and Black Domino. Mr. Lionel Yeoman as Timothy Twinkle is very funny; Miss Annie Brunette as Mrs. Marie Strong is good; and Miss Beatrice Earle as Lettie Stimson has a part admirably suited to her.

WEST HARTLEPOOL. — Grand Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Resident-Manager, Mr. Seaward.—A Royal Divorce has been played here on many occasions prior to this week, but lacks nothing in popularity. On Monday evening it had a capital reception. To say that Miss Edith Cole retains the rôle of Josephine is equivalent to saying that the character could not be better played. Her acting in the stronger parts is very effective. A realistic portrayal of the Emperor Napoleon is presented by Mr. Frank Bradley.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. F. Thompson.—Packed houses are assembling nightly to witness the performance of The Dollar Princess by Mr. Geo. Edwardes's company. The stage of the Empire is admirably adapted for this class of work, and the setting of the comedy calls forth the highest eulogiums nightly from delighted audiences. Mr. Fred. Leslie, so well remembered here for his excellent acting in the rôle of Danilo, is the Harry O'Conder, and in part fully maintains his reputation as an ideal musical comedy artist; Freddy Fairfax, who is responsible for some of the principal vocal numbers, is played by Mr. Alex. Worcester, and is repeatedly encored, especially for his duets with Alice, so charmingly played by Miss Kathleen Courtney; Olga has a capital representative in Miss Madeline Seymour. The "fun of the fair" is in the hands of Mr. Geo. Miller as Mr. Bulger; Miss Daisy Elliston is charmingly sweet in all she does as Daisy; Mr. W. Johnstone Douglas well sustains the rôle of John, Earl of Quorn; and Mr. Hugh Henson gives a good account of himself in the part of Dick.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — Knightstone Pavilion and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Mr. Oswald Cray's powerful company is here this week in When it was Dark. As the Rev. Basil Gortre Mr. Oswald Cray gives an interpretation that is artistic and dramatic; Mr. C. Wordley Hulse shows histrionic ability as Constantine Schwabe; Mr. Vincent W. Carlyle is sufficiently villainous as Sir Robert Llewellyn; Mr. Walter Manfree as the Rev. Mr. Byars is entitled to encomiums; and very praiseworthy is Mr. Halston Cummins as Mr. Ommaney; Mr. Hall Howells is richly humorous as the Hon. Charlie Gayfly; Miss Lilian Herries gives a very praiseworthy impersonation of Gertrude Hunt; whilst Miss Rosalie Astrelle is equally successful as Helena Byars; Miss Madeline Grande is chic as Gracie Goldeye.

Grand Pier Pavilion.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—Mr. Arthur Watson's company, in The Prince of the Dandies, is here for another week. Mr. Arthur Watson and Miss Flo Stanley are favourites as Sprouts and Daisy Highclass; Susie and Prottie are marvellous in their terpsichorean efforts; Judge's performing cockatoos are vociferously applauded; the Frohmans give an exceptionally good musical entertainment; the Rowntrees are clever comedy artists; and the Sisters La Blanche excel as duettists and dancers; another good turn is Mons. Jules Charmettes; Mr. Lambert shows some excellent pictures on the Bioscope.

WEST STANLEY. — Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Stanley Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Mark H. Lindon.—Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Kimberley's company is here with Her Secret Lover. As Gilbert Seymour Mr. Harry T. Wood is exceptionally good; as Capt. Darrell Rose Mr. Walter H. Wilson is well placed; John Strange is in the capable hands of Mr. Alfred Stretton; Mr. Frank Wheatley does full justice to the part of Mr. Murfield; and Mr. Victor Vernon as Billy Berly and Miss Lynn Darlington as Jane Maria Wilkes are responsible for the comedy element. Miss Flora Leslie is an effective Alicia Royale; and as Ivy Seymour Miss Laura Walker is the recipient of well-deserved applause.

Victoria Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes; Lessee, Mr. John Cottrell.—The variety artists engaged here this week are Doyle and Gibson, comedians and dancers; Willard's Original Merry Mannikins, and the Dancing Paceys, in a novel vocal and terpsichorean act.

WEYMOUTH.—Pavilion Theatre.—Manager, Mr. W. R. Wallis.—Mr. Geo. Dance's company is here in Our Miss Gibbs. Mr. Vincent Erne gave a fine representation of Timothy Gibbs, and created roars of laughter; Mr. J. Herbert Willis carefully sustained the part of the Hon. Hughie Pierpoint; Mr. J. S. Durant was very successful as Slithers; Miss Daisy Wallace was a delightful and charming Mary Gibbs; Miss Nan Stuart as Lady Betty gave a careful rendering of the part; and Miss Florence Hylton, Miss Laura Hansen, Miss Louie Beckmann, Mr. A. Gordon Begg, Mr. Frank Sealey, Mr. Douglas Phillips, Mr. David Miller, Mr. Eric A. Boyd, and Mr. Harry Dench, all contributed to the success of the performance.

WHITBY. — Spa Theatre. — Lessee, Mr. W. Payne Seddon. — Mr. Ernest Benham's company were here on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, in the comedy, Old Heidelberg, and had good houses. Mr. Owen Nares is successful as Karl Heinrich; and the rôle of Staalminister von Haugh is in the capable hands of Mr. Frank Powell. Mr. Walton supplies a clever portrayal of the rôle of Hofmarschall Frieherr von Passarge; Miss Florence Preddy as Frau Ruder and Miss Constance Groves as Frau Dorffell are successful; and Miss Kitty Recimer as Kathie portrays the rôle in a highly appreciative manner. All the remaining parts are in capable hands. On Thursday Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's No. 1 London company occupied the boards in Don.

The Electric Theatre has been well patronised during the week, some fine films being shown.

WHITEHAVEN.—New Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Falconer Jackes.—Mr. C. Watson Mill's company is here in A Wrecker of Men. Mr. A. S. Pitt appears to advantage as Jem Murley; and Mr. R. Bosco is good as Railton. Mr. Maurice Jones acts creditably as Isaacs; and Mr. Arthur Robinson makes a manly Guise. Mr. W. Medger is impressive as the Egyptian; and Mr. T. Carruthers makes the most of the part of Eric Melville. Miss Winifred Williard is pleasing as Doris; and Miss Ruth Zillwood is seen to advantage in the character of Risca Mallinson.

WHITLEY BAY.—The Pleasure Gardens, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Auguste A. Penlevé.—In the Theatre Royal an interesting and well diversified bill includes The Ramlos, in a triple bar act; George Casselli, comedian; Dale and Leigh, high-class vocalists; The Four Netherlands, comediennes and bare-foot dancers; Melda and Wynne, comedy jugglers and dancers; Minnie D'Aubyn, chorus vocalist; Else and Bob, American gymnasts; Dollie Hook, comedienne; Reuben Hill, actor-vocalist; Elsa Arnell, mimic; Albert Hinton, comedian; and Harry Dunco, comedian. Among various attractions in the grounds are the Joy Wheel, which is causing much amusement.

Coliseum.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Smelt; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Patterson.—In addition to an excellent and well-shown lot of films, we have appearing The Two Castles, who are favourably received; The Alexanders (Charlie and Harry) in the amusing episode, The Lady in White and the Page; and Phitt and Phuny, the musical duos.

Empire.—Manager, Mr. T. J. Greyson.—Some of the latest films are being shown here. Variety is contributed by Gude Burnett, descriptive vocalist; and Cora Chrene, character vocalist.

Baths Pavilion.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. L. Grice.—This popular bioscope house holds its own effectively. Variety is this week furnished by Cyril Murray, who is entertaining at the piano.

Band (Links) Pavilion.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Catlin.—This combination attracts goodly crowds at each performance.

Toreador Enclosure (Promenade). — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Chas. Elderton.—The newest of the many attractions here has nothing to complain of in the way of attendances, and the well-diversified bill is evidently highly appreciated by the crowd who flock to this resort on the cliffs promenade.

WIDNES.—Alexandra Theatre.—Managers and Lessees, Messrs. J. Gar Kiddie and Frank Bray.—Mr. Allan Wilkie and his able company are here in The Merchant of Venice. Mr. Wilkie appeared as Shylock, and gave a faithful and realistic portrayal; Miss F. Hunter Watts was a sweet and charming Portia, lending necessary grace and dignity to the rôle; Miss May Dallas was excellent as Nerissa; and Miss Hilda Plowright represented Jessica in a manner deserving of praise. Mr. Henry Hargreaves was a capital Bassanio; and as Gratiano Mr. Sinclair Neill was excellent. The Prince of Morocco was capably portrayed by Mr. John Paley; as was also Antonio by Mr. Herbert Mansfield. Launcelot Gobbo was in the experienced hands of Mr. Phillip Gordon; and Mr. H. McNarry presented a lifelike study of the Duke of Venice.

Co-operative Hall.—Managers and Lessees, Messrs. Hamilton and Hughes.—Messrs. Harry and Eugene Leotard, brilliant and clever hat throwers, provide top turn here, and are ably supported by Emily and Tom Custance in the pleasing duologue, A Game for Two. Miss Sadie Lundy is a clever juvenile prima donna; and Mr. Tom Collins is a refined humorist. The animated pictures are good.

WIGAN.—Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—Mr. J. Forbes Knowles' company is here in Nick Carter, Detective. In the title-rôle Mr. J. Forbes Knowles gives a powerful portrayal; Mr. Raymond Thomas capably impersonates Eustace Lee; Miss Helena Walbran makes a charming Madeline; the part of Cyril is ably filled by Little Hilda Vokes; the humorous characters are well sustained by Mr. H. C. Momber as Theophilus Timmins, Mr. W. Ellythorne as George Slade, Miss Nellie Fern as Matilda, and Miss Nancy Lawrence as Bessie.

The Hippodrome.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co.—The management have engaged this week Miss Florrie Forde, who receives a great ovation for her songs; an excellent performance is given by Slippere, the blind entertainer, who is loudly applauded; Elton and Elma give a smart display on the triple bars; and Mint and Mart, in a comedy act and as paper manipulators, are well received. Baby Bowden is a good child entertainer; and Ike Bradley is a skilful comedy cyclist. A return visit is paid by the Eight Lancashire Lads, who again dance themselves into favour; Cestria is a clever comedy juggler; and the Lovelaces, song illustrators, are greatly appreciated.

WISHAW (N.B.).—Pavilion.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; General-Manager, Mr. René Clayton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fred Nimse.—Corman's Juveniles, in a pretty vocal scena, The Waif, are topping the bill here this week; Elsie Hubbert and her girls, in a really pretty act, introduce some clever sabot, sand, and clog dancing; Faree, the Australian Bushman, in his musical act, goes exceptionally well; The Smalleys, in a burlesque triple bar act, are smart and entertaining; and the Tripello Trio, in musical speciality act, contribute an excellent turn.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. G. Kimberley.—F. Marriott Watson and James Usher's company is here this week with The Face at the Window. Mr. W. Haughton Macaulay rouses the audience to a high pitch of excitement by his satanical portrayal of Lucio Delgado; Mr. T. W. Dunscombe admirably sustains the rôle of the fearless detective, Paul Gouffet; Mr. James Chippendale doubles the parts of Henri de Brisson and Dr. Le Blanc, in both of which he is excellent; Mr. Richard Oliver is well suited as Lucien Cortier; and Mr. Arthur Clibdurn presents a clever character study as Jean Barbeton. Miss Marie Tennant is good as La Pinau; and Miss Constance Glenabyn as Marie de Brisson is a pleasing heroine.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Vivian Evans.—Joe Peterman and George Rickett's company, in The Belle of the Orient, is the premier attraction here and is a big success. The Five Vernons' classical and topical selections on xylophones create loud applause; the Vetter Brothers present a spectacular gymnastic sketch, A Page's Recreation; Stewart and Morris, comedians and dancers, score well; and other items in the bill are Mabel Mignon, comedienne and dancer; Carr and Rose, comedy duo; and Cedric Percival, comedian and dancer.

WORCESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton.—Crowded houses have this week welcomed a return visit of Florodora, which Mr. Chas. Constant's company is presenting in first-class style. Admirably staged and costumed, this delightful musical production loses none of the charm which it exercised in the early days of its production. Mr. Johnnie Schofield as Tweedlepunch has a fund of humorous eccentricities which are irresistible; Miss Daisy Lake is a dainty Dolores, and sings with exquisite taste; and Mr. Cautier R. Dutton is an admirable Frank Abercoed. Miss Florence Hersee is a delightful Angela Gilfain, singing and dancing with exceptional charm; and Mr. Johnnie Junior as Capt. Donegal joins her in the Apache dance. Miss Kate Leicester is well suited as Lady Holyrood; and Mr. Stanley White finds a congenial task in the presentation of Cyrus Gilfain. Mr. Jack Parker is good as Leandro; and under the direction of Mr. W. Neal, an augmented orchestra and the chorus work admirably.

WORKINGTON.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fredk. Kitto.—For the last three nights of the week, Messrs. Dudley Bennett's and T. C. Wray's company is presenting Miss Hook of Holland.

Carnegie Hall.—Lessee, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Manager, Mr. Fredk. Kitto.—The Royal Quintette and the Sisters Lyle provide excellent entertainment. The pictures are of a high-class order.

WORTHING. — Theatre Royal. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. Adolf Seebold; Acting-Manager, Mr. Malcolm Spurgin.—Seymour Hicks's production The Gay Gordons was staged here for the first time on Monday evening. The company included Mr. Frank Lincoln, a capital Angus Græme, and Miss May Yates, who played the part of Peggy Quainton in fascinating style. Mr. Harry Stowe took the part of Nervy Nat; and the rôle of Andrew Quainton was filled by Mr. Charles Benson. Miss Edie Adeson was a pleasing Victoria Siddons.

WREXHAM. — Empire Music Hall.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. J. Scott.—Another strong company is here this week, headed by Jack Belton, comedian, and Minnie Osborne, vocalist, whose Irish and Scotch "tit-bits" provide fun for the patrons of this comfortable place of entertainment. Nellie Gannon, a descriptive contralto singer, has made herself a great favourite with her illustrated songs; and Harry Wright, an excellent vocal comedian, has done especially well with "King Edward, the World's Peacemaker." The pictures include several beautiful coloured ones.

YNYSHIR.—Workmen's Hall.—Lessees, Messrs. Pooles, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. W. Bynorth.—The pictures here still attract crowded houses. The Cinephone has beautiful illustrated songs; and Saint Malo and Coombs present a good comedy sketch. The Swift Duo has some good cycling tricks.

YORK.—Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington: Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—That vivid drama, Another Man's Wife, is capitally played here by Mr. Fred Granville's company. Mr. Stanley Radcliffe as Carlos de Vergas was in every way excellent, and gave a manly and forcible rendering of a popular rôle. The part of Lucia was charmingly played by Miss Ruby Loucraine, an actress of great merit; Miss Hazel Head gave a distinctly powerful rendering of Quez de Castro: the part of Paul Bernstoff was in the safe and experienced hands of Mr. Edward H. Heanley; and the acting of Mr. Willie Reid as Sam Smiles was clever.

Opera House and Empire.—Managing-Director Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—Vardon, Perry, and Wilber, instrumentalists and dancers, head the bill; the Newmans introduce novelty in the way of trick cycling; Albert Le Fre delights all by his smart and up-to-date performance; Fred Arthur is particularly neat in his turn; and Mamie Fenton, the Scotch Girl at the Piano, attracts attention. Dorothy Sephton, vocalist, and Queenie May, vocalist, speedily find favour. Harry Taylor sings two quaint songs; and the bioscopic pictures are up to date.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Bowman; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. E. Bradley.—This popular hall grows in favour nightly, the pictures shown being of great excellence. The Secret of the Glacier is intensely interesting, as is also King Edward VII. Funeral Day in Australia.

Victoria Hall.—Lessee, Mr. Sidney Bacon; Resident-Manager, Mr. Bert Rutter.—Great success is attending the efforts of the manager of this hall, and large audiences are the rule. What the Daisy Said and Out of the Past are grand films; and Mostel, in a musical novelty of much merit, appears with success.

The striking melodrama Through the Divorce Court has been attracting large audiences to the Pavilion, Mile End, during the week. On the night of our visit the play was accorded a warm reception, and the interest evinced in the easily-followed yet interesting plot was plainly visible to a keen observer. As the hero, Lord Robt. Penarth, Mr. Riddell Robinson gave a fine performance, and was much applauded. Mr. Henry C. Cooper made a typical stage villain, and as the heroine Miss Hettie Chatell proved very successful. The remaining characters were all in capable hands, and the play was well staged.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS ROSABEL DODD.

Born in Birmingham, Miss Rosabel Dodd, who in private life is Mrs. T. Renaud Lockwood, was taken to America when two years old, and lived there till she was fifteen, having crossed the Atlantic several times before she reached that age. While still at school, she studied acting and elocution under Mr. Edwin Gordon Laurence, of New York. Returning to England, it was when playing in Through the World early in 1901 that Miss Rosabel Dodd met Mr. T. Renaud Lockwood, to whom she was married a few months later, and since that time they have generally played together, having appeared in the leading parts in The Shaughraun, The Unknown, All that Glitters, Mr. Charles Herrick's company, The Triumph of Truth and The Price of Sin, and Mr. Hill-Mitchelson's companies, Revenge and Death or Glory Boys. Following these engagements, Miss Dodd played heavy lead in Mr. Frederick Melville's Ugliest Woman on Earth, the two leading parts in her husband's company, The Sword's Point, better known as A Sister's Sacrifice, the star part in Bigamy, the heavy part in Under False Colours, and as Cora in The Grip of Iron.

For eighteen months subsequently she was with

Messrs. Armitage and Leigh, and with the late Mr. Wilson Barrett's company of Lucky Durham, and afterwards appeared as Antoinette de Mauban in The Prisoner of Zenda. A recent assumption was that of Marion Thornton in the Lyceum production, Two Little Vagabonds. Miss Dodd is a sister of the well-known "musical tramp," Will Van Allen.

MR. GEORGE LESLIE.

A native of Glasgow, Mr. George Leslie was educated at the Glasgow Academy and Dulwich College, London. He started his theatrical career at the Crystal Palace in the pantomime of Cinderella, produced under the direction of Mr. Oscar Barrett. Mr. Leslie's experience has been chiefly confined to India, where he is well known as a theatrical manager, he at present being the joint lessee of the rink and theatre in the Queen of Hill stations, Mussoorie. Mr. Leslie was the proprietor of the London Comedy company which toured India, Burmah, and Ceylon in 1904-5, during which he had the privilege of receiving the patronage of H.R.H. Princess Louise Augusta of Schleswig-Holstein and of Lord Roberts.

An important share in the revolution in seating which has been effected in our theatres and halls has been taken by Messrs. H. Lazarus and Son, of Great Eastern-street, E.C., who are experts of thirty years' standing, and a glance at their new catalogue will show that a decided advance has been made even on their already high standard. Elegance, luxury, and convenience are combined in their patent tip-up seats, of which every variety is to be found in their collection. Attention is specially directed to a new leading line in tip-up seats and chairs, designed for cinematograph theatres and halls. A serviceable tip-up seat, aptly named the "Champion," may thus be obtained for less than 5s., while the "Marvel" tip-up is offered at 6s. 6d. per sitting. A comprehensive choice of seats is available, from the 9s. 6d. polished wood to the sumptuous "Sheraton," with mahogany inlaid backs and velvet upholstery, at 55s. There are also the movable tip-up seats, which do not require fixing to the floor, and range in price from 6s. per sitting upwards. A large assortment of movable seats and folding chairs are also submitted, and among numerous embellishments to the auditorium which the catalogue reveals are rich tableaux curtains, handsome vases and tables, settees, and conductors' desks, in all of which elegance and fitness are combined.

THE KEANS AND SHAKESPEARE.

"Both Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean, as was the custom in the days of the forties and fifties, took themselves very seriously," says the late Mr. Clement Scott in his most interesting book 'The Drama of Yesterday.' "'Ellen,' as her husband used to call his clever wife, with a slightly nasal accent, the original Ellen Tree, was, of course, an admirable and experienced actress; but she never wholly divested herself of the air of a tragedy queen. Mrs. Charles Kean, like Mrs. Alfred Wigan, was incessantly acting on and off the stage; Mrs. Kean priding herself on her histrionic career; Mrs. Wigan on her aristocratic relations and her Court friendships, on which she was accustomed to dilate when she honoured the green-room with her presence, to the disgust of good old Mrs. Winstanley, an excellent actress, and the original editress of Bow Bells, who had a witty tongue, and made very short work of the aristocratic affectations of Mrs. A. Wigan. Society of that day had not greatly patronised the actor and actress, and certainly the Keans and the Wigans made the very most of their social opportunity.

"And yet, if good stories are to be believed, Macready was also of the 'aloof' order. I have been told that, putting on an air of dignity, he always pretended that he could not recollect Charles Kean's name, and invariably alluded to him, cultured gentleman and Eton scholar as he was, as 'that young man with the clever father.'

"But this is a good example of Mrs. Charles Kean's serious and tragic air. Charles Kean, I have always understood, was in early days a charming and amusing companion, full of good stories and green-room gossip, a chip of the old block, who used to frequent the Wrekin (in Broad-court) and the Harp, under the shadow of Drury Lane—a veritable Bohemian as his father was almost to the last. But 'Ellen' changed all that, and a certain dignity had to be assumed with the office of the 'Master of the Revels,' to say nothing of Court and Society patronage.

"Charles Kean was playing Hamlet in the provinces on one occasion, and was of course very punctilious about the detail of the stage, which was his mania. A rising young actor who was cast for Horatio discovered to his horror that his tights had not arrived as expected. He knew that Charles Kean's eagle eye would be upon him, as all the scenes of Horatio are with Hamlet. In his distress he was obliged to have recourse to a pair of old patched and darned scarlet worsted tights, a sorry contrast to the 'trappings and suits of woe' of his friend the Prince of Denmark. Frightened out of his life, he repaired in fear and trembling to see Charles Kean and explain matters. He knocked nervously at the door, and to his horror Mrs. Charles Kean answered it. With tragic air, finger to lip, and walking on tiptoe, fearful of disturbing her nervous and sensitive partner.

"'What do you want, sir?'

"'To see Mr. Charles Kean.'

"Whereupon Mrs. Kean made a stately and mysterious exit. She returned, still imploring silence by dramatic gesture.

"'What might be your business be?' she solemnly asked.

"Horatio explained as well as he could the dilemma of the scarlet tights.

"'Could Mr. Charles Kean possibly forgive him?'

"Again a tragic exit on the part of Mrs. Kean. Once more she reappeared with a serene and seraphic countenance.

"'Mr. Kean will pardon you. But' (pointing ecstatically to heaven) 'will you be forgiven there?'

"It was in 1850 that Charles Kean, with his popular partner Bob Keeley, took over the management of the Princess's Theatre under a two years' lease. Both names were dear to the public; Mr. and Mrs. Keeley, apart from anything else, were a certain 'draw'; Mrs. Charles Kean, who had vast experience, was known to be a first-class stage directress; both managers had capital; both families were highly esteemed in Society and at Court; Her Majesty the Queen, to show her interest in the venture, took a box for the season, and the company was carefully selected.

"In addition to the actor-managers, there were Harley, one of the best low comedians of his time; Bartley, an excellent actor; Alfred Wigan, then supposed to be, in the snobbish cant of the day, 'one of the only gentlemen on the stage'; Drinkwater Meadows, a splendid old man; John Ryder, the stalwart outspoken actor, rough, but sound in his heart, who had graduated under 'old Mac,' as Macready was called; David Fisher, a capital comedian, who 'played the fiddle like an angel'; J. F. Cathcart, Kean's right-hand man; old Addison, the father of Carlotta Addison [now playing in The Blue Bird]; Flexmore, one of the best clowns and dancing masters since the days of Grimaldi; whilst, in addition to Mrs Charles Kean and Mrs. Keeley, there were on the staff Mrs. Winstanley, a witty woman and admirable actress, who possessed literary as well as stage talent; Mrs. Alfred Wigan, an artist of pronounced skill; Carlotta Leclercq, then the loveliest of girls, and the sweetest Perdita in The Winter's Tale ever seen; Agnes Robertson (Mrs. Dion Boucicault); Miss Murray, who in after years was wedded to Samuel Brandram, the elocutionist and reciter; and Mary Keeley, who became the wife of the genial entertainer and novelist, Albert Smith.

"It may be interesting to note what was done in the first season of the Kean and Keeley management, whose success was crowned by the first of all the National Exhibitions, the Exhibition of 1851 in Hyde Park, that gathered to London representatives of all nations in the world. The triumph indeed of the Princess's venture was so pronounced that Keeley was able to retire from management, leaving Charles Kean in sole charge.

"Here at any rate is an idea of the excellent work they did together.

"During the first season, the Shakespearean plays represented were as follows: Hamlet, fourteen times; Twelfth Night, forty; As You Like It, four; The Merchant of Venice, twelve; and Henry the Fourth, Part I., twenty-two; The Wife's Secret commanded twenty-six repetitions; The Gamester, fourteen; The Prisoner of War, thirteen; The Stranger, seven; and Town and Country, four. The principal novelties were The Templar and The Duke's Wager, by Mr. Slous; Love in a Maze, by Mr. Boucicault; and a romantic drama in the melodramatic line, of a very peculiar character, skilfully adapted from the French by Mr. John Oxenford, entitled Pauline.

"In the latter the powerful acting of Mr. and Mrs. C. Kean, in two well-contrasted original parts, elicited universal approbation. There were also six light farces, namely, Platonic Attachments, A Model of a Wife, Sent to the Tower, Betsy Baker, To Parents and Guardians, and Apartments to Let; with the pantomime of Alonso the Brave, by Mr. Fitzball; and the burlesque spectacle of The Alhambra, by Mr. Albert Smith, produced at Easter and continued without interruption to the close of the season. The total number of pieces acted amounted to twenty-seven, of which twelve were entirely new."

A party of about thirty, comprising the staff of the Theatre Royal, Altercliffe, and a few private friends, had their annual outing on Sunday, the 21st ult. Liverpool was the place selected, but the majority of the party continued the journey to New Brighton, where a very enjoyable time was spent. The weather was fine, and the party returned in excellent spirits.

IN A TRAMCAR;
or, PASSING REMARKS.

By Tom Craven.

I love to hear men in a car talking all together,
About the current topics, stocks, shares, or else the weather;
Some "thick" divorce in high life, or
Cause célèbre that's naughty;
Of racing, golf, or hunting, and other subjects "sporty,"
All of 'em are much discussed by people up to forty.

Chatter on—in the car,
Chatter on till "Yer dunno where yer are."
Never cease the senseless chatter,
If it's wrong what does it matter?—
Chatter—chatter—in the car.

Says a man, "Our army's rotten, sir,
It's all red tape and bragging;
Our officers can't hold a gun, and only study 'ragging.'
It took us all our time to lick a 'Boer farmer' army;
Britannia said, 'I rule the waves, no race on earth can harm me';
The War Office is up the pole, our leaders all seem 'barmy.'"

Chatter on—in the car,
Chatter on till "Yer dunno where yer are."
If of brains we would be fuller,
We must get another Buller—
Chatter—chatter—in the car.

"They've built a ship of such great length it will be hard to beat her,
If you'd go from stem to stern you hire a taximeter.
On board she carries everything, from Turkish baths to 'rations';
She's telephones, marconigrams, to all the foreign nations;
She's tubes, electric tram cars, and several railway stations."

Chatter on—in the car,
Chatter on till "Yer dunno where yer are."
"She speeds, when at full power,
At ten million knots an hour"—
Chatter—chatter—in the car.

"They're going soon to close the 'pubs,' and make us all tea-teers,
We've got to take to Nestlé's Milk and give up rum and beers.
We must order special Epsom salts,
Small waters, or split cocoas.
We're all to give up smoking, too, or language light or 'jocose,'
And men will do hard labour if they've pimples on their 'bokos.'"

Chatter on—in the car,
Chatter on till "Yer dunno where yer are."
"For the poor a drink's unhealthy,
It's different for the wealthy"—
Chatter—chatter—in the car.

"A working man may drive a 'lot' to earn an honest meal;
If he runs down a passerby he's soon laid by the heel.
The magistrate will swear he's drunk,
And vote his conduct vile,
Altho' his horse in half a day
Could not do half a mile,
But the motorist can kill a
Kid, and get off with a smile."

Chatter on—in the car,
Chatter on till "Yer dunno where yer are."
"Let us have some quick sharpshooters,
To bust their tyres and hooters"—
Chatter—chatter—in the car.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY AT HARROGATE.

Mr. Martin Harvey, who was appearing in Harrogate last week, lectured at the Grand Opera House, Harrogate, on the 25th ult., on the proposed Shakespeare Memorial Theatre. The Mayor of Harrogate (Captain A. Boyd Carpenter) presided, and there was a large attendance.

Mr. Harvey said that he was present that day to plead for their help to rear a noble and monumental institution to the memory of their greatest Englishman—not Nelson, whom we had already honoured with countless and greatly-deserved monuments all over the British Isles, but to Shakespeare himself. To the head of naval warfare we had built obelisks, memorials, statues innumerable, but it had taken us 300 years to rear a worthy memorial to the great head of letters, and "the pen is mightier than the sword." He did not despair of playing his part to heedless ears, but it had been played for many years to ears that were deaf and unresponsive by the late Sir Henry Irving. However, things had moved rapidly of late, and Sir Henry's voice, which not so long ago was as one "crying in the wilderness," was now echoing through the breadth of the land. He had, at all events, the joy of seeing his hope crystallised into substantial shape before he died, and into a form which was nearest to his heart—that of a National Memorial Theatre. Had he lived he would have seen to-day on the committee the names of Peers and poets, leaders of fashion, Cabinet Ministers and professors, members of the great universities and of every seat of learning throughout the country, journalists, dramatic authors, scientists, and representative men from all the learned professions and art, united in their determination that this old neglect should no longer be a reproach with their country and their Empire.

In 1916 it would be three hundred years since there died in this country the most amazing giant in the literature of the world—an Englishman. What had they done to honour him, to express their pride of their fellow-countryman, their gratitude for the boundless wealth of beauty of thought, of pleasure, and of wisdom which the whole civilised world had rendered homage to? A trivial and unregarded little statue, erected above a fountain which trickled a small jet of water into a basin in Leicester-square! That was the sole monument to their great poet which was pointed out to the amazed foreigner when he visited the land of Shakespeare's birth and labour. The scheme which was at present proposed was the outcome of two separate movements now happily united. The first was the desire to erect a living and worthy memorial to Shakespeare in connection with his approaching tercentenary, in 1916; and the second was the desire to enlarge, enrich, and elevate the standard of dramatic art by the establishment of a permanent endowed national theatre. The amount to be raised was £500,000, which would include a sum of £100,000 estimated to be necessary for a suitable site, £150,000 for the theatre buildings and equipment, and the remaining £250,000 for a permanent endowment which would provide an annual revenue of £10,000. The main object would be to keep the plays of Shakespeare in its répertoire.

A cordial vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Martin Harvey, on the motion of the Rev. D. S. Guy, seconded by Captain Shaw.

At the conclusion of the meeting several donations were promised, including £5 from the Bishop of Ripon and £5 from the Mayor of Harrogate.

MR. BEECHAM'S OPERA SEASON.

Mr. Thomas Beecham, in a retrospective survey of his opera season, says he considers "it was in a way quite a remarkable one, and that it should prove an object-lesson to the British public, and to the music-loving public the world over. It is no light matter to take a theatre that has none, or that has, at any rate, only very few of the facilities of a regular opera house, and to produce in it a large number of works in a really modern way, especially with so many artists who, until they had appeared at His Majesty's, had not had any experience to speak of in operatic work, which is so different from concert work and from ordinary acting.

"But in spite of that, I have no intention of apologising for any of the shortcomings that have been noticeable in some, or possibly in all, of my productions. For the things that were at times lacking are to be found wanting from time to time in any opera house in any country, and this is unavoidable when one is endeavouring to get through an enormous amount of new work that is unfamiliar alike to artists and to the public. A point I want to emphasise is that the summer season was throughout an English season, with all-English artists and an all-English chorus, with the exception, I think, of two members. Of this I really was—I am still—a little proud. For I received many communications with regard to our performances from the most celebrated musicians on the Continent, and from many among the oldest and most critical of operatic habitués.

"Those communications were all couched in terms of very great praise. French people who had seen Il Seraglio, for instance, revived at the Grand Opera in Paris, declared with considerable emphasis that they preferred our version. In addition, I have received letters from musicians who came over from Munich and from Vienna to see our operas, and they write in the same strain concerning our other Mozart performances. Mme. Carré, for instance, who came over from Paris in order to be present at the first performance of Muguette, was enthusiastic about it, and declared to me that it had never been done so well before; and exactly the same has been said to me many times with regard to our production of The Tales of Hoffmann.

"One still hears a great deal said in praise of foreign artists in a tone that is meant to imply that an artist to be in the front rank must necessarily be of foreign birth, or, if not that, then at least of foreign extraction. I do not agree with that at all. I have maintained from the beginning, and I maintain still, that the day has long gone by for talking of British artists in a semi-apologetic tone because they happen to be British-born. Apart from the personnel of my company, which is very capable, I contend that there are in the United Kingdom a great number of men and women who possess remarkable talent, and I use the word 'talent' here in its broadest sense.

"Concerning the future of British artists as a whole, the great trouble is that there are no opera institutions in this country besides Covent Garden, and now my own opera schemes. In none of the provincial cities, even the biggest among them, is there an opera. How different this is from other countries! Take Italy, for example. Rarely indeed in Italy do young singers make their début at the Scala, Milan, or San Carlo, Naples, theatres, or in other of the famous houses. No, they make their début in one of the smaller towns—say, Modena, Bologna, or Parma—and then gradually work their way up until finally they appear in one of the great houses. And the same system applies to Germany.

"But now, where in Great Britain will you find any house out of London at which it is of advantage for a would-be operatic artist to make his or her début, or where he or she can obtain real experience in operatic work and be afforded a chance of becoming in a few years' time really well equipped? It has long been my hope to see established in some of the more important of our provincial cities small opera houses—exactly similar to those in Italy, Germany, and elsewhere on the Continent—at which those among our young singers who possess true talent would be able to gain practical experience in operatic work."

THE MINERS' THEATRE.

The Miners' Theatre, Ashington, opened its doors to the public on Monday night, after having been closed for some months owing to expiration of lease and the large amount of alterations which have been made by the new lessee, Mr. A. C. Moody, the popular lessee and manager of the New Theatre Royal, Blyth-by-the-Sea. The alterations and renovations of the building have cost nearly £2,000, and everything has been done to make the theatre attractive, comfortable, and safe. The whole of the interior of the building has been overhauled, and its artistic appearance immeasurably enhanced. The stalls are fitted with red plush tip-up chairs on blue carpet, while the circle is fitted with rich old gold tip-up chairs on red carpet, the dress circle being the same, with the exception that the chairs are of a heavier pattern. The stage has been enlarged, and is adapted to provide for the setting of the largest productions touring. All the scenery and properties are entirely new, as also is the lighting installation, which has been supervised throughout by Mr. Fred Hazlehurst. The mechanical effects and the interior building alterations were carried out by Mr. Edward Henderson, of Blyth. The contract for the seating, &c., has been carried out by Messrs. Wilkins and Co., of Liverpool, under the supervision of Mr. Cope. Mr. A. C. Moody is to be highly complimented on the fine appearance the theatre now presents, and there is no doubt that he will meet with the success he deserves. Mr. T. Campbell Browne, late of the Hippodrome, London, has been engaged as resident-manager, and promises to be most popular with his patrons.

For the Terriers, Alan Marshall took six wickets for 32 runs. For Stephens and Rennior XI., Clements took eight wickets for 16 runs. A most enjoyable day was spent. At 2 o'clock a capital luncheon was supplied by Harry Rennior (who had arranged the match), and who was heartily thanked for a splendid day's outing. A return match has been arranged for Tuesday, Sept. 13, at Peckham Rye Park. Match starts 11.30. On Tuesday next the Terriers C.C. play Hammersmith Palace XI. at Shepherd's Bush. Match starts 12.30 sharp. Full particulars can be obtained of Terrier Tom Packer, hon. secretary Terriers' Cricket Club.

PHYDORA—GLOBE-TROTTER.

SOME FUGITIVE IMPRESSIONS.

"Our theatrical wanderings in this country are remembered not as so much mileage but simply as a journey—from one place to another," writes Mr. Harry Phydora from Her Majesty's Theatre, Sydney. "For instance, you may travel double the mileage of a previous journey and yet not feel half the effect of it, even if the said journey runs into days, and includes both train and boat.

"I had a journey once in Africa when we were practically five weeks on a train, playing up the line from Cape Town to Buluwayo; but the journey was so relieved by novel incidents, that instead of boring one it was full of interest from start to finish. Of course, the reason of this was that the date of the aforesaid journey was 1902, the fag-end of the last Boer War. Now, I don't think I ever felt as tired on any part of that trip as I have felt on a journey, say, from London to Edinburgh.

"Take one of our recent journeys here in Australia—Brisbane to Perth—Queensland to the West—a matter of four days in the train and four days at sea, across the world-famous Australian Bight, passing the Leeuwin Light, almost over the identical spot where the ill-fated Pericles a few weeks back struck an unchartered rock and foundered. The distance from Brisbane to Perth is about 3,000 miles, rather more than less, and our season in Perth is two weeks, then a day's journey to the goldfields—Kalgoorlie, from there starting at 6 a.m. after the night's show to travel to Adelaide for two more weeks, and our next appearance is in Auckland, New Zealand, starting with a train journey from Adelaide to Melbourne, 483 miles, Melbourne to Sydney 576 miles, and Sydney to Auckland; and yet, what with the various incidents of the road, or water, the ship's concerts, sports, &c., the journey, as I said before, is more in the nature of a holiday, with occasional experiences that may well thrill one.

Late one evening, while we were travelling from Kalgoorlie to Adelaide, we were aroused from our reveries by a strident voice on the platform shouting 'Southern Cross. Ten minutes for refreshments. Southern Cross!'—the place where Deeming, the man who murdered his wife and buried her in cement beneath the hearthstone of the kitchen at Rainhill (Liverpool, England), was arrested, and until he duplicated his crime here and was hung in Melbourne, the way he behaved himself secured for him the respect of the inhabitants, who, of course, could not possibly connect him with the inhuman deeds he had committed.

"At this same Southern Cross there is a shanty by the station absolutely typical of the old mining days. The sort of place where you would be shot if you had a drink without asking the crowd, and you would be shot if you didn't have a drink when the crowd asked you. Here occurred what will be always remembered by me as the 'Champagne Incident.' The shanty was well stocked with bottles—every kind of whisky on the market was apparently there, every variety of gin, brandy, liqueurs, beer galore, lager, imported and local. Dear, dear, one would have thought this is the 'Cecil' of the locality. In we walked, and were confronted by the landlord, who had apparently stepped out of the pages of Comic Cuts.

Before we were allowed to ask for drink, he insisted on playing some ear-tearing melodies on a tin whistle. On the conclusion of this entertainment we asked for drinks. Well, the oldest inhabitant brisked up to the bar and asked 'What'll yer 'ave?' 'Two brandies and sodas and a bottle of lager' was the order. Leaning confidentially over the bar, he whispered, 'I've only got one bottle of whisky and one bottle of sherry; all them bottles (pointing to the shelves) are empty, and I'm leaving here to-morrow; but I'll tell yer what I 'ave got—a bottle of Heideck. I've had it myself fer twenty years, and you can 'ave it for 25s.'

"Well, Campbell and myself thought it would be a good proposition to take it along for dinner, but not at that price, so the comedy started. It's not much of a tale, but the way we battled for that bottle of wine, the way we whispered to ourselves—why it must be worth at least £2; the way we offered 6s. and offered to toss him 10s. or nothing; the way he refused; the way we scrambled on the train without it; and the way we scrambled back and offered him 8s., which he immediately took; the way we sat round it as Campbell tried to start the cork; the way he started it; the way we listened for the 'pop'; and when the cork eventually left the neck of the bottle, amidst a dead silence, talk about the 'Burial of Sir Thomas Moore,' not a sound was heard, but the deep breathing of the 'Syndicate' and 'Sarson's Virgin' was concentrated sweetness by comparison."

DEATH OF TEDDY CAMPBELL.

Very few people remember the Royal Theatrical Home for Decayed Actors at Woking, which was opened with a great flourish of trumpets many years ago, and which, through mismanagement or other causes, sank into decay. A lot of money subscribed at the time was frittered away, and at the finish the scheme went to pieces. To become an inmate was to show at once an actor had led a cleanly life and was respected by his fellows. Amongst others who ended their days there was Andrew Leonard Campbell, an actor of some repute at the old Grecian Theatre in the City-road, and also at Sadler's Wells. He had several children, of whom only one followed his father's calling, and he, too, has now passed away in a public institution.

On Monday last died Edmund Voullaire, known better as Teddy, Campbell. In his boyhood he was contemporary with George Conquest, father of the present George Conquest, whose mother taught both boys, with many others, the art of stage dancing. Later on he joined Anthony Geovanelli, at Highbury Barn, another name almost forgotten. Then for a long time he was with Isaac de Frece, uncle of Walter de Frece, at the Theatre Royal, Liverpool. About 1878 he joined Mr. Pitt Hardacre, and was with that gentleman until he gave up the Comedy Theatre, Manchester, in 1902. He became almost factotum to that gentleman. For a long time he toured as Bullock and managed his East Lynne company. For a short time he was resident-manager at the Theatre Royal, Darwen, and ultimately settled down in Manchester in a general management of Mr. Pitt Hardacre's many enterprises, with his headquarters at the Comedy Theatre in that city. Besides keeping an eye on things in general he would play low comedy when any stock business was on, and a very fine low comedian he was too. He was always ready to be dispatched at any time when anyone was ill in any of his governor's travelling companies, and would play anything and everything, and at Christmas he always indulged in clown, he being one of the last of the Grimaldi school. In company he was renowned as one of the most jovial of men, but when Mr. Pitt Hardacre gave up the Comedy Theatre he felt his "occupation gone," and became a prey to melancholia.

After an unsuccessful attempt upon his life, he was put under restraint—a restraint so gentle that it could hardly be called such—and in this condition he lingered until Monday last, when he peacefully passed away. Soon after its formation he became a member of the Manchester Dramatic Lodge, and remained an active member until the occurrence referred to above took place. He had many friends and few enemies, and was of an open and generous disposition. His age was 75.

FESTIVAL OF EMPIRE AND EMPIRE EXHIBITION.

CHAT WITH LEOLYN HART AND SON.

An attraction that should entice crowds throughout next summer to the Crystal Palace will be the Festival of Empire and Empire Exhibition, an official portion of the Coronation festivities. A very prominent feature in this will be a realisation of various scenes and important buildings in our principal Colonies, and life therein. Some fifty acres of the grounds will be utilised in this ambitious scheme, and the train journey around will be two miles.

The well-known firm of scenic artists and theatrical contractors, Messrs. Leolyn Hart and Co., will be responsible for the whole of the constructional, spectacular, and decorative work in connection with the Festival, and, through the kindness of Mr. Leolyn Hart, jun., who explained to us a model in the making in his workshop at the Palace, we were enabled to get a very comprehensive idea of what the real thing will be like when revealed to the public next May.

The trip through the Colonies will be undertaken by means of the Kearney high-speed mono-rail, and passengers will be allowed to alight at different points and view the various buildings, &c. The All-Red route starts at the Pageant Station, and there will be "halts" all along the terrace for passengers. The first place of interest will be Newfoundland, where the process of paper manufacturing will be fully demonstrated, and the natives will also be seen whaling and fishing. Canada will next be visited, with its orchards, farming, ploughing, and all the industries in progress, with real cattle—in fact, actual life in the Dominion.

A very interesting section will be India, with a full-sized reproduction of the Tazmahal, 220ft. in height to top of the crescent, showing the famous screen and tombs inlaid with wonderful mosaics and jewels. Also an Indian bazaar, and jungle with live animals. A fine illustration of Sydney Harbour by moonlight, with the town illuminated in the distance, will be sure to call forth much admiration. All the industries of Australia will be shown on "landing." A family of settlers will be seen, and their progress through fifteen years of toil. Then the result—the prosperous homestead, with the sheep-shearing, sheep-dipping, up-to-date dairy in full work. Silver and copper mining, &c., will also be depicted.

MR. LEOLYN HART, SEN.

Next, New Zealand, with its hot-water springs; then an ocean voyage, a storm at sea, with various realistic effects, till finally Cape Town Harbour is reached. In the South African section the Kimberley diamond mines in work will be a realistic reproduction; and a big-tree forest and pigmy dwelling will also be interesting features. The Crown Colonies, the Malay Federal States, Jamaica, and other places of interest will also be pictured.

Mr. Hart is receiving every assistance from the Colonies in the way of photographs, sketches,, and in many other directions The Imperial Bandstand will be a fine structure, and here all the principal bands of the Empire will in turn perform. The grounds will be beautifully illuminated, a special electric plant being laid of 600 arcs and about half a million lights.

This gigantic undertaking is by no means the first work of the kind undertaken by the firm, for they were responsible for the scenic and constructural portions of the Toronto Exhibition; the Toronto Pageant of 1897, with a representation of the Diamond Jubilee Procession from Buckingham Palace to St. Paul's, with fine reproductions of each building; the Last Days of Pompeii, this year's attraction at the Palace, built and painted in the incredibly short time of three weeks; the Fisheries, Health, Inventions, Indian, Naval, and other Earl's Court Exhibitions; and many other shows of a similar nature at Paris, St. Louis, Chicago, and elsewhere. Many of these young Mr. Hart has personally superintended.

Mr. Leolyn Hart, sen., was for twenty-five years with the well-known firm of Greaves, latterly as partner. Messrs. Greaves and Hart were the first to do open-air spectacles on a large scale—at the Aston Lower Grounds, Birmingham. Leaving most of the arrangements of the Pageant and Exhibition work to his son, Mr. Hart, sen., himself a very clever artist, looks after the extensive scenic works in Latona-road, Old Kent-road. A visit to the factory, with its huge scene-painting room, and the artists in distemper working on cloths, &c., is interesting and instructive. The firm have a very extensive connection, and supply all the best-known London and provincial theatres and managers with scenery. Dramatic clubs and operatic societies also make big demands on their stores, a large and varied assortment of scenery always being in stock. Every requisite for theatrical performances can be provided. Write, or 'phone 1544 Hop, and all your wants will be supplied—expeditiously and thoroughly.

The energetic and enthusiastic Mr. Hart, jun., has little time or thought just at present for anything but the Festival Exhibition, and is hard at work daily and nightly at the big Sydenham glass-house. Talking of scenery elsewhere, however, he expressed the view that variety halls might, with advantage, change their scenery a little oftener.

"The manager," he says, "insists that a change of turn is the secret of success in vaudeville houses, and I consider that audiences generally would also appreciate a change of stage surroundings. To me it seems absurd that an interior scene should be used in one portion for an intensely dramatic playlet and a few minutes later for an acrobatic or burlesque sketch. And then the same street-corner is always used for the comic singer. We are prepared to place before a manager a scheme which will enable him to give his patrons a complete change of scenery every three months." The idea certainly seems a good one.

"EFFIE."

A "Study in Suburban Characters," in One Act, by Basil Dean, Produced for the First Time at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, on Monday, Aug. 29.

Geraldine Marsden .....MISS ISABEL ROLAND
Effie Marsden .....MISS HILDA BRUCE POTTER
Mrs. Marsden .....MISS MURIEL PRATT
A Servant .....MISS MARY OLIVER
Kenneth Vye .....MR. ESME PERCY

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

As "a study in suburban characters" Mr. Basil Dean's new play Effie is interesting, and one may concede that the environment of people does affect their thoughts and their doings; but the prime requirement of an audience is that interest shall lie chiefly in the doings of the persons represented, and therefore, for dramatic purposes, the story ought to be of the first importance. The situation is the drawing-room of a suburban London residence in the late afternoon of a summer's day. There are sunny lawns visible through the window, and the whole scene is pervaded with that restful sense of immunity from the cares of the world which makes for passive contentment, if one can only be satisfied with the limits of the horizon. One of the characters, Effie herself, however, is not satisfied with the narrow and empty life she has been living. Love has entered as an element of dissatisfaction, for she has quarrelled with Kenneth Vye because the young man in question is carrying on a distinctly suburban flirtation with Effie's young sister, Geraldine, whom he kisses in public, and with whom he plays croquet while Effie reads her books and eats her heart out with chagrin. Geraldine is an unkind sort of sister, for she annoys Effie very much by allusions to Kenneth's choice of herself in preference to the elder girl. Her taunts and teasings, in fact, combined with Effie's resentment, lead to a natural but undignified quarrel, the honours of the fight going to Geraldine, who is the bigger and stronger of the two. Mrs. Marsden, their mother, interrupts this exhibition, and for some time, while Geraldine is out, Effie and her mother discuss the general situation. Mrs. Marsden's pleasure in the apparent prospect of Kenneth Vye's engagement to Geraldine does not improve Effie's state of mind. Kenneth Vye protests his innocence of serious intentions in regard to Geraldine, and in the course of the argument shows signs of being less suburban in his temperament than Effie thought him to be; but all the same she cuts him short at last, and sends him away to resume his croquet with Geraldine. In two minutes, however, she has repented, and, as if by instinct, Kenneth comes back, and they fall into each other's arms. To be just, the lovers' dialogue is of a fairly good quality, but, having reached their climax, it is a case of sweetness far too long drawn out. A somewhat excessive ardour on the young man's part tends also to produce an atmosphere of the cheap novelette.

Miss Hilda Bruce Potter succeeded in depicting the moods of Effie as probably the author intended them to appear, but the part was not too gracious for an actress so light and charming and clever. As Geraldine Miss Isabel Roland was sufficiently pert and disagreeable, and Miss Muriel Pratt did all that was requisite in the colourless rôle of Mrs. Marsden. Mr. Esmé Percy played Kenneth Vye in his usual spirited style.

PASTORAL PLAYS IN MARGATE.

The Borough of Margate Entertainment Committee, of which Mr. John E. Saxby is the secretary, may be heartily congratulated on the success which attended their renewal of the production of pastoral plays in their lovely Dane Park, which, with its pretty, well-lit stage, in the centre of a beautifully-wooded landscape, is admirably adapted for these performances.

Shakespeare's delightful play, The Taming of the Shrew, was the piece chosen for the matinée and evening performance on Wednesday last, and crowded audiences at each performance testified to the appreciation of the inhabitants of their efforts. Mr. Clive Currie and his company from the Court Theatre, London, were engaged for this special performance. The actors and actresses showed that the management had chosen adequate and clever representatives for each character; indeed it would have been difficult to have had a better cast. All the minor parts were well played. Especial mention may, however, be made of Mr. Ivor Smith's Grumio and Mr. Lewis Calton's Tailor, the stuttering being very naturally rendered. Mr. W. A. MacKersy's Baptista was a well-balanced and sound rendition of the perplexed father, dignified and refined throughout. Mr. Lane Crawford was Hortensio; his fine voice and handsome presence were well employed in the delineation of this strong character. The same may be said of Mr. Dennis Cleugh's Lucentio; in addition, he was exceedingly graceful in his love scenes with Bianca, the latter character being prettily played by Miss Letty Paxton. It would be difficult to find in the profession two better representatives of Petruchio and Katharina than Mr. Clive Currie and Miss Helena Millais; the parts could not have been better filled, and their joint efforts carried the play along with an élan that was quite irresistible. In the early scenes Miss Helena Millais carried the audience with her, where she was the Shrew to the life, making a fine contrast to her sweet and beautiful rendering of the later scenes, where her clear diction and dignified acting showed th etrue Shakespearean scholar. Indeed, it is not often that the residents in Margate have had such an opportunity of seeing such finished acting, and the enthusiastic applause testified to the delight of the packed assembly. Altogether it was a production that the Town Council may be proud of.

Pastoral plays ought to become an established thing in this go-ahead town of Margate.

FATHER AND SON.

"It is an old axiom that circumstances alter cases," writes Austin Brereton in the Windsor Magazine. "Thus, in the world of commerce, it is the custom for a son to succeed his father and to carry on the traditions of the house. But on the stage, as in literature and art, the conditions are so peculiar that a son who inherits a great name is possessed of a blessing which has certain disadvantages. To inquire into those conditions and disadvantages would be to inquire too curiously and somewhat needlessly. The ordeal of constant comparison is, however, one of the trials of an artist placed in such a position; and to emerge with credit from such comparison is one of the ambitions of an actor. Many people, no doubt, since the death of Sir Henry Irving in 1905, went to see his elder son partly out of curiosity. It is, however, but bare justice to Mr. H. B. Irving to recall that he had won much popularity in his early career in the provinces by his acting of such prominent characters as Hamlet, Othello, Romeo, Benedick, Orlando, Charles Surface, Young Marlow, and Claude Melnotte. Moreover, some years before the decease of his father, he had made his mark in London. On Oct. 25, 1897, to be precise, he created an impression which augured well for his future on the stage by his impersonation of the cynical Loftus Roupell in The Tree of Knowledge at the St. James's Theatre. There, quite unconsciously, without premeditation, he was following in his father's footsteps, for, as Miss Carlotta Addison, who had played with Henry Irving on the same stage in 1867, and was now playing with the son, avouched, he recalled his father's acting as Rawdon Scudamore in Hunted Down of thirty years before. Indeed, if a son inherits certain of the characteristics of his father, it is difficult to avoid resemblance. Nor is there any valid reason why he should endeavour to do so. Moreover, in the present instance, be it noted, Mr. Irving has his own individuality, an individuality largely composed of charm, and this enables him, in playing parts closely identified with his father, to give another complexion to certain phases of the characters.

"In using the word 'charm' in connection with Mr. Irving's acting, I do so as the result of frequent observation and upon due consideration. Perhaps the best instance which I can give of this personal characteristic is to note the difference between father and son in regard to speech-making before the public. We all know that for many years before his death it was a habit of the public to demand speeches from Henry Irving upon all and every occasion—and many times without occasion save for the real love of the man. His speeches at first and last nights at the Lyceum, in the old days, were part and parcel of the evening's entertainment. And admirable speeches they were, too! But to get the exact parallel between father and son in this respect, it is necessary to refer to the more impromptu speeches of recent times, those few words of graciousness which were made night after night in the provinces. They had their charm, of course, but it was the charm of the conqueror. Irving the First stood before the audience calm, deliberate, unmoved. He impressed by his magnetism, by his dominant will-power, by the air of the man who has accomplished his purpose. His smile on these occasions was rare and beautiful. But it was very rare. On the other hand, Irving the Second comes rapidly, almost breathlessly, before the curtain. There is little or no premeditation in his remarks. He says what he feels, quickly, thankfully, graciously. He has inherited his father's beautiful smile, but he is lavish of it. He is, in fact, electrical in his expression, where his father was, with design, quite deliberate. This individuality lends its charm to his performances, and enables him, together with his capacity for thinking for himself, to re-create the characters in which other actors have excelled.

"Take him, for instance, as Hamlet, which he acted for the first time in London on April 4, 1905. Here he had to follow, not only his father, but a long line of Hamlets, of all sorts and conditions—for the Prince of Denmark is the ambition of all actors or serious intent—from Shakespeare's day to our own. It was but natural that the younger Irving should be compared with his father in the character, although many of the latter-day public and critics had been debarred from witnessing that triumphant impersonation, as Henry Irving, reluctant to spoil the impression which his interpretation had created, would not act the part in his later years. But the memory of it lingered. And many of us recalled its depth of feeling, its intensity, its occasional flash of passion, and that quality which we call princeliness. But the Hamlet of the father had an intense loneliness. He was a veritable prince in the sense that he was a man apart, one raised above his fellows by his courtly air, his position, his aloofness. Albeit he was very human, he impressed by his air of separation from his fellow-men. The scenes with Ophelia were extremely beautiful in their tenderness, and his treatment of Horatio was marked by deep feeling. Above all, he was profoundly melancholy. That, at least, is the impression which is uppermost in my mind when I think of Irving's Hamlet—profoundly melancholy, infinitely sad, piteous in its separation from sympathy, yet entirely sympathetic. It is we who are Hamlet, says Hazlitt, and it was the Hamlet within him, his own loneliness, which dominated the impersonation of the father.

"The Hamlet of the son recalls that of the father in many important respects. It, too, is full of fine feeling, it has its passionate note—as in the celebrated Play scene—it has intensity of an order which, by comparison, is subdued; it has great tenderness for Ophelia. It is a much more youthful Hamlet than, I imagine, his father's ever was. And it is certainly extremely lovable. The Hamlet of the Irving of our day has two paramount features, youth and lovableness. It has not the profound melancholy of the father, but it is a most engaging picture. Hamlet can be interpreted in divers ways, and by actors of varying personality. Discussion on this or that point will last until the crack of doom. But so long as the actor brings home to us something of the nature of Hamlet, something of his distinction, something of that fine nature overburdened with a terror sufficient to unseat the reason and impair the soul, we must be grateful. Irving the First did this by, above and beyond other means, his deep-seated melancholy. The son impresses us and draws us to him by the lovableness which dominates his Hamlet. This quality, manifest in his earlier performance, had developed in February, 1909, when he acted the character at the Shaftesbury Theatre. Indeed, one of the most valuable gifts which the second Irving inherits from his father is the capacity for taking infinite pains, for developing that which was already good. He is never content to rest upon his laurels. Again, he can think for himself, and in adopting, in the second act, the sequence of scenes according to the early quarto of 1603, he made a most effective change in the acting version, and one whereby he made a considerable improvement on accepted renderings of the tragedy."

KINGSWAY THEATRE.

A season of Italian grand opera by Mr. Mapleson, and under the direction of Signor De Macchi, opened on Thursday night at the Kingsway Theatre, Great Queen-street, with a performance of Rossini's opera Il Barbiere di Siviglia. New and effective scenery was provided by Soriani (Milan), and pretty costumes by Zamperoni (Milan). Without being a record performance of Rossini's opera, the Italian company were experienced and intelligent, while the performance had certainly life and vigour. Italian artists always will sing to the audience and come out of their parts to bow in response to applause, and the present company were no exception to this irritating habit. Signorina Isabella de Frate appeared as Rosina, and although there was no special vocal charm in her voice she sang the florid music with much flexibility, and won enthusiastic applause both in the second act and in Proch's difficult variations on the "Carnival de Venice," which Signorina de Frate sang in the Lesson Scene. Her acting also was clever and full of vivacity, and, being quite young, she looked the part admirably. As Figaro, Signor Gaetano Rebonato was excellent, singing and acting well and with great spirit. Signor Franco de Gregorio as the Count displayed a somewhat hard, thin voice, but his acting was not without merit. The part of Berta, for which Miss Marion Broom was originally announced, was undertaken with good results by Miss Florence Von Etlinger. Signor F. Talamanca made a capital and really humorous Don Bartolo, and the Basilio of Signor Luigi Lucenti was not impossibly grotesque, and the artist sang admirably, and, strange as it may seem in such a part, with considerable dramatic power, in the second act. Signor N. Da Prato and Signor Amati filled the parts of Fiorello and an Officer with ability. A small but efficient orchestra, under Signor C. de Macchi, rendered the familiar music with good effect.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the Musical Comedy, entitled

"A COUNTRY GIRL."

After a prolonged absence, the King's has been visited this week by Messrs. Dudley Bennett and T. C. Wray's company in that charming and ever-popular musical comedy, A Country Girl, one of the most successful of the early Daly productions. The music of Mr. Lionel Monckton has always been a material factor in the success of the comedy, and on Monday evening the large audience gave emphatic evidence of the pleasure derived by repeatedly encoring the principal numbers. Messrs. Bennett and Wray deserve every credit for the manner in which they have launched the production, artists, costumes, and scenery being of the highest class. Mr. R. F. Matthews gives an excellent portrayal of the Naval officer, Geoffrey Challoner, both as singer and actor, and is quite satisfactory. A dry and humorous impersonation of Mr. Raikes (the Rajah of Bhong) is that of Mr. St. John Hammond, his rendering of the songs being exceedingly clear and leading to many repetitions. Mr. Percy Everard is a quaint Sir Joseph Verity, and Douglas Verity is in the sufficiently capable hands of Mr. H. B. Hargreaves. Mr. Norman Howard is good as Lord Anchester (the Minister of Fine Arts), and Granfér Mummery is amusingly presented by Mr. Tom Sheridan. The life and soul of the piece is, of course, Barry (Challoner's servant), and this can be said literally of Mr. Coningsby Brierley. His energy and resource are unequalled, and his efforts meet with unequivocal success. Miss May Rawlinson (who made herself a favourite in the last pantomime here) pleased everybody with her delightful embodiment of Marjorie Joy, her beautiful voice being heard to much advantage. Miss Ethel Negretti is a handsome Princess Melaneh, her rendering of "Under the Deodar" being very expressive. A distinct triumph is earned by Miss Hilda Darrell in the part of Sophie, her acting and singing being worthy of the highest praise. Mrs. St. Quinton and Lady Winchester are capably played by Miss Florence Linton and Miss Sylvia de Lacy. Marked ability is shown by Miss Dorothy Craske as Nan, her lively acting and splendid energy ensuring for her the loudest applause. The chorus is excellent, and the augmented orchestra, under the bâton of Mr. Evelyn Barker, perform their duties skilfully.

THE CORONET.

On Thursday, Sept. 1, the Comedy, by T. W. Robertson, entitled

"SCHOOL."

School was again presented as the last of the Robertson revivals by Mr. Robert Arthur, under Mr. Eade Montefiore's direction, prior to the great happenings at this theatre. Mr. Frederick Sargent makes a handsome, well set-up Lord Beaufoy, and acts with earnestness and sincerity. Miss Viva Birkett is a very lovable and attractive Bella, and Miss Agnes Imlay as Mrs. Sutcliffe and Mr. Fred Permain as Dr. Sutcliffe do well in the parts, and act with a sense of character and proportion. The other parts are virtually sustained by the same cast as some weeks ago. Mr. James Carew is delightful as Jack Poyntz, Mr. O. B. Clarence excels at Beau Farintosh, Mr. William Rokeby is first-rate as Krux, and Miss Rose Begarnie delightfully vivacious as Naomi Tighe. Other small parts are well filled by Miss Beatrice Ainley, May Haysack, and others.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the Play entitled

"UNDER TWO FLAGS."

Of the many important bookings made this season for this handsome theatre, none have secured a warmer reception than that accorded Under Two Flags on Monday night. The play, as everyone knows, is an adaptation of Ouida's famous novel, and the clever acting version of the story affords ample scope for the display of histrionic talent. Miss Agnes Verity seems to throw herself wholly into the character of Cigarette, acting with lightness, and at times with power and passion; Miss Verity's performance wins her an ovation; Mr. Wernham Ryott makes a fine, manly Bertie Cecil Royellieu, and his skilful treatment of the part would be hard to improve upon; the Lord Royellieu of Mr. Charles Brooke is most effective, and bears evidence of careful study; and Mr. Wilfred Jessop does all that is possible with the unthankful part of Berklie; Mr. David Hawthorne gives a thoroughly manly, and at times, vigorous impersonation of Lord Rockingham. His elocution is excellent and his manner refined. The comedy part of Rake, the valet, as sustained by Mr. Harry Benson, goes a long way to ensure the success of the piece. The clever comedian arouses roars of laughter. Princess Venetia Corona has a very attractive representative in Miss O'Neill, her performance being instinct with charm and grace; Miss Angela Stewart as Countess Olga and Miss Madoline Gordon as Lady Beatrice Guinevere sustain their respective characters ably; Mr. Charles E. Johnson as Colonel Chateauroy, the Black Hawk, shows that he has made a conscientious study of the part; Mr. Arthur Redmond as Captain Claude de Chanrelion, Mr. J. O. Cuthbertson as Marshal of France, and Mr. Lawrence Dew as Ezra Baroni are all satisfactory; Miss Tina Langlois shows ability in the rôle of Lavinia, and the remaining parts are well played. To Mr. J. O. Cuthbertson as stage-manager high praise is due.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the Drama, entitled

"THE FIGHTING CHANCE."

This drama, successfully produced during the Smith-Carpenter régime of the Lyceum Theatre, is revived here. It is presented with every sign of success by the Popular Playhouses, Ltd., and is especially well mounted and dressed. Mr. Austen Milroy gives a manly and spirited impersonation of the sorely-tried Stephen Blanchard; while Mr. Arthur Elwyn realistically depicts the villainous Captain Philip Rivers. Mr. Sidney Vautier artistically plays Captain Jim Blanchard; and Mr. Charles B. Bedells is most effective as Syra Mahomed Khan. Mr. Fred J. Waller realises capitally the part of General Sir Christopher Blanchard; Mr. Terence O'Brien is a typical Dr. John Vorland; and Mr. Jas. Wilson (Colonel Paget), and Mr. Roland Daniel (Captain Frazer) put in good work. Mr. Charles Leverton, who admirably fulfils the duties of stage-manager, is excellent as Larry O'Brien; Mr. Alfred Wood does well as the Maharajah of Daultapore; and Mr. A. B. Stanton is impressive as Lal Chandra. Miss Marie Duncan is very successful as Ethel Hardy; Miss Helen Newton plays remarkably well as Marjorie Vorland; Miss Mary Campbell is entirely satisfactory as Joan Fielding; Miss Annie Barclay is good as Mrs. Mackintosh; and Miss Amy Venimore makes a capable Mrs. Vanstart. The staging is elaborate, and the whole production is deserving of warm praise.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Emma Litchfield, entitled

"HIS INDIAN WIFE."

New to Stratford, His Indian Wife created a highly favourable impression on Monday night at the Theatre Royal, the large audience following the interesting story with close attention and freely bestowing applause upon play and players. The piece lends itself to much picturesque treatment in the way of dressing and staging, and of this full advantage has been taken, while its interpretation by Messrs. Travis Green and Arthur Hinton's company is in every way satisfactory. Wild Rose, the Indian maiden who becomes the wife of Hubert Ainsworth, has in Miss Zeila Zillwood a charming, artistic, and natural representative; and as the wiry young English husband Mr. Arthur Hinton (for the nonce forsaking sinister rôles) supplies a popular and convincing performance. The covetous Wolfsfang is graphically delineated by Mr. Graham Winsford; the kindly Lonely Star is portrayed with breadth and feeling by Mr. Travis Green; and White Eagle, the Indian chief, has a dignified and impressive exponent in Mr. Gerald Byrne. Sir Walter Kingsley is portrayed on sound lines by Mr. G. Moreton Williams, and the faithless Lady Kingsley is delineated with much skill by Miss Emma Litchfield. Mr. Tod Squires is a very droll Billy Twiggle; as the rotund negress Black Duck Miss Laura Wright plays in jovial vein; and Miss Maud Evans makes a chic Jeannette.

ROYAL ARTILLERY, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Aug. 29, for the First Time in London, the Romantic Light Opera, in Two Acts, by Talbot Hughes, composed by Frederick Rosse and Raymond King, entitled

"A BEDOUIN BEAUTY."

Sidi ben Hamid	Mr. Murray King
Laila	Miss Flora Macdonald
Abdullah	Mr. Walter Brodie
Hippolyte, Comte de Lys	Mr. Tom Macfarlane
Raoul de St. Juste	Mr. Claude Hogg
Lucille, Comtesse de Lys	Miss Dulcie Garland
Denise	Miss Dora Lane
Henri de L'Orme	Mr. F. Maxwell Stewart
Jacques Beauregarde	Mr. Charles Cautley
Pierre Picquart	Mr. E. Delfosse
Valérie	Miss Raynor Golden
Sidi ben Achmet	Mr. Ardene Linden
Hassan	Mr. Josef Klause
Marabout	Mr. Harry Hardy
Fatma	Miss Maie Hoey
Naila	Miss Nita Alexander
Aisha	Miss Marjorie Maxwell

Messrs. Murray King and Clark have brought their brand-new production, A Bedouin Beauty, to Woolwich, following on its production last week at Eastbourne. The music is of a distinctive character, melodiously written, and full of light and shade. Our local correspondent gave a detailed account of the plot last week, and it is not therefore necessary to repeat it here. It may be recalled, however, that it is a story of the loves of an Arab girl and of a romantic European lady for a French officer, the Oriental splendour of the piece being realistically reproduced. The piece is intensely dramatic at times, but there is a liberal infusion of comic episodes.

As Aisha, Miss Marjorie Maxwell is a typical Arab maiden, and the singing and dancing are exquisite. Miss Dora Lane as Denise sings beautifully, and acts equally so. The Valerie of Miss Raynor Golden is very vivacious; Miss Maie Hoey dances delightfully as Fatma, and is heartily encored. Miss Dulcie Garland is extremely good as Comtesse de Lys, her spouse being funnily played by Mr. Tom Macfarlane. Mr. Walter Brodie as Abdullah causes screams of laughter; Mr. Claude Hogg is well placed as the Administrator; as is also Mr. E. Delfosse as Corporal Pierre. Mr. F. Maxwell Stewart has a capital baritone voice, and uses it effectively in his part of Capt. L'Orme, especially in the long and trying duet in the first act. Mr. Chas. Cautley sings very well indeed, and his acting is also praiseworthy. From Mr. Murray King of course the bulk of the fun is derived, his interpretation of the Kaid being ludicrous in the extreme. The other characters are played by experienced artists, who all add to their reputation. The scenery and dresses are remarkably elaborate, being perfect in every detail. The concerted numbers are well sung, the voices blending beautifully together. Taken altogether, the show is very fine indeed, and well merited the applause accorded it by a packed house.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the Drama, by Walter Melville, entitled

"THE BEGGAR GIRL'S WEDDING."

Melvillean melodrama holds the boards at the Borough Theatre this week, and the popular parts of this commodious suburban playhouse are being liberally patronised. The piece is very adequately staged, and is interpreted by an excellent cast. Mr. Norman B. Cannon is virile and convincing as Jack Cunningham, and Miss Muriel Dean as Bessie Webster, the Beggar Girl, portrays the requisite blend of pathos and sweetness with great success. Mr. William T. Riley depicts the scheming Gilbert Lindsay very forcibly, and the adventuress, Maud Villiers, is duly alluring and callous in the hands of Miss Ernestine Walters. A highly-coloured portrait of the ruffianly Joe Webster is supplied by Mr. Wilfred Bailey, and as the Dodger Mr. Ellis D. Carlyle is effective. Mr. Fred Hodson, in the prominent comedy part of Dicky Storm, is amusing and entertaining, much of his good work being in conjunction with Miss Daisy Meynard, who scores well with her humorous embodiment of Tina Torkington; while Miss Linda Riley is a quaintly grotesque Lizzie. Mr. Herbert Goddard is decidedly good as Robert Grimshaw; Mr. Charles Barclay fulfils all requirements as Doctor Milbank; Mr. Frank McClellan makes a fairly satisfactory Norman Marsh; and Miss Sybil Hare plays Elsie Cunningham gracefully. Minor parts are in quite competent hands.

THE BROADWAY.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Fred Melville, entitled

"THE BAD GIRL OF THE FAMILY."

Crowded houses are following with great interest the story of The Bad Girl of the Family, so graphically told by Mr. Fred Melville. Mr. Melville has been fortunate in engaging such an attractive and clever actress as Miss Violet Crossley for the title-part. She wins all hearts and holds them firmly to the end. Miss Mona Hungerford is a delightful Sally Smithers; Miss Daisie is a charming and sympathetic Gladys Erskine; and Miss Alice Lewis does her best with the part of Mrs. Moore. The male rôles are all well acted. First honours fall to Mr. Luke Foster for a very natural and artistic performance of the part of Barney Gordon; Harry Gordon has a capital representative in Mr. Alexander Bradley; Lieutenant Richard Marsh is played very naturally by Mr. Richard Lane. Breezy, manly, and earnest, he looks and acts admirably. Lord Erskine has a dignified and effective representative in Mr. James C. Taylor; Mr. Tom May is a richly humorous Sammy Snozzle; and Mr. George Belmore's Jerry Holmes is excellent in every way.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the Musical Comedy, entitled

"A CHINESE HONEYMOON."

The cosy and ornate little Kingston playhouse has been packed all this week with audiences anxious to renew acquaintance with one of the most popular of musical plays on tour, A Chinese Honeymoon. On each of its previous appearances in Kingston the play had a most flattering reception, and the admiration of playgoers has not cooled since its last visit. Captained by Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett, the company engaged in its production is of exceptional strength, dramatically and vocally, and nothing but praise can be said of the scenery, effects, and costumes. Miss Gwennie Harcourt is appearing as the amusing waitress Fi-Fi, which she has impersonated close upon 2,000 times, and makes a great hit in the part; Miss Gladys Ivery fills the rôle of Princess Loo-Loo with great charm, and Mr. Frank H. Crimp discloses the possession of a fine baritone in the part of Tom Hatherton; Mr. Will Harman makes an acceptable Mr. Pineapple; and a most comical picture of Hi Lung is presented by Mr. Leonard May. Other artists deserving of particular notice are Miss Gertrude Melville as Mrs. Pineapple, whose singing is particularly pleasing; Mr. Rudolph Gloss as the Emperor of Ylang-Ylang, and Mr. Colin Bryce as the Lord Chancellor. The numerous chorus is exceptionally well trained. The augmented orchestra, which is under the direction of Mr. Clement Locknane, renders valuable assistance.

"THE QUEEN OF SHEBA."

Opera, in Four Acts, by Carl Goldmark, Played for the First Time in London at the Kennington Theatre on Monday, Aug. 29.

King Solomon	Mr. Arthur Winckworth
Assad	Mr. Walter Wheatley
High Priest	Mr. Alexander Richard
Baal-Hanan	Mr. George M. Reid
Sulamith	Miss Beatrice Miranda
Astaroth	Miss Annie Van Dyck
The Queen of Sheba	Miss Doris Woodall

At the Kennington Theatre on Monday night Goldmark's opera, Die Königen von Saba ("The Queen of Sheba"), was successfully performed for the first time in London by the Carl Rosa Opera Company, and had a very hearty welcome. Like Samson and Delila of Saint-Saëns, Goldmark's opera had a long delay owing to its Biblical subject, and although Die Königen von Saba was originally produced on March 10, 1875, at the Hofoper, Vienna, opera-goers had in this country to wait until August, 1910, before hearing the famous work. The Queen of Sheba is scriptural only in relation to the visit of the Queen to King Solomon, as Mosenthal's libretto introduces Assad, who is betrothed to Sulamith, and with these two characters the plot is chiefly concerned. In the story, Assad, a favourite of King Solomon, is engaged to Sulamith, daughter of the High Priest. Assad, sent by the King to meet the Queen of Sheba, happens to see a beautiful woman, with whom he falls deeply in love. When the Queen arrives Assad at once recognises her as the handsome woman. Justly indignant, the haughty Queen repudiates all knowledge of Assad. Sulamith, loving Assad, is quite willing to forgive, and the marriage ceremony, by the King's desire, takes place; but Assad, at the sight of the Queen, who comes with a present to Sulamith, cannot control his passion, and the ceremony is broken off. For this infidelity Assad is condemned to death. The Queen and Sulamith intercede for him with Solomon, and instead of death he is banished to the desert. The Queen secretly is influenced by Assad's love, and even goes to him in the desert; but Assad, at last seeing his folly, repulses her, and his wish is now only that he may see Sulamith again before he dies. The devoted Sulamith at last finds her lover in the desert, but only just in time, as life is fast ebbing away, and Assad dies forgiven in her arms. In such a plot all one's sympathies are for Sulamith and not for the Queen heroine, who seems quite willing to have two lovers, the King and Assad. Carl Goldmark, who was born at Weszthely, in Hungary, in 1830, is the author of several quartets for strings, orchestral, and pianoforte works. His overture "Sakuntala" and symphony "Ländliche Hochzeit" met with a most favourable reception, and the composer has devoted years of study to his first opera, Die Königen von Saba.

The Queen of Sheba is in four acts, and the Carl Rosa company have shown great enterprise in its production. The scenery of Mr. Fred W. Walmsley is picturesque and very effective. In the first act the reception of the Queen by Solomon provides fine stage pictures, only surpassed by the splendid Temple scene in the second act, with the quaintly artistic dresses of the priests performing sacred rites at the altar. The handsome costumes are by Miss T. Harwood, and the dress of the Queen is what the ladies would call a perfect dream of lovely colour. Sulamith also has a charming costume, while the crown and white and gold robes of Solomon were superb in this scene. Musically, Goldmark's opera is strong and on many occasions highly dramatic. There are no airs, as the vocal music is chiefly declaimed after the German method; but the principal beauty of Goldmark's music lies in the orchestral score and several delightful choruses, while few operas show greater mastery of stagecraft or the combination of musical and dramatic features. Much of the libretto is spoken, and here, as in some of the solos, it is a matter of regret that our native or English-speaking artists are not more perfect in the matter of clear enunciation. The performance was in many respects excellent. Miss Doris Woodall as the Queen acted and sang with much ability, and her long solo in the garden scene of the second act was warmly applauded. Sulamith's music was sung with charming effect by Miss Beatrice Miranda; and Mr. Arthur Winckworth made a dignified King Solomon, alike excellent in voice and acting. The High Priest was ably undertaken by Mr. Alexander Richard; and Mr. Walter Wheatley sang well as Assad. Mr. George M. Reid appeared as Baal-Hanan and Miss Aimée Van Dyck as Astaroth. The chorus singing was capital, and the orchestra, under the skilful direction of Mr. Eugene Goossens, greatly distinguished themselves.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

"A WOMAN AND TWO MEN."

Drama, in Four Acts, by Patrick Barnard and John Buckley, Produced for the First Time at the Theatre Royal, Woolwich, on Monday, Aug. 29.

Jack Maxwell	Mr. Harold B. Lewis
Phillip Collister	Mr. Stephen Langton
Guy Maynard	Mr. J. H. Vyvyan
Jim Briton	Mr. Fred Cherry
Saunders	Mr. James Fox
Postman	Mr. John Kiverton
Detective Dobson	Mr. Bernard Shannon
Sybil Maynard	Miss Maud Kirwan
Vivienne Verney	Miss Grace Jones
Elsie Warner	Miss Phillis Spalding
Madeline Morden	Miss Geraldine Montrose

Although a story of everyday life, the above play has some unique situations, and is full of thrilling incidents, with numerous comic interludes to relieve the tension. Madeline is left in charge of Eisie, by the latter's father, who died abroad. Before his demise he sent Madeline written instructions that she is to take every care of his daughter, who has been blind from birth and requires constant attention. Phillip Collister intercepts the letter, opens it, and realises the fact that the child mentioned stands between him and a fortune of £50,000. He has an accomplice in Vivienne Verney, who had contracted a bigamous marriage with Guy Maynard, but shortly after forsook him, and is believed to be dead by Guy, who marries his former sweetheart Sybil. On the return home from the honeymoon Guy is confronted by Vivienne.

The second act opens in Guy Maynard's house. Guy is being blackmailed by Vivienne, who has almost ruined him. Jack Maxwell, who is in love with Madeline, enters with the child, having rescued her from the lake into which she has been thrown by Phillips, who accuses Jack of the deed, but is thwarted by Jim Briton, Jack's devoted friend. An attempt is made by Phillip to get possession of Elsie, who is being taken to London by Madeline. Jim takes the child's place under the cloak, whilst he (Jack) takes the child. Phillip appears, and demands that the child be given up to him. Throwing the mantle open he is confronted by Jim, who, with a revolver, keeps him at bay until the engine whistles, which denotes that Madeline, Jack, and the child are safe in the train.

In Jack's bedroom, which he has placed at the disposal of Madeline and Elsie, they are safe for a time. Phillip, however, has engaged a detective to trace the whereabouts of the fugitives, but Jim has also followed, and puts them on their guard. There is loud knocking at the door, and Madeline, disguised as an old hag, lets Phillip and the detective in, but Jack places the child in the grandfather clock just as they enter, to find Jack apparently asleep in his chair. Phillip and the detective search the house, but find nothing. Later Madeline, under Jack's instructions, informs Phillip that if he will go to the back entrance he will find what he wants by climbing a ladder. Phillip falls into the trap, enters, and makes his way to the bed. Madeline has followed up the ladder, and the child is handed to her by Jack, and Phillip removes the coverlet only to find Jim instead of Elsie.

The third act opens in Phillip's house, in which Jim has obtained a situation. Jack and Madeline disguised enter, and in the absence of Phillip, search for the missing letter, Jim also filling his pockets with papers. Vivienne arrives, and is followed by Guy, who is further persecuted by her. Sybil enters, and demands from Guy an explanation of Vivienne's relationship to him. Guy, failing to respond, Vivienne declares that she is his wife. Guy is in great distress at the trouble he has brought upon Sybil, and attempts suicide, but in the nick of time Jack enters with Sybil and stays the rash act. Sybil, who is befriended by Madeline, re-enters with Elsie, and is met by Phillip and Vivienne, and while the former engages her in conversation, the latter chloroforms the child and carries her away. Madeline learns that the child has been stolen, and asks for paper to send a note to the police. Jim produces a paper, which he hands to Jack who, on examination, finds that it is a marriage certificate of Vivienne and Phillip, dated 1900, thus proving that Sybil is his lawful wife.

The last act opens in Vivienne's room, where gambling takes place. Sybil and the child are prisoners in the house. Vivienne comes in, and Phillip produces a box of chocolates, one of which is poisoned, and extracts a promise from her to give them to Elsie. The child offers Vivienne a sweet, but she refuses it, and Elsie is about to eat it when Vivienne snatches it from her, much to the wonderment of the child. Phillip returns and notes the fatal chocolate has not been eaten, and accuses Vivienne of cowardice, to which she replies that she will do his dirty work no longer. This so enrages Phillip that he strangles her and hides her body behind a screen. Madeline enters disguised as a youth, which Philip penetrates. A terrific struggle ensues. There is a heavy thunderstorm meanwhile, and during the progress of the fight Phillip is struck dead by lightning.

Miss G. Montrose has a most able company, not a weak point to be discerned anywhere. As Jack Maxwell Mr. Harold B. Lewis is very fine, and lightens the part at times with a tinge of light comedy that adds to its effect; Mr. J. H. Vyvyan is well placed as Guy Maynard; for cold-blooded villainy commend us to Mr. Stephen Langton's Phillip Collister; his scenes with Miss Grace Jones as Vivienne Verney, his tool and accomplice, were most powerful; the lady, too, was admirable in the last act with the blind child. Mr. Fred Cherry infuses a large amount of fun into his rendering of Jim Briton; most pathetic is the part of the blind Elsie, and little Miss Phillis Spalding gained the hearts of the audience with her acting; Sybil Maynard was finely acted by Miss Maud Kirwan; Miss Geraldine Montrose as Madeline Morden plays admirably in a difficult rôle, made more so by the many disguises involved in the impersonation; Saunders is well played by Mr. James Fox, who, in addition is also manager and producer of the play. Other capable artists do full justice to the rôles allotted them. The incidental music is composed and arranged by Mr. Graham Dunstan. The drama is well dressed and mounted, and received a hearty reception from a full "house."

A PROPOSITION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—May I, through the medium of your widely-circulated paper, ask the managers of provincial theatres a question?

The present system of touring as regards plays, not musical comedies, is, I think, acknowledged to be not so very satisfactory. Would they, therefore, be open to book a thoroughly efficient company of players, each member a qualified artist, no amateurs, presenting a répertoire of plays, including possibly those by authors of not yet acknowledged position, but whose plays have been read and "passed" by a competent reading committee?

Modern plays, or plays by acknowledged present day authors, do not inevitably "draw" on tour, and there are not wanting people who say that London successes are not necessarily required on tour, particularly in seaside towns and health resorts, the theatre-going population of which is composed the greater part of the year of visitors.

Will any manager to whom my suggestion appeals be good enough to write to me, as my scheme and system could be put in operation by me within a very short space of time.—Yours faithfully, J. HENRY TWYFORD.

ANNUAL OUTING OF THE STAFF OF THE LYRIC OPERA HOUSE, HAMMERSMITH, AT WINDSOR, ON SUNDAY, AUG. 28.

The annual outing of the staff of the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, took place on Sunday, Aug. 28. The party (staff and friends), numbering sixty-seven, met at Paddington at 10 a.m., special saloons being reserved by the Great Western Railway Co, and the party joined the steam launch Britannia at Windsor. Here they were met by Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Croke, who motored from town. Lunch was served on board. The health of Mr. and Mrs. Croke was proposed by Mr. Fred S. Jennings, the general-manager of the Lyric (who was accompanied by his son Godfrey). The toast was heartily received. The party landed for an hour at Marlow, and sports were indulged in. The tug-of-war Front versus Stage Staff resulted in a victory for the former. The ladies' egg-and-spoon race was won by Miss Roworth, who received as prize a pair of silver hair brushes, presented by Mrs. Wentworth Croke. Other events brought forward suitable prizes, and the party returned to the launch, where high tea was served, and Windsor was reached about eight o'clock, the party returning by special train to Paddington after a most happy and enjoyable day.

COLONIAL GOSSIP.

Melville Melodramas in Johannesburg.
THE Melville melodramas are still doing great business at Johannesburg. Mr. Alf. Wyburd, Mr. Frank Wheeler's tireless lieutenant, ascribes their success to the fact that they are well-written, presenting the life of all classes in an authentic up-to-date style. The story is always coherent, carrying you swiftly from grave to gay, but never losing grip. Each play has four acts, and some thirteen or fourteen scenes, and these are changed in the twinkle of an eyelid. The stage is darkened for a trice, and hey presto! you have "planed" from Bermondsey to Bayswater! Outward bound the Melville company went straight from London to Kimberley, so that for once the City of Diamonds enjoyed the thrills of a real first night.

Cromwell's "Cropper."
MR. WILLIAM CROMWELL, who makes his entrance in The Arcadians by falling from an aeroplane, had a rather exciting experience while practising this fall at Ballarat recently. The aeroplane strikes the tree, and, canting forward, projects the comedian on to a grassy hillock, down which he rolls, into the group of Arcadians. The machine, on this occasion, had too much impetus on, and Mr. Cromwell was thrown against the side of the hill, rebounding into the pool of real water on the stage. The audience did laugh!

"The Whip" in Australia.
SOME idea of the preliminary preparations which are required for the Australian production of The Whip by J. C. Williamson may be gauged by the fact that for the galloping machines alone, of which eight are required to accommodate all the horses that take part in the big race, for each machine no less than 600ft. of timber (Australian spotted gum), 900 bolts and nuts, 100ft. of special hair belting, 200 steel wheels, 200 axles, and 800 fibre washers are used. The work is under the supervision of Mr. Rocke Phillips, of Her Majesty's Theatre, Sydney.

South African Vesta Tilley.
TINY Miss Bertha Chiefitz, a talented youngster not yet ten years old, has already won a gold medal for violin playing, and in Johannesburg leads a three-fold existence as a midget star of polite vaudeville, a school-child, and a music-student. Thus early Bertha wears a little mannish evening suit, an opera hat, and a Vesta Tilley smile, and sings with intensity about "coming home with the milk," and other mid-Victorian delights. From her fifth year Bertha has, according to the Cape Argus Weekly, graced the stage, both with the Wheeler and Rayne managements, and the only Leonard christened her the "South African Vesta Tilley." She is a sweet child, and very clever; and may accomplish much if she doesn't decide to retire on her laurels at fifteen.

World's Great Stars for Johannesburg.
MR. ARTHUR DE JONG, of the well-known Johannesburg firm, De Jong and Black, intends to give South Africans a chance of hearing the world's great stars. He has engaged Miss Marie Hall, the celebrated violiniste, and Paderewski may also be induced to visit Johannesburg and other S.A. towns. Mr. De Jong, chatting to a Sunday Times (Johannesburg) representative, said it was due to his father's influence with the great musical artists of the day that he had induced some of them to agree to appear in South Africa. His father was the pioneer of popular concerts in the North of England.

Memorial to Late Alfred Dampier.
THERE is a movement on foot in Sydney to erect a memorial to the late Mr. Alfred Dampier, over his grave in Waverley Cemetery. Many thousands of Australians, young and old, will recall with pleasure the parts which Mr. Dampier played during a long stage career. Both on and off the stage he was a gifted and charming man.

Julius Knight's Supper Parties.
THE announcement in Sydney that Mr. Julius Knight was making his farewell appearance there in Henry of Navarre, and that after his season in the West and Melbourne he would return to London, was the signal for remarkable activity on the part of Sydney hostesses. A series of supper parties was hastily organised, and invitations to the popular actor became so numerous that he found himself embarrassed with five for his last Saturday in Sydney. The fact that they were all to be held at the one hotel did not help to lighten the perplexity of the invited guest at this social problem.

"THE NAKED TRUTH."

That exceedingly humorous and successful comedy The Naked Truth has found a new home at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, having been transferred to that house from Wyndham's Theatre last Monday night. Mr. Charles Hawtrey returned to the cast after a short, well-earned rest, and had an enthusiastic reception from a highly appreciative audience. As Bunny Darrell, Mr. Hawtrey has a part that fits him like the proverbial glove, and he plays it to a continual accompaniment of merriment. The humorous situations arising from the peculiar properties possessed by the magic ring, which forces its wearer to speak the "naked truth," still evoke roars of laughter. Mr. Arthur Playfair as James Darrell, Bunny's uncle, is in his happiest vein, and hits off the character to the life. The Mr. Hayter of Mr. Eric Lewis is a delightful piece of pure comedy, and his fine performance is greatly appreciated. Mr. George Bellamy gives a most humorous impersonation of Prosser, Bernard Darrell's secretary. Mr. Ernest Thesiger makes an excellent Teddie Lestrange; and Mr. Lyle's performance of the quack, Dr. Masters, is a clever impersonation. Miss Frances Wetherall furnishes a natural and telling rendering of the rôle of Bunny's mother, Mrs. Darrell; as the fascinating Mrs. Hayter Miss Maud Cressall supplies a thoroughly sound performance; Miss Phyllis Embury charmingly portrays the youthful heroine, Norah Creighton; and Miss Vera Maitland does well as the French woman, Mme. Favre. Miss Clare Greet makes an excellent Mrs. Duckett; the Hammond of Miss Kate Doxford is a meritorious performance; and Messrs. Holliday Atilay and Lionel Williams, in the parts of Mr. Sawyer and Mr. Freeman, of the Syrian Cement Co., do useful work. The Naked Truth is preceded by that clever little piece, The Wiles of a Widow, which is an acceptable prelude to the comedy.

WE regret to record the death of Mr. Bert Conway, brother of Queenie and Edie Leighton, who passed away, after a short illness, at the St. Thomas's Home, on Wednesday, Aug. 24, at the early age of forty-two. Mr. Conway was for seven years stage-manager for Mr. Wentworth Croke's The Christian company. The funeral took place at the Earlsfield Cemetery on Saturday last. Floral tokens of respect were sent by Miss Valli Valli, Miss Margaret Dutton, Miss Eva Jones, Miss Dorothy Clifton, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brandon Bedells, Mr. and Mrs. J. De Saxe, Mr. and Mrs. Bobbie Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Scott (Dolly Harmer), the staff of the Putney Hippodrome, Mr. A. Collins, Mr. M. Leveaux, Mr. G. H. White, Mr. F. C. Cockerill, Mr. N. Spencer, and all the members of the family. The Misses Leighton wish to thank all friends for the very kind letters and expressions of sympathy.

IN our issue of Aug. 27 we stated that Miss Hettie Gale was then appearing in the Lucky Lisa company. Miss Gale's engagement with that company finished on June 25.

THE MANAGERS' CLUB.

The members of the Managers' Club are settling down comfortably in their new quarters at 5, Wardour-street, whither they removed at the end of June. The new premises are right in the centre of Theatreland, almost overlooking Leicester-square, and within sight of two tubes—the Bakerloo and the Hampstead. They are far superior to the old premises in Savoy Mansions in respect of lightness, brightness, and general convenience, and present advantages impossible in the former.

The premises secured by the club embrace three floors, with two rooms on each. The first to be reached is the reception-room, an elegantly-furnished lounge, with piano, armchairs, and settees, and snugly carpeted floor. Adorning the walls are half-a-dozen engravings of scenes from Shakespeare, presented to the club by Mr. Rollo Balmain, and from the ceiling depend handsome electroliers, which give a powerful light. A large selection of newspapers and illustrated magazines of a very comprehensive character are taken, including, of course, the professional journals, music hall as well as theatrical. Adjoining is the admirably-appointed buffet, where luncheon, tea, and dinner are served, meals being obtainable between the hours of 12 and 10. The prices are low, table d'hôte being available at 1s. 6d., while a light lunch, consisting of cut from the joint and two vegetables, is served for 1s. Two stewards, in smart livery, attend to the wants of members.

Higher up one reaches the "silence room," a conveniently fitted apartment devoted to writing. Here are tables and writing materials in any quantity, each table being furnished with a reading lamp. The portrait of Sir Herbert Tree is conspicuous on the walls, which are also decorated with rare old prints of the celebrated G. V. Brooke, presented to the club by Mr. William Giffard. Cupboards are in course of erection where members may keep their dress clothes in readiness for the theatre and store other articles whenever desired. Next is the card room, where provision is made for games in abundance. The pictures in this room, as well as the clock, are the gift of Mr. Wentworth Croke.

The billiard room, that indispensable adjunct of a social club, is found on the fourth floor. In the old premises billiards were practically impossible owing to the defective light, but here the sun reaches every corner of the room, while at night electricity is the illuminant. A full-sized match-board is provided, and a "marker" is always in attendance. A telephone to the steward is fitted here as well as in the card-room. The general telephone is also at the disposal of members.

An "exit in case of fire" leads up to the roof, whereon it is proposed to cultivate a garden. The elements have not been encouraging to open-air resorts, but it is hoped to get the roof in order for next summer, when it should prove a decided acquisition to the attractions of the institution.

The Managers' Club, it may be added, exists for the purpose of bringing touring and resident managers, proprietors, and all interested in theatrical enterprise into touch with each other. Theatrical and music hall managers, acting-managers, and box-office managers are all eligible, and so rapidly is the membership increasing that it is intended shortly to fix an entrance fee. The annual subscription is two guineas, the financial year beginning April 1, but members joining in October pay a half-year.

Touring managers find the club especially useful, as it furnishes a rendezvous while they are in town, and while they are travelling the secretary follows the tour and re-addresses all communications. Mr. M. V. Leveaux is chairman, and the hon. treasurer Mr. J. Bannister Howard, while the committee includes Sir Herbert Tree and Mr. Edward Terry. The secretary is Mr. M. Martin, who has held office since 1907, and whose experience in a similar capacity elsewhere has much to do with the prosperity of the club.

COMPOSITIONS from the pen of Paganini will shortly be published for the first time. The famous violinist wrote some quartets for violin, viola, guitar, and 'cello, six of which have been for some time in the possession of Mr. Alfred Burnett, the MSS. being apparently in Paganini's own handwriting. Movements from these quartets have now been arranged for violin and pianoforte by Mr. Henry Tolhurst, and are being published for the first time by Messrs. Ascherberg, Hopwood, and Crew. The six pieces now being published are Adagio in D major, Adagio in C major, Larghetto in D flat major, Largo in G flat major, Moto Perpetuo in A major, and Adagio Cantabile in D major.

PIERROTS AND PAGEANTRY.

A happy reunion was effected on Tuesday when the Follies returned to the Apollo Theatre—resplendent in a new coat of white and gold—and received a hearty welcome from a brilliant house, crowded to the doors. Mr. Pelissier obtained an affectionate greeting, and for Mr. Lewis Sydney, Miss Gwennie Mars, and the rest of the merry troupe welcome scarcely less hearty was waiting. Every artist was in the best form, and the various items of the programme were rendered with the smartness characteristic of the troupe. The entertainment was fresh and sparkling throughout, and there was scarcely a moment's cessation of laughter, the feminine portion of the audience, indeed, growing quite hysterical.

Amid a set scene of characteristic black and white proceedings began, an exhilarating opening chorus being followed by selections by the various members of the troupe—dainty songs by the lady Follies, droll stories by Mr. Lewis Sydney, a whimsical Arcadian shepherd impersonation by Mr. Pélissier, and marvellous imitations of leading actors by Mr. Morris Harvey. Gastronomic quartets "for six voices" provided food for mirth, a missionary being cooked by cannibals before the eyes of the audience, and Mr. Pélissier figuring as a Scotch Jew in a realisation of "Haggis." "A Voice Trial," in which the efforts of aspirants for Folly fame were burlesqued, also proved a severe test of the risible faculties.

A wealth of comic surprises was furnished in "Pélissier's Potted Pageant," in which the craze for pageantry is satirised amid a scene representing a mediæval castle and surrounding lands, some amazing effects of perspective being gained. The pageant is opened by a deliciously droll speech by the Mayor, and resolves itself into a veritable comic history of England, kings and queens disporting themselves in ludicrous fashion. Godiva's ride through Coventry is represented with the lady hidden entirely by a huge screen, in deference to the objections raised by local societies. The last episode shows ladies and cavaliers enjoying a "Cinderella" or "Small and Early" dance, when they are disturbed by Oliver Cromwell and his Apaches. The castle is stormed amid a downpour of real rain, the performers, in an advanced stage of dejection, vainly trying to shelter themselves under umbrellas.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

It would be no exaggeration to say that Mr. Lewis Waller has never filled a character which fits him better than that of the Marquis de Bardelys in Bardelys the Magnificent. First of all, the atmosphere of the drama is of the kind that he revels in; he has full scope for the play of all the emotions, and he is provided with an opportunity of displaying his talents in a humorous vein, an opportunity which he uses to distinct advantage. Then again, the piece—making allowances, of course, for the clipping and patching which a new production must inevitably undergo—is worthy of his skill; and thus there is an incentive for him to give of his best. He should soon place the part of Marcel de St. Pol, Marquis de Bardelys, on the same pinnacle of assured success as that delightful character Monsieur de Beaucaire.

The play, the period of which is the reign of Louis XIII., opens with the scene of a supper at the Palace de Bardelys, where Marcel de St. Pol, the Marquis, a courtier with a high sense of honour, a gentleman to his finger-tips, and who is in high favour with the King for gaiety and gallantry, is entertaining his friends. His amours are the talk of Paris, and he is the hero of an admiring circle of friends. In the same way the Comte de Castleroux, who is numbered amongst his guests, is the butt of many a jest for his failure to woo the fair Roxalanne, the daughter of the Vicomte de Lavedan, a task which has been set him by Louis XIII. The King's wrath and exile threaten him, and, stung by the taunts of his companions, he flings in the face of Bardelys a challenge to succeed in the wooing of Roxalanne where he has failed. The entrance of the King defers matters for a while, and when the challenge is again mentioned the King forbids its acceptance. His Majesty listens to the pleadings of Bardelys on behalf of Castelroux, upon whom he bestows an "honourable banishment," making him Chief Commissioner of Toulouse. He listens in jest to a proposal by Bardelys that he should play the part of the Sultan Haroun al Raschid now and again for the benefit of his subjects. There is an effective scene when Bardelys, on a point of honour, refuses to obey the commands of Louis in connection with the wager, and the latter retires, threatening all sorts of dire calamities to those who oppose his will. The curtain descends upon a final toast, proposed by Bardelys, to "Roxalanne de Lavedan: that is, Roxalanne de Bardelys that shall be."

Bardelys, without loss of time, departs on his way to woo and win. He meets with many adventures on the way, and in a deserted barn discovers an Orleanist, Rene de Lesperon, mortally wounded, who entrusts to his care some love-letters and a locket to be given to his betrothed. It is a very affecting death-scene, and hardly has De Lesperon breathed his last when a troop of soldiers arrive seeking to arrest him. In a cleverly-contrived scene they mistake Bardelys for De Lesperon, and vice versa. Pursued and wounded, Bardelys at length reaches sanctuary by climbing the ivy up to an open window from which light is streaming. It is the room of Roxalanne, and the meeting is as romantic as anyone could desire. It is a case of love at first sight, but the Marquis, though he conceals his identity, is a little staggered to find that Roxalanne holds Bardelys in utter contempt on hearsay evidence. The wounded man is cared for by the girl's parents, in the meanwhile impersonating the dead Orleanist. For ten days he remains their guest at Toulouse, and a perfect love idyl between he and Roxalanne is disturbed only by the whimpering jealousy of a weakling dandy, Roxalanne's cousin. It provides a pretty situation, which is abruptly changed by the arrival of Castelroux, who seeks to arrest De Lesperon. Then events pass swiftly. The dead Orleanist is sought after by his sweetheart, and there are heart-searchings when she encounters Roxalanne. The latter, in a fit of jealous madness, betrays her lover, whom Castelroux, for his own ends, professes to believe is De Lesperon.

Then comes the most striking act of all, where all the dramatic elements gather themselves together for a startling dénouement. It opens with Bardelys in prison at Toulouse and Roxalanne, no longer in ignorance of his identity, pleading for his life with Castelroux. It is of no avail, however, and in the subsequent Court scene—which, by the way, provides a curious comparison with our modern methods of justice—Bardelys, unable to prove his identity, is condemned to the block. Then just as he has made his final futile appeal, and declares that the King could identify him, there is a stir at the back of the populace, and the tall figure of Louis XIII. stalks into the centre of the Court with the startling effect of a perfect melodrama. It provides the supreme finishing touch, and the play terminates with the reward of the sorely-tried pair and the unravelling of a very tangled tale of love.

In such a brief and inadequate summary it is impossible to convey the charm and distinction that pervades the play. It is full of the spirit of historical romance, and there are many pretty scenes possessing colour and movement. The play was received with the utmost warmth on the opening night at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, and Mr. Waller was evidently very embarrassed by repeated calls. The acting of the entire company was excellent throughout. Miss Madge Titheradge, one of the most promising of our younger leading ladies, plays the part of Roxalanne with delicacy and feeling. She makes the character an intelligent one, albeit perhaps a trifle heavy once or twice. Her chief triumphs are scored in the love scenes.

Mr. Herbert Jarman provided a fine dignified study as Louis XIII., and Mr. William Haviland displayed a finish in his portrayal of the Comte de Castelroux that sufficiently proved his ability. Mrs. A. B. Tapping was perfectly at home in the rôle of the Vicomtesse de Lavedan, and her study was very well executed. Mr. Alec F. Thompson embodied all the qualities of a successful page.

The play is beautifully mounted, and the dresses have been designed with elegant taste by Mr. Tom Haslewood. Mr. Waller has been ably assisted in the work of production by Mr. Herbert Jarman.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP

Her Majesty the Queen has graciously consented to become a patroness of the Royal General Theatrical Fund.

Sir Herbert Tree's little book on "Henry VIII. and His Court," which has been published by Cassell and Co., Ltd., is interesting even to those familiar with the literature on the subject. At intervals there peeps out in the text an expression of individuality, of personal and original opinion; and the glimpse it gives of Sir Herbert's character is deeply interesting. His quotations are never hackneyed, and are always of value, notably his inclusion of Brewer's pithy note on the "mystery" in which King Harry veiled his intentions and opinions.

Very pithy, too, are the remarks on Wolsey's diplomatic schemes; and, for his brief biographies of Anne Boleyn and Katharine Sir Herbert has culled many dainty points from his authorities. Sir Herbert is, perhaps, inclined in describing the success of Henry's anti-Papal action, to lay too much stress on the cleverness of the King's tactics, and too little on the facts that the majority of his subjects were on his side, and that the strength and prosperity which they had regained after the exhausting Wars of the Roses had made England justly feared on the Continent.

But the cream of the pamphlet is the extenuation of Sir Herbert's methods in producing Shakespeare, "which have been assailed in a recent article," writes Sir Herbert, "with almost equal brilliancy and vehemence. The writer tells us that there are two different kinds of plays, the realistic and the symbolic. Shakespeare's plays, we are assured, belong to the latter category. 'The scenery,' it is insisted, 'not only may, but should be imperfect.'

"This seems an extraordinary doctrine," says Sir Herbert, and he proceeds to attack it with satire. Referring to the demand made in the article for "symbolism," he says in a footnote:—"Personally, I have been a sentimental adherent of symbolism since my first Noah's Ark. Ever since I first beheld the generous curves of Mrs. Noah, and first tasted the insidious carmine of her lips, have I regarded the wife of Noah as symbolical of the supreme type of womanhood.

"I have learnt that the symbolists, when painting a meadow, regard purple as symbolical of bright green; but we live in a realistic age and have not yet overtaken the art nouveau of the pale future. It is difficult to deal seriously with so much earnestness. I am forced into symbolic parable. Artemus Ward, when delivering a lecture on his great moral panorama, pointed with his wand to a blur on the horizon, and said: 'Ladies and gentlemen, that is a horse—the artist who painted that picture called on me yesterday with tears in his eyes, and said he would disguise that fact from me no longer!' He, too, was a symbolist."

"It is the painter, not the frame-maker," says Sir Herbert, "who upholds the art of painting; it is the poet, not the book-binder, who carries the torch of poetry.

"There are plays in which symbolism is appropriate—those of Maeterlinck, for instance. But if, as has been said, Maeterlinck resembles Shakespeare, Shakespeare does not resemble Maeterlinck. Let us remember that Shakespeare was a humanist, not a symbolist." A spirited little controversy like this is a good thing for Shakespeare, and not at all a bad thing for Maeterlinck.

Mr. Forbes Robertson, after his long vacation spent with his wife (Gertrude Elliott) and children at Miss Maxine Elliott's charming country residence at Bushey Heath, in England, will—as mentioned by us last week—return by the s.s. Laurentic, leaving Liverpool on Sept. 17, to resume the run of The Passing of the Third Floor Back in America, and reopening for a week at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, on Monday, Sept. 26, in consequence of the curtailment of his visit there in May on account of King Edward's death.

On Oct. 3 Mr. Forbes Robertson and his London company return to Maxine Elliott's Theatre, New York, where the record run of Jerome's phenomenally successful play was only interrupted by reason of an official invitation from the Governor-General of Canada for him to play there prior to his return to England. He will, however, only be able to remain here a fortnight, and then adjourns to the Majestic, Brooklyn, and the New Circle Theatre, New York City, for successive weeks, subsequently visiting the Adelphi, Philadelphia, Belasco, Washington, and Auditorium, Baltimore.

After further single weeks at the Shubert, Brooklyn, and West End Theatre, New York City, Mr. Forbes Robertson will be seen for three nights each at New Haven, Hartford, Providence, and Albany, arriving at Boston (New Shubert Theatre) just before Christmas for a season limited to one month, and towards the end of January makes his welcome appearance at the Garrick Theatre, Chicago. There, no doubt, he could remain for the rest of the season, but for contracts to appear in February at Minneapolis, followed by personal visits to the New Shubert Theatres in St. Paul and Kansas City, after which he will be seen at the Garrick, St. Louis, the Masonic, Louisville, Milwaukee (Alhambra), Cincinnati (Lyric), Indianapolis (New Murat), Pittsburg (Alvin), Cleveland (Colonial), for single weeks. Then come three nights each at the Garrick Theatre, Detroit, Rochester, and Syracuse, in which neighbourhood he will terminate his second American season towards the end of May.

Mr. Forbes Robertson will rely throughout on The Passing of the Third Floor Back, which will attain its 1,000th performance in America and England in the course of this comprehensive tour, more than 500 performances having been given in New York and London, England, alone.

"E. F. S.," in the Westminster Gazette, in criticising our leading article of Aug. 13, admits the accuracy of our statements, but objects to our deduction. The only "deduction" we made was to point out the existing circumstance, i.e., that practically "one act one scene" is the rule nowadays for dramatic authors. But the modern playwright who knows his business seems, both here and in France, to be able to overcome the difficulties of a single scene for each act. And we fancy that if a really strong historical play were written, a manager would be found able to meet the case by expedients.

In connection with the benefit to Mrs. Ernest Carpenter, a special appeal to "all prominently connected with the theatrical world, and all having at heart the interests of the stage," is being made in a letter bearing the autograph signature of Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, who is, with his usual kindness, taking a great interest in the success of this benefit, and will himself appear at the Lyceum on Oct. 4. Contributions may be sent to Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, at the office of The Era.

Mr. Percy Hutchison, with his Wyndham's Theatre company and production of Brewster's Millions, eclipsed all records for the Pier Theatre, Eastbourne, on opening there last Monday evening. The increased prices charged for this visit made no difference to the enormous demand for seats, and long before the curtain rose hundreds had been turned away, unable to secure even standing room.

The Savoy Theatre will reopen on Monday, Sept. 12, with Messrs. Chappell's clever company, "The Grotesques," who have made themselves favourites in London at the Small Queen's Hall and at the variety theatres, and who have just ended a very successful provincial tour. The programme will include several new sketches and numbers, and will conclude, as before, with the diverting Village Concert.

The F. R. Benson companies, North and South, have commenced their autumn campaign. The South company started operations at Gravesend on Aug. 22, meeting with a very hearty reception both there and in the towns visited later. The North company are busy rehearsing at Exeter for the opening of their tour there next Monday, Sept. 5. They will, as usual, carry a répertoire of some twelve of Shakespeare's most popular plays, the leading parts again being taken by Mr. Henry Herbert and Miss Gladys Vanderzee. The general manager of these two organisations is Mr. W. H. Savery.

Messrs. Murray King and Clark are having a record season at their charming little Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne. "House full" boards are the rule, and many hundreds turned away nearly every night. A novel idea (initiated by these managers) of having day bills printed in French as well as English, has become very popular with the large number of French visitors.

"Priscilla Runs Away," which is doing phenomenal business at the Haymarket Theatre, starts on its provincial career at the Grand Theatre, Blackpool, on Sept. 26. The play is being rehearsed by Mr. Chas. La Trobe, and the company has been carefully selected and has received the approval of Mr. Herbert Trench. The tour is under the direction of Mr. J. E. Watson, who was connected for a number of years with the Hutchison management, and who has recently been touring the provinces with his The New Boy, A Country Mouse, and The Sowers companies.

The cast includes the well-known names of Miss Beatrice Lindley, who created such a success as Kitty in The Marriage of Kitty, and as Suzanne in The Freedom of Suzanne, and who recently starred throughout the provinces with Miss Maud Allan; Mr. Clifton Alderson, fresh from his recent success at the Criterion as Sir Brian in When Knights Were Bold, plays the Grand Duke. The dresses and scenery are exact replicas of those at the Haymarket. With such a play, company, and production, a long and successful tour for Priscilla Runs Away may confidently be predicted.

Mr. Robert Arthur and Mr. Cowen are sending out a short tour of the new farce, Looking for Trouble, by Hélène Gingold and Laurence Cowen, starting at Reading on Sept. 12. The company includes Miss Gillian Scaife, Miss Rhoda Beresford, Miss Ruth Shepherd, Miss Barbara Huntley; and Messrs. Warburton Gamble, Fred Grove, Charles Fancourt, Frank Tennant, Frank Attree, and George Ingleton.

Captain Basil Hood has been to Ischl, and has there submitted his adaptation of The Count of Luxembourg, which will eventually be seen at Daly's Theatre, to Dr. Willner and Mr. Lehar, the author and composer, who are quite satisfied with Captain Hood's clever additions and alterations.

Miss Florence Imeson, who has scored unprecedented triumphs in South Africa, and has had two unique experiences there—she opened the first theatre ever erected in Rhodesia, and she had a gold mine christened after her—has been specially engaged by Sir Rupert Clarke and Mr. Clyde Meynell for entire lead in musical comedy for Australasia. On or about Nov. 19 she will leave by ss. Rotorua for Melbourne, in which city she will make her first bow to "our Australian cousins" on Boxing Night as Peggy Quainton (Miss Ellaline Terriss's part) in The Gay Gordons.

Mr. Charles Darrell, the well-known dramatic author, has gone to that delightful little village, Codsall, near Wolverhampton, where he is busily engaged on his new play, Where Angels Fear to Tread, which is to be produced by Mrs. Frank Bateman at the Theatre Royal, Sheffield, on the 19th inst.

The Theatre Royal, Limerick, was put up for public auction at the Mart on the 16th ult. by the Brothers Ebrill, auctioneers, and after very close bidding was knocked down to Mr. George Victor Fogerty, son of the late popular proprietor, Mr. Robert Fogerty, at the high figure of £1,500. Offers of £1,000 came from several well-known speculators, the secretary of the Operatic Society going as far as £1,100. The new manager is very popular.

The Theatre Royal, Birmingham, has reopened under triumphant auspices, after a long summer vacation, on Monday, a romantic play, Bardelys the Magnificent, being produced for the first time on any stage by Mr. Lewis Waller's London company. The auditorium presents an attractive appearance after the renovations, which have been carried out on a very artistic scheme.

Mr. W. F. Crowe, the late Mr. Ernest Carpenter's manager at Brighton, Bristol, and the Lyceum, London, has left the Lyceum Theatre in order to undertake the business-management for Mr. Hall Caine at the Garrick Theatre.

A wreath of bay-leaves gathered from Shakespeare's garden at Stratford-on-Avon has just been sent, on behalf of the birthplace trustees, to the birthplace of Goethe at Frankfort-on-Main, to commemorate the anniversary of Goethe's birthday. The wreath bore the following quotation from A Midsummer Night's Dream: "For everlasting bond of fellowship." An exchange of wreaths between the birthplace of Shakespeare and the birthplace of Goethe has been the custom for some years.

The phenomenal success of Tantalising Tommy at the Playhouse, where it has now passed its two hundredth performance, may justly be attributed to the remarkable way in which the piece has been acted. It is an example of light material dignified by artistic treatment; of comedy acting of the finest sort applied to farcical situations and to light though pleasing characters. Mr. Cyril Maude's James Cottenham is a tour de force of delicate drollery; and the loveliness of Miss Marie Löhr, and her vivacious simplicity, are irresistible. These gifted artists are admirably supported by Mr. Kenneth Douglas as Harry Killick, Mr. Fred Lewis, Mr. John Beauchamp, and Miss Maidee Hope.

Mr. Robert Arthur, on Wednesday, at the Coronet Theatre, will present Miss Marion Terry in Mme. Albanesi's play Sister Anne, with a cast including Mr. Norman Trevor, Mr. Frederic Sargent, Mr. C. Aubrey Smith, Mr. Henry Kitts, Mr. Arthur Cleave, Miss Rosina Filippi, Miss Ruth Bower, Miss Viva Birkett, Miss Winifred Beech, Miss Marion Ashworth, Miss Amy Ravenscroft, and Miss Marion Terry.

A pretty wedding took place at St. Elvan's Church, Aberdare, on Thursday, the contracting parties being Mr. Charles Halling, general manager for Mr. W. V. Garrod's A Country Girl in London company, and Miss Maude Merrick, the leading lady. Mr. Fred Wilberforce gave the bride away, and Mr. Frank Dallas acted as best man. Thus we have another instance of actor and actress repeating in real life the felicitous scenes enacted before the footlights.

Mr. J. M. Glover, the popular musical director of the Drury Lane Theatre, who has held the post since 1897, and is celebrated for his efforts in the development of Bexhill, was married on Saturday to Miss Kathleen Collins, daughter of Mrs. R. G. Collins, of Montreal, Canada. The ceremony took place in the Lady Chapel at Westminster Cathedral, and was performed by the Rev. Father Kennedy, of Bexhill. The wedding was, curiously enough, marked by an entire absence of music. Few people were present, most of whom were representative of the theatrical and musical professions. Among them were Mr. George Mozart, Mr. Lindo (of Drury Lane Theatre), Mrs. Goodall, Mrs. Sartoris, Miss Jackson, Mr. Olley, Mr. Harry Wilson, Mr. John O'Connor, and some of the chief members of Mr. Glover's orchestra.

The bridegroom walked to the Cathedral, accompanied by his best man, Mr. Jno. O'Connor, M.P. The bride, who drove up in a taxicab, wore a dress of white crêpe de chine, with ninon tunic, and a "flower-pot" hat with tall white osprey feather trimming. She was accompanied by her mother, and was met at the west door by Mr. Harry Wilson, solicitor, who led her up the nave and gave her away. A reception was held at the Waldorf Hotel, and later in the day the happy pair left for Ostend, where they are spending the honeymoon.

Mr. George Edwardes, before reopening the Adelphi Theatre, will make some important alterations and improvements in the house. The broad staircase leading to the dress circle will be removed to allow of the introduction of a large and comfortable lounge. A new refreshment room will be added to the stalls, and a semi-circle of boxes will be put over the dress circle. The house will be entirely redecorated in rose, gold, and grey, and a new act drop will be painted. A lift will be behind to convey the artists to their dressing-rooms; and a new and commodious property room, and an electric light installation will be added.

The intention is, of course, to make the Adelphi a thoroughly up-to-date playhouse, fit for the reception of Mr. Edwardes's production there of The Quaker Girl, written by Mr. J. T. Tanner and composed by Mr. Lionel Monckton, with lyrics by Mr. Adrian Ross, Mr. Percy Greenbank, and others. The scene of the first act is a simple country picture, and the remaining two acts take place in Paris. Miss Gertie Millar and Mr. Joseph Coyne will sustain the leading characters.

Mr. Walter Joyce, the veteran reciter, with whom the delivery of the famous "Charge of the Light Brigade" is chiefly associated, entered on his seventy-fifth year on Thursday. His many friends in the country and abroad will rejoice to learn that he is enjoying good health at his residence at Putney.

Mr. J. E. Vedrenne will commence his season at the Queen's Theatre on the 20th inst., with Mr. William J. Locke's four-act play, The Man from the Sea. The cast will include Mr. Robert Loraine, Mr. Arthur Lewis, Mr. Dawson Milward, Mr. A. Vane Tempest, Mr. Gerald Mirrielees, Mr. Jules Shaw, Mr. Edward Y. Rae, Mr. Frederick Worlock, Miss Nina Boucicault, Miss Beryl Faber, Miss Gwladys Gaynor, and Miss Olivia Eltone.

Mr Croker King has commissioned Gaston Gervex (Mrs. Montagu Fowler) to write a sketch for him. As the author of The Accolade Mrs. Fowler has already shown dramatic capability. The new sketch deals with a sensitively organised man in the clutches of the drug habit, and should provide a fine scope for Mr. Croker King's talents.

"The Price of Freedom," a play, by Deane Ballyan, was produced for copyright purposes at Her Majesty's Theatre, Dundee, on Aug. 27.

On Thursday (25th ult.), Mr. Mark H. Lindon, managing-director of the Theatre Royal, Stanley, repeated his annual outing to between thirty and forty old people of the town to Whitley Bay. The party left Shield Row by the 9.40 train, arriving 11.15 at Whitley Bay, where dinner was provided for them at Poresi's Restaurant. Through the kindness of the directors of the Spanish City, the party were met by Mr. A. A. Penleve, manager, and afforded an afternoon's enjoyment. A move was then made back to the restaurant, where tea was provided, after which a stroll along the sands was indulged in, the party finally leaving by the 7.15 train, and arriving home about 9.15, after a delightful day's outing.

Mr. Frank Gerald has scored a big success in Nat Gould's play, The Chance of a Lifetime, which was produced by Wm. Anderson at the King's Theatre, Melbourne, on July 16, and is playing nightly to the capacity of the house. Mr. Anderson has mounted the drama lavishly, and the company, almost entirely Australian, give a fine, all-round show. The piece is in for a long run, and when produced in England should have a successful career.

The first provincial tour of the Haymarket success, Maeterlinck's fairy play, The Blue Bird, begins at the Grand Theatre, Leeds, on Sept. 5. It will then visit the Court Theatre, Liverpool, and the other towns included in its flight are Newcastle, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Sheffield, Manchester, Nottingham, Southport, and Birmingham—ten towns in all—and the tour is to run for three months. The company travels 120 strong, and carries with it many more tons of scenery and properties than any company that has left London for the past twenty years.

The company will travel by its own special train right through the tour, and carry their own rolling stock with them all the time. All the costly and elaborate scenery used in the Haymarket production will be used, as well as all the properties and costumes. Each theatre visited is being fitted with a special electrical installation, in order that the wonderful lighting effects may be the same, and the play seen exactly as it was in London; and at each theatre visited the orchestra will be greatly enlarged, in order to do justice to the music, which is one of the features of the production. In connection with the tour, Mr. Trench has issued a charming booklet, printed in colours and copiously illustrated, setting forth the story of the play in a graphic and picturesque style. The booklets will be supplied free of charge on application at the box-office of the theatre in the various towns included in the tour, and should prove an attractive souvenir.

The attraction at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, next week will be a revised version of The Mountaineers, by Guy Eden, and the music by Reginald Somerville. This is its first appearance in the suburbs, and the cast arranged by Mr. Harry P. Towers includes Miss Marie Dainton, Miss Aida Jenoure, Miss Ida Stratham, Mr. Claude Flemming, Mr. Leo Sheffield, Mr. Edgar Maraden, Mr. Frank Lawton, and Mr. Fred Eastman. The chorus numbers thirty, and for this week the opera will be conducted by Mr. Reginald Somerville, the composer. The company comes to Hammersmith from Blackpool, where it has done excellent business.

"The Chocolate Soldier" will make his first salute at the Lyric on Saturday next. The piece is officially described as "an Englished version of Bernauer and Jacobson's parody of a well-known comedy." The full cast consists of Miss Constance Drever, Miss Amy Augarde, Miss Elsie Spain, Mr. C. H. Workman, Mr. Lempriere Pringle, Mr. Murri Moncrieff, Miss Isobel Lydster, Mr. A. Harding, Miss Morrison, Miss May Clarke, Mr. Harold Dennie, Mr. W. Ketran, Miss M. Burnege, Mr. Roland Cunningham, and Mr. Tom Shale. Mr. Oscar Strauss, the composer, will be present at the first performance.

A clash of first nights is thus inevitable, Mr. Stanley Cooke having some time since selected the same evening for his production at the Strand of the American farce, The Man from Mexico, in which he himself plays the leading part. Among others in the cast are Mr. George Giddens, Mr. Cecil A. Collins, Mr. Harry Parker, Mr. Kinsey Peile, Miss Ola Humphreys, Miss Jean Harkness, and Miss Faith Celli. Mr. Cooke's production will possess considerable interest for the ladies, as the dresses, designed by Reville and Rossiter, of Hanover Square, will enable them to obtain a good idea of the coming autumn fashions. Mr. Reville has just returned from Paris, where he has been in consultation with other artists, the result being that something novel may be expected in the costumes.

Miss Georgie Corlass appeared in Bombay on Aug. 1 after three and and a half years' absence, and had an enthusiastic welcome from all parts of the house. She was the recipient of lovely presents of jewelry and flowers, and was compelled to sing many times before she was allowed to leave the stage.

Mr. Stanley Drewitt will play the part of Laurence Dale, a fanatical idealist, in the remarkable new play to be shortly produced at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester. It was originally entitled Laurence Dale, but is now to be called The Gentlemen of the Press.

On Friday night, the 26th ult., at the Metropole Theatre, Glasgow, Mrs. Morton Powell, the authoress of How Girls are Brought to Ruin, which was paying a return visit, was presented by Mr. Arthur Jefferson, the resident manager, with a handsome mirror from the members of her company, and a magnificent bouquet from the Metropole management. In a well-chosen speech to a crowded audience, he mentioned that all records had been broken, and complimented Mrs. Powell on the play, the company, and the enormous houses that had been drawn. On Saturday night the theatre was filled to its utmost holding capacity before 7.15, and hundreds were turned away.

Mr. J. Gar Kiddie, one of the popular managers of the Alexandra Theatre, Widnes, and noted for his ingenuity in theatrical and all entertainment affairs, has composed a captivating musical piece called "Borough Chimes." On Monday the piece was rendered by the orchestra at his popular theatre, and at the conclusion everyone voted Mr. Kiddie's début as a composer of music a success.

Mr. C. Emlyn Jones begs to thank all friends and acquaintances for their kindnesses and sympathy during his long and protracted illness. He is now quite well again, and is prepared to accept engagements for the coming season. His new address is Brighton Hall, 3, 4, and 5, Cartwright-gardens, Russell-square, W.C.

In the interview with Mr. H. B. Brandreth, acting-manager at Kennington Theatre, on the results of Mr. Robert Arthur's stock season at that theatre, which appeared in The Era last week, it should have been mentioned that Mr. Frank Crimp, one of the principals in the company, appeared for the entire fifteen weeks' run, and enacted many of the leading rôles with great success. He was particularly good in the detective parts. Prior to going to Kennington, Mr. Crimp was Bandmaster Van Voight in a long run with Miss Hook of Holland.

The Victoria Theatre, Broughton, will be reopened on the 5th inst. with The Three Musketeers. Messrs. J. P. Moore and Montague Beaudyn also promise a series of plays, including A Beautiful Fiend, The Days of Cromwell, A Traitor Prince, Send Him Victorious, and several others, with their pantomime Dick Whittington on Boxing Day.

Mr. Fred Gould, who has been for upwards of fifty years associated with the theatrical profession, and who till recently was lessee of the Miners' Theatre, Ashington, has taken a long lease of the Theatre Royal, Leigh, Lancashire. The theatre is at present being modernised, redecorated, and reseated, under Mr. Bilsborough, theatrical architect, of Leeds.

Miss Marie Dainton will make her first appearance in London at the King's, Hammersmith, next week, since her return to England, in the part of Clarice in The Mountaineers, for which she has been specially engaged.

Miss Gertrude Kingston will not be able to open her "Little Theatre," erected on the site of Coutts's Bank in the Strand, by Tuesday, Oct. 4, as expected, as it will not be out of the hands of the builders and decorators until a fortnight later. The opening programme will contain two plays, the longer an adaptation of a comedy by Aristophanes, period B.C. 411, and the shorter a piece dealing with radio-telegraphy as a detector of crime, the action of which is laid in the present year of grace.

Miss Gertrude Kingston wishes us to state that she does not intend to produce a new piece each week at The Little Theatre. What she proposes to do is to put up a new piece on the first Tuesday in each month. If it be found acceptable, it will be played on the remaining Tuesdays of that month; but this will not in any way involve the withdrawal of any other piece which may be enjoying a successful run.

We record with regret the death of Mr. Allan Macbeth, a well-known Glasgow musician, who passed away in that city on the 25th ult. A son of Mr. Norman Macbeth, R.S.A., the deceased musician was born in Greenock in 1856. He studied music in Germany and in Edinburgh. His connection with Glasgow began in 1880, when he became conductor of the Glasgow Choral Union. In 1890 he was appointed principal of the Athenæum School of Music, a position which he held till 1902, when he started the Glasgow College of Music. Mr. Macbeth was most successful in the production of opera in connection with his music school, and was a composer of considerable repute.

The successful run of A White Man at the Lyceum comes to a close on Saturday, Sept. 10, to give way to the autumn production of an entirely new drama by Walter Melville. Several important newcomers will be added to the Lyceum company, and the mounting will be elaborate.

"Our Boys," with a strong company, is billed for next week at the Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames; and Mr. Peter Davey, the enterprising managing-director, has arranged for Miss Kitty Darling, who won the first prize in the International beauty contest at Folkestone, to appear with Mr. Jack Humphries in the farce Ancient Britons.

Mr. Norman V. Norman gave a special performance of David Garrick at the New Theatre, Westgate-on-Sea, on Saturday last, almost every reserved seat being booked in advance.

"House full" boards are now nightly exposed outside the Aldwych Theatre, where The Bad Girl of the Family has entered into the fourth century of her successful run.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. A. Hornby Warburton, late of Mr. G. M. Polini's Silver King company. He had been ailing for some considerable period, but struggled very hard to get through his duties under extreme difficulties. On the recent visit of the company to Swansea the poor fellow suddenly collapsed, and had to be removed to the hospital, where he lingered between life and death for a week, and finally passed peacefully away on Wednesday night.

Mr. Warburton was a talented and earnest actor, and figured in several of Mr. Richard Flanagan's well-known revivals at the Queen's Theatre, Manchester. He was loved and respected by all who knew him, and his death has cast a sad gloom on his brother and sister colleagues of the Silver King company, who deeply regret his absence from their midst.

Miss Winifred Pearson made a success on Monday at the Theatre Royal, Lincoln, as Meg the Mobswoman, in a dramatic episode in one act by Leon M. Lion. Miss Pearson will probably be seen in it later on tour halls under the management of Miss Annie Hughes.

Mr. Arthur Collins has invited Danny Maher, William Griggs, B. Dillon, Walter Griggs, J. H. Martin, and F. Wootton to ride in the race scene on Monday, Sept. 12, and all these leading jockeys have agreed to the proposal.

At the Vaudeville, during the recent absence of Miss Phyllis Dare, her part of the girl in the train has been filled successfully by her understudy, the clever and rising young actress, Miss Daisy Burrell.

Mr. T. P. Haynes (Tippy) had a tempting offer from Mr. Walter Melville to create the character comedy part in his forthcoming new production at the Lyceum Theatre, but owing to a special week's engagement at Dublin, from which he could not get released, was reluctantly compelled to decline.

"Why Did She Run Away?" a play in four acts, by Mrs. F. G. Kimberley, was produced for copyright purposes at the Queen's Theatre, Longton, on Wednesday.

Mr. Allan Jeayes, who has recently been playing Major Petkoff in Arms and the Man and Finch McComas in You Never Can Tell, will enact Baron Osteman in Priscilla Runs Away at the Haymarket on Monday night and onwards.

There have been exceedingly large houses at the Royal, Worthing, during the past month, but all records in the history of the theatre were broken last week-end, when the attraction was Our Miss Gibbs. Mr. C. Adolf Seebold, the popular lessee, has further booked some excellent attractions, and these include Smith, Fires of Fate, David Garrick, My Lady Bellamy, Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, When Knights were Bold, Diana of Dobson's, Queen of the Fairies, Mr. Preedy and the Countess, The Woman in the Case, and The Beauty and the Barge.

Helene Gingold and Laurence Cowen have also written a one-act drama, entitled Two Men and a Woman, which will be played for the first time at the County Theatre, Reading, in front of their farce, Looking for Trouble. It is a peculiar coincidence that a four-act melodrama with the same title inverted, viz., A Woman and Two Men, was produced this week at the Theatre Royal, Woolwich.

Whilst Miss Celestine Bertram is away touring in Mr. Frank Bertram's The Sailor's Wedding company, her little daughter Nancy is paying a visit to Mr. Arthur Bertram at Killarney, Lewisham. The child was out with her nurse a few weeks ago, when the maid was stopped and questioned by a gentleman, who turned out to be "Maurice," the great child portrait painter. He obtained her name and address, and wrote to Mr. Arthur Bertram, asking if he would allow the child to sit for him. The result has been excellent, and Mr. Maurice is entering it at the forthcoming exhibition.

"There are a lot of girls who go to Paris to study music," says the New York Herald, "who are not in a mental condition to undertake the work. No American girl ought to attempt such a thing unless she has studied over here. Paris is a finishing school. It is not a place for beginners. . . . The first thing you know they are lost—absolutely wiped off the face of the earth.

"At the same time you meet everywhere wonderful exceptions to the general run, and there are some teachers over there that are doing great work for deserving American girls without charge. But the girls who go to the Latin Quarter to live on the score of cheapness and to learn French make a great mistake. They get into houses that are fearful from a sanitary standpoint, and there are so many girls and so little French spoken by those they meet that it is next to impossible for them to learn the language.

"Most of the girls I met came from little places, where they sang in the church choir. Some admiring friends said to them: 'Why, Pauline, dearie, how lovely you sing! You ought to go to Paris to study grand opera.' The result was that the ladies' aid society gave a festival, or a private subscription was taken up, $1,000 was raised, and Pauline was started out for Paris. With lessons at $5 and $10, it doesn't take long to exhaust Pauline's funds, and sometimes it takes a long time to acquire a musical education.

"The number of Paulines who become objects of charity is appalling. I know of a wealthy San Francisco woman who is in Paris with her two daughters, who are studying singing. The two girls found at the same studio where they took lessons several girls who were without means, and they were so sympathetic that each gives the larger part of her personal income to help these along."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Mr. Glover's Adventures.

MR. JAMES GLOVER, whose marriage on Saturday we note elsewhere, began his musical experiences early. The grandson of a musician, he made his first public appearance on the Dublin stage as a boy, and later travelled with his grandfather, providing vocal illustrations to the latter's lectures on "Ancient Irish Music." Then he was apprenticed to a chemist, but making music was more to his taste than compounding drugs; and for a time he exercised his talents as an organist in Dublin.

How He Became a Conductor.

He once gave an amusing account of how he became a conductor. A lady sleight-of-hand performer advertised for a pianist, and he got the job at 36s. a week—to lose it again because he did not polish his boots. He had been billed, however, as "musical director," and that gave him an idea, which he was not slow to act on. "When I found myself stranded I returned to London with a stock of handbills with my name on them as musical director, and promptly wrote to every manager for free seats. The manager of the Prince of Wales's, now the Scala, instead of sending me tickets, offered me an engagement as musical director with Mr. Charles Collette, on tour, at £3 a week, and that started the ball rolling."

Blow, bugles, blow!

MR. JAMES MILNE, in an article in the September number of the Fortnightly Review on "The Personality of America," tells the following two stories about Henry Irving:—"A bugle sounds half an hour before breakfast on an Atlantic steamer. A young bugler was accustomed to make his first blast just where Irving's cabin-suite happened to be. The 'drowsy morn' had twice been waked in this fashion for the famous actor, who was in no special hurry to greet it. On the third morning a poetic head, which streamed down into a long, lank figure and a dressing-gown, came out of the cabin-door and exclaimed, 'Dear bugler boy, you blow beautifully and I love your music. But I should love it still better if you would blow at the other end of the ship.' The head disappeared, and so did the bugler, richer by a particular word from Henry Irving."

He Saved the Whisky.

The second anecdote refers to a remark made by Irving on a liner which was having rough weather and jumping about a bit. He had been dining in his sitting-room, where suddenly a special heave of the vessel caused a tumult. Somebody ran in, and there lay crockery and dinner on the floor, with Irving standing over the disaster. He had a bottle in his hand, and he said, triumphantly, "Anyhow, I have saved the Scotch whisky."

Mr. Mathews on "Bustle."

MR. A. E. MATHEWS, in an interview in the New York Times, has registered a mild protest against the American habit of "bustling." He says:—"Your American stage is really as different from the English as it is from the French and German, in a way even more so. You have what we call 'tempo' behind the footlights. This 'tempo' you see both in the plays and the acting. What we turn into light comedy you often treat as a farce, pure and simple. And why not? Speed is in the air. The audiences want a thing done quickly, and, presto, it is! An American audience will kill a wordy drama quicker than any other audience in the world. Your requirements are different over here from anywhere else in the world. So when I hear, for instance, that they used The Mollusc as a farce over here I'm not surprised. Though a month ago I would have been shocked.

Speeding Up.

"My new play, Love Among the Lions, is another example. In England we would go slower, make it more comedy. Here you speed up. And bless me if I don't enjoy it. You really get excited in your part. Now hear my old friends back in England laugh. Getting excited in comedy! The idea is absurd, ridiculous! Honestly, they think it is; fun is leisurely to them. But over here—why, if I ever get any of the proverbial American riches I'm going to endow a fund for a course at Coney Island for the education of my friends. You beat the French.

The Sedate English.

"The actors, too, have this 'bustle.' You go behind the scenes at London rehearsals, and if the setting were proper you would imagine that you were at a midsummer garden party. Everyone is leisurely. Here you are all on your toes. Even I'm on my toes—and have been since my second or third day in the city. And, hang it! I don't know but that I just as lief be on my toes.

The Danger of "Bustling."

"Still, there is a danger for the actor in this spirit of 'bustle.' He is likely to overdraw on his strength. I've met many of your older actors. And while it would not be courteous to indicate whom I meant, I must say that they show their age far more than an English actor of similar years does. We have more old actors than you have—and the reason is, I think, that when an English actor reaches the half-century mark he doesn't look more than forty, while the American looks his full age, and perhaps a bit more. I know a score of actors in England over fifty who still play youthful romantic parts. Where, with you, may I find any approach to that number? American actors should keep a close gauge of their health, for it is so easy to overdo."

American Theatres.

"Americans," says Mr. Forbes Robertson, in an interview in the Daily News, "go much more to the theatre than we do here. With them it is a habit. And theatres are larger." When Mr. Robertson closed the Alexandra Theatre for two days at the time of King Edward's death (the Alexandra, by the way, was the only theatre closed in America) he returned 5,000 dollars of ticket money. "The acoustics of American theatres are admirable. Maxine Elliott's theatre in New York is on a smaller scale—about as large as the St. James's, and excellently appointed. The American native-born drama grows by leaps and bounds. Progress in the last few years has been quite extraordinary. There is Eugene Walters's Paid in Full, there is Winchell Smith's Fortune Hunter (with, by the way, a part just made for Cyril Maude), there is Augustus Thomas's Way Down East, there is Percy McKay, there is Moody, a really first-class man (you know his Great Divide), and, lastly, and the most promising of all, there is young Sheldon, the author of The Nigger, quite a boy, and destined, I am sure, to make a great name for himself. You cannot judge of a nation by its exports. Nor can English people, unfamiliar as they are with American life, judge whether a play is tomboy farce or stern realism."

General Matrimony.

"Charley's Aunt" was being played by Mr. Brandon Thomas's company at the Paisley Theatre on Monday evening, and as the tangle of the play was in process of being unravelled a lady in the pit, realising the inevitable outcome, unconsciously gave expression to her thoughts by exclaiming quite audibly: "Oh, they are all getting married!" The large audience was hushed to silence at the time, but the exclamation, heard distinctly throughout the house, set the audience into a fit of laughter, in which the artists on the stage had perforce to join.

Henry VIII. has a long stage history. The first recorded performance of the play, which took place at the Globe Theatre on Bankside on June 29, 1613, is connected with a conflagration. By the careless discharge of a piece of ordnance the thatch was set on fire and the building burnt to the ground. The prologue is interesting to managers as containing a reference to the price of admission and the time of performance, the careless playgoer being told that he may "see away his shilling in two short hours." Henry VIII. has always been looked upon as an opportunity for gorgeous pageantry. Pepys, who gave it at the Duke's House in 1663, spoke of the "shows and processions." Betterton made a great success as Henry, when the play was done at the Haymarket in 1707 by a company of actors from Drury Lane, Colley Cibber playing Surrey. Booth was the King in a revival at Drury Lane in the May of 1722; and Quin enacted Henry in a representation at Lincoln's Inn Fields in the October of the same year. At Drury Lane in 1727 there was added a grand spectacle of the Coronation of Anne Boleyn, to which Cibber referred when pleading his own case in Chancery against Sir Richard Steele as "a spectacle that for forty days together has brought more money to the house than the best play that ever was writ." There was another revival at Drury Lane in 1734, and Mrs. Prichard played Anne Bullen in a performance of Henry VIII. at the same theatre in 1740. In 1744 the piece was given at Covent Garden, and then for twenty years it was laid on the shelf, other performances taking place at Covent Garden in 1772 and the Haymarket in 1777.

Mrs. Siddons was the Katharine at a Drury Lane revival of the play on Nov. 25, 1788; and the part became a favourite with her. Philip Kemble's acting version was presented at Covent Garden in the April of 1806, Kemble playing Wolsey, the rôle which Kean sustained at Drury Lane in 1822, Macready at Covent Garden in 1823, and Phelps at Sadler's Wells in 1845. On the walls of the Garrick Club hangs a fine picture which Mr. Forbes-Robertson painted of Phelps in the rôle of Wolsey. A costly and memorable production of the play was that by Charles Kean at the Princess's in the May of 1855. It included a "moving panorama" in the last act. Much previously omitted text was restored, and Mrs. Charles Kean's Queen Katharine was a very fine performance, Miss Heath, afterwards Mrs. Wilson Barrett, being the Anne Bullen. A later revival of the play was that by Mr. Wyndham at Edinburgh in 1855, in which the late John Lawrence Toole enacted Lord Sands. The most celebrated revival of all, however, was that by the late Henry Irving at the Lyceum on Jan. 5, 1892. It had two hundred and three performances, and earned sixty-six thousand pounds, Irving's Wolsey being a magnificent performance, and Miss Ellen Terry's Katharine astonishing her warmest admirers. Mr. Edward German's music had much to do with the success of the revival, and greatly increased the young composer's reputation.

One of the revivals above mentioned supplies us with an apt estimate of Henry VIII. It is not so much a drama as a moving panorama of a period. We are shown Henry, "a mass of humanity profusely mixed of good and evil," exercising absolute power, putting one man up and another down, scorning popular opinion, and yet, through it all, managing by his strength and sagacity to crush all opposition, defy the Pope, and quell every attempt at rebellion in his subjects. Henry's defects and qualities are depicted with impartiality; and the same may be said of Wolsey, the "apology" for whose "life" is so well made by Griffith in the fourth act of the play. These two characters, and that of Queen Katharine, stand out on the stage as they do in the pages of history. The spirit in which the piece is written is rather that of remorseless modern realism than of the customary selection and arrangement. The author, or authors, give us no inkling of their feelings or opinions. There is no exaggeration to hint that Henry's scruples as to the righteousness of his marriage with Katharine were spurious; the personages and their actions are described with absolute simplicity, and treated in a spirit of cynical fatality. The ruined Wolsey owns the justice of his fate, the nobles play the great game boldly and go to the block with resignation, and the whole drama is characteristic of the Tudor time, so full of the exuberant energy and recklessness of the Renaissance. If not a good play, as judged by ordinary standards, Henry VIII. is undoubtedly a very interesting "slice of life."

The performance at His Majesty's on Thursday was as superbly complete as might have been expected from the strength of the cast and from its very judicious selection. Mr. Arthur Bourchier gave a really magnificent impersonation of King Henry VIII. Mr. Bourchier has all the physical requisites of the character, and he suggested the characteristics of Henry—his burly, overbearing energy, and his bluff abruptness, splendidly. His byplay in the dance with Anne Bullen, in the banqueting-hall of Wolsey's palace, was remarkably fine. Sir Herbert Tree's Cardinal Wolsey was a performance which will be ever retained in the recollection of London playgoers. Never has Sir Herbert presented a finer or more distinguished appearance. The clerical unction and overbearing pride of the crafty and ambitious churchman were depicted with grand elevation and in a lofty and dignified style which endowed the embodiment with rare superiority and high and distinguished individuality. Sir Herbert's appearance in the extensive robes of the Cardinal was very picturesque, and his bearing was appropriately bold and exalted. Mr. Henry Ainley gave a very fine and remarkably mature performance as the Duke of Buckingham, speaking his farewell address to the people most expressively and with deep artistic feeling; and Mr. Henry Morrell showed real ability and employed excellent elocution in his rendering of the lines allotted to Griffith. Miss Violet Vanbrugh's Queen Katharine was a performance which could hardly be overpraised. The eloquent indignation of the persecuted Queen was expressed with a strenuous intensity which moved the audience to the warmest sympathy. The noble nature of Katharine was shown with striking power and delicate sensitiveness; and in the Death scene Miss Vanbrugh rose to a high pitch of pathos and deeply affected her hearers. Miss Laura Cowie gave a piquant and keenly interestingly embodiment of Anne Bullen—winsome, shy, and sweet, but coquette to her dainty finger-tips—her appearance being very appropriate to the part. Henry VIII. contains a large number of well-defined characters of the second order, which present few opportunities, and these were filled with Sir Herbert's customary care for effect and completeness. Mr. S. A. Cookson was excellent as Campeius; the rôle of Cranmer had a clever and capable exponent in Mr. Charles Fuller; and Mr. A. E. George as Duke of Norfolk, Mr. Edward O'Neill as the Duke of Suffolk, Mr. Clarence Derwent as Lord Abergavenny, Mr. Gerald Lawrence as the Earl of Surrey, and Mr. Walter R. Creighton as Lord Sands, gave well-defined and cleverly-individualised impersonations of the leading nobles of Henry's Court; Mr. Edward Sass being good as the Lord Chamberlain, and Mr. William Burchill meritorious as Gardiner. Mr. Edmund Gurney gave a sound and careful rendering of Sir Henry Guildford; Mr. Acton Bond supplied a sound, clear, and satisfactory performance of the part of the Surveyor, his excellent elocution and bold bearing being conspicuous; Mr. Henry C. Hewitt was meritorious as Lovell; and Mr. Charles James made a good Vaux. The rôle of Cromwell was judiciously allotted to Mr. Reginald Owen, who gave a praiseworthy reading of it; and Mr. Cyril Sworder and Mr. Charles Howard were good as the First and Second Gentlemen. Mr. Clifford Heatherley as Garter merited favourable mention; Mr. Arthur Gaskill was efficient as the Sergeant-at-Arms; and Mr. W. B. Abingdon was easily excellent as a Servant; Mr. Edward Golding as a Crier, Mr. Francis Chamier as a Scribe, and Mr. Ross Shore as a Jester all doing useful and careful work. That very distinct and piquant personage, the Old Lady, had in Mrs. Charles Calvert an exponent who, by her ripe experience and genuine talent, was capable of giving the part its fullest and sharpest significance; and Miss Lila Barclay was praiseworthy as Patience.

To do justice to the glories of the scenery and costumes would require a column in itself; indeed, description is inadequate to give an idea of the production which Sir Herbert Tree and Louis N. Parker have presented to the public. Amongst a scenic plot which is simply overpowering in its grandeur and beauty stands out the glorious coup d'œil of the spectacle in Westminster Abbey. The detailed truth, the marvellous variety and the archæological arrangement of this extraordinary reproduction of sixteenth-century life beggar description, and Mr. Joseph Harker must be warmly congratulated on the way in which he has done his work. Although less elaborate than others, perhaps the first scene, The Cloisters, is as effective as any; while from the artistic point of view nothing can exceed the exquisite colouring, the subdued minor tone of Scene 1, Act II, The River Gate, in which Buckingham goes to his fate. There is also a strikingly beautiful effect in Queen Katharine's Death scene, in which we see with the eyes of the dying Queen the flight of angels ready to sing her to her rest. The dances were agreeably arranged by Miss Margaret Morris. The costumes, designed by Mr. Percy Macquoid, were marvellously detailed and often gorgeously splendid. The overture, entr'actes, and incidental airs were selected from the original music of Mr. Edward German, by whom several new incidental numbers were composed for the production; and the part song, "Pastime and good company," introduced in the first act, was written and composed by King Henry VIII.

In response to tumultuous applause and a demand for a speech at the conclusion, Sir Herbert remarked that he had cut two scenes out of his production, but this did not seem to have detracted from its success. He wished specially to thank his very kind friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bourchier, for their assistance. It had been a great pleasure to work with them during the rehearsal. Sir Herbert also acknowledged his indebtedness to Mr. Louis Parker and Mr. Percy Macquoid. The revival had the enthusiastic reception it so well deserved.

PROMENADE CONCERTS.

Two novelties were included in the programme of the Promenade Concert at Queen's Hall on Thursday evening, Aug. 25. Mr. Albert Mack's "The Song of the Shulamite," with orchestral accompaniment by Mr. Henry Wood, came first. Mr. Mack's song proved to be a dramatic scena, in which much of the interest was due to Mr. Wood's excellent and effective orchestral scoring, although the vocal music was melodious and expressive. The new production was beautifully sung by Mrs. Foster Salmond, and with considerable fervour, while the audience gave both vocalist and the song a very enthusiastic reception. Mr. Arthur Foote, who like Mr. Mack is an American composer, was the author of the second novelty, a Suite in E major for strings, a sound and musicianly composition, pleasing in character and most ably scored for the stringed orchestra. There are three movements in Mr. Foote's Suite, a Prelude, Pizzicato and Adagietto, and Fugue. The first movement, although short, is full of charming melody and strong effective contrasts, while the Pizzicato and Fugue are alike interesting and artistic. Admirably played, the Suite met with a very hearty reception. The programme also contained Beethoven's "Fidelio" Overture, the "1812" Overture, Tschaikowsky's Elegy from Serenade for Strings, and Sullivan's "In Memoriam" Overture. Mr. Gerald Zalsman gave a very striking and forcible rendering of Henschel's song, with orchestra, "Jung Dieterich," and Mr. Alfred Kastner's brilliant harp solos were quite a feature of the concert.

On Saturday, Aug. 27, there was a large audience at Queen's Hall. The programme commenced with the "Tannhäuser" Overture, which was followed by Mozart's exquisite Minuet in D for Strings and two horns, capitally performed by members of the orchestra. A first performance in England was given of a Fantasie Concertante for viola and orchestra by Mr. J. Rogister. The Fantasie contains four sections, Allegro, Andantino, Minuet, and Finale, the Andantino being the most successful movement. Mr. S. L. Wertheim gave an excellent interpretation of the solo part. Miss Maud Santley's fine voice was heard to great advantage in Leroux's Aria "Le Nil," and Mr. Morgan Kingston gave a spirited version of Handel's Aria, "When warlike ensigns wave on high." The orchestra played Ballet Music, "Hulda" (César Franck), Bantock's Overture, "The Pierrot of the Minute," Mackenzie's "Britannia" Overture, and Tschaikowsky's popular "Casse-Noisette" Suite.

With the object of making known in the Old Country the advantages of Australia, and thus attract desirable immigrants, the Commonwealth has just voted £4,000 a year towards a Colonial drama to be acted throughout the English provinces. The play is to be written by an old-time Australian, Mr. Nat Gould, and performed by Australian artists.

"THE CRISIS."

An Adaptation, in Three Acts, of Pierre Berton's La Rencontre, by Rudolf Besier, Produced at the New Theatre on Wednesday, Aug. 31.

Camille de Lançay .....MISS EVELYN MILLARD
Renée Serval .....MISS SARAH BROOKE
A Maid .....MISS B. MARTHEZE
Canuche .....MR. LENNOX PAWLE
Raymond de Brévannes ....MR. ATHOL STEWART
Armand Vivien .....MR. DOUGLAS IMBERT
Adrien Serval .....MR. NORMAN MCKINNEL

Mr. Rudolf Besier's version of Pierre Berton's play has been curtailed since its production at the Hastings Pier Pavilion last week, where it was presented in four acts. The adapter has also made other improvements in order to better fit the French plot to the taste of an English audience—an almost impossible task, and the piece is supplied with bright dialogue and effective situations of the sort in which the skilled Parisian playwright excels.

"What is the use of being a pretty woman if you don't make the man fall in love with you?" asks pretty Renée Serval of her friend Camille de Lançay. Renée has successfully exploited her own charms to her great personal advantage; they have gained her a husband, a successful lawyer of humble origin—whom she despises—of immense wealth, in which she delights, and of a social position which she values very highly. It is for his position and his money that she has condescended to marry him. She loves him not at all, nor does she pretend to do so, for Renée's heart is the cold, calculating organ of the mondaine. Her liaison with Raymond de Brévannes serves rather to gratify her vanity than her senses; and Raymond is a bird of the same feather, a bon viveur whose outlook on life is one of undiluted materialism. To the home of Renée comes an old school friend, Camille de Lançay. The friends have not met for six years, and during that time both have married. Camille's marriage has ended disastrously. We gather that her husband has been an "unmitigated brute" (fortunately we are spared details). Camille is a lovely, sympathetic woman; Serval is one of the "strong, silent men" of the newspaper feuilleton. The inevitable happens. At their first meeting (is this La Rencontre of the original title?) we see a mutual attraction dawning. In the fortnight which elapses between Acts I. and II. they have fallen madly in love with one another. Serval is strong, but not quite so silent. He confesses his love, and Camille reduces him to silence again. They are to be friends—nothing more; she will leave his house in the morning. Serval goes off to Paris that night, and the moment he is safely out of the way Raymond enters clandestinely, and Camille is the unseen spectator of passionate embraces between him and Renée. As the pair retire to Renée's room Camille emerges from her hiding place to confront Serval, who has returned unexpectedly. Camille at first believes that he also has been a spectator of the lovers' meeting; but she finds that she is wrong—he is entirely unsuspicious of any deception on the part of his wife. In an agony of apprehension Camille sees him going towards the door of his wife's room, and to prevent this she falls back on a last resource. As she stands on the threshold she utters a frantic cry. He turns; she holds out her arms to him. She loves him, she is his; and he catches her in his arms.

The best scene in the play occurs in the last act. Camille and Serval have agreed to pass the sponge of oblivion over the episode between them, but Renée discovers that her lover is on the eve of marriage with an heiress, and her wounded vanity turns her into a Fury. A chance word awakens her suspicions that there is more than friendship between Camille and her husband. She cannot satisfy her desire for vengeance on Raymond, as to do so would be to defy the only god she worships—conventionality; but someone must pay for her bedraggled pride. If Camille and her husband are guilty they shall be the victims of her wrath. So she sets a poor tool of hers to spy on them. His report confirms her suspicions, and, in a blind rage, she accuses Camille, who has posed as her high-minded, noble friend, of having stolen her husband from her. She heaps scathing scorn and vitriolic abuse on Camille's head until the worm turns, and Renée is in her turn annihilated by the knowledge that Camille is aware of her liaison with Raymond, and that she has only to communicate it to Serval for the altar at which Renée worships to be demolished. But Camille's nobility of character is so great that she will sacrifice her own happiness, and incidentally Serval's, for the sake of her friend. As he enters she goes slowly and sadly away; and as she goes she conveys to his wife that there will be no exposure and that the secret will be kept.

The Crisis is scarcely satisfactory to English tastes. The motives actuating the characters appear inadequate and unreasonable. For instance, it is difficult if not impossible to imagine that a woman of Camille's character would give herself to Serval in order to save her friend from discovery when she has successfully resisted the appeal of his love. Such situations are theatrically effective, but will not bear the test of reflection. And as Anglicised, at least, the characters appear stilted, inconsistent, and unnatural. The deficiencies of the piece, however, are largely covered by the admirable acting of the performers. Miss Evelyn Millard returns to the London stage after far too long an absence, looking, if possible, more beautiful than ever—"a daughter of the gods, divinely tall and most divinely fair"—in her soft-flowing, faintly-tinted, and exquisitely-fashioned gowns. Miss Millard's elocution is as faultless as ever—a rare treat to an appreciative ear nowadays when so much is sacrificed to temperamental effects. She makes Camille a gracious, sympathetic figure, and more than reconciles us to the inconsistencies of the part. She is particularly good in the last act, when, at last, Renée exhausts Camille's patience, and the latter turns a quivering face on her former friend, and crushes her with a reference to her guilt. As Serval's wife, Renée, Miss Sarah Brooke was admirably suited, and played with genuine power and feeling. Miss Brooke's touch in comedy is always of the daintiest and lightest description, and her appearance is of the most chic; but when she is swept by a gust of passion the real art of the actress is shown at its best. Mr. Norman McKinnel can do nothing which is not interesting, and whenever he is on the stage he holds his audience without effort. In the part of Adrien Serval his powers were given but scant scope, but he did the best he could with his material, and his best was very good. But one has only to think of Mr. McKinnel's magnificent impersonation of King Lear, or his wonderful study of the embodiment of Capital, Sir Anthony, in Strife, to realise how inadequately his art is called upon in his present performance. Mr. Athol Stewart gave a very easy rendering of the bon viveur Raymond de Brévannes, and managed to infuse a flavour of heartlessness which was very effective. As the "poor tool" in love with Serval's wife, who uses him as a spy, Mr. Lennox Pawle was not very well cast, and it is therefore all the more to his credit that he gave the part of Canuche a reality which, in the hands of a less capable exponent, it would certainly have lacked. As Armand Vivien Mr. Douglas Imbert was more than efficient, and Miss E. Matheze was good as a maid.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, Sept. 1.—Brought out in 1902 at the Variétés, where it met with a tremendous success, M. Alfred Capus's Les deux Ecoles has now been revived at the Vaudeville, and received an excellent reception. The author has made no alteration in the plot, but has added a few touches so as to keep it up to date. Briefly told the story is as follows: Edouard Maubrun, a young barrister, is the husband of Henriette, the daughter of M. and Mme. Joulin, retired shopkeepers. Edouard is a charming fellow, a favourite with everybody, but he cannot resist temptation—especially in the shape of a petticoat—whereupon Henriette, sick of being deceived by him, resolves to apply for a divorce, unheeding the advice of Mme. Joulin, her mother, who tries to prove to her that in matrimony, if a woman wants to be really happy, she must be able to "ignore" certain things. Henriette, however, refuses to "ignore," and she obtains her divorce. Several months elapse. Edouard consoles himself with Estelle, a flighty damsel, also on the eve of a divorce, whilst Henriette is engaged to M. Le Hautois, a State Councillor. One night Edouard dines with Estelle at a fashionable restaurant, and chance has it that at a table near them are seated Henriette, her fiancé, and her parents. Edouard, of course, takes no notice of his ex-wife, but the waiter having, by mistake, handed him the bill intended for M. Joulin, an explanation ensues which brings him face to face with Henriette, who does not seem displeased at meeting the scapegrace. As to M. and Mme. Joulin, they always were fond of their former son-in-law, whom they welcome with undisguised joy. This rapprochement is not to the taste of the austere M. Le Hautois; for, being Henriette's fiancé, he considers that she has no right to converse with Edouard, and he remonstrates gently with Henriette. The latter receives his remarks with rather an ill grace, but his grave mien deeply impresses Estelle, who would, if she could, throw Edouard overboard to be taken in hand by the pompous State Councillor. Estelle succeeds in making Le Hautois' acquaintance, and in obtaining his permission to lay her divorce affair before him. Estelle calls on him, and Henriette enters the room at the very moment Le Hautois is kissing Estelle. Henriette is indignant. She refuses to forgive Le Hautois for having "wanted" to deceive her, and she pardons Edouard who has deceived her all along. Moreover, Henriette knows that she has never ceased to love Edouard, and she is equally certain that he, too, is fond of her. Under these conditions she does not hesitate. She will return to her good-tempered, jovial Edouard, and will "ignore" what had better be "ignored." When it is remembered that Les Deux Ecoles was originally played by famous artists like Mme. Jeanne Granier, Mlle. Lavallière, Mme. Magnier, M. Baron, M. Brasseur, and M. Guy, it can be understood that the new cast had an arduous task before them. They acquitted themselves, however, well of their work.

He is not going to leave us! He has altered his mind and intends to stay—until further notice. Who is he? He is M. Le Bargy, who, on several occasions, has not only threatened to turn his back on the Comédie-Française, but not long ago actually sent in his resignation. M. Le Bargy is an excellent artist. He can ill be spared, and, unfortunately he knows this only too well. The result is that he takes things somewhat easy, so easy in fact, that he absents himself frequently, and replies to all remonstrances by a threat to "leave the house." Seven years ago he "resigned," and informed all the journalists who interviewed him—and they were numerous—that he had decided to shake the dust off the House of Molière. When, however, he assisted at the reading of M. Hervieu's Le Dédale, he shook off no dust so as to secure a rôle in the new play. This time we witness a similar symptom. M. Henry Bernstein's comedy Après Moi is about to be launched at the Comédie-Française, and our exuberant friend at once shakes hands with M. Claretie and buries the hatchet.

Dranem—the great Dranem of music-hall renown—has, it is said, been engaged by M. Antoine to play the rôle of Sganarelle in Molière's Le Médecin malgré lui. From the Alcazar to the classical Odéon is a far cry, but everything is possible, although, despite M. Dranem's attentions, many people think it is only a hoax.

I am sorry to have to chronicle the death of M. Léon Marx, the former manager of the Cluny Theatre, whom I often have had occasion to mention in these columns. He was a wag in his way, except when troubled by indigestion, which befell him only too often. I remember calling on him one day when he was paying the penalty for having eaten lobster the day before. "Look at me!" he said, with a pitiful smile, "when I was young I had a tremendous appetite, but no money to buy food. To-day I have money, but I cannot buy an appetite. What's the good of money if you can't eat!" Poor Marx! He worked like a slave at Cluny and amassed a nice little fortune with which he retired. But somehow or other he could not remain idle, and in an evil hour he invested his savings in the Concert Européen, which proved a failure. Ruined and worn out with care, he had a stroke of paralysis, and has now passed away in his sixty-second year.

I also learn the death of Dambrine, who for many years sang in opera-bouffe at the Variétés in the Bouffes Parisiens. Dambrine was only forty-two.

Arthur Coquard, the well-known composer, has also departed this life. A pupil of César Franck, his works always bore a Wagnerian stamps, and in his criticisms—for he also wrote musical criticisms—he remained faithful to the first impressons of his youth, an attitude which frequently brought him into conflict with the adherents of the so-called advanced school. Besides many songs and orchestral pieces, Coquard produced several operas that had a certain success: L'Epée du Roi, Le Mari d'un jour, and La Jacqueria, of which Lalo had written a first act. He also leaves a lyric drama which the Opéra-Comique intends to produce in the course of the coming season. It is called Isdronning, and the libretto, founded on a Swedish legend, has been compiled by his daughter.

About ten thousand persons witnessed a most successful Venetian Fête, which was held last Wednesday evening at St. Aubyn's, Jersey. The first prize for illuminated boats was won by a dainty, bright crimson gondola, and amongst numerous excellent exhibits was Cleopatra on her historic journey to Mark Antony, the big wheel at Earl's Court, and a Roman interior. A display of aquatic fireworks was given by Messrs. C. T. Brock. There was a Battle of Confetti, and the band of the Jersey Musical Union played during the entire evening, whilst the piers and adjoining houses were lit up with ten thousand coloured lamps and some thousands of Chinese lanterns.

MACREADY'S ACTING.

For subtlety, intellectuality, and vigour (says John Coleman in "Fifty Years of An Actor's Life") Macready's Macbeth has never been approached in our time; and he was the only possible Lear I have ever seen. He galvanised the dull and dreary abortion of Werner into life; while his Virginius—— But words are feeble to describe this matchless creation. In Edinburgh he wore a bald wig, which made him hideous; in Bristol he wore his own beautiful and abundant iron-grey hair curled, and certainly looked superbly handsome. His Lord Townly appeared to me affected, lachrymose, and tedious; but his Henry IV. was of the highest order of excellence. His Othello, which I saw him act in Edinburgh, was to me the least satisfactory and impressive of his Shakespearean performances. I may here remark that he was the only actor I ever saw "make up" for the Moor with an entirely black face—a face, in fact, black as a Christy minstrel. Possibly his comparative failure in Othello may have arisen from the fact that he never liked the part—so, at least, he assured me.

Actors are not always just to each other; but Vandenhoff once said to me, "Except Macbeth and Iago, I never cared for 'Mac' in Shakespeare. But I have acted Richelieu and Virginius hundreds of times; I have seen others—good actors, too—try their hands on them; but in these two parts we are none of us in the same century with him."

T. P. Cooke also said to me, "I hate him! D——n him! I detest the growling beast! But he can act, and no mistake! Kean tried to play Virginius after him, but he couldn't touch Mac, and threw up the part. I saw him once play Ruthven in a play on the subject of Mary Stuart, and the fellow positively so curdled my blood that I was glad to get out of the theatre!"

To me the most remarkable thing about Macready, more remarkable even than his marvellous ability, was that, with all his knowledge, his skill, his culture, his accomplishments, he had never been able to eradicate his native awkwardness and angularity. To the last he could not walk or stand gracefully. It was not from lack of trying to overmaster the defect, for Phelps informed me that, after long and fatiguing rehearsals of Henry V. at Drury Lane, "Mac" devoted hours to walking about the stage with "his cuisses on his thighs," but all to no avail, for at night he tossed and tumbled about literally like a hog in armour. When he came to anchor and stood quite still, from the front point of view his right leg and knee invariably described the acute section of an angle; but if seen from the sides, his head was thrown back till it was fully six inches out of plumb with his heels. As to fencing, he handled a foil like a pitchfork; but the glamour of his genius blinded his auditors to these blemishes, and, in spite of them all, he was the greatest actor of his time!

The Othello was a triumph for me. I was proud then—I am prouder now to remember that I was permitted to try my prentice hand beside such an Iago. What a masterpiece that Iago was! what a revelation of subtle, poetic, vigorous, manly, many-minded devilry!

The audience were more than usually kind to me. After I had got my first plunge over, I took heart of grace, and by the time I had reached the third act I forgot that he was anything more than "mine ancient"; I remembered only that I was Othello.

Neither then nor now could I act with gloves on my hands. I had removed, as I thought, all traces of the pigment with which I had "made up" from the palms of my hands, but, as my excitement increased, the wretched stuff seemed to ooze out of my very pores. When I came to the famous speech,

"Villain, be sure you prove my love," &c.,

I sprang upon Iago and seized him by the throat. I remembered nothing more until I found that I had literally flung him bodily down upon the stage and was standing above him, erect and quivering with wrath. On his part, he growled like an angry lion. The incident was as unprecedented as it was unpremeditated, and its effect upon the audience was electrical. They got up and cheered, and for some time the progress of the play was interrupted. This gave me time to collect myself, when, to my horror, I perceived that, in my ungovernable rage, I had torn open Iago's vest, and, worse still, left the black marks of my fingers on his beautiful white cashmere dress. When we came off the stage he glared at me and growled, "Err—well, sir, what have you to say?"

"I'm very sorry, sir!"

"Err—sorry, sir. By ——! you sprang upon me more like a young tiger than a human being."

"I was so carried away by the passion of the scene that I forgot myself; I must ask you to remember the novelty of the position in my being permitted to attempt so great a part beside so distinguished an actor as yourself."

"Don't humbug me, sir!"

"I scorn to attempt it; nevertheless, the honour you have done me to-night might well have turned an older head than mine. Pray, sir, make some allowance for my excitement."

At this he relaxed into a grim smile, and growled "Say no more—say no more; only remember, the next time you play this part with me confine your excitement to your mind and leave your muscles to take care of themselves!"

Although his plays were done from night to night, they were admirably acted. Needless to say, had not the company been both numerous and efficient they could not have been done at all.

It was not until he had finished his engagement at Bath that I ventured to reveal myself. There had been a hitch in the last scene of Lear, which I had the presence of mind to avert by taking it up and covering it. When the play was over a message came requesting me to step round to his room. I expected a bullying for having dared to tamper with the text. To my astonishment he came forward, and, taking me by the hand, said, "Thank you; you—err—err—saved the—err—end of the—err—play. Err—we—err—have met before, I—err—think?"

"Yes, in Edinburgh, on the night of the Forrest row."

"Err—yes—a miserable business; but—err—we had met before that?"

"Yes, in the saloon of Drury Lane."

"Err—I thought so! You were the boy with the—err—chubby cheeks and the—err—long hair, and the—err—blue frock, and the—err—camlet cloak? I thought so!"

"Did you, sir, really?"

"Yes, really. Now listen to words of wisdom. I fear the poetic drama is dead; if it were alive, your possibilities might be considerable. Do you known the difference between—err—talent and—err—genius?"

"Not clearly."

"Then listen! Genius is a misnomer. Look! That's the difference between the—err—one and the—err—other," and he made two horizontal marks one above the other with his thumb-nail on the painted wall. "The lower line is—err—talent; the higher—err—is the same quality cultivated to the highest standard of—err—perfection; then it becomes—err—genius. You have reached the—err—one, but you have a long way to go before you reach the—err—other. Now, remember the whole law and the prophets lie in Sir Joshua Reynolds' well-known axiom, 'Excellence was never granted to—err—man but as a reward of—err—labour.' Err—err—can I do anything to help you?"

"Yes; I should like to go to Edinburgh for the leading business."

"Very well; call on me to-morrow at one o'clock, and I'll give you a letter to—err—Murray."

A SPIRIT OF MIRTH.

It is refreshing in these days of pessimistic novels to read a story which contains as much cheerfulness as Miss Peggy Webling's "Spirit of Mirth," which has just been published by Messrs. Methuen and Co., Ltd. The authoress of "The Story of Virginia Perfect" has related the life history of a young girl named Euphrosyne Moore, the daughter of a contortionist who calls himself "The Human Eel." Her journey through life, her success as a dancer, and her happy and finally prosperous union with the man of her heart are described in the most pleasant and agreeable style; and the characters introduced—a villainous adventurer, a free and easy actress, and other individuals connected with the career of "Phosie" are admirably drawn. One of the brightest passages in the book is that which deals with Euphrosyne's rehearsal of a dance:

"The scheme of the sketch was as light as thistledown, for it dealt with the adventures of a banished fairy, alone by moonlight in the garden of a mortal.

"All the stage accessories were necessarily absent—the moon, the owl, the bat, the flowers—but Addison had described them before she began, and the fairy herself was a fairy in mufti, half a fairy and half a girl.

"Her grass-green frock was of silk chiffon, a sparkling girdle clasped her supple waist, her little satin shoes were tied round the ankles with silver cord, her wreath of flowers had not been sent home from the costumier's, and her hair, instead of floating free, was closely twisted into a thick plait.

"Her cheeks were flushed with excitement, and her eyes sought Addison as she tripped into the room. Talling played an alluring waltz, and Phosie, with outspread arms, danced her first dance with exact and finished skill on the tips of her toes.

"Addison was rewarded for the hours he had spent in teaching her, but he realised that the charm in all she did depended on her own personality. The idea, the steps, the gestures were his, but the peculiar joyousness of her beauty—an evasive, expressive beauty not only in face, but in figure—turned his little sketch into a masterpiece.

"Fleet was the word to describe her. She moved as quickly as a bird skimming over water, as lightly as a leaf blown before the wind, as gaily as a bubble floating on the air."

The triumph of the young dancer culminates on the production of the sketch:

"The spacious entrance to the hall was ablaze with lights and gay-coloured posters. Big men, in chocolate and fawn livery, stood at the swing doors, while the attendance within the building was divided between powdered footmen and black-gowned, white-aproned programme girls.

"The much-frequented bar was discreetly placed at the rear of the hall. A thick cord was stretched between the lounge and the stalls. When the performance began, at eight o'clock, only the cheap parts of the house, the upper circle and gallery, were filled.

"Phosie's sketch was announced by a specially-printed slip inserted in the programme, Addison's name having saved her from appearing simply as 'Extra Turn.'

"The curtain rose on the dim, soft light of a garden beneath the moon.

"Hewett Addison, standing in the wings, was satisfied with the stage effect, and Hewett was very hard to satisfy.

"Mr. Quizzical Quilter, puffing his cigar in the front row of the circle, started a faint, but encouraging, little burst of applause.

"'Charmin'! Quite charmin'!' said Quizzy to the unknown gentlemen on either side of him.

"Phosie appeared. Her bright brown hair rippled and curled to her waist, and she wore a wreath of great white blossoms. Her slender arms were outspread, and she hovered over the ground as lightly as a butterfly over a meadow.

"The smile which had captivated Hewett Addison, when he first saw her dance in Miss Sapio's drawing-room, played about her mouth. She seemed to be possessed by happy thoughts, unconscious of the audience, dancing for sheer joy."

There is not a dull page in the book, which is written in a spirit of easy humour—and good humour, and will please all readers, in the profession and outside it.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the Play, entitled "THE COAL KING."

The realistic drama above named is presented this week at the Dalston Theatre by members of Mr. A. Clifton Alderson's company. The hardships and perilous adventures of those who earn a livelihood in coal mines is always an interesting subject for readers of books and patrons of the drama, and in this play the lot of those who labour in the bowels of the earth is vividly portrayed. Mr. A. W. Norman, who undertakes the title-rôle as Coal King, otherwise Sir Reginald Hartford, J.P., plays the part with due regard to the importance of the personage represented. In his hands, too, the stage-management of the piece is safe. The coal owner's son is one of those out-and-out villains who stick at nothing, even attempting to murder his own mother. This undesirable personage is conscientiously portrayed by Mr. Sydney C. Kearns, who is faithful to every detail of the part. The hero, Tom Roberts, finds an earnest exponent in Mr. Cecil H. Woodhouse. Characteristic humour is supplied by Mr. Frank Caffrey as Jim Williams, a pit hand, whose never-failing zeal as a candidate for an appointment in the constabulary is particularly amusing. Mr. Frank Dalton as the sub-manager of the mines well sustains a trying part; Miss Winifred Love makes the best of the popular character of Grace Shirley; Miss Lottie Caffrey makes a pert parlourmaid; and Miss Emily Levettez provides a clever, though pitiful, character-sketch as Mad Ann. The cast also includes Mr. H. K. Williamson, Mr. Angus Hall, Mr. Albert E. Hendley, Mr. Edward Fortune, Mr. Frederick Wade, and Mr. Robert Derwent. As is customary at the Dalston, the members of the orchestra provide excellent selections between the acts, and the incidental music is also well rendered.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

By Albert A. Strong, LL.B. (London). 5s. The Era Offices, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

Mr. Albert A. Strong's valuable work "Dramatic and Musical Law," published at The Era Office, Tavistock-street, has reached its third edition. The author has made every effort to bring the book right up to date.—Referee.

Dramatic authors, composers, and all of those interested in dramatic enterprise will find much that is useful and instructive in "Dramatic and Musical Law," by Albert Strong.—Sporting Life, May 16, 1910.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun.

Furnishes useful information.—Daily News.

"Dramatic and Musical Law," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B. (Era Offices, W.C.), has gone into a third edition, which would seem to prove its usefulness.—Sportsman, May 14, 1910.

TOTTENHAM STAFF OUTING.

ANNUAL OUTING OF THE STAFF OF THE PALACE, TOTTENHAM, TO CLACTON, ON AUGUST 28.

One of the happiest events in the history of the Tottenham Palace took place on Sunday last, when the staff held their second annual outing, the venue being Clacton-on-Sea. At 8.50 a.m. the party, to the number of sixty foregathered at Liverpool-street, and speedily filled the two spacious saloons provided for them, and promptly at nine o'clock the train, with its happy burden, steamed from the station, arriving at Clacton after an easy run of one hour and fifty-two minutes. At twelve noon, dinner awaited the party at Swann's Brunswick Hotel, among those present being Mr. Leon Zeitlin, representing the directors, Messrs. T. S. Mayne (the popular manager of the Tottenham Palace), H. Nuttall (acting-manager), W. Burgess (musical director), Councillor D. Weston, M.C.C., and other Tottenham celebrities. Justice having been done to the excellent five-course dinner provided, and the toast of "The King and Royal Family" having been duly honoured, the Palace Bijou Orchestra dispensed sweet melodies, under the able directorship of Mr. J. Finlan.

At the King's Arms, St. Osyths, the party were posed for a photograph at the adjacent entrance to the Priory. Returning to the King's Arms an excellent tea was waiting upon the lawn at the rear, to which everyone did full justice. Mr. Leon Zeitlin surprised many present by an impromptu exhibition of his ability on the violin, Mr. Burgess offering him a five years' engagement in his orchestra, but Mr. Zeitlin has other aspirations, and respectfully declined. At 8.35 p.m. the journey home commenced, London being reached after a day which, for real pleasure, will live long in the memory of all who participated in it.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

SYDNEY, July 27.—Her Majesty's.—The J. C. Williamson firm, now a limited liability company, presented The Brass Bottle on the 23rd inst., with a company which included Miss Dora Rignold. This weird conceit was admirably staged, all the effects being most cleverly produced, and every part capitally acted. The lion's share of the work fell to Mr. Leslie Holland, who was the Horace Ventimore; he did it admirably. Mr. Evelyn Vernon made Fakrash a very droll personage; Mr. Kenyon Musgrave was amusing as Professor Futvoye. The part of Spencer Pringle was allotted to Mr. Arthur W. Soames, a wise selection. Miss Dora Rignold, heartily welcomed on her return, did all that was required as Sylvia Futvoye, and the mother was well represented by Miss Augusta Haviland. As the auctioneer Samuel Wackerbath Mr. Herbert Greville was seen in a congenial rôle. Uproarious fun was created by Miss Sinna St. Clair as Mrs. Rapkin, and Mr. Fred Cambourne as her husband; Miss Lily Douglas (Mrs. Wackerbath), Miss Maud Wingfield (Jessie), and Miss Elsie Stevenson (Zobeide) ably filled in the picture. Mr. Claude Vernon produced the play and Mr. Maurice Dudley stage-managed it. The ballet of houris was arranged by Miss Minnie Hooper, and the scenery came from Coleman, Board, and Upward.

Royal.—Miss Nellie Stewart and her companions, in What Every Woman Knows, keep up the interest here, and Miss Stewart adds another triumph to her long list. Trilby follows on the 30th, when Miss Nellie Stewart will play the name-part for the first time, and Mr. Gaston Mervale will appear as Svengali.

Mr. Matheson Lang and Miss Hutin Britton finished their season of Pete and The Passing of the Third Floor Back at the Criterion on the 22nd, when a crowded house demanded a speech from the boarding-house missionary. Mr. Lang, after acknowledging Sydney's kindness, promised, amid cheers, to pay Australia another visit ere long. Messrs. Clarke and Meynell promise to bring over The Arcadians company, with the Sydney actress, Miss Maie Sydney, as Sombra.

The Tivoli has welcomed back the McLean children, known as the Australian Dartos and the Littlest Tich. They do the Apache Dance with fine abandon. Lieutenant Travis and Miss Marjorie Dean present a clever sketch called Transformations with marked success. Con Moreni and the Dardinis are in their last week, and Mr. Harry Rickards's picked vaudevillians keep his patrons fully entertained.

West's Journal of Events at the Palace presents current local occurrences, including the recent great railway disaster in Victoria.

Spencer's Theatrescope at the Lyceum changes its bill every week, giving very latest items.

MELBOURNE, July 30.—Princess's Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Clyde Meynell and Rupert Clarke; Business-Manager, Mr. J. B. Montrie.—The last four nights of Mr. George Willoughby's company's season, in What Happened to Jones, are announced. To-day the final matinée will be given.

Her Majesty's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. E. J. Tait.—The Royal Comic Opera Company are "saying good-bye" to well-filled houses. The Orchid gives place on Saturday next to The Girls of Gottenburg.

Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Clyde Meynell and Rupert Clarke; Business-Manager, Mr. Arthur Levy.—Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton are bringing their phenomenally successful season to a conclusion here with a series of Shakespearean revivals. On Saturday evening Othello was staged, and drew a crowded house. Mr. Asche repeated his clever impersonation of the Moor, and Miss Brayton again appeared as Portia. The rest of the company did full justice to their various rôles. To-night The Merchant of Venice will be staged, and Thursday and Friday nights will see a special revival of The Taming of the Shrew. On Saturday evening next Mr. Matheson Lang and Miss Hutin Britton will make their first appearance in Melbourne in The Passing of the Third Floor Back.

King's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. William Anderson; Business-Manager, Mr. Julius Grant.—The Chance of a Lifetime has drawn crowded houses here. Miss Eugenie Duggan, Mr. Roy Redgrave, and the rest of a strong company never allow the interest to flag, and special scenery has been painted for the production.

Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Frederic Aydon.—The star attraction here at present is the remarkable Kremo Family of acrobats, who give a finished performance, and are undoubtedly clever. Other good items on the programme at present are the Raymond Trio, Ted Kalmon, the Falcons, Tom Dawson, Brown and Robinson, Mendel (the blind pianist), Irving Sayles, Les Warton, Bert Terrell, the Two Colliers, Eileen Lyons, and Vaude and Verne.

Gaiety Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. James Brennan; Business-Manager, Mr. Harry Brennan.—Here on Saturday evening Gardner, Rankin, and Griffin made their first appearance in a clever musical act, and met with instant approval. Armstrong and Verne presented an amusing sketch, entitled The Battle of Too Soon. Lily Vockler sang several ballads in pleasing style; J. M. West gives a clever hand-balancing act; and excellent items were presented by Maud Perman, Wally Ricardo, James Craydon, Jack Kearns, P. J. Knowles, and Chas. Moody, and a host of others. New pictures were shown by the Miorama.

West's Pictures at West's Picture Palace, Spencer's Theatrescope at Olympia, and Tait's Pictures at the Athenæum Hall serve to provide enjoyment for large audiences nightly.

NEW LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the Drama entitled "THE FATAL WEDDING."

This piece always does well here, and draws crowded houses, and the management are running two special matinées at reduced prices on Wednesdays and Saturdays. As Howard Wilson Mr. Hugh Montgomerie is effective, his work being clear-cut and highly finished. Mr. Royce Milton sustains the part of Robert Curtis with considerable power; Mr. Sam Springson is excellent at Toto, the French butler, and elicits roars of laughter; the part of Peter Schwartz at the hands of Mr. Cyril Melton receives sympathetic and genial treatment; and Mr. Frank Ashley's reading of O'Reilly is particularly happy and well acted. Mr. J. Newton undertakes the part of the Rev. Dr. Lanceford, clergyman; Miss Ethel Kay's personal charm and elocution and her convincing acting make the rôle of Mabel Wilson one to be remembered; Miss Leah Marlborough skilfully plays Cora Wilson; Miss Marie Harcourt is well cast for Bridget, the lady cook, a rôle she sustains with pronounced success; and Jessie, "the little mother," is delightfully played by little Lusanne.

In the third act, which always appeals to Hammersmith audiences, Miss Lily Wohlmann sang well the opening song of "Yankee Doodle," and little Lusanne distinguished herself by rendering "Apples" very happily. Gladys Kelly deserved high praise for her smart Scotch reel and Highland fling. The Sisters Wohlmann contributed "Pride of the prairie"; and Lena Smidt was enacted by Sunny Sarah Hicks with her usual success. The same artist sustained the chief part in "Monkeyland" at the finish. Margot Domican sang "The Sun-bonnet Lady" very well; and Tom Grice, the youngest champion Lancashire clog-dancer, proved his title to fame, while Dorothy Pain sang very sweetly one or two selections from her répertoire, her wonderful soprano voice captivating the house.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
By ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes" which is at present required. — St. James's Gazette.

THEATRICAL ACCOUNTS FOR BUSINESS MANAGERS.
How the Affairs of a Theatre can be most Efficiently Controlled by the Adoption of Systems of Internal Check.
By CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY, Chartered Accountant.
Price, 3/6. Post free, 3/9.

All concerned with the business side of a theatre will find much useful information and many valuable hints in "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Mr. Cuthbert E. Smedley, published at The Era office.—Referee, Jan. 31, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers." By Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. 3s. 6d. The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers" by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (The Era, Ltd., London, 3s. 6d.), is a most concise and comprehensive little work, calculated to prove of assistance to the theatre-manager. It shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given, and the chapters treating of receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts and audit will be found to contain much useful information. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Feb. 3, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (3s 6d., The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.). The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.

Skeleton schemes of book-keeping, &c., with explanations, showing how the affairs of a theatre can be efficiently managed by the adoption of systems of internal check in all departments. Contains also a draft agreement as between manager and artist.—Birmingham Daily Post, Jan. 27, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts" (The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.), we should say, is a very useful compilation for business-managers of our places of amusement. It is practical, exact, and analytical; it should stop leakages, and needs only good houses to keep it fully employed.—Sportsman, Feb. 8, 1909.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1910.

THE COMMON INFORMER.

Though the conclusion of the case in which Mr. FRANK MACNAGHTEN was summoned by Mr. FREDK. GEORGE at the Tower Bridge Police Court last week is an irritating example of the unsatisfactory condition of affairs with respect to the performance of sketches at music halls, it is at any rate satisfactory to know that we shall not be subjected to a resumption of the "sketch" war. Mr. GEORGE has undertaken to cease to "inform," and Mr. FRED BAUGH, we understand, is not going to carry out the threat which he made of taking out summonses against eleven other music halls for performing sketches. Mr. BAUGH is satisfied, we imagine, that the smallness of the penalty inflicted on Mr. MACNAGHTEN will discourage other common informers from making mischief.

The common informer is, of course, "no new thing"; but he has hitherto been openly acknowledged as the instrument of opposing interests. The sketch difficulty and the informer have long existed, but how sketches came to be tolerated at music halls is briefly described by the late Mr. CHARLES MORTON, as quoted by Messrs. W. H. MORTON and H. CHANCE NEWTON in "Sixty Years' Stage Service": "In 1872," said the veteran, "I offered the public a selection of Chilperic at the Philharmonic, Islington, and got myself rapped over the managerial knuckles for daring to do so. Still, the thin end of the wedge had been introduced into the breach, and as time gradually wore on theatrical managers, either from laziness or complacency, ceased to trouble themselves about our doings. And thus, eventually, the 'sketch' established itself upon the music-hall stage. Of course, it had no legal right to be there at all. The law resolutely refused to recognise its existence, and it only wanted some informer to call attention to its presence to have it immediately suppressed. But the public viewed the newcomer with favour, and little by little it grew in importance. Don't imagine for one moment that we, its sponsors, ever deceived ourselves as to the true position of affairs. We knew all along that the bantling was there purely on sufferance, and that at any instant its life might be brought to an untimely close."

The penalties inflicted in those days were sometimes serious, Mr. Justice DENMAN fining Mr. MORTON and the Palace licence holder, Mr. ERNEST POLDEN, as representing the Palace Company, £10 for each of the few performances given of a piece called La Toledad, making £50 in all. At one period in the eighties two well-known theatrical managers were in the habit of setting a common informer to work; but by a curious stroke of fate one of them afterwards appeared at a central variety theatre in a sketch. We need not repeat the unpleasant history of the various proceedings taken by the Theatrical Managers' Association, of the protracted and troublesome negotiations between the theatrical and music-hall managers, which resulted in the compromise which though, of course, most unsatisfactory as a logical settlement of the difficulty, was undoubtedly the best and only immediate method of avoiding recurrent prosecutions. We should be the last to make any of the "compromising references" to the Sketch Association which are referred to by Mr. GEORGE GRAY, the president, in a letter to a contemporary; and the object of the Association—to obtain free trade in amusements by the introduction of one licence for all places of public entertainment—is an excellent one. But we should like to know who is the "highest authority" alluded to by Mr. GRAY in his letter as assuring the Association that the report of the Joint Committee of Lords and Commons recommending a Single Licence is to be made law. It seems almost too much to hope, in the present condition of Parliament and politics, that any private Bill of this kind will be passed. In the meantime, our suggestion of a double licence still appears to be the only prompt and easy way out of the maze.

The worst of a mysterious prosecution like that in the MACNAGHTEN case is that it creates so much suspicion of treachery and secret animosity. The common informer becomes, in the imagination of many, a successor of the bravos who were hired by the nobles in the Italian republics to assassinate their enemies. The hidden power which puts him in motion is variously attributed, and the concealed employer is indicated without the least proof of the individual mentioned being implicated in the attack. In the MACNAGHTEN case, Mr. FREDK. GEORGE, actor, clerk, and wood traveller, stated on oath that his only motive in taking out the summons was to "bring the law into contempt"—in other words, to hasten on the reform of an existing abuse, by making its action inconveniently unpleasant. Mr. GEORGE, it seems to us, attacked the problem but feebly. His remedy was too homœopathic. A single prosecution would have no effect as an object-lesson. The Government is not to be influenced by a couple of police-court cases. If Mr. GEORGE and those who sympathise with him had organised a kind of Sicilian Vespers or St. Bartholomew's Day of sketch prosecutions; if they had simultaneously proceeded against every hall producing sketches, the hum of the resultant uproar of protest might have reached St. Stephen's. But the selection, on grounds professedly of public interest and deep policy, of two variety theatres for doing what is being done all over London looked, at first sight, invidious. The Era had some experience of the difficulty of getting a private measure, even if obviously demanded by justice, through Parliament when Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR was labouring to secure the passing of the Musical Copyright Bill. It was not until the "offence was so rank" that the man in the street realised what musical piracy meant that, after many delays and difficulties, the Bill was made law. If we cannot get the authorities to grant the Double Licence which we have proposed, there appears to be nothing for it—pending the possibly remote passing of a Single Licence Bill—but to pay the fines and trust to the good sense of the London magistrates to discourage the "common informer" by inflicting low penalties. This need not prevent us from continuing to agitate, protest, and push on licensing reform.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

Minutes of the Council meeting held at 32, Regent-street, on Tuesday, Aug. 30. Present:—Mr. C. F. Collings (in the chair), Mr. H. W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Messrs. Richard A. Green, J. Poole Kirkwood, Frederick Annerley, Misses Joan Pereira, Mildred Cottell, Vita Spencer, Beatrice Chester, and Mr. D. Young (secretary).

The secretary read the minutes of the meeting held on the 23rd ult., and the meeting confirmed and the chairman signed same. The chairman read a letter making a complaint re a dressing-room, and it was proposed that the manager be written to in the first instance and the substance of the complaint be included in the letter. The secretary read letters from Messrs. Herbert Trench, C. T. H. Hemsley, G. M. Polini, Morely and Lancely, and received instructions as to replies.

With reference to Mr. William C. Marsden's letter to extend the advertisements in the Year Book, it was proposed by Mr. Greene, seconded by Mr. Annerley, that Mr. Marsden's offer be accepted. The Finance Committee's report was read by Mr. C. F. Collings and adopted. The hon. solicitors reported on three cases.

Miss Vita Spencer gave notice of motion "That members accepting engagements with known bogus managers whose names had been posted the solicitor be debarred from taking action on their behalf." Mr. Poole Kirkwood gave notice of motion, on behalf of Mr. Walker, re music hall golf club, and the secretary was instructed to have a notice posted in the rooms. Mr. Ivor Bernard was elected. The secretary was instructed to see that certain repairs necessary to the door of the silence-room be attended to in due course.

Stage Frenchmen.

"It was the fashion, a very few years ago," says a writer in the Academy, "to include in our musical comedies a couple of imitation Frenchmen, exceedingly spruce, voluble, and acrobatic; they would prance about the stage, slim of leg and swift, execute profound, sweeping bows with the tallest of hats and with arms interlaced, and their language was surely never spoken in any country but stage-land. A Gallic visitor, witnessing one of these humorous travesties, once remarked laughingly to his neighbour, 'You must excuse me, but I am so infinitely amused at your stage Frenchmen. I only wish we possessed a few people like that in France—we should be even more gay than you think we are!'

The "Anglais" in Paris.

"It must be admitted that our friends across the Channel balance the account fairly evenly with us by their stage presentment of the Englishman. If an Englishman is necessary to a farce or a comedy—and it seems that very often he is, even at the present day—the French theatrical manager clothes him almost invariably in a large check knickerbocker suit, not quite as 'loud' as the famous legendary check which required two suits to show the pattern, but approaching that ideal. He is then provided with a stick, an eyeglass, and a cap of extravagantly sporting cut, and he stalks about the boards in the approved wooden-jointed manner, ejaculating occasionally the brief expletive which, according to accepted opinion among untravelled French people, forms the Englishman's only relief in times of stress. Recently, however, a dark-clothed, square-shouldered type of Englishman has been personified on the French stage, who delivers long speeches in French—but with an accent which renders them almost so much gibberish, greatly to the joy of the audience.

Strange Brogues.

"If for a moment it is convenient to consider the Irishman as a foreigner (happily he is in reality nothing of the kind), it will be interesting to note the opinion of a cosmopolitan native of the Emerald Isle upon his kinsman who is so freely impersonated in our farces. In a letter recently received occurs the following passage: 'Once, in Liverpool, I sat with a lady at a play in which an Irish maiden supposed to come from County Donegal had a considerable part. My companion turned to me and said, "Do they really talk like that at home?" I was highly indignant; but, of course, she meant no offence by her innocent remark.'"

Mr. Hall Caine's author's note to his latest play, produced with great success at the Garrick, outlines his purpose very clearly. He says:—

"The Eternal Question is an attempt to present the general features of two problems of life which have come into prominence since I wrote my novel 'The Eternal City.' The first of these is the problem of Socialism. Although Pope Leo XIII. had already published his encyclical on Christian Socialism, the world-wide appeal of the subject had not then been realised, and I have attempted, as far as the limits of a stage play will permit, to indicate the recent trend of the Socialistic movement, the forces it has to meet, and the risks it has still to run.

"But the central motive of The Eternal Question is the woman question, and the play is intended to deal with the relative rights and responsibilities of the sexes in the eye of God and man. I think this is the problem that lies at the back of the whole woman movement, of which the 'vote' is only a part, and I have attempted to deal with it in its most intimate aspect—the aspect which concerns the sexual relations of man and woman.

"Is it true, or is it not true, that while, according to the laws of nature, there may be many women for a man, there can only be one man for a woman? If it is true, there is a kind of hard and terrible justice in the way, the painful way, in which human law in all ages has treated woman in relation to man. But if it is not true, then the whole course of human law and social custom has been a line of iniquities from the earliest ages of the world."

Having thus laid down his thesis, the author carries on his arguments, pro and con, principally by means of three characters—David Rossi, Baron Bonelli, and Donna Roma Volonna, and he does so powerfully and interestingly. The play, indeed, as a piece of theatrical work shows that the author has advanced much as a stage craftsman. His incidents are presented vividly; his situations are strong; his ensemble, if we may use the word, is picturesque; and his dialogue always good, if occasionally too didactic. It certainly needs no polemics on the stage to prove that the attitude of the world towards the repentant Magdalen is governed more by the severity of Mosaic law than by the message of the grand Exemplar of Love and Faith—"She hath done what she could"; but in the polemics of Hall Caine the public are particularly interested just now, and if future audiences at the Garrick will scarcely be filled with admiration at his character drawing, they will be able to listen to a play that always holds the attention and is never dull.

The early meeting between David Rossi and Donna Roma, sculptress, is in the loggia of her protector, Baron Bonelli's palace—the scene of the first act—from which she hears the young Socialist Deputy addressing the populace and denouncing the ruling classes: "We have two sovereigns in Rome, brothers, a great State and a great Church, but a perishing people. We have soldiers enough to kill us, and priests enough to tell us how to die, but no one to tell us how to live." (Shouts of "Corruption!") "Corruption, indeed, brothers, and who is there among us to whom the corruption of our rulers is unknown? Who cannot point to the Ministers who allow their mistresses to meddle in public affairs, and to enrich themselves by the ruin of the poor?"

Roma is furious at this outburst, and to the impassive Bonelli she says, "Leave the man to me. Within a month, within a week, he shall lie as tamely to my hand as a ripe apple on a wall. With his angel face he shall sit to me—he shall sit for Judas among the figures about my fountain." In their first interview Roma lies to Rossi. She says: "I am a sculptor, and I have nothing but what my work brings me"; but at the end of the first act it is made quite clear that hero and heroine are destined for mutual love and self-sacrifice. The love confession comes in the second act, when Roma says nothing of her past life, accepting with some misgiving Rossi's description of their happiness: "Our sky is blue, our sun is shining, and we can laugh at everything."

Retribution comes swiftly, however. Bruno Rocco, Rossi's friend, takes his little son, Joseph, to the procession of the people going up to the Coliseum. Bonelli has given instructions to the police to disperse the crowd, if needs be, by means of the soldiers, who fire and kill the child. Bruno Rocco is arrested, and rather than betray his leader, Rossi, he stabs himself with a dagger.

The influence of the Pope is brought to bear on Roma, in order to make her betray Rossi, who has freely spoken of his past life to the woman he so implicitly trusts. She alone knows of his connection with a so-called political crime committed by him when passing under the name of his father, Leone, who is now the sovereign Pontiff. The lovers meet again in the first scene of the fourth act, and in the hearing of Bonelli Roma explains her apparent treachery to the distracted Rossi, saying that her action was due to her love for him. The Prime Minister stigmatises Roma's statement as a lie. Rossi then learns for the first time of the relations that have existed between Bonelli and Roma, who is at length denounced as a harlot by her fiercely jealous paramour. This is too much for Rossi, who strikes the Baron. The latter draws his revolver, and in the struggle for its possession the weapon is discharged, and Bonelli is killed. Rossi departs with a volley of curses hurled at Roma's head; the police rush in; and to the question "Who killed his Excellency?" Roma replies "I did. In the final scene—the Prison—Rossi comes to Roma in the disguise of a friar. The chivalrous young Socialist is ready to take her with her life behind her. They are in a blind alley; but there is a way out. He says: "We will let the law of man do what it will with us. And if we may not seek to unite our lives in this world we will do so in the next!" They go out to their trial together, and the play ends.

Of Donna Roma Miss Titteli Brune, the favourite Australian actress, makes a commanding and interesting figure. In the first act, as the petted mistress of the Prime Minister, Roma's furious denunciation of Rossi was particularly powerful; and in excellent contrast was the cajoling diplomacy of the woman in the first interview with the man she is fated to love. The fierce despair of the Magdalen, who feels the hopelessness of her endeavour to find a way out, is the keynote of the later portion of the play, and the sorrowing penitent of the prison was a very pathetic figure. Mr. Vernon Steel's virility and earnestness were never in doubt in the part of Rossi, and the trying long speeches were delivered with much fire and energy. The dignity of the Socialist Deputy and his revived faith in the woman who has so wronged him, made a strong appeal in the final act. Mr. Guy Standing's Bonelli was officially irreproachable, and the cutting sarcasm of the Prime Minister's speeches at the expense of Socialism was most effectively suggested. As Bruno Rocco Mr. Oscar Adye made a hit in the scene of the suicide of the sculptor's model, and the actor did his utmost with the gleams of comedy that illumine the proud father's scenes with little Joseph. Miss Marie Housley delineated the motherly affection and despair of Elena with a sure touch; and Nattalina was adequately presented by Miss Rita Carr. An impersonation that stood out by its impressive dignity was the Pope of Mr. Halliwell Hobbes. The adjective "perfect" can be rarely applied to the actor's art, but in this case it is the only word. Mr. Hobbes seemed to live the part. Mr. Edward Sorley as Commendatore Angeletti, Mr. Ridgwell Cullum as General Morra, Mr. Walter Ringham as Major Doria, and Mr. Edward Durrant as Colonel Cavalli, fully met all the requirements of those parts; and Mr. Wilfred E. Payne realised the quiet and subtle villainy of the police spy, Minghelli. Mr. Orlando Barnett's Father Pifferi being also an impersonation showing the careful finish of a conscientious artist. Felice (major-domo to Bonelli), the maestro di camera, Joseph, and the Secretary of the Court are small parts effectively handled by Mr. George Rowlands, Mr. Richard Neville, Miss Anna Cuka, and Mr. Bernard A. Leslie. The play has been very carefully produced by Mr. Creagh Henry, and it is illustrated by some excellent scenery from the brush of Mr. J. T. Bull and Mr. W. T. Hemsley.

The entire production is under the direction of Mr. G. Ralph Hall Caine, Managing-director of "The Eternal Question, Ltd.," for which company Mr. W. F. Crowe is business-manager and Mr. Frank Collins the stage-director. The business-manager for Messrs. Wentworth Croke, Milton Bode, and Edward Compton is Mr. Lawson Lambert.

"MEG THE MOBSWOMAN."

Play, in One Act, by Leon M. Lion and W. Strange Hall, Produced at the Theatre Royal, Lincoln, on Monday, Aug. 29.

Sir Pierce ..... MR. FRED A. MARSTON
George ..... MR. MAYNE LYNTON
Netta Ellerton ..... MISS VERA POLE
Margaret Ellerton ....MISS WINIFRED PEARSON

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The story is interesting, and thoroughly well told. Into the home of the Ellertons enters, on a darkened stage, at curtain rise Margaret, who examines, in the light of a bull's-eye lantern, a quantity of jewellery, which she then conceals in a box in the window. Someone calls her name, and, flinging back the curtains, she admits the morning sunlight. Enter, then, her younger sister, Netta, who stares wonderingly at the wearied-looking woman, and elicits that Margaret has been up since four o'clock in the morning. Her cloak is wet and her shoes are muddy. To them come shortly George, eager for a chat with Netta, his fiancée, and Sir Pierce, his uncle, who is keen on amateur detective work. Sir Pierce has news. The house of a big family in the immediate neighbourhood has during the night been burgled, a variety of valuable jewellery stolen, and the watch-dog poisoned with prussic acid. He thinks the circumstances very like those associated with the deeds of the once famous Jim Seely and Meg the Mobswoman in America, and proceeds to describe how he saw Seely executed in the electrocution chair. A cry from Margaret interrupts him, and he apologises for the vividness of his description. Later a smell of prussic acid in the room arouses his attention, he observes the wet state of Margaret's cloak as it hangs over a chair-back, and finds in the pocket a loaded revolver. These and other circumstances lead him to confront Margaret, and, after a feeble defence, she admits herself to be the notorious Mobswoman. Sir Pierce's impulse is to give her up, but she pleads for her sister to marry his nephew and let her be forgotten. Sir Pierce agrees to allow the marriage to go on on condition that Margaret disappears for ever. Interpreting this—her own suggestion—literally, Margaret seizes the revolver and is about to destroy herself, when Sir Pierce seizes her hand and prevents it. "You're a plucky woman," he says, "and I'll say nothing." Upon this the curtain falls.

On the first night the play went with wonderful smoothness. Miss Winifred Pearson's Margaret was dramatic and intense, and she held the audience throughout. Mr. Fred A. Marston's Sir Pierce was full of grip and power, and Mr. Mayne Lynton and Miss Vera Pole were an interesting pair of lovers. The piece will prove an excellent curtain-raiser for Miss Annie Hughes' Miss Tommy.

In Chase of an Engagement.

MISS PAULINE CHASE has been telling the Lady's World representative that she was born in Washington twenty-five years ago, and at a very early age felt a keen desire to show up behind the footlights. She left the Convent School in New York at the age of fourteen, and at once set about the task of procuring her first theatrical engagement.

A Wanderer.

"I HAD not much idea of how to go about it," she says, "and wandered about the city for two whole months before I hit upon the proper way. Then I saw George Lederer, the well-known manager, who brought Edna May over to England in The Belle of New York, and he engaged me to appear in The Rounders, a musical piece that became popular in this country under the name of Kitty Grey. Here at the outset I'm afraid I was guilty of a mild deception, for I had to proclaim myself sixteen—the minimum age limit—or be refused the chance to take part in the play; an alternative which I could not think to entertain.

Valuable Photos.

"RECENTLY I paid a flying visit to New York to sell autographed photographs, chiefly of stage celebrities, at the American Actors' Fair, got up for the purpose of raising 250,000 dollars in aid of their Benevolent Fund. For Mr. Roosevelt's I had to go to Paris, where the ex-President was then making a brief stay.

She Wants to Fly.

"I HAD hoped to return from France by aeroplane, but the Fates were unpropitious. Still, I mean at least to fly over London before I leave for America, and Mr. Grahame White, whom I have known for some years, has promised to give me the opportunity of accomplishing my object."

A Tardy Christening.

"WHAT persuaded you to get baptised so late in life?" asked the interviewer. It was four years ago; Miss Chase was twenty-one at the time. "I had not been baptised till then. It was not long after I came to England, and I got engaged to a gentleman who seemed to wish me to go through the ceremony. So I was baptised in the church of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, Mr. J. M. Barrie acting as my godfather, and Miss Ellen Terry and another friend as my godmothers."

A Threatening Letter.

As Peter Pan Miss Chase has received countless letters—many from children who have delighted in seeing the play—highly complimentary of her talent and charm. But one letter was of a very different order. It said: "If you do not send me £50 by to-morrow, there will be sudden and mysterious death for Pauline Chase." So for some time after the young lady was constantly shadowed by detectives. Nothing unpleasant, however, took place, and the threatened victim now laughs over the affair as an amusing episode in her career.
